THE RUSSIANS HAVE ABANDONED NEWCHWANG, DISMANTLING THE FORTS AND SENDING AWAY GUNS

Move To Liao Yang Where Troops Are Concentrating.

Viceroy Alexieff Transferred Headquarters To Harbin.

Japanese Take Possession of Dalny, North of Port Arthur.

St. Petersburg, May 9.—Viceroy Alexieff has telegraphed to the emperor announcing the transfer of his headquarters to Harbin. It is expected that Gen. Kuropatkin will remove to Mukden.

The admiralty reports that Rear Admiral Jessen's squadron is at Vladivostok.

St. Petersburg, May 9, 4:30 p. m.—The Russian authorities are completely in the dark as to what is happening in the territory occupied by the enemy, except such news as comes from the newspapers abroad and originating from Japanese sources. The reports of a Japanese landing at Taku Shan and the investment of Port Dalny, etc., while not confirmable here officially, are not denied. The Novoe Vremya, this morning, is greatly excited over the action of the Swedish authorities in mining the entrance of the harbor of Slite, on the island of Gothland, in the Baltic sea, demanding that the foreign office entertain the case, seemingly forgetting that Slite was occupied as a base by the British fleet operating against St. Petersburg at the time of the Crimean war.

Viceroy Alexieff refuses to receive any more foreign war correspondents.

EVACUATE NEWCHWANG.

Russians Remove Guns From Forts and Retire.

London, May 9.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Newchwang, in a dispatch dated May 8, says:

"Yesterday most of the Russian troops retired to Tashihohao, and during the night most of the guns were removed from the fort and sent to the Liao Yang, where all the Russian forces are concentrating. A conference of the civil and military authorities was held this afternoon, and it was decided to prepare to leave at a moment's notice."

With the exception of vague rumors of further fighting in the vicinity of Feng Wang Cheng, the foregoing is the only items of actual news regarding the far East appearing in the London papers this morning. Some, however, have accounts of the Kiu Lien Cheng battle from correspondents with the Japanese army, giving interesting points. The Daily Mail says:

"The moonlight night broke into a splendid dawn and revealed the Japanese army drawn up as if on parade."

Then, after describing the shelterless nature of the plain dividing the opposing armies, the Daily Mail's account proceeds:

"The Russians did not respond to the opening of the Japanese fire, but remained silent and invisible. The Japanese line of infantry, two miles long and entirely exposed, advanced from point to point by swift, sudden rushes, smartly executed in the most brilliant style, filing steadily all the while. We watched anxiously, anticipating that each rush would enter the zone of fire. The Japanese were working around the sides of Kiu Lien bay to their position, when the Russian trenches suddenly poured a hurricane of rifle fire into them, with deadly effect. For a moment the Japanese advance weakened and recoiled, then rallied and once more rushed forward across the stream, obtaining some shelter in a dead angle under the base of the mountain. The Russians, not having guns, were unable to reply to the continuous fire of the Japanese artillery. The Japanese advance was now marked by prostrate bodies. In one instance two Japanese shells did terrible execution among their own men who were ascending the slope.

"Two hours after the advance began an officer suddenly appeared at the top of the slope waving a large Japanese flag, sending an electric thrill through the beholders, all far and near shouting "Banzai."

According to the Standard's correspondent the Russians put into action only two batteries. It is reported that they had with them 120 guns, including 80 field guns and twenty quick-firers.

The Times' Tokio correspondent, under date of May 5th says:

"The celerity and organization of the recent Japanese movements is remarkable. The second army, which began to embark a fortnight ago, evidently remained at its base, pending the result of the Yalu operations. If these had proved unsuccessful it would have become an auxiliary of the first army. Meanwhile Vice Admiral Togo is waiting with his blocking steamers.

"The Japanese officers at the front speak in high terms of the stubborn bravery which the Russian troops displayed in their stand at Hohoutang.

"Three small Russian steamers have been captured on the Yalu. Two of them have their boilers injured and the Japanese are utilizing the third."

Under date of May 3rd, the Times' Antung correspondent says:

"The Russian defeat on the Yalu was due primarily to their perfunctory, old fashioned methods, and the Japanese success must be attributed to their perfect acquaintance with modern conditions, to their skill and intelligence and to their concentration at the physiological moment upon the weak point in the Russian line. In morale the Japanese soldiers are equal and possibly superior to European troops."

London, May 9.—The Morning Post's Shanghai correspondent reports that Dalny was captured Friday, while the Tokio correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, cabling under date of Sunday, says: "Dalny was invested yesterday."

SINGULARLY PEACEFUL.

People of Central Manchuria Undisturbed By War.

Mukden, May 9.—The Associated Press correspondent finally received permission to proceed from Newchwang to Mukden by way of Liao Yang. He was given a special car on the main line after leaving Newchwang and received official courtesies on the journey.

Observations from the car window were unique. The spectacle in many places of artillery parks amid the springing wheat and Cossacks in multi-colored shirts lining the road entirely changed the aspect of central Manchuria since the correspondent's departure from headquarters at Port Arthur more than two months ago. Notwithstanding the extensive military occupation of and operations in the eastern region, the country here presents a singularly peaceful appearance. The farmers and natives are undisturbed and are profiting by the advance in the prices of products, especially in Liao Yang and other large markets where the friendliest attitude is displayed toward the military who adapt themselves as far as possible to native ways and customs.

The foreign guests of the Russian authorities in Manchuria note the businesslike conduct of the war and also the absence of excitement and are surprised at the machine-like operation of the railway.

The Russians apparently welcomed the correspondents as an evidence that there will be active campaigning soon which was in signal contrast with the correspondent's observations at Port Arthur when the war opened, as the correspondents there were regarded as harbingers of evil and as being undesirable on account of the war. The lavish equipment of the railroad includes many American locomotives, all the rest of the equipment being of Russian make. The railroad yards resemble those of a western city in their bustling activity and there are electric lights in the foreign settlement.

At Liao Yang the attaches congregate at the railway station, which for the moment is the center of interest and dine at brilliantly lighted tables in the crowded dining rooms discussing the meager news which may have eluded the official vigilance. The correspondents are not in a dissimilar situation here, though they are subjected to the watchfulness of the authorities.

News of the progress of the war in the regions to the west and south and other information is exclusively reported in official dispatches, but upon the correspondents' arrival here, Vice roy Alexieff extended to them an invitation to submit to duty censored dispatches for transmission to the western press.

NEXT ENGAGEMENT

Will Occur at Liao Yang, Thinks Hayashi.

London, May 9.—Baron Hayashi, the Japanese minister here, looks for the next engagement of the war to take place at Liao Yang. He said today:

"Gen. Kuroki is probably on the march to that place and Gen. Kuropatkin should give battle there. Indeed, from the signs of his concentration, he may assume the offensive. But for his defeat at the Yalu river this movement might be very dangerous. Under the existing conditions, however, Gen. Kuroki out to be able to drive back Gen. Kuropatkin at Liao Yang. The Russians have a central position and can strike either to the left or right, an advantage they did not enjoy when Newchwang had to be defended. In the event of our occupation of Newchwang we shall immediately appoint a civil administrator as we did at the time of the war with China and open the port to all nations.

"Vice Admiral Togo, I think, is now likely to dock part of his fleet and give the men a rest from the ceaseless vigil they have kept up since the beginning of the war. Our land advance and part of the impending engagements must largely depend on the commissariat. This, I hardly think, is yet able to cope with a forward movement, say on Mukden, Harbin or Vladivostok.'

BRITISH TROOPS FIGHT NATIVES OF THIBET AT AN ELEVATION OF OVER SIXTEEN THOUSAND FEET

Thibetans Were Strongly Intrenched But Routed By Flanking.

New York, May 9.—Details of the battle of May 6 between the British expedition and natives of Thibet, recounted in a dispatch from the Times correspondent at Kharo Pass, Thibet, show that the action took place 16,000 feet above sea level. It was the outcome of an attack upon Gen. Younghusband and his escort at early dawn on Thursday by 800 men from Dong Tse. The attacking force arrived at Gang Tse at midnight, the approach being with the utmost secrecy.

The garrison, under command of Maj. Murray, behaved with great gallantry, and beat off the attack successfully, although the pick of the men, and nearly all the senior officers, had been taken for an expedition to Karola. It is noteworthy that the attack was delivered shortly after the Karola force had moved out, proving that the Thibetans had good information.

When Col. Brandes, with his rifles, camped off the pass Thursday night, 160 Thibetans were holding a wall three miles ahead. This position was well flanked, and elaborate preparations had been made for the hurling down of rocks from both sides of the gorge. Seven hundred of the men were from Kams and the remainder from L'Hasa and this locality.

The enemy, after obstinate resistance, were cleared from the wall. Two Sangars, well defended, held back the advance two and a half hours, during most of which time a pelting hail storm was in progress.

The general plan of attack was an out-flanking movement by one company of Ghurkhas, and a direct attack by Pioneers. Ultimately it was found necessary to detach a small force of Pioneers to scale a precipiece 1200 feet high.

The gallantry of both the Sikhs and the Pioneers on both flanks was conspicuous, as the resistance was stubborn, until the flanks were turned. When that occurred the entire Talbet force fled from the wall.

The casualties of the Thibetans during the actual fight were about seventy-five and probably as many again were lost during the pursuit by the mounted infantry, who have not returned. Capt. Bethune, who was among the five British killed, fell while leading his men to the attack on the wall.

The construction of the wall and the choice of the spot where it was built, reflect credit on the Thibetans, so much so that its abandonment must have been due to sheer cowardice, as it would have been almost impossible to take it by frontal attack, the enemy largely using L'Hasa made rifles and cartridges instead of matchlocks.

EX-CONVICT SHOT

Made a Desperate Attempt to Escape From a Hospital.

Refused to Stop and Was Fired On By Officer.

Detroit, May 8.—George Hartle, an alleged forger and ex-convict today made a desperate attempt to escape from an officer who was guarding him at Emergency hospital, where Hartle is being treated for a bullet wound in the leg, received while resisting arrest, April 15. Hartle had pretended to be unable to use the leg. Today, however, Hartle crawled out of bed, dressed himself and succeeded in reaching a window from which a ladder led down to a one-story building adjoining. As he started down the ladder the officer discovered him and ordered him to halt. Hartle ignored the command and Officer Green fired breaking his shoulder blade. Hartle continued down the ladder and reached the roof. Green fired again as the escaping prisoner neared the edge of the building wounding him in the abdomen. Hartle fell from the roof to the ground after the second wound and is not expected to survive.

KILLED SUPERINTENDENT.

An Indian Commits Murder, Near Wrougel, Alaska.

Seattle, May 9.—News was brought from Alaska on the steamer Cottage City of the murder of a cannery superintendent, Karl Johr by an Indian known as "Shorty" on May 1, near Wrangel. The native was drunk and became incensed when ordered out of Johr's house. He procured a shotgun and nearly blew the top of Johr's head off. The Indian was arrested and is now in jail at Juneau.

WAITER KILLED

In Fight Over a 30-cent Jackpot.

Chicago, May 9.—Quarreling over a 30-cent jackpot in a "penny ante" poker game, Harry Simmons, a circus aeronaut has shot L. B. Wickman, a waiter, through the heart, killing him instantly. Simmons escaped, but later surrendered to the police.

Wickman was 26 years old and was once, it is said, a walking delegate for the waiters' union. He was a native of Germany and reputed to belong to a titled family.

ANTI-LODGE CLUB VS. ANTI-EUCHRE CLUB.

New York, May 9.—As an offset to the recently formed Married Men's Anti-euchre and Home Preservation society of Bayonne, N. J., the wives of some of the organizers have announced plans for the formation of an anti-lodge club. They assert that numerous husbands who object to the euchre craze among the ladies of Bayonne are members of six or seven organizations and spend much of their leisure time in the lodge room. Therefore, the devotees of euchre purpose, through their new club, to fight the men with their own weapons.

POP, POP CORN AND CIGARETTES.

La Porte, Ind., May 9.—Howard Fogle died today in terrible agony from meningitis brought on by excessive drinking of pop, eating popcorn and smoking cigarettes. He was 15 years old.

COLONISTS IN WANT.

Mobile, May 9.—A local paper has received a letter from a member of the new Italian colony at Palermo, forty miles north of Mobile, stating that the colonists are in want; that the children need food and that conditions at the colony are pitiable. An appeal is made for aid and the writer says the Italian consul at New Orleans has been advised of the situation. The colony is made up of Italians recently brought from New York city.

GERMAN EDITOR ROBBED.

St. Louis, May 9.—Hugo Von Kupper, of Berlin, editor-in-chief of the Berlin Local Anzeiger, reported to the police that a thief had entered his room and robbed him of $20 in American money, 100-mark German bill and his gold watch.

CANAL ZONE PLACED IN HANDS OF WAR DEPARTMENT AND GEN. DAVIS APPOINTED GOVERNOR

FORMER STATE AUDITOR DUNN REPEATS CHARGES CONCERNING COLLINS AND PROMISES MORE

Says He Will Make Things Interesting---Collins Denies Stories.

St. Paul, May 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—Robert C. Dunn, of Princeton, says that he has more important disclosures to make concerning Judge Collins' record, which will show beyond a doubt which candidate for governor deserves to be called "a corporation man." He says that when there is an opportunity he will reveal some secrets regarding the proposed appointment of Judge Collins to the United States senate by Governor Lind, after the death of Senator C. K. Davis. Mr. Dunn says he attended a conference with Governor Lind, L. A. Rosing and A. T. Koerner on the question of the senatorial succession, and that when the proceedings of the conference are made known people will know whether Judge Collins at the time was influenced by corporate influences.

> "I am tired of the vilification that the Collins men have been trying to heap upon me, and I will make things interesting from now on," said Mr. Dunn. "I have made no statements which cannot be proved.

"When I tell of a conference attended by Governor Lind, L. A. Rosing, A. T. Koerner and myself on the question of the senatorial succession, it will show who was the corporation man."

Judge Collins will receive today a letter from Mr. Dunn, in reply to his letter asking if Mr. Dunn actually made the statements attributed to him to the effect that James J. Hill said he had contributed from $30,000 to $40,000 to Collins' campaign in 1894, and that E. A. Nelson had asked Mr. Hill for $25,000 for Judge Collins' present campaign. Mr. Dunn says in his letter that he made these statements.

> Judge Collins denies absolutely that he ever solicited or received a dollar from Mr. Hill, and he says it is up to Mr. Hill to confirm or deny Mr. Dunn's charges.

Judge Collins said yesterday, regarding the statements of Mr. Dunn:

"If, as asserted, Mr. Hill, at my solicitation, furnished me with from $30,000 to $40,000 to use in my campaign of 1894, he knew that so large a sum was to be used to corrupt the voters, and so did I. If he chooses to rest quietly under such an imputation, he may do so. I shall not. If he pleads guilty to such a charge by refusing to deny it, the people of this state will have something to say concerning his interests and contributions in other campaigns, for much more was at stake than the election of one justice of the supreme court.

"But I do not believe that Mr. Hill ever made the statement attributed to him. For myself, let me say that I never solicited or received a dollar of Mr. Hill's money, or that of any other person at any time for campaign purposes, or to promote my election as a justice of the supreme court. If Mr. Hill spent money in that campaign for my benefit it was done without any suggestion from or consultation with me, and wholly without my knowledge.

"In one of the papers Mr. Dunn proposes to give the names of the persons who distributed the money, and also to give the names of the committee which sent Mr. Nelson to solicit $25,000 from Mr. Hill. I should be exceedingly glad if he would do so. Let him state fully the names of these persons. I believe Mr. Nelson when he says, as he has said, that he never made such a proposition."

Mr. Nelson denies emphatically that he ever solicited funds from Mr. Hill. He says he has called on the railroad magnate many times regarding other business. On one occasion, he says, he and Mr. Hill talked about English politics, and at another time he called at the office to see about recovering damages for some horses that were killed in Kittson county by the Great Northern railroad.

Mr. Dunn maintains that he made the charges advisedly, and Republicans in the Twin Cities are anxiously awaiting a statement from Mr. Hill.

"I never would have said a word about this," said Mr. Dunn, "but Collins and his crowd have forced me to tell it. Over at Minneapolis Judge Collins, in a speech, asked his hearers if they wanted to be dictated to by a man who was controlled by the railroads.

"Judge Collins has no proof of his assertion, but I have. I thought it was about time to let the people know about him. He and his crowd have forced me, and now they can have all they want. If they want me I will tell who distributed this money Judge Collins got from the railroad company. I will furnish them and the public, too, if they want that, the personnel of that conference of two months ago, when they sent E. A. Nelson to get more aid for Collins. I have got it in black and white."

CHINESE SEAL OFFERED FOR SALE

San Francisco, May 9.—The Call today says: A massive gold seal worth intrinsically $5000 and one of the priceless treasures of an ancient Chinese dynasty, has been offered for sale in this city to a local smelting company. Word was sent from there to the Chinese consul general. He deciphered the worn inscription upon it and declared that it was one of the most valuable relics of an ancient Chinese dynasty. He said that the gold came from the great range of the Khinga mountains and the sands of the Gobi desert and was gathered by hand from the rocks and channels more than 4000 years ago. Melted and refined into a solid mass, the artisans of those ages carved the inscriptions upon the gold that have formed the official seal of the dynasty for thousands of years until more modern times and a greater sway caused a new imperial seal to be developed. Then the seal was delegated to the nearest nephew of the emperor as his official signature. The seal was subsequently withdrawn from sale by its present owner, who claims to have picked it up in China. It is said the Chinese consul general has guaranteed the payment of $10,000 for it, which is twice its intrinsic value if melted up.

WOULD-BE PASSENGERS RAISE ROW

Chicago, May 9.—Excursionists anxious to take advantage of a $3 cut rate to St. Paul have besieged the depots of the two roads engaged in the rate war and necessitated the calling out of the police.

It is estimated that the Chicago & Northwestern and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul roads have carried 5000 persons to the Northwest. Entire families took advantage of the low fare. Farmers arrived with wagon loads of household furniture, prepared to settle in the Northwest. When they found out that the companies would not carry belongings, the would-be passengers raised a disturbance. It was quelled by the police. Both roads cut the return privileges from May 25 to May 13.

President Transfers His Authority to Secretary of War.

Canal Commission Will Exercise Legislative Authority.

Regulations Completed for Government of the Canal Zone.

Washington, May 9.—President Roosevelt had a long conference today with Secretaries Hay and Taft and Attorney General Knox, at which the regulations to govern the isthmian canal company were decided finally. While the creation and work of the commission is committed by law to the president, whose authority in that regard is practically supreme, the president, by the regulations, directs that the commission shall exercise its powers under the direction and supervision of the secretary of war. Gen. G. W. Davis, the army member of the commission is appointed governor of the American zone on the isthmus. Until the expiration of the Fifty-ninth congress, the isthmian commission will exercise legislative authority over the American strip. Governor Davis is given authority to appoint one judge who shall exercise judicial authority. If, in the opinion of the commission an additional judge is necessary to the proper conduct of the judicial work on the isthmus, the regulations confer on the commission authority to appoint him.

Secretary Taft explained that it manifestly would be impossible for the president in the exercise of his duties to give that personal attention to the canal work which is absolutely necessary and as the war department hitherto has exercised supervisory control over public civil and military works and governmental control over the territory dependent upon the country, it was deemed advisable that the isthmian commision should operate under the direction of the war department. What particular bureau of the war department the commission will be under has not been determined by Secretary Taft, but he indicated that it might not be the bureau of insular affairs, which, he intimated, already had enough work on its hands.

Under the operation of what is known as the Dockery law, the auditing of the commission's accounts will fall to the duty of the auditor of the state department, but beyond the matter of auditing the state department will not be charged with any control over the commission. The commission itself will establish an elaborate system of bookkeeping, throughout which its accounts may be handled very readily by the state department auditor.

The commission will report directly to the secretary of war as often as he may direct upon all phases of its operations. It will be under the same sort of control of the secretary of war as is the Philippine commission. All directions concerning the operations of the commission are set out fully in the regulations and a recitation is made of all the operations leading up to the acquisition of the canal property and the appointment of the commission. Some details still remain to be worked out, but they are largely administrative in nature and are not regarded as essential to the regulations themselves.

JOSEPH WOODBURY,

Son of Hole-in-the-Day, Is Dying.

Cass Lake, Minn., May 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—Suffering with an attack of tuberculosis that very much resembles "quick consumption," Joseph Woodbury, son of Hole-in-the-Day, the famous chief of the Chippewa Indians, lies in a hospital at Walker, Minn., with the shadow of death hovering over him. Woodbury lived with his wife in Cass Lake during the most of the past winter, and became ill some four weeks ago, his condition growing so rapidly worse that he was taken to the hospital.

Joseph Woodbury is the only srviving son of the original Bug-a-ne-shig (known as Hole-in-the-Day), the most famous chieftian in the history of the Ojibway or Chippewa nation. Woodbury was one of four children born to Hole-in-the-Day, there being another son, "Ignatius," who was drowned in Chicago several years ago. His two sisters have long since died of consumption; in fact this disease appears to have ben hereditary in the family, Joe's mother having been stricken with the same malady.

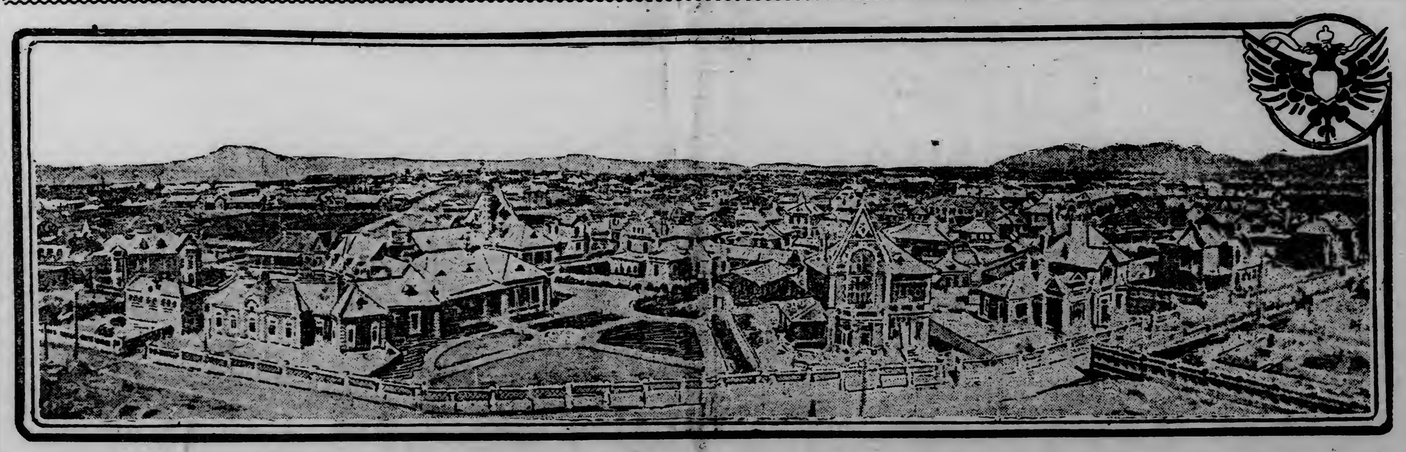
MEAT CUTTERS MEET.

Cincinnati, May 9.—One hundred and ninety delegates to the national biennial convention of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workers' Union of North America and Canada, assembled here today. Four hundred and thirty two unions are represented. Prominent members of the union expressed themselves as well satisfied with the present situation and said that they did not anticipate anything of a disagreeable nature at the present meeting. Officers will be elected and general business transacted.

CHINKS BECOMING EXCITED.

New York, May 9.—According to advices from the North, cables the Herald's Pekin correspondent, the native Chinese are becoming excited, owing to reports which are reaching them of continued success of the Japanese arms.

HANDSOME NEW RUSSIAN CITY OF DALNY, ON TALIEN-WAN BAY, FALLS INTO HANDS OF JAPANESE.



The Japanese troops which landed on the Liao Tung peniusula moved on the city of Dalny and took possession with practically no resistance. They will use it as a base from which to make their attacks on Port Arthur, it being but 25 miles northwest of that city.

The Delineator for June. Out to-day!

The Delineator differs from every other magazine in many ways—but chiefly in the fulness with which each number covers the features (all of them) that interest a woman.

It isn't merely that there are many fascinating articles on the Season's Styles pictured in this month's issue—and a notable paper on Home-Beautifying or something else next month—but each separate number of The Delineator is full of just the things, and all the things, she wants to know about.

There's a lavish abundance of the helpful and the practical that is not found elsewhere. Take the June number, for instance:

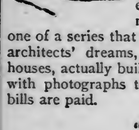
To begin with—the Fashions, of course. More to choose between and better pictured than in any other magazine you ever looked at—and through them all the safeness of absolute authority as to Fashion's approval. There are two gowns shown that are destined to—but one can't describe them here.
And the Hats, too!!!

A School of Beauty has never really existed before. The nearest to it are the cosmetic shops and the doubtful newspaper articles by alleged "Beauty Doctors" and the like. In "The Fountain of Youth" Dr. Grace Peckham Murray is showing that each woman may control her own beauty. This series is a revelation.



For Home Builders—a house that doesn't cost much, looks as though it did, and has artistic comfort built into every nook and corner of it. This is one of a series that doesn't deal with architects' dreams, but shows real houses, actually built—and illustrated with photographs taken after all the bills are paid.

There is much to interest the Child in this number—and as much more that will appeal to its Mother, as for instance, "Varying Temperaments in Children," by Mrs. Theo. W. Birney, Hon. Pres't National Council of Mothers. The tots themselves have half a dozen work and play stories to amuse them.

"The Joy of Living," is a series of thoughtful papers by Lillie Hamilton French, which has already given our readers much to think about. It deals with the different phases of home life. This month's article is about mothers with stay-at-home daughters, and both mothers and daughters will read it with interest.

"Around the World in Eighty Pictures" is the title of a series of picture-letters written by a young bride who is making the grand tour as a honeymoon trip. The letters are accompanied by a profusion of the most brilliant photographs we remember having seen. She is travelling through Manchuria in this number.

Rebecca Boone, the wife of the famous pioneer, had a life hardly less adventurous than that of her husband. Hairbreadth escapes and hardships innumerable were hers for many years. This is the second in the series of "Pioneer Women," and is an Indian story of the most fascinating kind—and a true one.

Fiction is here in plenty. "The Giver of Honour" is a Japanese love story of singular charm. Two college stories, "At the Window of Paradise" and "Bailey's Sister," bring the love-interest nearer home.
The Departments are as fully treated as always—Club Women, Needlework—a score of other things.

This number contains more of interest to Woman than any magazine ever before published

HAWLEY APPEALS TO HIGH COURT

New York, May 9.—Judge Holt, in the United States district court today, signed an order suspending and staying all further examinations of Edwin Hawley and Frank H. Ray, in connection with the bankruptcy proceedings of Daniel J. Sully & Co., pending the decision of the United States circuit court of appeals on the petition in review.

An application was made after Mr. Hawley had been twice on the stand, to stay all further examinations of himself and Ray, counsel repreesnting them, alleging the examinations were prejudicial to their interests, and claiming that their connection with Sully & Co. had been exhaustively detailed and explained by Mr. Hawley during his two lengthy and searching examinations. Judge Holt granted the stay temporarily, but later denounced the application. Counsel for Messrs. Hawley and Ray then filed an appeal with the United States circuit court of appeals, and Judge Holt today made permanent the stay until a decision on the appeal is reached.

TWENTY-ONE INDICTMENTS

Presented Against Silver Bow County Officials.

Butte, Mont., May 9.—Twenty-one indictments have been presented by the Silver Bow grand jury against county officials. Five charges, one of grand larceny and four of misdemeanor, are made against County Commissioner W. D. Clark. Coroner Michael Egan has to answer two indictments for felony. He is charged with "raising" bills for transcripts of testimony.

The county roads commissioner is accused of misappropriating money, and Constable Patrick Holland and County Architect M. D. Kern have to meet similar accusations. It is expected the jury will present another batch of indictments against county officials before adjourning.

LAWYER COMMITS SUICIDE.

Detroit, May 9.—Edward A. Gott, a well known lawyer of this city, formerly connected with the Wabash legal staff here, committed suicide at his home 704 Woodward avenue today.

It pays to advertise in The Herald. Ask D. O'Leary.

APRIL FOR GIRLS

Seventy-one Born In Duluth To Only Forty-nine Boys.

Tuberculosis Leads In Causes of Deaths; Many From Violence.

The natural increase in the population of Duluth during the month of April was 52, according to the statistics of the health department.

The total number of births for the month was 120, which is considerably more than the average. The usual number of births in a month is from 95 to 110.

The number of female children born was out of proportion to the number of males. Of the 120 births, 71 were girls andy only 49 boys, leaving 22 more girls than boys. There were three births of female twins reported during the month, while male twins or even male and female twins were lacking.

The total number of deaths for the months was 68. An unusually large number of deaths were due to accident and violence. Out of the 68 who died, eight met their death by accident, suicide or other violent means. Two drowning accidents were reported and two suicides. One man died of delirium tremens and one child was killed by carbolic acid. There was one death due to a fractured spine and one case of murder.

Out of the sixty remaining deaths due to natural causes, the greatest number caused by any one disease is credited to tuberculosis. For six or seven months past pneumonia has led the list, but this month it takes second place, coming after tuberculosis. There were ten deaths caused by the latter disease and eight by pneumonia.

No deaths from smallpox were reported during the month, and there are but two cases in existence in the city at the present time, and both of the patients are reported to be convalescent.

Other contagious diseases are well under control. There was but one death due to scarlet fever during the month, and diphtheria was the cause of but two. Typhoid fever was also responsible for but two deaths during the month.

The thirty-seven remaining deaths were due to almost as many different diseases.

A PLEASANT CARD PARTY

Ended In the Hostess Signing a Note For $40,000.

New York, May 9.—How a little family game of cards wound up by the charming hostess signing a note for $40,000, which she gave to the former brokerage firm of Harris, Gates & Co., was told by Charles P. Buchanan and his wife to Justice Blanchard and a jury. The suit was entered by John F. Harris, a member of the firm, who alleged the note was given to cover losses in a stock deal during the Union Pacific panic.

Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan, who live at 62 East Sixty-third street, were the only witnesses examined. He said he and his wife had signed the note at the request of Mr. Harris to cover a debt of $20,000, and so the firm might carry him in certain stocks until he could pay his indebtedness.

Mrs. Buchanan then took the stand and told of that pleasant little card party. Mr. Rogers, a member of Harris, Gates & Co., was a guest at dinner in the Buchanan home on May 7, after which a card game was started, which lasted until 2 a. m.

"Aboutt hat time," said Mrs. Buchanan, "Mr. Rogers said my husband was indebted to his firm to the extent of $20,000 on account of losses in Union Pacific stock. Mr. Rogers advised him it was better for him to put up some money for margins. I streuously objeced to his doing any such thing, but Mr. Rogers said: 'You own this house, Mrs. Buchanan, and if you sign a note for $40,000 I will carry your husband on Atchison preferred until that stock goes up sufficiently to enable him to liquidate his indebtedness to our firm.'

"I said I could see no reason why we should not do so, and Mr. Rogers drew up the note, which my husband and I signed. I understood it was for 1600 shares of Atchison preferred, and I never received any consideration whatever for it. I was not personally indebted to any amount whatsover to Mr. Rogers' firm. Mr. Rogers said it would look better if I gave the note, as it would make his firm understand we were honorable people, so I signed it."

Mrs. Buchanan said the evening had been a pleasant one until the question of her husband's indebtedness to Harris, Gates & Co., came up. Mr. Harris, she declared, had said he would not leave the house until the note was signed.

"What was the understanding upon which you signed the note?"

"On the understanding that no use was to be made of it. Mr. Rogers said it would be deposited in the safe of the firm and he would carry Mr. Buchanan for a month, and that would pull him out of his difficulties."

WORKING ON THE FLEET.

New York, May 9.—Renewed energy is being expended on the preparations of the second Pacific fleet, which will consist of eleven ironclads and seventeen cruisers, says a Herald dispatch from St. Petersburg. Orders are out for the commanders of the Sissoi Velike and the Navarin and Admiral Nachimoff immediately to take aboard armaments and prepare to start for the far East. According to the last announcement, however, the fleet is not expected to sail until some time in July, going by the outside route.

BUT FIVE MACHINISTS ACCEPT COMPANY'S OFFER.

Topeka, Kas., May 9.—Only five of the union machinists appeared for work today in response to the order issued on Saturday by the Atchison railroad, giving the striking shopmen until today to secure their old positions. Later eighteen union machinists' apprentices were called out by President Buckalew, and all quietly laid down their tools.

General Manager Mudge says that a carload of machinists to fill the vacancies will reach here on Tuesday from Fort Madison, Iowa, and Kansas City, where the company has had a number of men awaiting an emergency.

SWEDISH PAVILION AT FAIR OPENED

St. Louis, May 9.—The Swedish pavilion was formally opened today. The building was erected after the style of a Swedish country house, by an organization of residents of Sweden and America. The pavilion was tendered by Fred Boberg, architect and representative of the Swedish section, and was received by Col. John Ackerson, Gustave Anderson, of Rock Island, Ill.; Andrew Schon, of Chicago; C. A. Smith, of Minneapolis; E. Lundband and Representative Erickson, of Boone, Iowa.

President Francis made an address of welcome in behalf of the exposition and a number of other speeches followed.

A lifessize bust of King Oscar of Sweden and Norway stands on a pedestal at the entrance. The interior is elaborately decorated in white and gold and with specimens of Swedish pottery and chinaware. The headquarters of the Swedish royal commission will be located in the pavilion.

Queen Liluokalani, the deposed ruler of Hawaii, accompanied by her adopted son, former Prince Cupid, and his wife, and a number of friends, arrived today from Washington and took apartments in the Inside inn, inside the grounds. The party expects to remain in St. Louis about two weeks, and a number of entertainments have been planned in honor of the visitors.

Chevalier Zeggio of the Italian commission stated that he expects the fine Italian pavilion at the World's fair to be completed within the next two weeks.

After considerable communication by cable and with the assistance of the transportation companies, both here and abroad, the modeling for the elaborate historical frieze, which is to adorn the grand portico, has just arrived and work on the frieze will begin at once.

LAY IT TO FUNERAL.

Mork Ball Team's Peculiar Excuse For Defeat.

The Charles Mork baseball team was defeated yesterday by the fast Cloquet nine. The Mork boys claim that their defeat was due to the fact that the ball grounds were situated next to a graveyard and that the game was stopped in the eighth inning to make way for a funeral procession.

The team left Duluth yesterday morning for Cloquet. The grounds there were in excellent condition, a new grand stand having recently been added.

During the first five innings the game was all in favor of the home team, and the score stood 7 to 0 at that time. The Duluth men then took a brace and scored six runs in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings, holding down the home team to one additional tally.

At this point, with the score 8 to 6 in favor of Cloquet, a funeral procession arrived on the scene, and the game had to be stopped.

The Mork team lined up as follows: Catcher, Pat Burns; pitcher, Gebeau; first base, Clayton; second base, Captain Brown; short stop, Eddinger and Chase; third base, Dennis; outfielders, Cox, Clausen, Chase and Eddinger; substitutes, Wagner and eKheler.

Capt. Fay Comments On Dissolution of Ore Association.

Is To Interest of Steel Corporation To Keep Price Up.

Capt. M. L. Fay was in the city today on his way to his home in Virginia from Cleveland, where he and Joseph Sellwood, of this city, attended the meeting of the Bessemer Ore association, which resulted in the dissolution of the organization.

The captain says he does not know but that it is just as well for the association to be out of existence as not, as every man has as good a chance as any other to sell his product. The hitch in the proceedings was due to the effort to have all producers restrict the output, and this the United States Steel corporation would not agree to, although it was willing to stay out of the market so far as selling was concerned. But the Independents wanted the production restricted in such a way as to have the corporation buy ore, which it was unwilling to do.

"It is to the interests of the corporation to keep up the price of ore," Capt. Fay said, "for the more its competitors in the steel market have to pay for their ore the more this tends to keep the price of steel up, which naturally helps the steel corporationto sell its finished products at high prices. The corporation was willing to have an arrangement by which those who mined and consumed ore also would use their own ore, thus leaving only 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 tons to be bought in the open market from the independent producers. But this was not met with favor.

"All that is left now for the independent producers to do is to find out how much it is going to cost them to produce ore, figure the royalty, the labor and so on, and make their price cover these and add what they think is a fair profit. They will have to find out what freight is going to cost them, and I suppose this will be in the neighborhood of 65 cents."

"Haven't the independents an understanding of any kind on price? Is there any danger of a great cutting of prices?"

"There is no understanding at all on price, and I don't think there is any great worry about cutting of prices. As I say the only thing for the man who wants to sell his ore to do now is to find out how much it is going to cost him to produce it and sell it at whatever he thinks is the just figure."

Captain Fay says if the state must have a Republican he prefers to see Dunn get into the governor's chair. He says the range feels very friendly to the Princeton candidate for his protection of the timber interests there and he believes there is a decided sentiment in his favor up that way. Up to a week ago, however, the captain says there was nothing being done in campaigning for either candidate and he did not expect to see things very active for some little time yet. He thinks, however, that Mr. Dunn is the ablest man that ever held the office of auditor, and says he always took the initiative in fighting anything wrong.

ANOTHER CONFERENCE

Arranged Between Ship Owners and Masters and Pilots.

Cleveland, May 9.—Arrangements have been made for another conference this afternoon between the executive committee of the Lake Carriers' association with a view to effecting a settlement of existing differences. District Capt. Paul Howell of the Masters and Pilots' association said today that while there would be no modification in the demand of his organization for a uniform wage scale, he believed it was possible to preesnt the masters' side of the question in such a light as would bring about favorable action on the part of the vessel owners.

The executive committee of the lake carriers met with the representatives of the Seamen's union today and practically reached an agreement governing the season. The wage scale adopted is the same as that of last year. The request of the men for overtime in emergency cases, when they are compelled to be on duty over certain hours, was not allowed.

"There are two or three matters of minor importance to be adjusted at another session with the seamen," said Representative Livingston of the lake carriers today. But our work with them is practically over."

CRITICISES EMPEROR

Bebel Says He Does Not Reflect Sentiment of Germans.

Berlin, May 9.—During the discussion following the third reading of the budget bill in the reichstag today, Herr Bebel, the Socialist leader referred to Emperor William's speeches at Carlsruhe, remarking that the pointed allusions to France had caused great surprise coming so soon after the emperor's return from Italy, where President Loubet had been received with hearty ovations. The emperor's words, the speaker added, were enhanced in importance through the fact that he telegraphed to Emperor Nicholas from Sicily, on the occasion of the sinking of the Russian battleship Petropavlovsk, as follows:

"Russia's mourning is Germany's mourning."

Herr Bebel, continuing said: "I deny most emphatically that the emperor's telegram reflects the sentiments of the German people. In my opinion German sympathies are far more on the side of Japan than on that of Russia."

This statement caused murmurs of dissent on the right.

"The land in which such things can happen as recently occurred in Russia," continued Herr Bebel, "stands upon such a low level of civilization that all the rest of Europe has the most lively interest in seeing the sun of civilization rise upon it."

Herr Bebel then alluded to the splendid reforms inaugurated in Prussia after the defeats of 1806 and Austria's defeat of 1866 had brought her into the ranks of constitutional states. The overthrow of Napoleon made France a republic, hence it can be assumed that the defeat of Russia will have a similar result.

Herr Bebel claimed that western Europe has special reasons to rejoice if Russia loses the war, for "the more Russia is weakened by the struggle, the less likely it becomes that Russia will mix in the affairs of western Europe.

The speaker referred to "the far reaching antipathy of all civilized nations against Germany," alluding to the Emperor Frederick monument, "unpacked in some corner of Washington and the Goethe monument in Rome, but not yet set up."

METHODIST CONFERENCE

Proposal To Consolidate Publishing Houses Will Be Presented.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 9.—There was a full attendance when the Methodist general conference convened this morning.

It is believed that the book concern committee will report to the conference during the next two or three days, a recommendation regarding the proposal to consolidate the various publishing houses from the church into one general central institution. Inasmuch as there is an almost equal division of sentiment as to the advisability of this action, a lively debate will surely follow. The committee on itinarcy is also expected some time during the during the week to make some sort of report to the conference on the all-absorbing question of erstoring the pastoral time limit. It is scarcely likely that the episcopacy committee will have read its recommendations on the retirement of bishops and the choosing of others before the last days of the week.

A KICK BY CANADA

Wants Voice In Selection of the Governor General.

Objects to Appointment of Unknown Duke or Earl.

Ottawa, Ont., May 9.—There's a robust kick coming on the appointment of the new governor general in succession to Lord Minto. Canada is allowed no voice in the choice of the representative of the sovereign at Ottawa. The selection is made in England without reference to Canadian opinion or the views of the Canadian government. Public opinion is becoming as restive on this subject as it was on the nomination by the Downing street authorities of the imperial general officer to command the Canadian militia, which has been summarily ended.

Following the ordinary practice, the formal order in council appointing the successor to the earl of Minto should be put through, and the order of the king in council issued in July. Among the names cabled here from London from time to time as available material for the position was a couple of dukes and various earls more or less unknown to the Canadians, or more or less objectionable for various reasons.

Why peers alone should be considered eligible for the office is not understood here. There are men outside the house of lords who would suit Canada better than most of the titled noblemen who were stated on different occasions in the last half year to be likely to receive an offer of the position.

The growing feeling of dissatisfaction at the methods at present in vogue of sending governors general to Canada who cannot by any stretch of the imagination be expected to fill the office as Canadians would like to see it filled is voiced by Events.

"As a rule," it is asserted, "Canada is saddled with an incompetent person, and the English government has no right to inflict a nuisance on this country. A governor general who is not a competent person speedily becomes a positive nuisance to the executive. The position of governor general in Canada is a piece of party patronage in the hands of the colonial secretary, and it is not long ago since these colonial governors looked for direction to the colonial office and received it.

"This, however, has passed away and now the duty falls upon the king in council to realize that he must appoint an official head to a great and growing nation. This is indeed an imperial task, and by the manner in which it is discharged, the kind of imperial spirit which is so much talked about at present in the United Kingdom can be measured."

To permit the present colonial secretary, who is described publicly by the press in England as a "caretaker," to select for six millions of people this side of the Atlantic the chief of the executive government just as he is permitted to select the governor of a petty crown colony whose irresponsible executive can only do as he is told is so absurd that it has only to be stated to be admitted on all sides.

Canadians returning from London are impressed with growing evidences of the uneasiness prevailing in Great Britain at the prospects of closer Canadian relations with the united States. It is beginning to be recognized over there, they say, that commercial union between Canada and the great republic must inevitably lead to a political alliance. These views are being widely quoted here by the advocates of imperial preference as an argument against reciprocity, and are confirmed by the files of British papers received by every mail.

A flood of light is let into the condition of the Canadian iron and steel manufacturing interests by the Toronto contract for water pipe. The Pittsburg bids, will net the American house when duty and freight are paid $22,000 less than the lowest Canadian bid would have produced. The duty on imported pipe is 30 per cent, and the Pittsburg firm pays this and the long railroad haul and receives $2,800 less for the pipe than the lowest Canadian bid. The case is quoted in support of the plea for heavier duties to keep out the American product.

Canada, according to Sir Mackenzie Bowell, is being flooded to an alarming extent by American silver. The question was discussed in the senate and Senator McMullen wanted the Canadian banks to refuse all American money on the ground that Canadian money is not accepted in the United States. Mr. Ellis said the banks at St. John, N. B., took American silver, but withdrew it from circulation. Secretary of State Scott said the remedy was in the hands of the people, who should decline to receive American silver coin.

Americans almost exclusively are employed on the surveys of the Grand Trunk Pacific for the new transcontinental railway, and there is a tremendous amount of feeling shown on the subject by the opposition in parliament. There are hundreds of young Canadians who are claimed to be fit for the work, but the fact remains that the Americans engaged by the company are experts especially qualified by training and experience, and the government evidently has no intention of interfering in the matter.

Under what is facetiously called the "bachelor" clause of the new assessment act, every man earning a salary of $1,000 a year, if a householder, is exempted. If not a householder, he will be allowed an exemption of only $400. For every dollar a householder earns more than $1,000 a year he is henceforth to be taxed only on the excess over $1,000. Thus on a salary of $2,500 he will pay income tax on $1,500 only, whereas a nonhouseholder earning $2,500 a year will pay on $2,100. The exemption in both classes is limited to salary.

GYMNASTS AND ATHLETES

Of Y. M. C. A. Training For World's Fair Competition.

New York, May 9.—The physical department of the Young Men's Christian Associations, which have 129,000 men and boys in their membership, are "trying out" and training their men for the competitions of Y. M. C. A. week, August 15-20, at the World's Fair. Athletic competitions at the Fair will begin May 12 and continue until November 24. The games are held in the Stadium, seating 25,000 people, and planned after the old Grecian ampitheater. This is the third Olympiad since the revival of the games which were forbidden by the Emperor Theodosius, the first being held in Athens in 1896, the second in Paris in 1900. Baron Pierre de Coubertin is the president of the International Olympic Committee. Groups of men will be sent from the North American Associations to compete in the Pentathlon allround championship, which consists of five events—100-yard dash, throwing the 12-pound hammer, running high jump, pole vault and one-mile run.

The Associations have revived the old Pentathlon idea, which was the original Grecian test of all-round physical development. Other events will be individual gymnastic championships on the side and long horse and on the horizontal and parallel bar. Athletic-gymnastic team championships—marching, calisthenic drill, side horse, horizontal bar, parallel bars, running high jump, basketball, one-mile relay race. At the handicap track and field meet the events will be 100, 220, 440 and 880 yard, one-mile and two-mile runs, 120-yard high hurdle, 220-yard low hurdle, running high and broad jump, pole vault, putting 16-pound shot and throwing the discus. The events will be open to all members of Associations holding membership in the Athletic League. Basketball will be a feature, and the best teams of the Associations will compete. Among these are the West Side Department, Chicago, Chicago Central and Buffalo German Branch, the latter holding the Pan-American championship. The committee is George W. Ehler, J. H. McCurdy, M. D.; A. F. Kennedy, M. D.; W. E. Day, and G. T. Hepbron. Mr. Hepbron, who is secretary of the Association Athletic League, has been secured by the World's Fair physical culture department as general overseer.

LOVE THREATENS

To Deplete Ranks of Teachers at York, Pa.

York, Pa., May 9.—Cupid threatens to deplete the ranks of the teachers of the York public schools. A matrimonial stampede has started among them, and the superintendents are wondering where it will end.

Miss Hattie Quickle led off by tendering her resignation and going to Los Angeles, Cal., to become the bride of Amos Strickler, a prosperous bachelor of the coast.

Now matrimony will be responsible for eight other vacancies in the local schools. The weddings of these teachers have been announced: Clara Frick, Clara Skinner, Anna Holahan, Lottie Owen, Carrie S. Stine, Emma Allen, Clara Baumeister, and Bertha Palmer. Miss Palmer is teacher in the art department of the York high school.

In the county many teachers will resign to become brides. Professor Gardner, in commenting on the situation, said:

"It is singular and without a precedent in York. With nine teachers resigning to become brides, York is likely to lead the other towns in the state in a percentage of marrying teachers.

"No, it cannot be attributed to the meager compensation for teaching, for salaries were increased both in the city and county last fall. It is a sign of the times. We are in an era of prosperity; the young men are making money and feel able to take wives.

"So long as Cupid is at large in the land and there is a chance for young men to make enough money to support two, the schoolma'ams will abandon the schoolrooms to become wives. In dull times school teachers are plentiful. In busy times it is the opposite."

TO OBSERVE FLAG DAY.

Mayor Cullum Asks Co-operation In This.

Mayor Cullum issued an order this morning, directing the different city departments to observe Flag day, which comes on June 14.

The order was in compliance with the request of the American Flag association. Flag day will be observed by the different cities throughout the country as the one hundred and twenty-seventh anniversary of the adoption of the Stars and Stripes as the national emblem, and flags will be raised above the different public buildings in all the cities in the country.

Special exercises will probably be arranged for the schools on that day.

Mayor Cullum asks the citizens to assist in the observance of the day and requests them to display flags wherever possible.

80 PER CENT OF THE ADULT POPULATION SUFFER FROM ONE PAINFUL AILMENT.

Think what this means. Imagine the amount of misery that exists and is endured simply because people do not know there is an absolute cure.

The only way to cure any complaint is to remove the cause. There are very few diseases or ailments that can be cured by external application—and piles is not one of them. Piles can be cured; the treatment must, however, be internal, for the cause of piles is an internal disorder of the liver or the bowels. Even catarrh of the stomach and bowels can be cured by DR. PERRIN'S PILE SPECIFIC, The Internal Remedy. Here is an instance of what this practically infallible remedy will do:

Dr. C. A. Perrin, Helena, Mont.—Dear Sir: I have nearly finished the former bottle of Perrin's Pile Specific and am practically well. My case was one which most physicians would have pronounced incurable, as I was afflicted with a dysentery and compelled to go to the toilet room from three to five times each day and each time would bleed from one-half to one teacupful. I had to resort to bandages and absorbent cotton to check the flow of blood, and now the past ten or twelve days there has been no sign of bleeding and my appetite is good; have gained ten pounds in weight and feel like a new lease of life was given me.

Very truly yours,
T. R. HARRIS,
October 20th, 1902. Yerington, Nev.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific is sold by all reliable druggists at $1.00 the bottle, under an absolute guarantee to refund the money should this great internal remedy fail to cure.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Autopsy Shows That Farmer Gillet Was Foully Murdered.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Minot—Chauncey Gillett, found dead in his well four miles north of Lansford, last December, is now known to have been foully murdered. Professor Ladd, state chemist at Fargo, after examining his stomach, says there are evidences of morphine poisoning. Gillett was found sitting in the bottom of a seven-foot well with the water barely covering his head. Injuries were found on his head. Arrests may follow.

Grand Forks—Through a similarity of names R. Rogerson, of Mayville, was mentioned as a candidate for secretary of state on the Republican ticket, rather than T. R. Tobiason, of Hatton. A meeting to boost Tobiason was held at Hillsboro last night and was attended by prominent Scandinavians, among them R. E. Helgeson, candidate for the gubernatorial nomination.

E. J. Densmore has brought an action against the city to recover damages of $500 for injuries received in falling upon a sidewalk.

Fargo—The death of Dr. M. L. Shanks, of Casselton, is reported. He was one of the oldest practitioners in the state and had resided in Casselton twenty-six years.

Judge Pollock granted Gertie Klug a divorce from Frederick Klug on the ground of nonsupport.

An invitation has been extended to President J. J. Hill to make an address here at the dedication of the Bjornson bauta sten. Mr. Hill replied that his presence on that date was contingent on some other matters, but he would come to Fargo if possible.

The Freerks Brothers, attorneys, announce they will sell out their effects here and remove to some other state. In case they do it is probable the agitation regarding their disbarment will be dropped.

F. A. Bishop, clerk in the United States land office, has been transferred to the office at Great Falls, Mont. The officials of the local land office hope to have the transfer order canceled.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Elk Point—Citizens are alarmed by the approach of the Missouri river, which is less than four miles away and devouring several acres of farm land daily.

Lieut. E. D. Vincent, of the government engineer's office, conferred with Elk Point authorities concerning measures to protect property. The government's refusal to continue the appropriations for the control of the river makes the problem a difficult one.

Some damage has been done along the river between Sioux City and Chamberlain to the government's protective works.

Mayville—The city council has taken steps for the proper observation of Memorial day. Aldermen Taylor and Gulicks were appointed a committee.

Mayville is to have the best baseball team it has ever had. Three players will be hired for the season, a pitcher, catcher and shortstop. Col. I. N. Steen has been appointed business manager.

J. Rosholt was called to his home in Minneapolis by the serious illness of Mrs. A. M. Barnum, his wife's mother. Mrs. Barnum was for many years a resident of the city.

Miss Corwin, state secretary of the Y. W. C. A., made the state normal school an extended visit.

AMERICAN KILLS HIMSELF AT PARIS.

Paris, May 9.—Harold T. Clarke, living in New York and San Francisco, son of the late Jeremiah Clarke of San Francisco, killed himself in a leading hotel here today by blowing out his brains with a revolver. He had been touring the continent for several months and had just arrived in Paris from Monte Carlo, where it is understood he lost heavily. Clarke's mother and sister, who are in this city, are unable to give the slightest clue to the cause of his suicide. The deceased was 21 years of age. The body will be shopped to the United States.

When moving why not engage covered vans. It costs no more.

FOILED BY DUST

Year's Work At Ann Arbor Blocked By An Atom.

Scientists Toil For Many Months In Constructing Apparatus.

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 9.—Two novel scientific experiments at the university of Michigan, one a change in the funamentals of electricity, the other with seven new poisons, have been stopped by singular obstacles—the one by a speck of dust, the other because a woman refuses to sacrifice a favorite flower in the interest of science. Without moving off a laboratory table, scientific searchers have met the delays experienced by a north pole explorer.

For more than a year Professors Carhart, Patterson, and Guthe have sought to redetermine the electrical ampere. The ampere holds in electricity the place occupied by the inch in architecture. It is important, is fixed by law in civilized countries, and is now slightly in error. Scientists in all parts of the world have attempted to correct this error and have failed.

The first delay of Michigan's theoretical explorers was the weather. For five months summer held them heat bound. Their apparatus is original, consisting of two wire coils, one suspended inside the other by a phospor bronze wire. This wire forced the experimenters to wait till winter and steam heat made possible a temperature unchanging by a tenth of a degree for weeks together. So much as one degree colder caused the wire, the key to the whole experiment, to twist faster. To detect this increased speed the eye would have waited weeks. It was only 1-5000 part more speed, and yet it was 5000 times as large as the error in the ampere for which they searched. To allow the thermometer to drop one degree would have been like burying the object of their search 5000 feet deep on the table.

To be ready for the winter's work Michigan's scientists were forced to master a trade, plaster casting. One of the coils was wound on a plaster of paris cylinder and a plaster expert was employed to mold it. He made three, and them, affirming it was impossible to make plaster as perfect as the professors demanded, he quit in disgust. The scientists learned the trade and made their own cylinder.

By equations, a single one of which measured from fifteen to twenty-five feet in length, the trio mapped out beforehand their advance into the unknown of electricity. To solve them required two months' figuring. This done, they overhauled their equipment. Having set up a telescope and focused it on the table, they observed through it every square inch of their workmanship, searching for unseen crooks in electric wires.

Now, in a small piece of porcelain, the final obstacle to success has been reached. Something is wrong with the "intimate nature" of the porcelain, which is in form of a small cylinder. Somewhere within the porcelain substance itself is a small foreign substance, perhaps the size of a grain of dust, that is susceptible to electrical influence. In the two years' contest with invisible obstacles on the laboratory table this tiny speck is the first enemy that escaped detection. It represents the scientist's first error of judgment in planning his campaign. For of all material used, the porcelin cylinder alone was not tested for magnetic impurities. The professors, being unable to learn the art of porcelain making in less than a lifetime, ordered the cylinder from a royal German society. They feared to meddle with the finished product, and are now compelled to improve on the handicraft of the world's best porcelain workmen.

Scientists from everywhere are securing frequent reports on the progress of Michigan's ampere experiment.

In five years' work seven poisons have been extracted from northern dooryard plants by Professor Julius O. Schlotterbeck. All are narcotics, which will be tested on the human system as quickly as sufficient poison is collected. But only three ounces of poison can be secured from twenty-five pounds of vines, and the chemist is now idly waiting for the vines to grow. Householders are not generous in giving up their pet flowers to furnish the world seven new, noxious drugs.

WEST DULUTH

The five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August Schulte, of 323 Fifty-eight avenue west, died at 9 o'clock last night as the result of injuries received from a fall four hours before. The little girl left the house about 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Her mother told her to be sure and return by supper time, and she cheerfully replied that she would obey the instructions. She ran to the railroad scales, a block distant, and began to play about them. In some manner she fell from the scale beam, fracturing her skull. No one witnessed the accident.

Some men passing the spot at 5:30 o'clock observed the child lying on the scales. An examination developed the fact that she was alive but unconscious. Neighbors who were called recognized the child and she was carried home. Physicians were called but nothing could be done to save her life. It was found that a fracture existed at the base of her brain. She remained unconscious until the end.

The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock from the residence. Interment will be at Calvary cemetery.

THE SAW MILLS.

All Will Be In Operation By Close of Week.

The end of this week will see all the West Duluth saw mills in operation. The Lesure mill started work on the season's cut this morning, with a full crew of 150 men employed. It is estimated that the cut of this mill will amount to about 15,000,000 feet this year.

The St. Louis mill will commence operations the latter part of this week, probably Thursday morning, with between 150 and 200 men employed. None of the West Duluth plants are running night shifts as yet. The cut of the St. Louis will probably amount to about the same as that of the Lesure.

Within a few days fully 900 men will be working in the West Duluth mills. There are plenty of logs in sight to keep them employed all through the season.

CENTRAL AVENUE WORK

Will Be Resumed During Present Week.

Work of paving Central avenue will not be started till the latter part of this week, probably Thursday or Friday. It was intended to start paving today, but a delay in the arrival from the East of a new roller, recently ordered, will not allow commencing the work for three or four days yet.

The frost is now practically out of the ground and will no longer hinder the completion of the contract. All that remains to be done is placing the surface covering of macadam, the body work having been completed last fall. A crew of men can finish the job in less than two weeks time, it is thought.

When the street has been paved according to contract it will be macadamized with Telford macadam from Main to Cody streets. The two blocks from Main to Gosnold are built up with cinders and slack.

IMPRISONED MINERS MAY STILL BE ALIVE

Shamokin, Pa., May 9.—It is barely possible that the five miners who were imprisoned in the Locust Gap slope on Thursday may be alive. The smoke and black damp had sufficiently disappeared today to enable the rescuing party to penetrate to the bottom of the slope, but no trace of the men could be found. It is believed that the miners have gone into anabandoned slope and that they may be found alive. The flames are under control.

ONE REPLY TO HEARST CLUB

Of Duluth By Ira K. Lewis a Democrat, of Winsted.

Officers of the William Randolph Hearst club, of Duluth, have been writing to numbers of leading Democrats throughout the state, inclosing circulars and other letters, and it is said that replies have been received in a number of instances which are somewhat pointed. Recently Ira K. Lewis, a Democrat of Winsted, McLeod county, received a communication from the Duluth Hearst club, printed over the signature of its secretary, F. H. Cutting, and inclosing two letters, one written by C. d'Autremont, of Duluth, to the club, and the other a copy of a letter written to Frank A. Day, of Fairmont, by T. T. Hudson. In replying to Secretary Cutting's letter, Mr. Lewis said:

Winsted, Minn., April 28, 1904.—F. H. Cutting, Esq., Duluth, Minn.—Dear Sir: Your circular letter of the 28th inst., enclosing letters of C. d'Autremont, Jr., and T. T. Hudson, is duly received. As you ask for a statement of opinion relative to the subject disoussed in your communication, and, as it is also a subject upon which Democrats may honestly agree or disagree, I wish to state that there are a great many statements made in said letters which I cannot agree to. I do not believe that there are, or that there should be, two branches of Democracy, one styled "Cleveland Democracy." Neither Cleveland nor Bryan ever owned the Democratic party, or ever had any right, inherent or otherwise, to own or use any personal brand or stamp which each could place upon persons of their liking, and call them their own. The rank and file of the Democratic party are usually capable of doing their own thinking and can usually be trusted to arrive at a reasonably fair conclusion, without the need of ready-made opinions of the "boiler plate" variety. I do not believe that any Democrat favoring the nomination of Judge Parker is necessarily of a different brand of Democracy than one who favors the nomination of Hearst. I believe, as you say, that all Democrats should study the "conditions that confront us," but I wish to add that all Democrats should act upon those conditions, and not turn their backs to the enemy to face and fight for something that has passed to the rear so long ago—and so far—that it can never be brought up to the front for service again. The "conditions that confront us" are largely new ones, but it is the same old enemy that also confronts us. Any Democrat who favors the nomination of Parker is not in duty bound, nor is he justified, in calling any person who favors the nomination of Hearst anything but a plain, honest Democrat, and vice versa. Each individual's judgment is not infallible, by any means, but each has the undoubted moral and legal right to act upon that judgment in trying to better his own condition, as well as that of his fellowmen. Conditions change (sometimes very rapidly) every day, and if there is any element in the Democratic party which is "reactionary," I believe it is that element which insists in staying in the rear (regardless of reason or consequences) to guard and protect the relics of by-gone days which, under present conditions, are judged to be unfit for present service. That element, if it exists, should be making forced marches to get to the front where there is fighting to do, shoulder to shoulder with the Democrats who are facing the enemy, on the battle ground, regardless who the commander is, so long as he commands with good judgment, and fights. Mr. d'Autremont and Mr. Hudson are certainly of sufficient good udgment to know that Judge Parker's fitness for the presidency is unquestioned. His qaalifications, reputation and position for a long period of public life, is such, that the assertion that he is in the hands of, and is controlled by, the trusts, subsidized press, etc., is of very doubtful force indeed, for his whole life, conduct, character and history are such that they give the lie to such an assertion. The statement that "I don't have to tell you that Bryan Democrats demand that the burdens and favors of government should be equally borne by and distributed among all the people, and the securing of equal opportunity under the law of every man, woman and child, for you know it," possibly requires an answer to the effect that the party making it, needs to be told that those are pure, unadulterated Democratic principles, forming the bedrock upon which each and every Democrat can and does stand, and no one who is a Democrat, can claim any right of handle to the name "Democrat." The way to win a battle is to do, where there is something to fight for and a foundation and ground to fight upon, not by cursing and abusing a prospective commander, not by lagging behind and mourning over lost battles, not by accusing your fellow soldier, who is willing to face the enemy, and fight him in the future as he has done in the past—of being a traitor. I have been a Democrat all my lifetime, am one now, and know of no reason at the present time why I may not continue to be one in the future. From pure principle alone I have never voted for a Republican candidate for president, and I am willing to give to each and every one, due credit and respect for his honest opinion and belief. Your truly, IRA K. LEWIS.

EXPENSIVE WEDDINGS

Farmers' Daughters In Illinois Wear Splendid Bridal Gowns.

Chicago, May 9.—Some of the most elaborate wedding gowns that are to be seen nowadays belong to brides who were born, raised, courted and married on Illinois farms. In some instances the bride and the groom belong to the smaller country towns, but in great part they are farmers' sons and daughters.

The real character of the wedding costumes are seen in the photograph galleries of the county seat and other towns.

In some localities it is the custom of the bride and the groom to be photographed before the wedding. The subjects have three or four sittings. They are posed together, the bride sitting and the groom standing, and vice versa. Then both are taken alone. The bridal veil is the article of raiment in which the bride takes the greatest amount of pride.

The pictures made of these happy pairs form a never ending interest in looking through the collection of the different galleries. Along the line of the Eastern Illinois and the Illinois Central are some of the best farming counties of the state. The pictures are highly artistic, made on the latest styles of paper and mounted according to the latest wrinkle in photographic work.

A single community in Iroquois county keeps a Watseka artist busy on bridal work alone. The work in great part comes from a settlement of rich German farmers, who live near the small village of Woodworth. They are all men of big families, and the young people intermarry. The Watseka artist is able to show the largest collection of wedding pictures and photographs of brides and grooms extant. Some of the grooms have spent $50 in pictures showing both bride and groom as they appear about a week or so before the wedding.

They order all the way from six to ten doezn prints in different postures in their wedding toggery. There is a great profusion of white satin and tulle. The groom is as well togged out as the bride. Both are pictures of perfect health, the groom standing fully six feet tall, the finest specimen of the young Illinois farmer. When the sittings are all made the groom winds up by inviting the artist to the wedding, and one of thees functions lasts all day.

There is a pretty custom that Illinois country people have adopted and is spreading. The young people buy a home and furnish it complete before the wedding. Then the happy function is brought off in their own home, so there isn't any step, however small, from one altar to the home. The bride and groom, for a week or so before the wedding, work together in fitting up their future abode, and it is said to be the happiest labor of love in the world. A pretty wedding of this kind took place but a few days ago in Hoopeston, where the wedding feast and party took place under the same roof, the home of the bride and groom.

MYSTERIOUS RIVER STYX

Indiana Stream of Blind Fish Disappears Three Times.

Indianapolis, May 9.—South of this city, in the vicinity of Orleans, a town situated in a valley which is surrounded on all sides except on the east by hills, there are many small streams and rivers, all of which have the curious habit of disappearing into the bowels of the earth without any system, only to burst forth miles away and continue on their course downward to the Ohio river and thence to the sea.

Chief of these streams is Lost river, or the River Styx. Its source is in the corner of Washington county, from whence it flows westward into Orange county. At first it is an insignificant, crookedly twisting creek, but tributaries add to its flow until when about fifteen miles in length it lays claim to the word "river."

During its journey it disappears several times in jungles and swamps, but the real stream sinks, which gains for it the name it bears, beginning some miles southeast of Orleans, there are four of them at an average of about two miles apart.

In dry weather the first sink takes in all of the water, which does not appear until at Orangeville, ten miles west. The river bed between these points becoming a tangled mass of grass and bushes. The sink is but a huge, cavernous-looking hole in the ground, and suggests to the curious the entrance to hades, so dark and unfathomable is it. Light rains will overflow the first sink and the surplus water will continue down the weed-tangled channel to the second. Heavy rains will fill the channel to the third, and long-continued rains will carry some surplus as far as the fourth sink. In the last case the water has two exits near Orangeville. Where the water is of sufficient quantity to enter the fourth sink it rises through three openings and flows on through the river bed.

This dry bed is not an open channel and is unlike the valley of the usual streams. Large upland forest trees grow along the banks, showing that for a long time the river has been lost in the concretionary limestone below the earths' surface. The underground stream may be reached at the fourth sink, where the cavernous opening is about eight feet wide and four feet deep, the descent being gradual and 500 feet.

Before appearing at Orangeville the river comes to the surface about two miles northeast of Orangeville. Here the stream may also be reached. In Orangeville is the rise of the river, but some people think that the true rise is one mile further down on the Higgins farm.

O. C. Salyards and some men went into one of these sinks or caves. When they started in they had to pull the brush and trash out of its mouth so they could get through. They say that the flood of the sink is like the bed of a river, and found in these caves are grasshoppers and blind fish.

When the water rises at Orangeville it just shoots up from the ground. It is very deep at this place. Around the opening the banks are very high and deep.

The large sink holes around Orleans help to drain the township. A short story comes to my mind in regard to the large sink holes. Once Minnie Ochs and Julia Munger put a bottle in one of these places when the water was going through it, and later it was found down in the Ohio river.

This sink is just a hole in the ground, which leads the water into an underground channel, which is thought to be a part of Lost river, out into the Ohio.

ENGELS' ART STORE,
17 and 19 Third Avenue West.

IN WOMAN'S SPHERE

Social, Musical and Art Circles.

Minnie Maddern Fiske spent yesterday resting after her long trip of 1500 miles, which terminated Saturday night, when she arrived at the Spalding from Anaconda, Mont.

By birth and breeding Mrs. Fiske is richly endowed. Admitted by many of the most exacting critics to be the foremost actress on the American stage, she is in private life one of the simplest and most unaffected of women, and a charming and gracious hostess. She has large rather serious eyes and a wealth of hair that is brown in the shadow and a reddish gold in the sunlight, is just a trifle below the average heighth, and has a form just a bit too rounded to be called petite. Yet one thinks of Mrs. Fiske always as a tiny woman.

Mrs. Fiske says she has no hobbies, and pleads guilty to only one bete noir, the interviewer. "The dearest friends I have," she explains, with a smile which takes the sting out of her refusal to "talk for publication," "are newspaper people, you know. I married one, and I think professional people who count isolation are spectacular, but what can I say that will be interesting?"

Yet every well-turned sentence of this brilliant and fascinating little conversationalist is pregnant with interest.

"No, I can't say anything about my not playing at the trust houses, at least nothing that has not been said. I have no hobbies, that is such a safety valve, for people, but I really have none, unless," doubtfully, it is my regard for modern psychological drama. I am in a rut of modernity, and my ideal stage life is to eliminate all the scenery, all gorgeous costuming and the electrical accessories, and leave just the beautiful stories, to be told by men and woman who are capable of portraying the poetry of life and who can reach the hearts. I would have the great truths told simply, without appealing to the imaginative and sensuous through the sense of sight. I would not have the attention of an audience distracted from a wonderful thought by a clever bit of stage mechanism.'

Mrs. Fiske drove on the boulevard yesterday and enjoyed it thoroughly, but she lets enthusiasm control her when she talks of California.

"There is nothing like the Pacific coast in the world," she declares. "I have seen the most admired of all European scenery, Naples, Switzerland, and the Rhine, but in none of them is there the same glorious beauty of the Pacific coast, from the unfinished, natural Seattle to the sunny Southern California. And the people! At first one finds them pre-occupied and conservative, and one thinks of a minature Paris, but shortly they show the other side of themselves, and one finds them broad, generous, intelectual, the cream of American culture. I love California and its people."

Mrs. Fiske will leave immediately after the performance of Mary of Magdala," at the Metropolitan tonight, for Milwaukee.

GOODBYE POMPADOUR.

Huge Hair Effect Going Out of Style.

The towering erection, known as the pompadour, is losing favor, says the Brooklyn Eagle. In its place is the old-fashioned severe art, which is variously called the Madonna style, the Clio de Merode, the Evangeline and the Botticelli. Not that these four styles are identical; they vary in detail, but all show the hair straight, parted in the middle, half hiding the ears, and done low.

The Merode style keeps the hair close to the head, without a ripple or puff, with a small twist low on the neck. To look like the old engraving in Longfellow's poem, "Evangeline," the hair is puffed over the ears, entirely hiding them, and is twisted in a flat knot at the back of the head. It is a style often seen in the daguerreotype of forty years ago.

The Botticelli girl also parts her hair and hides her ears, but she indulges in a slight natural wave, and her forehead is rather high and her features severely classic.

To be distinctively Madonna in effect, the hair is taken back in a soft roll at either side and worn low at the neck, is puffed a little at the sides, but is plain in effect and prettiest for a girl with low forehead.

Of course, those to whom the style is becoming will still wear the hair back from the forehead without a part but it must be allowed to lie soft about the head, not draped high over the forehead.

It is the fashion to take a lot of trouble with the hair, to groom it perfectly, wash it twice a month, brush it every night, massage it when it is dry, and never again to touch it with a hot iron. The dressing of it must have a simple effect.

Te girl whose hair looks untidy is as out of fashion as the girl whose coiffure looks like a bargain in wigs. To be de rigueur the hair must look simple, yet with every hair in place, and so neatly done up that it stays in place. It looks ingeue, and yet can only be accomplished by a lot of care and work.

It is impossible to have the hair glossy and flexible unless it is healthy, and it cannot be healthy without scrupulous cleanliness. A well prepared shampooing liquid is much better than cleansing with an egg. It is very easy to make it at almost no expense. Shave half a bar of white castile soap into a quart of hot rain water, add a heaping teaspoonful of powdered borax and a pint of bay rum. This will not only cleanse the scalp, but remove the dandruff and make the hair glossy and silky. Rinse all the soap out. After it is quite dry, rub in a very little oil or cold cream at the roots.

The hair is often dry and lifeless after it is washed and needs a harmless tonic. The best plan is to make one. Put two teaspoonfuls each of castor oil and glycerine in a four ounce bottle and enough alcohol to cut the oil. Shake until well mixed. This preparation is intended for oily hair.

In this age of hurry and nervous excitement many people are troubled with premature gray hair. This is especially true of busy, professional women. One of the best and most harmless hair restoratives which can be easily made without much expense, is composed of one ounce each of sugar of lead, borax and lac sulphur, half an ounce of aqua ammonia, and one gill of alcohol. Mix and let it stand all night, then add one gill of bay rum, one teaspoonful of common table salt and one pint of soft water. Apply but once a day. This preparation will darken red or brown hair and bring back the tone of any hair beginning to turn gray. And if the hair roots are not dead, it will induce the growth of new hair.

It is important to comb and brush the hair in the direction it grows, instead of against its growth. Use combs of bone or shell that do not split or grow ragged, as any rough surface easily injures the scalp.

If these few precautions are taken in caring for the hair, and if it is regularly and properly brushed and dressed in a becoming prevailing mode, a girl has done much to make herself lovely.

DULUTH PROOF:

Nineteenth Ave.

Mrs. Agnes McKay, of 125 Nineteenth avenue west, says: "For some time I suffered with kidney complaint, and although I tried different remedies, I did not succeed in getting anything to effectually rid me of the trouble. I had constant, heavy, bearing-down pains across the small of my back, so that I could hardly get around, and at night I could not rest well. The kidney secretions were irregular, highly colored and deposited a heavy sediment. I also suffered from severe and persistent headaches. On being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured them and used them. They relieved me of the pains and restored the action of the kidneys' secretions to their normal state."

Esmond Hotel.

Engineer James Root, better known as "Jim" Root, the heroic engineer of the St. Paul & Duluth limited, says: "For many years I was troubled with my kidneys and had pains and soreness across the small of my back. The kidney secretions at times presented an unnatural appearance and I was run down. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and procured a box at the Duluth Drug company's store and used them. From the prompt and satisfactory results obtained I can speak of them only in the highest terms of praise. Doan's Kidney Pills are all and more than they are represented to be."

THE EVENING STORY.

SKIPPING ROCKS

By Edgar Wilton Cooley.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The boy, followed by his dog, swung down the colver-fringed path, under the tangled branches of the trees. He was barefoot, and his arms and legs and face were brown as an Indian's.

In the air was the lazy drone of bees. Small, fleecy clouds floated overhead, their shadows scudding across the hills and the river like ebony-winged birds. The ripples of the stream kept singing to the grasses overhanging. Everywhere was the perfume of the wild rose.

At the ford the dog dashed into the stream, lapping the water and splashing it into circling eddies that chased each other across the placid bosom.

The boy paused at the brink and picking up a flat rock sent it skipping across the water, far down the stream. This he followed with another and another and yet another. Above him, at the bend of the river, a dozen cattle stood in the shadows, knee-deep in the tide.

Along the path, presently, came a man. He was large, portly and well-groomed. There were many streaks of gray in his hair.

He paused and watched the boy skipping the rocks. A smile overspread his face, and he, too, descended to the water's edge and picked up a large, flat stone.

With an awkward swing he sent it across the water. It skipped once, twice, then sank beneath the surface.

The boy looked up and laughed.

"That ain't the way," he said. "You want to get limber in your joints and stoop down low, like this. Then the rock will go clear into the mud on the other side."

The dog splashed out of the stream and shook the water from his glossy fur. A king-fisher swooped down from a branch with a discordant shriek, skimmed along the surface of the water a short distance, and returned to its perch.

"I have come a thousand miles to skip rocks at the old ford, here," the man said, "and now I find I can't do it like I used to."

The boy looked at him wonderingly.

"You came a thousand miles to skip rocks?" he asked, incredulously.

"Yes," the man replied, gazing across the river at a sandpiper running along the bank. "When I was a lad like you, I used to come down here and skip rocks, just like you have been doing. There used to be a deep hole right there under the bank that was full of bass, and across yonder, where you see the twig sticking out of the water, there was a muskrat's house."

"If you have a fishin' pole and some minners I can take you where you can catch some shiners," interposed the boy, his face brightening.

"I'd rather stay here and skip rocks," replied the man. "There wasn't anybody who could beat me at that when I was a boy."

The dog curled himself in the deep grass. From the river's bend came the occasional tinkle of a cow-bell. High overhead a hawk circled slowly in the blue of the sky.

The boy gazed at the man's heavy gold chain and at the diamond in his shirt front.

"Gee, I'll bet you have lots of money," he said.

The man laughed, good naturedly.

"Well—yes," he said. "I have all I think I will ever need. But then," he placed his hand on the crown of the boy's torn hat, "I can't skip rocks like you can, can I?"

"No," said the boy, proudly. "There ain't nobody around here can do that."

"I got rich after I left here," said the man, after a pause, "but do you know, I am sorry I ever went away."

"Why?" asked the boy, digging his toes in the wet sand.

"Because I was happier here than I have ever been since," said the man.

The boy looked at him questioningly.

"You see, I have forgotten how to skip rocks," continued the man. "That is one of the big things I have lost. And then, don't you know, all the time I have been gone I have seemed to hear the ripple of the river, and have dreamed of wading in the water and seeing the minnows dart away from my bare feet. And there hasn't been a day that I haven't thought of her pure, young face."

The boy grinned.

"Who is 'her'?" he asked.

"Oh," said the man, as though awakening from a dream, "she was a little barefoot girl I knew when I was a boy. She was always with me when I was fishing or wading in the water. She grew up and so did I. Then we had a silly quarrel and I went away."

"Gee!" exclaimed the boy, excitedly. "Did you see that big fish jump out of the water?"

The dog raised his head, wearily, gazed at his master a moment, then lowered it again. A bluebird darted through the trees, and a turtle, sunning himself on a log, slipped into the water with a faint splash. Somewhere in the damp grass a cricket was chirping.

"I wish I was a man and had lots of money," said the boy.

"And I wish I was just a boy and didn't have to wear shoes and could skip rocks like you can," said the man. "If I could see the sunshine gleaming on the bronze of the hair of that little girl I used to know. I wouldn't care whether I had any money or not."

"I don't like red-headed girls," said the boy. "I like girls that's got—Gee! That old fish jumped again. Bet I come down here tomorrer an' catch 'im."

"Where does your father live?" asked the man.

The boy threw himself in the grass beside the dog and let his hat fall on the ground.

"Papa's dead," said the boy. "He died long while ago. I guess the reason I don't like read-headed girls is because my hair is kinder—what did you call it—bronze?"

He raised himself on one elbow and glanced up the hill.

"And your mother?" asked the man.

"That's her comin' down the path."

IN AN OLD TRUNK

Baby Finds a Bottle of Carbolic Acid and Drinks It.

While the mother was unpacking an old trunk a little 18-months-old baby got hold of a bottle of carbolic acid while playing on the floor and his stomach was so badly burned it was feared he would not live for he could not eat ordinary foods. The mother says in telling of the case:

"It was all two doctors could do to save him as he burnt his throat and stomach so bad that for two months after he took the poison nothing would lay on his stomach. Finally I took him into the country and tried new milk and that was no better for him. His grandma finally suggested Grape-Nuts and I am thankful I adopted the food for he commenced to get better right away and would not eat anything else. He commenced to get fleshy and his cheeks like red roses and now he is entirely well.

"I took him to Maxemoras on a visit and every place we went to stay to eat he called for Grape-Nuts and I would have to explain how he came to call for it as it was his main food.

"The names of the physicians who attended the baby are Dr. Eddy, of this town, and Dr. George Gale, of Newport, Ohio, and anyone can write to me or to them and learn what Grape-Nuts food will do for children and grown-ups, too." Name given by Postum company, Battle Creek, Mich.

WOMAN DECLINES TO EAT, TAKEN TO "BUGHOUSE."

New York, May 9.—Having become convinced through months of pouring over literature on the subject of attaining perfection through abstaining from food and ignoring all things material, Mrs. Bessie Nunzinsky, of this city, resolved a week ago to eat no more. She is now in the psyophathic ward of Bellevue hospital and the doctors fear she will die unless they can prevail upon her to take food.

After fasting seven days Mrs. Nunzinsky declared that her husband and three children should have nothing more to eat, she having satisfied herself that food was a fallacy. Convinced that his wife had lost her mind, Nunzinsky had her removed to the hospital where she still refuses to eat.

It includes more than 300 acres of ground together with stabling for 80 horses and a covered track for training horses, six laps to the mile. The property is valued at $300,000. It is said to be the plan of Mr. Whitney to bring to Brookdale part of his stud, besides some sixty of the choicest brood mares now in Kentucky.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Bessemer Officials Enjoined Fron Entering Sewer Assessment.

Bessemer—Property holders interested in special extension of sewers last year, and for which special assessments against abutting property were made, have enjoined the city officials from entering such assessment upon the tax roll, contending that the expenditure was not incurred in accordance with the charter's provisions. The matter will now be fought out in the courts, with the chances against the city.

G. S. Barber, for three years superintendent of the Mikado mine, took charge as superintendent of the Colby and Ironton mines here. The Mikado is practically shut down and the appointment of its superintendent to the Corrigan McKinney properties here is taken as an indication that work will be pushed this summer.

McNamara, a well known politician of Manistique, against the Willebrand Manistique Brewing company the plaintiff has been given a verdict, the degree of the court being that McNamara was the owner of the capital stock in the company to the amount of $2500, as claimed by him. The case had been in court for more than a year and was bitterly contested.

Munising—A suit of a wife against her husband for almost $200 board money, which she claims is due her, is set for trial at Munising. The plaintiff is Mrs. Evans and the defendant Charles Evans. The husband had a cedar job and the wife boarded the men. The board of the latter, amounting to $198, was not paid by the husband and the wife in order to get an attachment on the logs commenced suit against him for the amount due.

BY DEEDS AS WELL.

Duluth is particularly fortunate in being the residence place of a large number of public-spirited citizens—noble men and women whose minds are constantly engaged in devising plans for the betterment of the city and its people. Fortunately, too, many of these have acquired sufficient of the world's goods so that they are able to put some of their humanitarian ideas into practical effect.

Among this class there is none to whom the people of the city owe greater respect and esteem than to Director J. L. Washburn of the school board. There can be nothing of as great importance to the rising generation as their education and to this matter of public school education and its betterment Mr. Washburn is devoting much of his valuable time with the evident purpose of not only bettering the schools, but to create a higher moral sentiment among the citizens and inculcate higher ideals in the minds of the children. His belief that there should be something better to life than mere money-getting, and his evident desire to create higher conceptions of lite and duty among the rising generation should receive the thoughtful consideration and active support of every citizen interested in the welfare of the community.

It is not only by words but by works that Mr. Washburn has given evidence of his interest in educational affairs. Being the owner of an entire block of real estate at Woodland which would make an excellent site for school-house purposes, he has made an offer to give this property to the district outright if the school board will accept. He has endeavored to cloak his liberality behind the statement that because he is a member of the board he could not lawfully receive money for the property. This property, when purchased, cost Mr. Washburn $1200. It is now considered to be worth between $5000 and $7000. It is to be expected, of course, that the board will promptly accept and that the residents of Woodland will be assured of a handsome school-site with beautiful grounds and surroundings for all time.

Furthermore, Mr. Washburn has taken an active interest in promoting the welfare of the normal school, which will prepare the teachers for the city's children, and he recently made an offer to bear one-half the cost of a $5000 bridge on East Fifth street, which would be to the advantage of that institution. If in position to defray the cost of the other half, the city should promptly accept this offer and construct this bridge at once. Furthermore, every citizen who desires the welfare of the public schools will see to it when he casts his ballot for school officers this year, that Director Washburn's name appears thereon.

A JUST JUDGE.

That public sentiment is and ought to be greater and more powerful than statutory enactment is the righteous belief of Justice Gaynor of the New York supreme court, who made the recent decision in the matter of Sunday baseball playing, and his belief will be shared by lovers of personal liberty everywhere.

"It is a maxim of the law that you cannot indict a whole community," said the justice in rendering his decision. He continued: "The Anglo-Saxon sheds statutes which grow obsolete and obnoxious the same as a snake sheds his skin. He has seldom bothered to repeal them, as every one acquainted with the history of laws very well knows. No citizen any longer makes a complaint under them, and thus they become dead letter laws. It is not the business of the police to revive them. They are not employed and paid by the citizens for any such purpose."

How well this applies to the situation in Duluth, and how clearly-cut it reveals the duty of the police in the matter of Sunday ball playing. How well it agrees with The Herald's contention that obsolete and obnoxious laws should not be enforced by the authorities.

After relating that the police of Brooklyn, without legitimate cause, ten years ago began a crusade against Sunday ball playing, which apparently was about to be resumed for no reason whatever other than mere officiousness, the judge gave a deserved scoring to the over-officious policeman and those over him who direct his movements. He said:

"There are many minor offences which should be left for redress to the coming forward of private accusers before the magistrates or other authorities, as our laws and the procedure of our courts contemplate. The accusatory method of enforcing the criminal laws is open to every citizen. The community can take care of itself in such matters without any police meddling. Baseball and golf, and other innocent and healthy games are being played everywhere outside of the city on Sunday without being meddled with by constables or policemen. Such meddling is practically unknown except in this city, where, of all places, we should have humane, sensible and intelligent government. The general sentiment of the community has to be consulted in respect to the enforcement of certain laws, and always has been in the Anglo-Saxon world as well as elsewhere."

This does not accord very well with the views of those individuals who sometimes make threats to impeach a mayor if he does not enforce the law against Sunday baseball. But it is the position that should be assumed by every righteous judge and by every man who endeavors to follow the teachings of Christianity.

On the matter of the morality of baseball Justice Gaynor gave expression to these reasonable, just and satisfactory sentiments:

"This is one of a class of cases in which it is the duty of the judiciary to speak out plain, after the manner of judges in times past. I therefore deem it not at all outside of my judicial office to add to what I have already said, that it is practically the unanimous sentiment of the religious and God-fearing people of the community that it is far better for our grown boys and young men who have to work indoors all the week for a living to go into the fields on Sunday afternoon after attending church, and participate in or witness good, elevating, healthy physical exercises than to be driven instead to go to dance gardens, drinking places, pool rooms and worse places; and there is no one trying to stir up any obscure or obsolete statute against that opinion except those who rule the police. Fathers and mothers would much rather know that their grown sons are at a ball or golf game on Sunday afternoon than not know where they are. Many of our boys and young men scarcely see the sun at all during the short days of the year except on Sundays and have no other day for outdoor exercises from one end of the year to the other. This is something which our ministers of the Gospel well know and the significance of which they fully appreciate."

NOT YET GOOD ENOUGH.

The writer in the Cloquet Independent whose production was mentioned in these columns recently, says at the close of a lengthy reply:

"We appreciate the kindly spirit of our critic, the generous quotation from our first article and the sober consideration he suggests our words are worth. His sincere and genial spirit allowed no harsh and unjust word to discolor the charity of his criticism and his courtesy permitted no mistake other than a most pardonable one of attributing to our most worthy contemporary, the Pine Knot, the article that appeared in the Independent."

The Herald desires to assure this writer that the mistake of crediting his article to the Pine Knot was discovered after it had run through the first edition and that the matter was corrected for the other editions although the correction involved the making of a new matrix and the casting of a new plate. That much The Herald often does in the interest of accuracy, and yet it frequently makes unintentional errors.

Furthermore, the matter that the Cloquet writer first noticed was not a criticism of Duluth's schools, bu those of New York, and a committee of the North Side board of trade of that city, after an investigation of the schools here, reported that in its opinion too much time was devoted to ornamental studies and not enough to the essentials.

What would the reader think of a school principal who not only admitted that pupils under his charge could not spell well, but rather boasted of it as if it was a good joke? And yet that is what actually happened when this committee was making its investigation of New York schools. Albert E. Davis, a member of the committee, writing to the New York Sun, under date of April 30, says:

"The principal of a high school told us that he considered it no discredit if a boy or girl could not spell well; a bright boy or girl could acquire that knowledge outside of school; there were more important things for them to learn in school. And he laughingly called on one of his assistants to show us a record of a test of the spelling of the different classes, the average percentage of correct spelling being very low, of which fact he took pains to inform us, as though it were a good joke. In former years a teacher would have been ashamed to show such a record to a visitor."

This writer complained that while reading, writing, arithmetic, history and geography are not receiving the attention formerly given them, it is in spelling that the deficiency is most noticeable, and this seems plainly to be due, not only to the fact that less time is devoted to this study during the school course, but also to the visual method of teaching, whereby a child is expected to learn from the appearance of a word on the blackboard instead of first learning the alphabet and how to use it in forming words.

In conclusion Mr. Davis says: "Far be it from our thought or aim to assail the public schools. But the defects of which we complain are the direct result of the present system and should be remedied by devoting more attention to the essentials and less to 'fads.' The latter, we have been told, develop the powers of observation. Our own observation leads us to say that they simply amuse the children without lending any lasting impression and are of no practical benefit in after life. Certainly they do not train the memory nor teach the child to be exact. The widespread complaints from parents and business men justify a demand for a return from cloudy theories to clear common sense."

Is our Cloquet friend still convinced that "the system of our public schools anywhere and everywhere is better than it was?" If so he has not kept himself in touch with public sentiment.

Public schools generally are no doubt in many respects better than formerly, but they are not yet perfect, nor even good enough.

THE FIELD SURVEY.

That love knows only one language was made evident the other day when a Michigan judge was compelled to perform a marriage ceremony in two languages because the groom did not understand German, and the bride did not understand English. How do you suppose he popped the question?

It is perhaps fortunate for Cleveland that he waited until after Altgeld died to make his explanations about those railroad riots.

It is evident that Charles A. Towne still has hopes for harmony at the Democratic convention and the selection of a candidate who will unite all factions of the party. In a recent interview he is reported as saying: "I am under instructions and prohibited from talking. The instructions for Judge Parker are binding on all New York delegates, and we will take off our coats and work for him with the utmost zeal. My belief is we shall have a harmonious time at St. Louis. For one, I am for peace, even if we have to fight for it."

Something prompts the thought that about the next thing Anna Eva Fay will prophesy will be the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt for president by the Republican party.

In Japan there is one divorce in every three marriages. Just to show that this heathen country has not yet got ahead of one section of our own enlightened nation, the Kansas City Journal says that in Jackson county, the second largest in the state of Missouri, there were 3076 marriages in 1903, and 1076 petitions for divorce. However, not all the petitions were granted and it should be remembered that the percentage of divorces is greater in the city than in the country because the courts are located in the cities. Only fair comparison could be made by taking the statistics of the entire state.

If it were true that the desire to make money on Sunday is an evidence of Godlessness and immorality, would that desire be obliterated by passing and enforcing prohibitive statutes?

HOTEL GOSSIP

"Do you need a bell boy, or waiter or anything in that line of help?" asked a lad the other morning of William McKay, the hotel man, as he stood behind the desk.

"Where have you worked? Ever been around a hotel?"

"Yes, I've worked in the Hollenden and Forest City house in Cleveland and in other good hotels."

"What can you do? Ever run an elevator?"

"I've done a little elevator work, but not much. Have run a freight elevator."

"That's hydraulic, eh?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, we might use a young man on our elevator here. How soon could you come to work?"

"Any time."

"Have you any clothes—any clean collars or shirts?"

"Yes, sir."

"Suppose you go get cleaned up and come around this afternoon and we will give you a start on this elevator and see how you do."

The boy asked about salary. He was told the salary was not much but that the tips would not be lacking if he attended to business. He said he understood that part of it, but merely wanted to know what the stipulated stipend would be per month. He seemed satisfied and after saying he would return in the afternoon, disappeared.

The sequel to the story was heard the next morning, when the clerk was asked by the proprietor if the elevator boy was on deck.

"Yes, I think he's there."

"Take a look. I'll bet he isn't."

"He certainly is. At any rate he was here to breakfast."

"Ah, that may be, but he's not here now."

Sure enough, when the clerk looked for him he was not to be found, the elevator still being run by the substitute boy who took the car when the new acquisition went to breakfast. The other had gone from the building and had failed to say goodbye. He had merely taken the job for a few hours to get a few tips and a couple of good meals which were given to him in the hotel kitchen.

"That's the way with some of those boys," said Mr. McKay. "We've had experience with them and when a 'floater' comes in we can pretty nearly size him up. He was a likely looking lad, and I was willing to give him a trial, but I was afraid when he told about his movements that he would not be with us long. But he helped us out for half a day and we are not disposed to complain. He's probably moved on to some other town by this time, or soon will do so."

Not often does a hotel have people from both St. Paul and St. Peter as its guests on the same day, but the St. Louis has the record. There are a number of people from St. Paul there today also G. A. Johnson and H. C. Johnson, of St. Peter.

A Chicago traveling man who was at the Spalding a couple of days ago, has been on the road for a number of years and is pretty well known. Naturally enough, he is older than he was fifteen years ago, so that the story that he told of him as having its foundation at that time ought not to be counted against him. The safest way, to avoid complications in the matter, is to keep his name out of the story.

But it can be said of him that he used to be in the pickling and preserving business for himself and is a native of the Hoosier state, having made Indianapolis his home for a number of years. In his younger days he was something of a singer and besides participating in choir performances he would go around and call on the various girls on his list who used to like to hear his vocal endeavors and enjoy his good looks and entertaining talk. It's this talk of his that makes him so good on the road in the present generation.

But suffice to say that John, for that in his own first name, went out for night to call on a young lady of his acquaintance. He was dressed fit for the occasion, as the girl lived in one of the best houses on the best street, and moved in the best circles, although it never made her dizzy. He had on a new frock coat and vest, new trousers, and, most painful of all, a new pair of shoes. The shoes were not as painful when he started out as by were after he had sat and talked to the girl for half an hour or so. At the end of this time the pain was becoming too much and he broke the conversation by asking the girl to excuse him. She had no idea what he was driving at, so thought she might as well take a chance.

"Certainly," she said. She expected that he would do something desperate, possibly.

He reached down to the more painful of the shoes and began to unlace it. When he got it unlaced he took it off and set it on the floor beside him.

Without a word of explanation he began to converse on the subject they had left off. He sat there with one shoe off and one on until he thought it the proper time to go. Then he put the shoe on and went home.

But the girl was a little bit wary of him after that.

The best thing about all this is that it is a true story.

"These changes of weather are hard on the golfer," said Jack Moffat, the Portland golf coach, this morning. "Out West I have never been used to wearing an overcoat except when it rains. But here this morning is rather cold and damp and I'm pretty nearly shivering. My blood's thinner than it used to be. When I first came over from Scotland five years ago I could stand almost any kind of cold weather, but the five years I have spent in the mild atmosphere of Oregon have changed me in this respect. It is only three weeks ago that they were having three big horse lawn mowers to cut our grass out there, so you can imagine how far along vegetation it. It's a very nice golf course that the Northland Golf club has here, and the clubhouse is immense. I've seen a good many club houses since I have been in this country, that have been instituted by golf organizations, but yours will compare favorably with almost any of them. I don't know whether I would like to live in Duluth in the winter time, as I am afraid it would be too cold for me. But you've got a mighty pretty little city here, all right enough. No mistake about that."

PRECEPTS AT PARTING.

Well, son, so you's gwine for to leab us, your lubbin' ol' mammy an' me.
An' set you'se'f up as a waiter, on boa'd ob de Robert E. Lee,
Along wid dem fancy young niggers
what's shamed for to look at a hoe,
An' acts like a passel ob rich folks, when dey isn't got nuffin' to show.

Yo's had better trainin' dan dey has—I hopes 'at you'll zibbit mare sense;
Sech niggers is like a young rooster a settin' up top ob a fence;
He keeps on a-stretchin' and crowin', and while he's a-blowin' his horn Dem chickens what ain't after fussin' is pickin' up ob de corn.

Now listen, and min' what I tell you, an'
don't you forget what I say;
Take advice of a 'sperienced pussin, an'
yo'll git up de ladder an' stay.
Who knows? You might git to be pres'- dent or jestice, perhaps, ob de peace—
De man what keeps pullin' de grapevine shakes down a few bunches at leas'.

Dem niggers what runs on de ribber is mos'ly a mighty sharp set;
Dey'd fin' out some way for to beat you, if you bet 'em de water waz wet.
You's got to watch out for dem fellers—
dey'd cheat off de horns ob a cow—
I knows 'em—I followed de ribber' fore
ebber I followed a plow.

You'll easy git 'long wid de white folks—de cappen and steward and clerks—
Dey won't say a word to a nigger, as long as dey notice he works;
And work is de onlies' ingine we's any
'casion to tote,
To keep us gwine on t'roo de currents dat
pesters de spirichul boat.

I heered dat idee from a preacher—he
'lowed 'at dis life wuz a stream,
An' eberyone's soul wuz a packet dat run
wid a full head of steam;
Dat some ob 'em's only stern-wheelers,
while oders wuz most'ously fine;
An' de trip wuz made de safes' an' quick-es' by boats ob de Mefodls' line.

I wants you, my son, to be 'ticklar, an'
'sociate only wid dey
Dat's 'titled to go in de cabin—don't neb-ber hab nuffin' to say
To dem low-minded roustabout niggers what han'les de cotton below—
De common black rascals ain't fittin' for no cabin waiter to know.

But nebber git airy; be 'spectful to all de white people you see,
An' nebber go back on de raisin' you's had from yo' mammy an' me.
It's hard on yo' mudder, yo' leabin'—I don't know whatever she'll do;
An' shorely yo' fadder'll miss you—I alluz be thinkin' ob you.

Well, now, I done tol' you my sayso; dar ain't nuffin' mo' as I knows,
'Cep' dis: Don't you nebber come back,
sah, widout you has money and close.
I'se kep' you as long as I's gwine to, and now you an' me we is done;
An' calves is too skace in dis country to kill fer a prodical son.

Mr. Cleveland's Opportunity.

Pittsburg Dispatch: It might have tended to edify a larger audience than his scholastic one in Princeton had Mr. Cleveland found it convenient to enlarge upon his theme of defending the nation against defiance of the orderly conduct of one of its functions by alluding to the necessity of federal repression of assaults upon other immunities of citizenship by men as dangerous as labor agitators and by means subtler than stoppage of palace cars. The supreme court has valiantly upheld the sufficiency of national authority with regard to these transgressions, as well as the Debs cases; but obedience to itsdecree is not apparently as prompt as was the submission of the Chicago strikers to the soldiery. But Mr. Cleveland may find time for a second lecture wherein he may treat this silent and sinister interference with the rights of the many by methods of merger and monopoly, which are not as conspicuous as groups of strikers in railroad yards.

Poor Sample.

Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune: During the last visit of the earl of Yarmouth to America the titled visitor attended a dinner given in his honor in Pittsburg. A little daughter of the host, eyeing him covertly as the occasion presented itself, finally ventured to remark:

"And you are really and truly an English lord?"

"Yes," he answered pleasantly; "really and truly."

"I have often thought I would like to see a real English lord," she went on, "and now—"

"And now you are satisfied at last," he put in laughingly.

"No, no," replied the truthful little girl, "I'm a good deal disappointed."

PERT AND PERTINENT.

Chicago Daily News: Chicago Man—Must boil your drinking water, don't you?

Cincinnati Man—Yes; and after boiling it we drink beer.

Office Boy—Well, say, I can't do all dat for $2 a week.

Cincinnati Commercial Tribune: Employer—What did you do this for, say?

Mrs. Skinflint—But suppose nothing does happen to you?

Mr. Newlywed—Gad! You seem to be determined to bring that young one up with the tastes of a millionaire's child.

Chicago Daily News: "In selecting a wife," said the man who likes to talk, "would you choose by faces or figures?"

"Figures," replied the quiet man, "if she had seven in her own name."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Wright County Times: Here is a queer proposition. A woman in this town is a very strong woman suffragist and will argue in favor of it at considerable length, yet she is opposed to women preachers. Whenever there is to be a woman preacher at her church she avoids her if she can and she stays at home from the church if she knows it in time.

Norman County Herald: Attorney General Knox has been offering explanations why no action has been taken against the trusts. Explanations are certainly in order.

Albert Lea Tribune: It may be that the Republican state convention to be held in July will be compelled to turn about and re-nominate Governor Van Sant in order to have a candidate that is in harmony with the wishes of the people of the state, if the feeling indicated here is any criterion by which to judge the entire state.

Virginia Enterprise: It is unofficially announced that George J. Mallory, of West Duluth, former representative from the Forty-ninth, would be pleased to again become a power on the floor of the house. With Messrs. Dowling and Mallory in the chamber the interests of the district would doubtless continue to live, exist and have a being.

Wabasha Herald: The man who loudly boasts that he never has and never will split his election ticket, is probably a better partisan than citizen.

Red Wing News: The trusts get one end of their power to oppress and to beat down rivals through railroad discrimination. Congress did not lift a finger to remedy that known evil. The trusts got one end of their power to exact extortionate prices through tariff privileges. Congress would not lift a finger to correct these familiar abuses. And the administration sat silent. The record in Roosevelt et al versus the Trusts, is as blank as a rimless cipher. It's a manifest breach of warranty.

Brainerd Arena: One of the most incisive epigrams ever perpetrated was that of Frederic Landis in a speech before the Ohio Republican convention. Speaking of Judge Parker he said: "His life is an open allibi and his obscurity is spotless." It is complete but not to Judge Parker's discredit.

Pine County Pioneer: The announcement that the Duluth Humane society offers a reward of $5 for the apprehension of anyone robbing a bird's nest or killing birds, will likely save the feathery songsters of that community a great deal of trouble. An increase in the plumed population will also be noted if the reward will affect the gummed fingered slingshot nuisances.

Warroad Plaindealer: It's all very well to keep on saying "Eddy hasn't a ghost of a show;" you can't always tell. It is not necessarily the man that is able to furnish the greatest number of cartoons for a hired press, that wins, and Eddy is campaigning in another way.

Uncle Ned's Reason.

Washington Post: "That was a brave act!" ejaculated a Boston man, as he stood on the wharf in a little Southern town and saw an old negro plunge unhesitatingly into the deepest water to save a very small boy who had stumbled and fallen from some piling. "A brave act, and he is a hero, no matter how black the skin he wears!"

The Bostonian was foremost in the group that gathered about Uncle Ned when he climbed back on the dock with the rescued lad.

"Your son is it, old man?" he queried. "Or perhaps only your grandson?"

There was very fervent admiration in the down-Easter's tones as he put the question.

"No, suh; no, suh," gurgled Uncle Ned. "Dat li'l rascal ain't no kinnery er mine."

"Then it was all the braver!" exclaimed the interrogator, positively baring his head out of respect for the old man's highborn courage.

"Huh," sputtered the hero, "you sho' don't think I'se durn fool 'nough to let dat boy drown when he's got every speck er my fish bait in his pocket?"

WHY JAPAN SHOULD WIN.

Northfield News: It was only last year that a northern Minnesota merchant, a Finn, who had made a little money, decided to go back home and visit his old friends. When he arrived none he was spotted at once by Russian officials who dogged his steps and kept close watch on him, and when he wanted to have a supper and entertain his friends one evening he was permitted to only entertain six at a time, as this was the largest number of persons who could congregate together. While he was entertaining his friends a Russian officer was present to watch all the proceedings, and this disgusted and offended the Finnish-American who said that he never felt so happy in all his life as when he stepped from the gang plank of the ship onto the free soil of America. "My country, 'tis of thee, sweet land of liberty." We learn that during the last three years the annual deportation of political prisoners from Russia in Europe to Yakutsk, in eastern Siberia, has numbered more than 1000. They have been deported by the order of Von Plehve, minister of the interior, without trial. Their offenses have usually consisted of reading revolutionary books, pamphlets and papers. More than 60 per cent are young men under 30; some are mere boys and girls of 16. Jews constitute half of the colony. They are quartered in huts along with the nomads, who are devoid of civilization, and who are authorized to kill all exiles making an attempt to escape. And this is the country that wants to whip enlightened Japan, a country that is progressing and where the human soul have considerable more freedom than in Russia. May the bear from the North be stopped just the other side of Manchuria.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: The chief raw material used by the devil for his product of sin is envy.

It is very shabby of a woman to be handsomely dressed when the woman with her isn't.

Once in a long while a girl actually falls in love for the first time when there is a reason for it.

When a girl coughs it is not so much a sign that she has a cold as that she thinks somebody is looking.

"A Boy"==At 65!

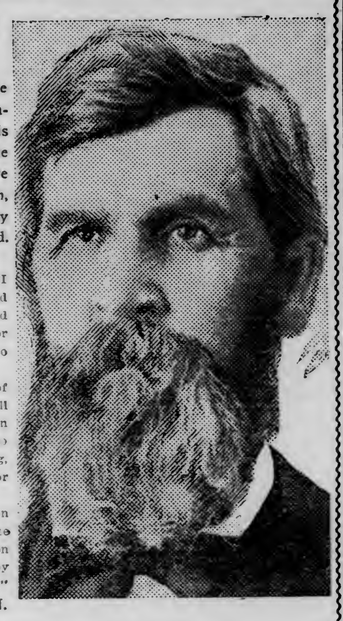
One More Instance of the Quick Bracing Invigorating Effect of the Celebrated Nerve Vitalizer and Tonic—Read the Rapid Change Made By

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

IT GIVES ALMOST INSTANT EFFECT.

"ALL MY TROUBLES HAVE LEFT ME."

Only a Short While Ago He Was Broken and Trembling—Borne Down by His Nerve Weakness and the Weight of His Sixty-five Years—Now Given Health, Strength and Youth by Paine's Celery Compound.



PLEASUREVILLE, Ky.—"I was broken down in health and strength. I had nervous and trembling spells off and on for ten years. A friend told me to try your wonderful remedy.

"I have taken three bottles of Paine's Celery Compound. All my troubles have left me. I can now do a good day's work. I go about my business all day long, and it does not overstrain or worry me.

"I feel better than I have in ten years. I have a good appetite and can eat and get around on foot as well as when I was a boy—and my age is 65 years."

—WILLIAM S. GIBSON.

In all the world—in all the history of medicine—no remedy has ever approached the marvelous efficacy or the wonderful record of benefits and cure, that stand to the credit of Paine's Celery Compound, the discovery of Dartmouth's great physician, Professor Edward E. Phelps. All doctors know its formula and prescribe it constantly.

The merit and purity of Paine's Celery Compound are recognized by every school of medicine. It stands unchallenged as the standard tonic of the medical world; proved by the daily test of a generation. No other remedy can make health and strength so quickly. No other remedy does its work in such a gentle, natural scientific way.

Mr. Gibson's case is only one in tens of thousands, men and women who were broken, trembling wrecks, and who from the very first dose of Paine's Celery Compound felt better at once. This celebrated Nerve Vitalizer and Tonic gives quick and natural benefit by feeding celery—nature's nerve-food—to the nerve centers which control the health and well-being of the whole system.

VERDICT FOR MEAT SOLD

Barnum Stock Raiser Gets Award Against H.C. Frink.

It took a jury in district court, this morning, about twenty minutes to try the case of Andrew Anderson against H. C. Frink, the independent butcher of this city, and but five minutes to return a verdict against Frink of $535.37.

Anderson is a stock raiser at Barnum, Minn., and last fall and winter furnished Frink with meats while the latter was acting the part of "trust-buster," according to the term applied to Frink by Anderson's attorney, this morning.

Anderson claimed that between Dec. 3 and Dec. 9 last, he shipped to Frink 2355 pounds of dressed pork at a contract price of 6 cents per pound and 9032 pounds of dressed beef at a contract price of 5 cents per pound.

The prices he said were made after Anderson and Frink had made the rounds of the packing houses in Duluth and obtained the lowest figure on wholesale meats, the price on pork being made half a cent under the packing house prices.

Anderson claimed that after the meat was shipped to Frink the latter asked for time to make payment, the deal having been made on a cash basis, and he gave him two weeks' time, also reduced the price of the pork from 7 to 6 cents on representation of Frink that the pork market had declined.

The total amount claimed was $652.09, of which partial payment of $126 was admitted, the last payment of $10 being made Jan. 31.

When the case was called this morning, in Judge Ensign's room, there was no appearance of Frink, his attorney, George L. Spangler, arriving in the court room after the jury had ben drawn and was about to be sworn.

Mr. Spangler objected to the introduction of any evidence on the ground that a proper bill of particulars had not been submitted him and at the conclusion of the testimony moved for a verdict for Frink. The objection and the motion were both overruled.

Anderson was the only witness examined and the court directed a verdict in his behalf, the jury to fix the amount to be recovered.

In Judge Dibell's room a jury trial was begun in the case of Stitt & Howe against the Rat Portage Lumber company.

In this action Stitt & Howe ask a judgment of $1999 on a log driving contract to the booms of the Rainey River Boom company.

In Judge Cant's room, the morning session was devoted to the arguments of counsel on the motion of the Fidelity & Casualty company that the Duluth Logging & Contracting company be held in contempt of court for not obeying an order issued in April, from district court, directing it to furnish its books and accounts for the inspection of the casualty company. The latter company brought suit to recover excess premiums claimed for an employer's liability policy.

The logging and contracting company claims not to have had proper notice of the court's order.

The case of E. G. Nevius against Dominic Dumas and others, was called this morning for trial, but was continued.

A stipulation was filed in district court, this morning, dismissing the action brought by H. Bloom, of Virginia, against the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway company, the case having been compromised and settled. Mr. Bloom claimed that the railway company received for shipment $150 worth of goods, here at Duluth, on which the freight was paid, but that the goods were not taken off at Virginia in good order, a total loss resulting.

TO VACATE GROUND

City Engineer Comments on Fourth Street Boulevard Plot.

Better Be Given to Property Owners Unless Improved.

East Fourth street between Sixth and Fourteenth avenues east may be narrowed to conform with the adjoining sections of the street, if the recommendations of City Engineer McGilvray are carried out.

At the last meeting of the council the city engineer was requested to establish a sidewalk grade on the upper side of Fourth street between these avenues. If the sidewalk were kept in its present location and graded on a level with the sidewalk on the lower side of the street, it would necessitate a cut of several feet and the walk would then be a considerable distance below the level of the houses. On the other hand if the sidewalk on the lower side of the street were raised to conform with the upper side it would be on a level with the windows of the houses.

"The street should never have been platted as it was in the first place," said Mr. McGilvray this morning. "It is an unsightly looking street at present. The extra twenty feet is simply a strip of wilderness or no man's land. It is more of a pasture than anything else.

"The strip should be either deeded back to the property owners and made into a building line easement or it should be turned over to the park board to be improved as seen fit. I believe it would be a good idea to vacate it and allow the property owners to add that much to their lots. Some provision could be made forbidding the owners to build on that strip and they would then have a building line such as now exists on some parts of East Sueprior street.

"Or if it were turned over to the park board it could be turned into a kind of boulevard and improved with trees and shrubs. At present it is of no use to any person and is simply an eye-sore.

"The street is at present 86 feet wide at this point. If the twenty foot strip were vacated, it would still leave the street 66 feet in width and if the sidewalk were then placed at the curb it would be on a proper grade."

The matter will be submitted to the meeting of the council this evening, together with a report on the depth of the sanitary sewer on Fourth street, which was called for under the same resolution passed last Monday evening.

THE RETORT COURTEOUS

J. S. Ray Causes the Arrest of Michael Conlon For Assault.

Michael Conlon was arrested by the police this morning and arraigned in the municipal court on the charge of attempting to commit an assault.

The complaint was sworn out by J. S. Ray, who alleges the attempt was made on the evening of Feb. 27.

In a former suit, just settled by Judge Windom, Ray was the defendant and Conlon the complaining witness. Ray was sentenced to pay a fine and was placed under bonds to keep the peace.

In the present case Ray claims that he fears Conlon will do him great bodily harm, and asks that he be placed under bonds to keep the peace.

Conlon, who is still compelled to go about on crutches on account of the fight, pleaded not guilty to the charge.

The case will be heard by Judge Windom this afternoon. Conlon was released on his own recognizance.

In the municipal court this morning Conlon claimed that the case was brought against him through spite on the part of Ray. Ray, however, maintains that Conlon was the aggressor in the fight and should have been the defendant in the first case.

OMAHA ROAD'S NEW TRAIN

Goes Out Sunday Afternoon For First Time—Other News.

In every expectation it originally had regarding the new Duluth limited train, the Omaha has been disappointed. It expected to get the new service in effect today, after the many delays, but instead started ahead of time and ran the first train out last evening at 5:30 o'clock.

Conductor Edward B. Ryan, who wears four gilt stripes on his coat sleeves for long and faithful service with the Omaha, had charge of the first train out. Last night the companion train was started from Chicago and brought through to this city.

The trains are practically counterparts of the Northwestern limited, run between the Twin Cities and Chicago, and the coloring is dark green on the outside of all the cars. The makeup consists of eight cars, and they make probably as handsome a train as ever drew in or out of this city.

The Pullman cars are all new and just from the shop, while all the other cars have a correspondingly handsome appearance. The finish of the Pullman equipment is quiet and tasteful, and not striking in any particular save for quiet elegance. The service of the Bookloversʼ library is found on the combination library, smoking and baggage car.

While the trains are to be lighted by electricity as soon as the dynamos are completed and turned over to the railroad company. The electric plant will be located in the baggage car and will consist of a dynamo with a lighting capacity equal to more than 300 16-candle power lamps. The electric lighting includes both ceiling and side lights and individual reading lamps are conveniently placed in the buffet library car and in each section of the sleeping cars. The electrical plant includes rotary fans in the dining car and the buffet smoking and library car.

The cars are not lettered "The Duluth Limited," and there is nothing on them in the way of signs to classify them but their appearance, dark green, or olive, is in decided contrast to the orange tint formerly in effect.

Half Holiday Saturday.

City ticket offices on Superior street will be practically closed on Saturday afternoons after 1 o'clock from now until Oct. 1. A meeting of the Duluth-Superior Passenger association was held this morning at which this was decided on. It is expected to keep watch on the offices to look out for mail and telegrams, but for ordinary business purposes, such as the selling of tickets, the offices will be considered deserted and all Saturday business will be encouraged to manifest itself before 1 p. m.

Rate Withdrawn.

The $2 rate from St. Paul to Chicago will not be put into effect as influences were brought to bear to have it withdrawn. In addition to this the $3 round trip tickets from Chicago will be good only five days instead of seventeen, which will reduce the time for scalpers to manipulate them. But the roads using the $2 rate up from Chicago are doing a land office business. The Northwestern had three sections of its morning train and three sections of its evening train out of Chicago yesterday for St. Paul.

WOULD BUY HONEST MAN

Pot of Gold and a Job Offered By W. R. Hearst.

Indianapolis, May 9.—The talk of Indiana is the charge made by Daniel W. Sims, of Lafayette, that he received a fabulous offer from the Hearst managers to organize the Democracy of Indiana in the interest of Hearst.

He is recognized everywhere for honesty and unblemished character and everyone believes him. Mr. Sims said Saturday that he would prepare a statement to be read at the Democratic state convention next week backing it up with documentary evidence.

Mr. Sims said that early in the campaign he was called to Indianapolis to attend a meeting in the interest of Hearst. J. K. Risk, editor of the Lafayette Democrat, was there. Mr. Sims was asked to take the management of the Hearst boom in Indiana and was promised a fabulous sum if he would do so.

Mr. Sims did not name the amount, but it is said to have been $250,000. If he carried the state for Hearst he was to receive the nomination for governor on the Democratic ticket and he was to receive the $250,000 to defray the expenses of his campaign. Mr. Sims refused the proposition. John Henderson, Hearst's Indiana campaign manager, said Saturday night:

"If such a thing was done, it was before I became connected with the bureau here."

Mr. Henderson declared that if the offer was made it was not intended in any sense to corrupt Mr. Sims. Henderson also said:

"It would have looked better if Sims had made the affair public at the time he refused to undertake the work for Hearst, than to wait until he was in danger of losing his own county."

As the story goes, when John C. Eastman, of Chicago, National Secretary C. A. Walsh and Committeeman Johnson of the Democratic national committee first came to Indianapolis to open Hearst headquarters, Sims was one of the first men sent for. They took him up into a room in a hotel and unfolded to him how he might be the Democratic nominee for governor of Indiana and have all the money he wanted to make his campaign if he would lend his name and brains to their work.

Sims told the story in confidence to a few of his friends, and has now given it to the public.

LA FOLLETTE HAS WON OUT

His Nomination on the First Ballot Now Conceded.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 9.—The Free Press says: Governor La Follette will be renominated on the first ballot in the Republican state convention at Madison on Wednesday, May 18. That is now absolutely certain. His majority may be 100; it may be much more. It cannot be much less. The governor's victory is now admitted by the stalwarts.

The only doubt that now remains is as to the size of the majority La Follette will have in the convention. The administration forces will control and will name the four delegates at large to the national convention.

Of the 196 delegates to be chosen this week it has been expected that the stalwarts would get at least fifty, possibly more, with the same expenditure of effort that they have been making everywhere since the primaries began. But now that they admit they are beaten and that there is no way by any possibility de feat the governor, they will find it more difficult to get their men out to the caucuses for the mere purpose of getting a few more anti-La Follette delegates, when they know they cannot get enough to accomplish anything. The incentive for the continued lavish outlay of money is gone, and it remains to be seen whether it will be considered worth while to keep it up for an empty gain of a few votes.

Caucuses remain to be held in sixteen counties and the last will not be held until Saturday, but the six counties will elect delegates. Inasmuch as the contest is really all over, it would not be surprising to see almost a unanimous procession of La Follette delegates. On the other hand the stalwart combination may keep up the fight until the end, in which case they are likely to get about the same proportion of delegates they got last week.

The only caucuses today are in Brown county, which the stalwarts have claimed from the start, but for which the administration men have made a contest. Tomorrow the caucuses in Sheboygan and Thompealeau will be held; on Wednesday those in Monroe; on Thursday those in Green, Kewaunee, Taylor and Outagamie; on Friday those in Portage and Gates, and on Saturday, the last of all, those in Bayfield, Dunn, La Fayette, Pierce, Sawyer and St. Croix.

ATTENDANCE AT FAIR

Will Be Made Public But Once a Week.

St. Louis, May 9.—The executive committee of the World's fair has decided that the total daily admissions to the exposition will not be made public until Sunday night, following the close of the week. The gates do not close until 11 o'clock at night and visitors during the past week entered the grounds almost up to the closing hour.

W. H. Stevens, secretary of the exposition, explained the status of the matter to the Associated Press today by saying:

"There are a greater number of gates than have been utilized at any other exposition, and they, being located on the four sides of the grounds, cover an extent of five miles. Visitors begin coming into the grounds at 8 o'clock in the morning and continue, we find, until almost 11 o'clock at night, the closing hour. In some cases almost twelve hours have been consumed in making the count for a single day.

"As soon as all these conditions become apparent; the executive committee ordered that the count be not made public but once a week, to be given on Sunday night following the close of the week. This rule may be changed later if it is found possible to complete the day's count in time to give it out the next day, but for the present only a weekly report will be made. The total number of admissions for the opening week was very gratifying to the exposition management, but, of course, the attendance this week is expeteed to be much larger, as the exhibits are all to be completed in their installation by next Thursday, and an official tour of inspection by the exposition officials will then be made. That will indicate that the exposition is then entirely completed and visitors who have been waiting for that time to arrive will throng the grounds."

ATTEMPT TO BRIBE JUROR

Sensation In the Murder Trial of Guyaticano Prisciotta.

Cleveland, May 9.—A sensation was created in the criminal court today when County Prosecutor Keller announced that a bold attempt had been made to bribe the jurors in the case of Guysticano Piesciotta, an Italian, charged with the murder of Policeman White, some time since. According to the statement of the prosecutor, one of the jurors, Marcus Grenspan, informed Waiter Gates and William W. Brifficld, two other members of the jury, that if they would vote to acquit Piesciotta they would each be paid $25. The two jurors reported the matter to the prosecutor, who advised them to accept the offer. Then, receiving the money, the jurors again reported to the prosecutor, who presented the facts to the court, with the result that the jury was at once discharged and Grenspan taken into custody.

GIRL DROWNED

While Seeking Flowers In Fowler Lake, Wis.

Oconomowoc, Wis., May 9.—The entire community of Oconomowoc was deeply shocked yesterday on learning of the drowning of Miss Annie Dooley, one of the most popular young women of this city. She left her home Saturday evening and rowed across Fowler lake, going to the opposite woods for wild flowers. Her long continued absence alarmed her mother and searching parties were insutituted, but it was not until 3 o'clock yesterday morning that the body was found.

Miss Dooley was a stenographer and bookkeeper in the employ of the H. L. Lorleberg company. She was a graduate of the Oconmowoc high school and a Milwaukee business college.

From the fact that her basket and knife used for gathering flowers were found in the boat, which was floating right side up, it is presumed that in attempting to make the landing she lost her balance and fell overboard.

Cured His Mother of Rheumatism

"My mother has been a sufferer for many years with rheumatism," says W. H. Howard, of Husband, Pa. "At times she was unable to move at all, while at all times walking was painful. I presented her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried, in fact, she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." For sale by all druggists.

We paid $100,000 for Liquozone; and we paid $500,000 more to buy a million bottles and give them to a million sick.

We paid $100,000 for the American rights to Liquozone. And we have spent $500,000 in the past four months to buy a million bottles and give them to a million sick ones. Don't you realize that this product must be of wonderful worth to humanity? Won't you see what it means to you?

Acts Like Oxygen.

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there any alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process which requires immense apparatus and 14 days' time. Each cubic inch of Liquozone represents the virtues of 1250 cubic inches of the gas. The process by which these virtues are concentrated into liquid, stable form, has been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research for more than 20 years.

The result is a product which does what oxygen does. Oxygen is the nerve food, the blood food, the scavenger of the blood. It is the very source of vitality, the most essential element of life. But oxygen is a gas, and unstable; while Liquozone is fixed and concentrated. It gets an excess of oxygen virtues into the blood, to go wherever the blood goes. The result is a vitalizing tonic with which no other known product can compare.

Kills Inside Germs.

But the great value of Liquozone lies in the fact that it kills germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. There is nothing else known which will do that. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. For that reason, medicine is practically helpless in any germ disease.

Liquozone is so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and an excess of oxygen—the very life of an animal—is deadly to vegetal matter. Liquozone is certain destruction to germs, yet to the human body it is the most helpful thing in the world. There is no other way to end the cause of any germ disease.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone kills the germs, wherever they are, and the results are inevitable. By destroying the cause of the trouble, it invariably ends the disease and forever.

THROUGH ICE

Steamer Bon Ami Comes From Two Harbors Sunday

Under Full Steam and Ice Presents No Difficulty.

Navigation was yesterday formally opened along the north shore between this city and Grand Marais by the steamer Bon Ami, of the White Line Transportation company, which steamed into the local harbor at 11:45 a. m. It took her just two hours and forty minutes to come from Two Harbors, a distance of twenty-seven miles.

The fact that the little freight and passenger steamer came the full distance under a full head of steam is in itself sufficient assurance that ice conditions on the upper lake are not very bad. The Bon Ami stood well out from shore, and although considerable ice was encountered it was of such a nature that it hindered her progress, but little. The ice which now remains in the lake is so rotten and honeycombed that it offers little resistance to a boat.

The first shipment of corundum from the property of the Minnesota Corondum company was brought down from Crystal Bay by the steamer. The rock was delivered to the Omaha road for shipment to Chicago.

The Bon Ami left the dock at 10 o'clock this morning on her second north shore trip, with freight for Grand Portage and Grand Marais. She will also try to make Washington Harbor, on Isle Royale. Little difficulty is anticipated in getting into Grand Portage, where the people are said to be running short of supplies. There will probably be trouble in getting into Washington Harbor, however, and the boat may be unable to make it this trip.

The second boat to make the north shore trip this season will be the Mabel Bradshaw, passenger and freight steamer, also of the White Line Transportation company. She will leave Duluth next Thursday morning, weather conditions permitting, with freight for north shore points. She will try to land at both Isle Royale and Port Arthur.

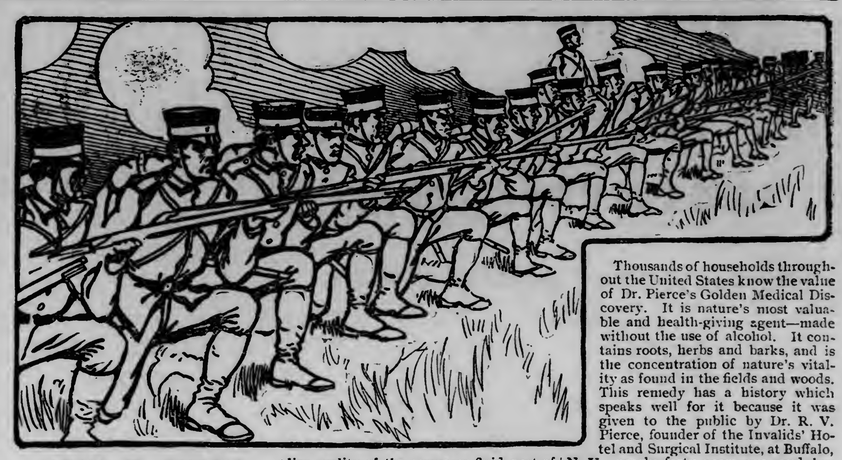
Officers of the Booth line are planning to start the America on her first trip to Isle Royale and the north shore next Sunday. This boat is now undergoing repairs at the Superior dry dock and will be in shape for the trip next Sunday. Capt. Jacob F. Hector, master of the America, feels confident that by the time the week has passed he will be able to land at Isle Royale if the White line boats fail to do so before that time.

The America will take five lighthouse keepers to Isle Royale and if she succeeds in making a landing the present occupants of the island, who have remained there during the winter, will be brought to Duluth on the return trip.

The package freight steamer Osceola, of the Lake Michigan and Lake Superior Transportation company, left Chicago early last Saturday morning on her way to Duluth. She is expected to arrive here Thursday or Friday.

It is expected that the steamer Jay Gould, of the same line, will leave Chicago tomorrow for Duluth, provided complications do not arise in regard to masters and pilots. It is said that Capt. W. H. Singer, president of the line, has made a provisional contract with the masters of his boats.

Capt. F. R. Brewer, of Ashland, has chartered the tug Pacific, owned by the Stevens Towing line of Duluth, and will take her to Ashland as soon as the ice will permit.



Thousands of households throughout the United States know the value of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is nature's most valuable and health-giving agent—made without the use of alcohol. It contains roots, herbs and barks, and is the concentration of nature's vitality as found in the fields and woods. This remedy has a history which speaks well for it because it was given to the public by Dr. R. V. Pierce, founder of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., nearly forty years ago, and has since been sold by druggists in ever increasing quantities. Some medicines, tonics or compounds, enjoy a large sale for a few years, then disappear from the public attention, but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has proved such a reliable blood remedy and tonic that it often enjoys the confidence of several generations in a family, and its increased sales year by year coming from the recommendations of those who have tried it, prove its lasting merit, so that every bottle bears the stamp of public approval.

WHAT A SOLDIER SAYS.

"Thirteen years ago I was wounded by a ball passing through my lung," says George H. Belcher, Esq., of Dorton, Pike Co., Ky. "I have had a bad cough ever since with shortness of breath, and it was very easy to take cold; the slightest change of weather would cause the cough to be so bad I would have to sit up in bed all night.

"I could not eat nor sleep at times; I was all run-down; I could not work at all. A few months ago I began using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I have not used more than two bottles and now I can eat, sleep and work, and I feel like a new man. I cannot find words to sufficiently recommend Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, or tell the good it has done me."

are based on the necessity of controlling large bodies of men in order that their combined force may be directed toward a point of attack. The rules of health which guide and direct the human system in its struggle against disease, are fully explained in the "Common Sense Medical Adviser." Send Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y., 31 one-cent stamps for this great doctor book of 1008 pages. Many a siege of sickness has been avoided by its help.

JAPAN VS. RUSSIA.

"On the Firing Line."

ACTUAL conflict is the crisis of warfare. All the privations of forced marches, tedious drills and weakening exposure are but means to this end—that the soldier should be ready for actual battle at the proper place and at the right moment. The heroism of the battle-field is more spectacular, and usually appreciated, but there are many true heroes that have perished in war who have never "smelled powder," but who have succumbed to sickness and other vicissitudes of campaigning. The sick and debilitated man is as much out of place in his struggle for life and existence as he would be on the firing line, and on the other hand, the strong, vigorous man, his veins filled with pure, rich blood, has an enormous advantage in whatever position he may be fated to occupy, in war or business.

"Blood will tell," is an axiom that in all the ages has never been gainsaid. Every man who does a brave, heroic act carries within his veins a quality of blood that urges and sustains him. No matter whether he inherits it from a long line of famous ancestors or from the sound and healthy constitution of his immediate parents, whose only distinction is honorable toil and a simple, virtuous life, pure blood is the best protection possible against disease of any nature whatever. This protection which the blood gives against the germs of disease is one of the mysteries of modern medicine, but it is a universally admitted fact that the blood has this power, the only question in the minds of scientific men being as to the exact manner in which this is accomplished. Some think it due to a peculiar quality of the serum or fluid part of the blood; others believe that the white blood cells do the work. This latter view is based on the fact that pus, when examined under the microscope, is found to be made up of white blood cells, which contain within their substance the bodies of dead bacteria which have been overcome and devoured. The red cells should be full and round, and capable of absorbing large quantities of oxygen and distributing it throughout the system. Nearly all the vital organs, as the lungs, kidneys and skin simply serve the body by purifying the blood. The liver, especially receives large quantities of blood and extracts from it the poisonous matters which are thrown out by the bile.

It matters little where or how you obtain it, but it matters all the world that by some means you possess good blood. Good blood is first, last and always the making of manly men and womanly women. It is the source of all courage, virtue and happiness.

When manly mentality and womanly courage have been sapped and undermined by the subtle, disintegrating poison of physical debility and mal-nutrition, the spirit ceases to be "willing" because the flesh is weak, the blood is impoverished, the nutritive powers depleted. It is by overcoming these physical disabilities and restoring the forces of nutrition to full and complete vitality that Dr. Pierce's wonderful "Golden Medical Discovery" gives back to men and women their true birthright of hopefulness, endurance and heroism. It works in the natural way, purifying the blood, toning up the stomach and gently stimulating the liver and bowels to renewed effort. It reaches the root of the disease and stamps it out from the system, so that the patient is cured to stay cured. For nearly forty years it has stood the test of time, and stands to-day in a proud position of superiority.

TATTOOING A FAD

Among Society People of Europe and United States.

Men and Women Baring Skin For Wonderful Pictures.

New York, May 9.—Tatooing has broken out afresh among society people all over Europe and this country, as a result of war in the far East, and the curious fashion is spreading rapidly representatives of European royalty and leaders in American social circles being among the first to give impetus to the fad in being punctured for pictures by the knights of the needle and ink, who, now have their hands full working out Japanese designs, which appear to find special favor among the devotees of the "art."

A fashionable Japanese tattooist in the West End of London has his hands full at present, and charges fancy prices for his works of art. The skin artists, however, as a rule, charge about $1 for a small butterfly or flower of simple design, but as much as $30 to $50 for anything in the way of really elaborate snake or dragon. A favorite subject with men is a pretty little Japanese girl figure.

The fashionable artist naurally does not use the old style needle which did good work for sailors and navies. The new apparatus is nearly always electric, and the colors are varied and in no way injurious. The latest form of "beauty doctoring" is that of tattooing a pretty, fresh complexion on a withered and yellow skin, and the healthy look imparted by the needle is absolutely natural.

The craze is rapidly spreading, and no one is anybody nowadays who cannot show some examples of needle and ink work.

The prince of Wales has a most extraordinary design tattooed on his arm. It takes the form of a fearful looking dragon, with open jaws bristling with rows of gigantic teeth, and a row of spiked horns down the middle of its back.

Prince George of Greece has displayed a similar taste to the English heir apparent by also having the picture of a dragon tattooed on his arm. The head of the reptile is particularly fierce looking, its jaws being wide open and showing a set of formidable teeth.

Peculiar is the design tattooed on the forearm of Prince Francis of Teck. It consists of an ugly looking toad, near the mouth of which is a small beetle, apparently within an ace of being swallowed by the toad.

The Grand Duke Alexis of Russia is most elaborately tattooed on different parts of his body, likewise the grand duke of Constantine, King Oscar of Sweden, Prince and Princess Waldemar of Denmark, and Queen Olga of Greece, have also been adorned with flesh pictures. Among other personages might be mentioned Lady Randolph Churchill, the duke of Newcastle and Sir Edmund Leechmere, all of whom have submitted to the tattooer's needle.

The designs favored in England are numerous and varied. Birds, butterflies and portraits are popular among society women, probably on account of the fact that so many beautiful colors can be introduced into them. Sporting designs predominate with men, who often have the portrait of a favorite horse or dog tattooed on their arms. Regimental badges and royal arms, too, are prevalent, while not a few are partial, to serpents and dragons.

Perhaps the most striking of all representations are of two celebrated paintings, "The Crucifixion" and "Ecce Homo." One woman has depicted on her skin a picture representing a flight of birds. Portraits of husbands are popular with women. Monograms, initials and family quarterings abound.

It is surprising the number of young people of the fashionable set of large American cities who have been tattooed. Some of them are as variously decorated as the saltiest old seaman, and those who have escaped the needle thus far are enviously awaiting an opportunity to join the ranks of the "skin pictures," as the tattooed fashionable are called.

An electric tattoing machine has been invented which accomplishes the work munch quicker and neater than the needle used in the old method. The "professor" washes the skin with antiseptic and shaves away the hairs. Rubbing a little cocaine into the skin, he next proceeds to stencil the desired design.

He then turns the current into an electric outline machine, and at the rate of 1000 punctures a minute traces the outline. Generally the patient winces several times, but finally becomes used to the pricking sensation and makes no further complaint. There is little or no sign of blood during hte time the skin is being puctured.

The designs are finished with a shading machine operated by electricity. Although eight needles go into the patient's arm at each throb of the current, it does not hurt as much as the work done by the outline machine with its single point of steel. After a little more color has been worked into the holes left by the shading machine, the "professor," as a rule concludes his artistic operation by binding up the arm and letting nature have full sway in healing the punctures made.

Truant Officer at Eveleth.

To the Editor of The Herald:

"The city does not need a truant officer," declared the school board the other day. That seems kind of funny, while we see boys of school age carrying beer every day from the saloons. It puts us to thinking that the school board wants the boys to learn to drink in early age. Many of the citizens believe that the discharge of the truant officer, Frank Mattson, is due to the fact that he arrested several saloonkeepers for selling intoxicants to minors, and among those saloonkeepers happened to be a member of the city council. What would have happened if he neglected his duties? Frank Mattson is very popular among his countrymen and was elected alderman in the First ward without opposition. He is a member of the central committee for the annual summer festival to be held this year in Eveleth. Since we had the truant officer the children attended school much better than before, and still there is no need of a truant officer. The people ought to keep their eyes open at election time and see that they elect officers that will live up to the law and not neglect their duties for the favor of "the gang."

Rice Lake, Wis., May 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Soo railroad is extending its line into the heart of the town. The grading for a new depot is nearly completed and the bridge is built over the lake just above the dam. It is a great improvement to have the depot near the center of business.

The price of building lots in the center of the town is somewhat advanced over a year ago.

The Rice Lake flour mill is about to receive extensive remodelling. Some of the latest improvd machinery is to be installed.

Capt. Bull has purchased the steamboat of the sawmill company and is remodeling it for an excursion business on the lake this summer.

MRS. FISKE'S PRODUCTION

At Metropolitan In "Mary of Magdala."

Mrs. Fiske in "Mary of Magdala," the drama in which she will be seen at the Metropolitan this evening, continues to win in the various cities of her itinerary the same measure of commendation that was bestowed upon her and her great production during her two engagements in New York in the Heyse drama. Her triumph everywhere is triple—first as that of a great actress who, although seen in a role entirely different from any other in which she ever has appeared, rises to the heights of histrionic achievement; second, as a stage director who in the realization of this play proves that American talent in this direction makes a showing never surpassed by that of any foreign artist in this country; and third, as a producer whose dominating artistic sense brings out the very finest results in scenery, costumes and all accessories necessary to a great stage representation. It will be a privilege to the theater lovers of this city to witness this production, in which these facts are made evident.

"CHARITY BALL."

This evening at the Lyceum the Florence Stone company will give the first production of "Charity Ball," the play which is to run for five nights. This was one of the David Belasco successes of the early '90s, and it is destined to live as one of the classics of the American stage, to all appearances. At any rate it draws today quite as well as it ever did, and has lost not a whit of its delightful flavor. It illustrates, too, that in David Belasco the stage has one of its greatest producers and playwrights.

"The American Biograph," direct from Keith's theater in New York, will be seen for the first time tonight.

AL WILSON.

Al H. Wilson, the popular German comedian and golden voiced singer, comes to the Lyceum Saturday afternoon and evening in his new romantic play, "A Prince of Tatters," by Sidney R. Ellis. Mr. Wilson's magnetic personality and pleasing singing voice are the prime factors in his success.

ROB CHICAGO RESTAURANT.

Chicago, May 9.—Two well dressed robbers raided Kinsley's restaurant in the down town district last night and held-up the cashier. All the day's receipts, amounting to over $1000, was secured and placed in a satchel, and the men escaped before the alarm could be given.

FARMER SHOOTS A DETECTIVE

Wisconsin Man Defends a Dam at Point of Rifle.

Rice Lake, Wis., May 9.—Defending his dam at the point of a rifle, John Deitz, a farmer, living fourteen miles from Radisson, Wis., yesterday shot and probably fatally wounded Detective John Elliott of Eau Claire, who with a posse had come to arrest him on a warrant. Thrown into disorder at the display of determination, the members of the posse fled from the scene, leaving Elliott to his fate.

The sheriff has organized a posse to rescue Elliott and capture his assailant, alive or dead. Extra precautions are being taken and if Deitz shows fight, he will be shot down.

The trouble started over the refusal of Deitz to open a dam which he owns. The creek in which it is located, is filled with logs, belonging to the Dells Lumber company, of Eau Claire, and the farmer could not be persuaded to let the logs through. He demanded 10 cents a thousand feet, but the company refused this and one of the officers swore out a warrant against Deitz Saturday afternoon.

A party of six men set out Sunday morning to serve the warrant and arrest Deitz. All were heavily armed, as the man had made threats regarding any attempt to take him from the place.

When the party reached the creek on which Deitz's home is located, Elliott, who was in the lead, ordered him to surrender.

"Come and take me," said Deitz quietly, and the officers started towards the house, never suspecting that the man would carry out his threat.

He had hardly taken ten steps, when the farmer stepped into a doorway and returning with a rifle, ordered the detective to halt. Elliott paid no attention to his commands, and started for him, when the other fired twice and the officer fell.

Turning his rifle towards the other members of the party, the man ordered them off his property and without waiting to learn anything of the extent of their companions's injuries, they turned and fled, arriving here this evening.

The sheriff was immediately notified and promptly set about organizing a posse to make the arrest. Several detectives from Eau Claire will accompany the party and no chances will be taken with the fugitive.

As he will in all probability refuse to surrender it is thought that he will be brought back either dead or seriously wounded. Elliott was extremely popular in Eau Claire, and serious trouble is expected if he is found to be fatally wounded.

Deitz is known to be a good shot and with the assault committed is believed to be desperate. It is not known why he refused to submit to an officer of the law, although he had several times threatened to kill the first man who attempted to open the dam without his permission.

TRAGEDY AT PITTSBURG

Murder, Two Shootings and a Suicide Sunday's Record.

Pittsburg, May 9.—A murder, two shootings with probable fatal results and a suicide was Pittsburg's Sunday record.

Ivan Kruser, his brother, Jacob, and Mike Dillian, employes of the Ambridge plant of the American Bridge company, were held up by three negro highwaymen and in the fight that followed Ivan Kruser was shot twice and Dillian was beaten into insensibility. Kruser died in the hospital shortly after being taken there.

Charles Jackson, Walter Obey and Charles Meyers, all of Allegheny, were arrested and identified by Jacob Kruser and Dillian as the men who attacked them.

Two negroes, roommates, fought at their boarding house over a woman, and the result was that Louis Soloman received pistol wounds from the effects of which he is dying. William D. Royster, the shooter, was arrested while trying to escape on a freight train.

During a raid upon a "speak easy," on the Allegheny wharf, Lee Covert, a young man, started to run up the bank. Officer Jacques Le Belle fired one shot into the air and in his endeavor to catch Covert fell accidentally discharging his revolver. Covert was hit by the bullet and is dying at the hospital.

John W. Hutchison, chief engineer at the Herron Hill reservoir, shot himself through the heart, while temporarily deranged.

FRANK WHITE ENTERS PLEA

Dedies Guilt of Murder —W. E. Green to Defend.

Frank White, who was indicted by the grand jury of murder in the first degree, has entered a plea of not guilty, and W. E. Green has been appointed to defend him. White is the alleged slayer of Jerome Menaige.

White now refuses to talk about his alleged crime, and in answer to inquiries says that his case is in the hands of his attorney. It is understood that White will make as much as possible of his claim that he was intoxicated at the time the shooting occurred.

George Edwards, Alfred Scrace and Joseph Boreck, who were indicted last week, have all entered pleas of not guilty and attorneys will be appointed by the court to defend them.

Alfred Scrace has filed a demurrer to the indictment against himself, on the ground that the facts stated in the indictment do not constitute a public offense. The charge in Scrace's case is that he passed a forged check of $30 on Joseph Kenney, last month. The check was purported to be made payable to John McCarthy and bore the name of John McAlpine.

WENTZ BODY FOUND

Within Mile From Where He Was Last Seen.

Big Stone Gap, W. Va., May 9.—The body of E. T. Wentz, who so mysteriously disappeared October 14, 1903, was found yesterday near Kellyview, within a mile of the place where he was last seen alive. The body was lying on the ground in plain view, was in a state of preservation sufficient for identification.

Young Wentz was the son of a Philadelphia millionaire, and was in charge of his father's mines in Wise county. Since his disappearance more than $50,000 have been offered for any news of him.

TWO SEALERS LOST.

Owners of Triumph and Umbrina Abandon Hope.

Victoria, B. C., May 9.—The sealing schooners Triumph and Umbrina, of this port, have been given up as lost at sea with all hands. Capt. Hann of the sealing schooner Jessie, which has just arrived from a cruise along the coast from California to Queen Charlotte islands, picked up, south of the Columbia river, broken sealing boats and canoes, part of a schooner's rail, davit and other tackle belonging to the schooner Umbrina. When last spoken the sealer was headed for the west coast of Vancouver to land her mate, who was very ill. Since then she has not been heard of and is long overdue. The Umbrina was owned by Capt. Peppet, now in Eastern Canada. She carried a half white, half Indian crew, twenty-three all told, and was one of the largest of the fleet in Queen Charlotte sound. Capt. Hann found a schooner's boom with sail attached, and from indications known to him he believes it belonged to the Triumph, also long overdue, and not amongst the fleet now bound for the Siberian coast. The Triumph carried a white crew of nineteen men and was the oldest and largest of the Victoria sealers. The owners have abandoned hope.

THEY LIKE CONCRETE

Poor Commissioners May Build Poorhouse of That Material.

The members of the board of county poor commissioners paid a visit to the poor farm Saturday, inspecting the farm and buildings and locating a site for the new poorhouse to be erected next year.

The commissioners decided on a site back on the hill, about 200 feet from the site of the present county house.

The commissioners are strongly in favor of a building of concrete blocks, a building material that has been fast gaining in favor in the past year. Concrete blocks make a building that is substantially fireproof and it is figured that in point of durability it will be an economical building for the county.

The commissioners found everything in good shape at the poor farm and a resolution commending the services of M. Hung, the overseer, is likely to be passed at the next regular monthly meeting.

BLONDE IS SUING

Bookmaker Billy Du Bois For Her "Salary" of $29,000.

Says That He Promised to Pay Her $100 Weekly.

New York, May 9.—As a layer of odds against anything happening either in the near or far future, Billy Du Bois, the bookmaker, will be asked in court whether he will pay $29,000 he is alleged to owe to a blonde and sweet manicure girl for some promise or other he had made to her several years ago.

To be specific, the girl swears Billy promised to pay her $100 a week, and kept up the gait for a long time. Then he fell away in the stretch and finally rubbed the odds off his slate entirely. As Billy is known as one of Brooklyn's pet "sports" and a bookmaker on whose word betters rely as his bond, the case will come up in a court, when it will be decided whether the blonde manicurist was betting something or other on a cinch, or whether Billy had reasons for hedging with other bookies along the line.

Du Bois is not unknown to fame outside of the ring on the track. At intervals in the late winter and earliest of springs he and Magistrate Tighe were scheduled to swim the icy waters of Gravesend Bay for a bottle of wine or $1,000,000. As each date came around, as it has a habit of doing with creditors and other affairs of stated intervals, Billy promptly refused to appear, though Tighe was there in full swimming regalia and ready to catch his death of cold. At one time Billy had the gout and at another he could not be had by telephone or otherwise, and at still another either coming from or going to Hot Springs.

The magistrate or somebody else who could stand publication, finally entered the bay between ice floes, and Billy was declared to have lost the race by default. Thus far the forfeit has been unpaid, but a judgment has not been taken to a higher court for collection.

But that has little, if anything, to do with the blonde manicurist and the bookmaker. She is Lucille Camden, and her specialty, until she met Billy, she says, was to make a hand and finger nails that apparently had been doing duty in the subway look as if they had been engaged in cutting coupons and languidly beckoning waiters. Lucille asks $29,000 for an alleged attack the bookmaker made on her on some pretext into which she does not go into details. The extra $1000, she says, is due her on a promise Billy made to pay her $100 a week if she would give up her manicuring place in Broadway and care for him alone, as the old song says.

Lucille, who still is pretty, says she was a prosperous manicure girl in the Grand Union hotel in Saratoga several years ago. Among those who came from the track was Billy Du Bois. She had seen millionaires come and go, and paid no more than professional attention to them. She polished their nails and accepted a tip from the winners and a thankee from the losers, and that was all. Then came Billy, with his Brooklyn air of prosperity and a roll that showed the meeting was doing well enough for the bookmakers to permit them to engage a manicurist all alone by themselves—especially if the girl was blonde and pretty—which of necessity they all are.

After the first meeting Billy's nails apparently were in constant need of manicuring. Nothing would do after that except a drive around Saratoga with the wealthy bookmaker, who was spending money like wine—not water. Then—so Lucille's affidavits say—Billy begged her to give up her business. He didn't like to see her manicuring the nails of any man except himself. She was doubtful, though, and decided to return to this city and resume business at the old stand in Broadway. Then there came letters and telegrams—all placed in evidence—and meetings in the Brighton Beach and other hotels in this city.

About here is where Billy is alleged to have plunged in the winter books in promising to pay to pretty Lucille $100 a week if she devoted herself to him and see that his were the best polished and tapering fingers that ever took in a sure thing bet on a dead one on the track.

Affairs went along well enough—so the girl's affidavits continue—until October, 1902, when the bookmaker seemed to have rubbed off the odds of $100 a week he was paying her. She sent letters and telegrams, but they were not answered, and finally she went to court. Having given up her manicure business, and unwilling to say why Billy had agreed to give her the odds of $100 a week, her affidavits: stopped right there.

The answer given by Du Bois thus far is simply the general and gentlemanly denial of everything in sight. Billy is now living as well as usual in Sheepshead Bay, and refuses to say anything else about the case, which is something to the credit of Billy, who has lots of money to pay any odds he offers on a track, but believes the time has come when his slate should be cleared of those on Lucille.

A Sure Thing.

It is said that nothing is sure except death and taxes, but that is not altogether true. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is a sure cure for all lung and throat troubles. Thousands can testify to that. Mrs. C. B. Van Metre, of Shepherdtown, W. Va., says: "I had a severe case of Bronchitis and for a year tried everything I heard of, but got no relief. One bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery then cured me absolutely." It's infallible for Croup, Whooping Cough, Grip, Pneumonia and Consumption. Try it. It's guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottles free. Reg. sizes 50c, $1.00.

MATT QUAY READY TO DIE

The Pennsylvania Senator Makes Arrangements For the End.

Washington, May 9.—Senator Matthew Stanley Quay, one of the most picturesque figures in American politics, and perhaps the most astute politican in the United States, is calmly and deliberately making preparations for his death.

For the last year the Pennsylvania boss has been failing in health, and today he is so weak and emaciated that he realiezs the end is not far distant. In the methodical manner characteristic of him he is arranging his business affairs, making provision for his friends, and securing appointments for his political followers.

The utmost secrecy is observed regarding the malady of Senator Quay, and even the name of his physician is concealed. He is suffering with asthma and a serious liver complaint.

Since the extra session of congress convened Senator Quay has been unable to attend to his public duties, and last fall he turned over the management of political affairs in Pennsylvania to Senator Penrose, who now is the active leader in the state, subject, of course, to the direction of Senator Quay. Mr. Quay came to Washington soon after congress convened and remained here for some time, but he rarely appeared in the senate. In January he went to St. Lucie, his home in Florida, and remained there a month. He returned to Washington and was here a few days, but his condition was such that his appearance startled his friends; there was absolutely no improvement.

Shortly after arriving here he collapsed, and there was grave fear the end was at hand. He rallied, however, and has not been confined to his bed since that time and is able to take short walks and drives.

One of the strongest indications of the fact that the senator is making preparations for the end is that he secured the appointment of his secretary, William F. Wright, as consul at Munich. Wright has been Senator Quay's secretary for twelve years, and the senator has never permitted him to leave him for any length of time. But he has now parted with him permanently.

Senator Quay has been placed on a diet by his physician, as his stomach is so weak it will retain no nourishment. He rebels against restrictions placed upon him by his physicians. He is an inveterate smoker, and it is well known the senator is in the habit of taking several drinks of wine and whisky every day. He has been restricted to one cigar and one drink, but in order to take full advantage of the privileges allowed him by his physician the senator purchases the biggest cigar he can find and makes it last all day.

Senator Quay is an indomitable fighter, and he never has known defeat except when the senate declined to seat him after he had been appointed to that body by the governor of Pennsylvania in 1899 after the legislature had been deadlocked during the entire session.

DIVORCE EVIL

Inter-church Conference Issues Appeal To the Public.

Beginning of a Campaign of Education On the Subject.

Philadelphia, May 9.—The Inter-church conference on marriage and divorce, a body representing officially fourteen leading denominations, has issued through its secretary, Rev. William H. Robert, D. D., an appeal to the public, calling attention to several aspects of the divorce question.

The paper is the beginning of a national campaign of education upon the subject, to be followed by efforts to secure the enactment of laws in the state legislatures, and ultimately it is thought of an amendment to the constitution of the United States.

Already action has been taken by the conference looking toward the prevention of the remarriage, by ministers of other communions, of divorcees whom clergymen of their own faith have refused to marry.

This movement is the first occasion of any sort which the representatives of the great denominations have officially come together. The members of the conference include many of the most eminent ecclesiastics and laymen in the churches. The following are the denominations which subscribe to the appeal:

Protestant Episcopal church in the United States, Presbyterian church in the United States, Methodist Episcopal church, Methodist Episcopal church south, Reformed church of America, Reformed church in the United States, United Presbyterian church, Evangelical Lutheran church, the Baptist churches, the Congregatioal churches, the Unitarian churches, the Reformed Presbyterian church, the Cumberland Presbyterian church, and the alliance of the Reformed churches holding the Presbyterian service.

"First of all we plead for the cultivation of the grace of purity; for the careful guarding of children within the atmosphee of home by parents, and for the realization of the dignity of our physical nature lifted to such high honor by the incarnation.

"We plead for a recognition of the sanctity of marriage. We are facing a condition in our country today which threatens danger to the most sacred things. The very sanctuary of human life and of human love is assaulted and profaned. Manhood, womanhood and childhood, the home and the family, are involved; and neither civil legislation nor ecclesiastical displine can save them, until and unless the conscience of Christian humanity is reached.

"Behind the monster of polygamy, behind the specter of the lax divorce court, with its collusions, its corruptions and its contagion, stands the sad fact of the low ideal of marriage. It is true that the element of mutual consent and the element of legal contract enter into it; but underneath and behind these, as the sure foundation, stands the revlation of God's holy word: God at first 'brought' a woman to a man, one woman to one man, to whom he shall cleave, so that in God's purpose and God's sight they are on flesh.

"Marriage is a holy thing. Marriage is the institution of God and is sanctified under th solmnitis of the old sanction by our blessed Lord. This is the root of the matter. Reformation must begin here. Children must be taught it. Young men and young women must be made to feel it. Protected in purity, boy and girl, man and woman alike, must be trained to look with reverent eyes upon the holiness of this estate; upon its mysteriousness as something higher and deeper and larger than can be measured or reached by the low ideas of convenience, of worldly advantage, of the gratification of passion, or by the light and easy estimate of the consent of the passing personal fancy and the mutual recognition of the civil contract.

"The hope of curing and crushing the horrible tendencies to facile and frequent divorce rests, we believe, upon impressing and inculcating intense conviction of what marriage is, and of what marriage means, that it will cease to be entered into 'unadvisedly or lightly;' that the festivity which accompanies it shall be sobered and consecrated.

"What words can we find to express the abhorrence which ought to rise in righteous indignation against the present possibilities and the existing facts of the divorce habit in America? Just now polygamous Utah looms large and ugly in our minds. But we must look nearer home to realize the true condition of things. The proportion of divorces to marriages in 1902 in eight states reporting statistics is as follows: In Maine, 1 to 6; in New Hampshire, 1 to 8; in Vermont, 1 to 10; in Massachusetts, 1 to 16; in Rhode Island, 1 to 8; in Ohio, 1 to 88; in Indiana, 1 to 76; in Michigan, 1 to 11. In these states there has been a steady and rapid increase in divorces during the decade, and this increase is believed to be true of the country at large.

"We are setting ourselves earnestly to study what best methods the churches can adopt and what wise measures should be asked in civil legislation to abate this disgrace. The results of our study we hope to present in subsequent statements and appeals. But this appeal is to the conscience of Christian people to cleanse and purify the atmosphere of public opinion and social recognition. The fear of legalized polygamy in one state is enhanced by the fact of unholy divrce in many states.

"The faces of Christian people must be set against this. The voices of Christian people must be lifted against this, not only to secure civil legislation, not only to enforce church discipline, but to correct the tendency, to control the inclination and to condemn the fact. We are pleading for the home, for the family, for the children born and to be born, for the protection of society, and for the preservation of the state.

"We ask you to unite with us in earnest effort, so that more and more the manhood, the womanhood and the childhood of America, may make itself heard and felt, in the determined purpose to stem the currents which are sapping the foundations of all that is best and holiest and dearest in human life. Let us strive unitedly for the things which are pure and true, for the sanctity of marriage, for the permanence of the family, for the preservation of the home, and for the perpetuity of the state."

The following churches are represented in the conferences: Protestant Episcopal church in the United States, Presbyterian church in the United States of America, Methodist Episcopal church, Methodist Episcopal Church South, Reformed church in America, Reformed church in the United States, United Presbyterian church, Evangelical Lutheran church, the Baptist church, the Congregational churches, the Universalist churches, the Unitarian churches, the Reformed Presbyterian church, the Cumberland Presbyterian church, the Alliance of the Reformed churches holding the Presbyterian system.

The Last Words of Mrs. Baxter

WHEN Richard Baxter, noted in England in 1638, lost his wife he published a broadsheet headed: "The Last Words of Mrs. Baxter," which reached an immense sale. His printer seeing the profit in it brought out a broadsheet entitled: "More Last Words of Mrs. Baxter." To which Mr. Baxter replied that "Mrs. Baxter didn't say anything else."

If Mrs. Baxter were living today she would, like us, have a lot of "last words" to say about

HON. GAMALIEL BRADFORD

Urges Nomination of Gen. Miles For President.

May I ask the privilege of addressing a few words to your constituency? It is hardly necessary to remark that the election of netx autumn is by far the most important since the civil war. That will be true of every succeding presidential election on account of the rapidly increasing strain on our institutions. When our federal constitution was adopted—and the same is practically true of those of the states—there were 3,000,000 of people in thirteen states occupying a strip of the Atlantic seacoast. Today there are 80,000,000—and before the century closes there will be nearly, if not quite, 200—in forty-five states, occupying more than five times the area, and stretching to the Pacific, to say nothing of the complications arising from foreign possessions. Yet with all the vast social and material changes, the machinery of government remains substantially the same. As might be expected, and as has happened with all other machinery, it is proving inadequate to do its work.

Take the tariff as an illustration. It is today simply an instrument for promoting private business interests. The Republican party has sold the tariff to great combinations of capital, and is repaid by the latter with campaign funds to keep the party in power. From the time Mr. Cleveland took office, in 1885, till he quitted it in 1897, say twelve years, his one principal doctrine was tariff reform. What did he accomplish? The tariff is worse today than it has ever been. The real question is not whether, but how, the tariff shall be reformed. The same is practically true of the civil service. There is much talk about municipal ownership. But it must be a very thoughtless person who does not stand appalled at the idea of such ownership, in the hands of municipalities like those which afflict the country today. The strife between capital and labor threatens to shake the social fabric to its foundation. Yet where on the horizon is visible any sign of that wise and just legislation, and that firm and impartial administration, which alone can avert disaster? Our domestic problems are sufficient to task the highest statemanship.

But there is noe indispensable preliminary for any effective reform, and that is peace, abroad and at home. If a real foreign war comes, not only must all internal reforms be indefinitely postponed, but we shall go counter to all the history of nations, if, before it ends, all our constitutional securities have not disappeared. We have at this time a president in whom, among many personal qualities which excite admiration, now stand out as, in his position, perhaps the most dangerous which can be named—an unconquerable and overwhelming passion for war, and a conviction that his will, in what he conceives to be right, should supersede all positive law. On the first point, amid other innumerable proofs, it will be sufficient to quote from his speech before the Hamilton club of Chicago in April, 1899:

"The twentieth century looms before us, big with the fate of many nations. If we stand idly by, if we seek merely swollen and slothful ease, and ignoble peace; if we shrink from the hard contests where men must win at the hazard of their lives, and at the risk of all they hold dear, then the bolder and stronger peoples will pass us by, and will win for themselves the domination of the world."

On the second point his action at Panama will cover the ground. Whether it was right or wrong, it was in flat defiance of positive instructions, formally given to him by congress. Yet with all its infinite complications, he peremptorily demanded ratification, as of "accomplished facts," and the senate—strange to say, with the aid of Democratic votes—submissively obeyed.

Taken with his other actions, no plainer warning was ever given to nations or to men.

For the present purpose it is assumed to be doubtful whether any of the candidates thus far prominent can obtain a nomination by the St. Louis convention of July 6. Being merely a supposition, it does not involve discussion of the merits of those candidates, but only an insistence upon the growing danger of the "dark horse" alternative.

When the Chicago convention met in 1896, probably not a dozen individuals in the city, perhaps in the Union, had any idea that within forty-eight hours Mr. Bryan would be the accepted candidate of one of the two great parties for one of the greatest offices in the world. That result was achieved by a single speech, almost by a single sentence in that speech. Does either theory or practice show that to be a safe way of selecting the chief magistrate of a nation of 80,000,000, covering the extent of the United States?

Yet the St. Louis convention may be easily reduced to a similar condition. The Massachusetts delegation will, of course, present the name of Mr. Olney. That is very well. But does not common prudence require that we shall ask ourselves whether there are any inherent reasons or external signs, any sufficient national reputation, personal or political, upon which we should rely for his comanding the requisite two-thirds? Next comes Judge Parker of New York, who has not himself, nor has anybody for him, shown the slightest indication of what may be expected from him to justify either his nomination or election. Almost the only shadow of a reason given is that he could carry the state of New York. If that is the turning point the convention might as well be dispensed with, and New York allowed to make the nomination at the start. The fact seems to be that he is put forward, not so much to defeat the election of President Roosevelt, as the nomination of somebody else.

If calamities, such as have been indicated, are to be averted, the Democras of the whole Union should respond to the necessities of their common cause. The delegates from any state to St. Louis find that the man of their choice cannot command the nomination, they should be prepared with a man, who cannot only command it, but will go before the country as the champion of the cause most vital to its future, the defeat of President Roosevelt. And no man can appeal to the people of the United States more strongly than Lieut. Gen. Miles. Born in the beautiful region of the heart of Massachusetts, he was, at 21 years of age a clerk in a Boston store when the civil war broke out. He undertook, as captain, to raise a company for the regiment of Gen. Wilson. Being objected to on account of his age, he waived his claim and accepted the rank of lieutenant. As the bounty offered to the regiment remained unpaid, and threatened to defeat its formation, he devoted to that purpose $1000 which he had received from his father, and $2500 which he had borrowed upon his note and afterwards paid. In four years he won the rank of general. In one battle he was borne from the field covered with wounds, supposed to be mortal. In another crisis in the Shenandoah valley his self-reliance and decision won a public encomium from Gen. Grant. He stands today as the honored associate of Lincoln and Grant, of Sherman, Sheridan and Thomas.

Nor was his highest service in the civil war. When Gen. Crook, in despair, asked to be relieved from the campaign against the Apaches, Gen. Miles was sent there against his wish, and by his skillful combinations brought the fierce chiefs Geronimo and Natchez to a surender. In that country which had been a scene of terror and cruelty equal to the frontiers of the New England colonies in the old French war, he established a profound and unbroken peace. Farther north, among the Sioux and other tribes, when Gen. Custer had encountered the massacre of himself and his men, Gen. Miles, again by a skillful combination of vigorous war and conciliatory negotiation, obtained the surrender of such dangerous enemies as Chief Joseph and Sitting Bull and again established a profound and permanent peace. In the Chicago strike of 1904, when anything like rashness or display of of temper in the federal commander might have resulted in bloodshed and laid the foundation of another civil war, the tact and skill of Gen. Miles secured the immediate and peaceful collapse, which astonished the country. He has never hesitated to sacrifice his personal glory to the saving of human life. When, in 1898, he was in command in Cuba, and other generals might have looked for bulletins of slaughter and victory, he sought an interview with the Spanish commander, and after hours of mental wrestle persuaded him to surrender. In Porto Rico he effected a peaceful landing, and by his proclimation brought about the acquisition of the one place which has never given us a moment's trouble.

Peace has always followed his footsteps and he stands for peace today. When, in December, 1901, he had quietly expressed an opinion different from that of the president and secretary of war, and the lawyer from New York addressed to him a rebuke which would have been brutal to a corporal, his perfect command of temper saved him from uttering a word of resentment, and, when again, on his retirement from the high office of lieutenant general, he received a curt letter of dismissal and an order to go home, without a word of allusion to his lifetime of service, the only response he vouch safed was a dignified and beautiful address to his comrades of the army, past and present. Probably there is no man, who knows the United States better in their length and breadth, and certainly there is no one who is better known to the whole nation. He has no combination of state politicians to work for him, but one needs only to talk to the average citizen anywhere, to feel the depth of potential enthusiasm which is only awaiting the electric spark.

Possibly he may not have clear modern views upon the tariff, the trusts and the relation of capital and labor. But, apart from the fact that the president can do very little about these questions, they can wait, as, indeed, they will have to wait, under worse conditions, if the country is embarked upon foreign war. It is said that at the present time we do not want a soldier. But exactly what we do want is a soldier, who knows what war is and is bent upon maintaining "peace with honor," against would-be soldiers who, reckless of consequences, are ready to drag the country into the most disastrous of all political experiments. He can, at least, secure to us for the next four years the conditions under which alone internal reforms are possible.

HAD LONG CRUISE

A Vessel Returns From a Voyage Lasting Sixteen Months

Two Men Lost and Three Saved on the Cruise.

New York, May 9.—Back from a long and adventurous voyage, which began at this port sixteen months ago, the Bath built clipper Roanoke lay off Stapleton, Staten Island, with a force of riggers sending down the tophammer of the towering fabric, so that she could pass under the Brooklyn bridge to her berth, near the foot of Grand street, East river.

There she will land the three thousand tons of general cargo which she took on board at Shanghai. Nearly two thousands tons of matting, which had been shipped at Hong Kong, was landed at Baltimore, where the vessel touched before proceeding to this port.

In a voyage which consumes sixteen months and which is extended over 50,000 mile of blue water many strange adventures may come. It is interesting to note that this one more than rounds out her master's millions at sea—four times the span from earth to moon.

He is Capt. Amesbury, who nearly thirty years ago started on his wedding trip from the port in a little two-masted schooner, of which he was master. He is now master of a clipper owning four masts, though one of these was so badly sprung in a typhoon in the China seas that the captain was afraid to trust any sail on it during the homeward trip, and as a result the journey was stretched out to the extraordinary length which has made this round trip notable in marine annals, and almost, if not quite, a profitless one.

It was in a driving rainstorm that a reporter set out to find the Roanoke. There was a big fleet of sailing ships riding in the Narrows, but only one showed such a Matterhorn altitude as did this giantess, and after a long, hard pull the rowboat came bobbing alongside.

"Captain not aboard," First Mate McDonald explained. "We had hardly got in," the mate continued in a voice like a foghorn, "before he gets word that his son, who is master of the bark Adolph Obrig, and whom he hasn't seen for ten years, is in port, having arrived from Singapore the day before the Roanoke gets here.

"So he unmoors from the Roanoke and sets out looking for the son. No; I can't say where they are now. But wherever they be you can bet they are having some long yarns to unreef. Ten years o' sea and we'll find much to tell.

"Tell about these 16 months? O, yes, I can do that. No, I don't have no call to look at the log for dates. You see, sailormen don't have so much to think about or talk about once we get started on one of these deep sea trips, and we remember all that happens and the time it happens, too.

"We sail from her on Dec. 22, 1902, bound for Shanghai and with 124,000 cases of oil below.

"Six days out from here and we meets a gale—a regular buster it was, too. We shipped a young New York chap, William Haydon his name was, as likely a lad as ever went to sea. Well, sir, he was on that poop ladder there when a sea comes over the side, and he goes with it. We hove her to, but couldn't rescue the lad, and when the gale blows itself out we go on our way and rounds the Cape of Good Hope—we were going that route—and reach Java Head 104 days later.

"There we gets the sort of weather that makes us sometimes think we was another Flying Dutchman, though what we should be doing up there in the Sunda Straits, providing we was a Flying Dutchman, was what we couldn't figure out seeing that his cruising ground is down by the cape. But there we stuck for more than a month, and we was all of 62 days making the run through the China seas.

"Well, we arrive at Shanghai, discharge our oil, take on about 3000 tons of general cargo and go to Hong Kong, where we gets the matting below there, ships a Japanese crew and sets sail for home."

The mate here interrupted his narrative to tell how amazed the Japanese were to hear that war had been declared and of their excitement when they heard of the Japanese successes. "They were mighty good sailormen," he added, "and they all left us at Baltimore, probably looking for some quick way of getting back and helping out their folks."

"We make a rescue of some casta-ways," the mate resumed, "three of them adrift in a boat, and it was about time somebody picked them up, as in a little while more they would have been dead or drowned. They were eighty miles south of Borneo when we rescued them. Their schooner had foundered and they had been floating about for ten days when we gets them on board, gives them nourishment and then transfers them to a steamer.

"We got another gale in the straits—a monsoon that keeps us there 27 days. Then we clears the straits—and hits a dead calm, and straight-away one of our men falls from aloft and kills himself. His name was Edward Middleton, and he was one of the best seamen we had. How he comes to fall from aloft nobody ever knows.

"Then comes along this typhoon, and the mainmast is broken and broken so badly that it looks as if it would go over the side. We takes in sail and when the weather moderates we put a spare spar on the after side, lashing it there with chains at both ends, then wrapping a heavy hawser around mast and spar.

"But the mast was so weakened that we dared not carry sail on it, and all the rest of the voyage we made without using it. That took at least one-third off our speed, and what, with this and the head gales we got we were 158 days coming home."

For 25 years Mrs. Amesbury had sailed with her husband, but was not with him on this trip.

SUMMER RHEUMATISM

The idea that Rheumatism is strictly a winter disease, that comes from exposure or cold, is wrong; a spell of indigestion, torpidity of the liver, inactive state of the kidneys, or sudden cooling of the body when over-heated, being frequent causes of an attack. Rheumatism is due to an over-acid condition of the blood and bad circulation. As it flows through the body the blood deposits an acrid corrosive sediment in the joints and muscles, and the circulation grows sluggish because of the constant accumulation of acid impurities, and when the system is in such condition Rheumatism is liable to come out at any time, winter or summer. It is hastened and provoked by exposure to cold, damp air, sudden cooling of the body when over-heated, a bad spell of indigestion, or anything that is calculated to further derange and depress the system; but these are only exciting and not the real cause of Rheumatism. It is in the blood, and when this vital fluid becomes overcharged with the acid impurities and is running riot in the veins, an attack is sure to come, whether in summer time or the cold, bleak days of winter. You are a slave to pain as long as the blood is tainted with acid. Liniments and plasters are helpful and useful, but it takes something more than rubbing and blistering to drive away this demon of pain.

SSS

S. S. S. goes to the seat of the trouble, enters the circulation, neutralizes and filters out of the blood the acid poisons. It enriches and strengthens the weak, diseased blood; the general health improves under its tonic effect, and when rich, pure blood begins to circulate through the stiff joints and sore, tender muscles, pains and aches vanish, and the longed-for relief comes to the nervous, pain-tortured sufferers. S. S. S. contains no minerals, but is guaranteed purely vegetable. Write us if in need of medical advice, which is given without charge. Our book on Rheumatism, telling of the different forms and varieties of this pain-racking disease, is mailed free.

NO USE FOR CRUTCHES.

I had an attack of Sciatic Rheumatism in its worst form. The pain was so intense I became completely prostrated. Having heard S. S. S. recommended for Rheumatism, I decided to give it a trial, and after I had taken a few bottles I was able to hobble around on crutches, and very soon had no use for them at all., S. S. S. having cured me sound and well. All the distressing pains have left me, my appetite has returned, and I am happy to be again restored to perfect health.

HEAVY FIRE LOSS AT UTICA, MICH.

Utica, Mich., May 9.—Seventeen business places and ten dwellings were destroyed in a fire which wiped out half of this village yesterday. Practically nothing could be done in the way of fighting the fire until the arrival of an engine and company of firemen from Detroit. This village has scarcely any fire fighting apparatus. The fire started in the barn of the Exchange hotel, William Upton, a capitalist, who is one of the heaviest losers by the destruction of property, fell from the roof of a building and at a late hour had not recovered consciousness. He suffered severe and possibly fatal injuries about the head. The property loss is estimated at $100,000.

GENERAL STRIKE OF BAKERS NOT ORDERED.

Boston, May 9.—Contrary to what had been deemed probable a general strike of all union bakers now in New England was not ordered at the convention of the Massachusetts state branch of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers, held here yesterday. The sentiment of the convention seemed to be opposed to drastic action at this time. The matter of ordering a general strike, in order to prevent firms outside of Boston from supplying foods to those bakeries in this city, against which a strike had been declared was left to the executive committee of the Massachusetts state branch.

THE TRADE OF CHINA

With Other Countries Surpassed All Records Last Year.

Largest Increase In Articles of Import Was In Opium.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU

Washington, May 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—The foreign trade of the Chinese empire in 1903 surpassed all previous records. The total was 541,000,000 kaikwan taels, or $346,000,000. The annual report of the inspector general of customs for the Chinese empire, which has just been received by the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor, shows that the imports in 1903 were valued at 326,739,000 haikwan taels, and exports at 214,352,000 haikwan taels. At the value of 64 cents American gold, which is stated as the average exchange for the year, the equivalent values are: Imports, $209,113,000, and exports, $137,185,000. As compared with former years the total trade is almost exactly double what it was a decade ago, but only a little more than 2 per cent greater than in 1902. Imports exceed those of the previous year by about 4 per cent, while the total value of exports is practically the same.

Harvests in China were abundant last year and helped to recoup the losses from flood and drought and war in the years preceding. The silk crop in Mid-China, however, is reported as a disastrous failure, and affected adversely the balance of export business. Forty years ago half the exports consisted of silk and silk products, while now this item is only 35 per cent of the total. The value of exports of all kinds of silk, except piece goods, fell from 70,812,000 haikwan taels in 1902 to 62,193,000 haikwan taels in 1903; the export value of silk piece goods, however, increased from 2,880,900 haikwan taels to 12,096,000. Tea shows the greatest increase in exports. Not only did the quantity increase, but the prices realied are higher, so that the 1903 export value was 26,334,000 haikwan taels as compared with 3,320,000 less in the preceding year. Owing to increased demand from America, export of mattings incerased fro 2,809,000 haikwan taels to to 4,140,000 haikwan taels.

The article of import in which the largest increase is found is opium, which increased over 8,000,00 taels, to a value of 43,831,000 taels in 1903. Metals, including manufactures of iron and copper, increased 50 per cent to 15,-316,000 taels, and there were also imported railway supplies to the amount of nearly 8,000,000 taels. American kerosene decreased largely in quantity, and to some extent in value also; its value is now nearly equalled and its quantity is exceeded by Sumatran oil, imports of which, in 1902, amounted to less than half the value of the American product imported. Imports of Rusian kerosene also nearly doubled. The value of the American kerosene amounted to 6,080,000 taels, the Ruussian to 2,332,000, and the Suatran to 6,626,000.

Good crops are responsible for the large diminution in rice imports, which was less than a third of the 1902 importation of 23,600,000 haikwan taels or about one-fourth, its place being taken by the product of recently established mills grinding Chinese wheat. Imports of cotton yarn increased, while plain fabrics fell from 19,015,000 pieces to 13,835,000 pieces, and fancy goods increased but slightly; cotton yarn increased from 326,400,000 pounds to 365,-066,000 pounds. For many years the cotton goods sold to China consisted mainly of woven fabrics. In 1872 the import of yarns constituted only 6 per cent of the total cotton goods imported, but last year it was 43 per cent. It is stated that now over 50 per cent of the cotton goods are made in that country. This increase in the importation of yarn and of home manufacture from yarn is apparently one of the causes of the general decrease in the importation of cotton cloths. Japanese fabrics are the only ones in which increased imports are shown. The increase in importation of yarns was chiefly from Japan.

And a French Girl Sues Physical Culture Show Manager.

New York, May 9.—Ma foi, and so it is that the beautiful Antoinette—Antoinette Depri Algene—demands the amount of $1000 from Bernard McFadden in the courts municipal of the city. She, the beautiful Antoinette, so she has complained, was basely deprived of the prize for the beautiful because—listen—she would not announce herself as a vegeterian. In the papers of the case is the story told and they have been filed, as is ordered in the court, that all who will may read.

Kyra D'Anton is the real name of the beautiful Antoinette, and she has been in the country of the Americans only a few years. Beautiful, ah, who may deny, for was it not in Paris in 1900 that she won against the choice of France, the Venus prize?

It was to America she came to pose, to show herself to artists to contest against all the world for the title of Queen of Beauty.

There came, she says, to her home the McFadden, or one from him. Bright was he in praise of the physical culture show at the Garden Madison in the spring. One thousand dollars, declared he, was the prize for the most beautiful woman to be found. Volia glery, honor, fame!

Then were the signatures affixed and all was well, but the McFadden paused.

"It is that the winner of the contest must say to the world: 'I am a vegetarian; an eater of vegetables am I;' it is for the business of physical culture."

Then came the troubles; the beautiful Antoinette was brave.

"I a vegetarian? The beautiful Antoinette, owe my beauty to the plebian bean, the penetrating cabbage? Never! Thrice never! It is to the roast bif, the bif stek, the poulet and the veaux."

The Mr. McFadden's brow became overcast; it must be as it should be.

"Never!" again and again cried the haughty Antoinette. What followed?

The contract has been signed; all is in readiness; the beautiful Antoinette makes herself to go into the beauty training. The day of the show arrives itself. What then? The beautiful Antoinette makes herself to go for to present herself at the Garden Madison. She is received in chilliness.

"There is naught for you," says the chief one. "The contest is not for you. All is settled; the lists are filed and the winner has been selected."

This despite the training of Antoinette, the expenditure for the new costumes, the photographs; all in vain, and so it is to sue the Vegetarian McFadden.

It is not known how soon the case will come up for trial, but Harry J. Sondheim, Mile. D'Anton's attorney, declares it will be on an early calendar.

UNCLE SAM WILL GO

Into the Lottery Business By the Direction of Congress.

Lands In the West to Be Opened By Drawings.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, May 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—Uncle Sam will go into the lottery business in the very near future as the result of legislation enacted by congress at the session just closed for opening to settlement lands in several Indian reservations in the West. So successful was the opening of the Kiowa Comanche reservation in Oklahoma, according to the drawing method originated by the commissioner of the general land office, W. A. Richards, that this method will be in vogue at the opening of all the Indian reservations authorized by congress during the session just ended. There are notable advantages in the lottery plan. It not only determines the order of choice, but keeps a record of the people who have entered the new lands and how much they owe the government for the lands they have taken. The reservation lands to be disposed of are not to be opened to the public free of charge, as was done in Oklahoma and other places several years ago, but will be sold at a fixed price. The following facts show in brief the opportunity for the homeseeker and how much necessary cash they must have with them at the time of the sale instead of only dash and daring as characterized former openings of the public domain:

South Dakota—Rosebud reservation, 416,000 acres, $4 per acre, opening in July.

Montana—1,000,000 acres, $1.25 per acre, limit for any one entry, 640 acres, opening in August.

Minnesota—Red Lake reservation, 400,000 acres, practically same conditions obtain as in the Rosebud reservation.

North Dakota—Devils Lake reservation, 104,416 acres, at $4.50 per acre, opening in July.

You can't shake hard luck off some men. Hard luck follows some men like a faithful dog follows his master. Probably the most pathetic story of hard luck is connected with a Nebraska man, a naturalized citizen of German extraction. Henry Martin, a young German just emerging into manhood, was shown a picture of the Monitor and the Merrimac way back in the sixties. Martin had always possessed a longing for the sea. In his home, in the fatherland, he had as a boy, been interested in sailing vessels and in the management of ships generally. When his father showed him the picture of the Monitor and the Merrimac, young Martin made up his mind then and there to go to America as quickly as possible nd two days later, with his belongings tied in a red hankerchief, he slipped from the nearest German port for Boston. He landed in Boston and made application to the naval authorities at that point for enlistment in the navy, the high tide of the civil war then being on. He was informed that the navy was crowded. Nothing daunted he then decided to enlist in the army and was assigned to the Eighth New Jersey regiment under Capt. James Gilling, now an employe of the treasury department.

In the battle of Five Forks, on March 21, 1865, Martin had his knee cap shot away by a shell, necessitating the amputation of the leg. After his recovery he went to Chicago and in the terrible fire which wiped out the major portion of that city, Martin lost two fingers of his right hand. Ill luck had commenced to mark him for its own. In 1871 Martin went to Nebraska and took up a homestead on the line between Lancaster and Seward counties. The first summer there the grasshoppers came along and destroyed every vestige of his crop. Corn at that time was selling at 10 cents a bushel and was used for fuel. The grasshoppers, however, had no commercial instinct and they eat everything even to the clothes on the clothes line. During that whole year Nebraska was a seething mass of grasshoppers and they continued in their ravages until the frost killed them off. During the winter of that year one of the most terrible blizzards the Antelope state ever experienced came up and Martin contracted pneumonia. Recovering from ter of that year, one bright winter's day Martin set out with a team of horses to go to a neighbor's ranch for some hay. On his return journey from the neighbor's farm the weather changed and a furious snow storm set in. The cold was intense and the sleet cut like a knife. The horses driven by the fury of the gale drifted off the road and were lost in the vast open plain. Driven by the storm they were finally too exhausted to go further and they fell down in the traces. Martin, almost frozen, had still presence of mind left to take the blankets and covering them over the horses he crawled in underneath hoping that the heat from the animals would keep him alive. All night he lay there between his horses while the storm howled. When the morning came he found that he was within 100 yards of his own home. The horses died from the effects of the cold and Martin had a second siege of pneumonia.

During these days in Nebraska roving bands of Indians away from their reserativion would visit homesteaders and settlers along their line of march and steal everything in sight. They would appropriate chickens, sheep and now and then drive off a steer. These depredations kept up until the settlers began operations against the marauders. Martin on one of these expeditions of the Sioux having learned that a band of Indians was traveling towards his ranch conceived the idea of painting his wife's face and streaking it with red clay. When the chief of the band came up he had his wife stand at the window and Martin went out and pointing to her said to the Indian "much smallpox!" The chief communicated the fact that there was smallpox in the house and the Indians "hiked" out as rapidly as possible without taking any of Martin's property. Later another band visited the Martin ranch and he tried the same deception but on this occasion it failed signally for the Indians took everything in sight. After ten years of experience in helping to settle Nebraska Martin came to Washington as a messenger in the sixth auditors's office of the treasury department. But when Cleveland came in he went out. Martin then went into the manufacture of souvenirs from the macerated pulp of bank notes for which he was given exclusive right. He spent fifteen hundred dollars in molds and presses and so successful was the business that other old soldiers were given the right to manufacture the pulp into busts of presidents, spread eagles and other patriotic emblems. His earnings decreased and then to cap the climax of his bad luck the secretary of the treasury the other day issued an order that no pulp hereafter should go out of the bureau of engraving and printing or from the treasury department until the same had been bleached. Growing old in the service of his country, knocked about by ill luck, Martin has now applied for restoration to a messengership in the sixth auditor's office from which place he was deposed by the election of President Cleveland.

With the Republican national convention only five weeks off the party leaders are all at see as to the candidate for second place on the ticket. Until last week it was assumed that Senator Fairbanks was an active candidate for the honor and those who came into daily contact with him received no intimation at any time that the senator would not stand as a candidate. But suddenly he has announced that he desires that his name shall not be presented. It is very well known that the senator hopes to head the ticket four years hence and the sudden change in his apparent plans leads to the supposition that he believes that a man occupying the chair of the presiding officer of the senate is handicapped in the race for the more exalted place.

When the Bristow report, number 2, was sprung upon the house of representatives, William Alden Smith made a speech nominating Joseph Cannon for president. The effect of that speech was very much like that cross of gold and crown of thorns oration in 1896, which was the direct cause of the nomination of William J. Bryan for the presidency. But Smith's speech was delivered to some four hundred men who, while having the power to vote appropriations of $700,000,000 for public purposes had not a single vote for presidential nominees. There is no doubt that the Smith speech would have swept any convention had it been delivered under like circumstances. Uncle Joe is in many respects the most popular speaker that the house has ever had. And that is one reason why he will not be the running mate of Theodore Roosevelt. If there is a Republican majority in the 59th congress Uncle Joe will be the speaker as certainly as he lives. The vice president has absolutely no power whatever. He cannot name the committee of the senate and he can vote only to break a tie—Levi P. Morton is the only vice president who has ever cast a vote in half a century and his vote enabled the senate to adjourn to attend a matinee. The speaker of the house has more power in a legislative way than the president himself. It is not surprising, therefore, that Uncle Joe should positively firmly and emphatically crush his own vice presidential boom just as it was hatching out. He does not want the nomination. He will not accept it unde any circumstances. He has a better job and one infinitely more to his liking.

There are a score or more other candidates mentioned for the honor and several thousand able men willing to accept should the nomination be thrust upon them; but just who is to be chosen not one of the leaders, who have been in close consultation with the president during the past week, is willing to guess. In the political betting ring the odds are still in favor of Fairbanks of Indiana in spite of his expressed desire to be left out of the calculations, and it is the general belief that he will accept if named, because no man has ever yet declined after the ticket has been made up.

MEDERINE REMEDY CO., Duluth, Minn.

Dear Sirs: A year ago last February I was taken with a most severe attack of Inflammatory Rheumatism, so that it was impossible for me to help myself. I called a doctor and he prescribed some medicine for me and I doctored with him for two months without any help. Then I went to taking patent medicine s but they did not help, and I was nearly discouraged, till finally I saw your advertisement and started to take MEDERINE. After I had taken three bottles I was able to work but I finished the whole course and am perfectly cured, if not it would have come back before this time. I most gladly recommend Mederine for Rheumatism. One of my children is taking Mederine for Eczema with great success.

Yours truly, A. O. ANTES, Shawano, Wis.

Ashland Proves No Match For the Swift White Sox.

Shut Out, While Home Men Pile Up Twenty Runs.

The White Sox had their batting clothes with them yesterday and nothcould stop them. Three pitchers were put to the bad and a total of 20 runs were rolled up, while the Ashland bunch did not succeed in getting a man across the plate.

In spite of the fact that the game had not been advertised, there were nearly 1200 people on the grounds, of which number over 800 were paid admissions, while the others came over the fence.

The field was about two inches deep in a rich, black clay that stuck like glue and the players would become anchored if they remained standing in one spot for more than a few seconds at a time. In spite of this, however, the White Sox played a snappy game and gave a hint of what they might accomplish on a fast field. The only errors made by the team were the two chalked up against Randall in left field, and one of these was excusable.

Koukalik pitched a great game, striking out 13 men and allowing but four hits, one base on balls and hitting one batter.

At the bat Captain Martin gave the lie to the stories circulated concerning his weak hitting, by lifting two over the fence and lining out a corking twobagger out of five times at bat. Randall also dropped one over the right field fence with two men on bases.

In the field Wilkes, Ball, Martin and Qillan played star games and the mud did not seem to worry them. Ball promises to be a whirlwind. He handles himself like the veteran he is, and has apparently lost none of his old time speed.

The White Sox were in the game at all stages and they look like a bunch of winners. Many expressions of commendation were heard after the game, and the general opinion seemed to be that Manager Van Praagh has pennant winners.

Three pitchers were tried out by Ashland. Hiney started in to pitch, but lasted for three innings only. Then Poole, a southpaw, was tried for two innings, but he was as wild as a hawk, and the bleachers shouted to Van Praagh to lend the visitors a pitcher.

In the sixth "Buck" Noldin and Hughes went in to do the battery work for the visitors. "Buck" was given absolutely no support. Errors and dumb playing on the part of the Ashland fielders allowed the White Sox to pile up eight runs off his delivery in three innings he pitched, although he allowed only three hits, struck out four men, and assisted in putting out two more on first base.

Ashland never had a look-in until the ninth inning when an error by Randall, a strike out by Si Marx, a hit by Hanten, and a base on balls to Hughes, left three men on bases. Koukalik took a brace and fanned Beno and Noldin walked up to the bat.

Just at this point the White Sox worked a little game on the visitors that brought a storm of applause from the bleachers. Zink played well up in the infield, as is usually done with three men on bases, and the runner on first took a long lead toward second. Martin slipped up behind him and covered the first bag and Koukalik caught the runner between bases. He made for second and reached it, forcing the runners on second and third. The ball was sent home and the runner caught at the plate in an easy fashion.

The White Sox started after the visitors in the first inning. Corrigan and Randall were given four bad ones and Randall hit out a beautiful homer over the right field fence, scoring the two base-runners. O'Leary and Zink fanned, and then Martin put one over the left field fence just to show that there was no partiality.

Zink and Martin walked in the third, Quillan hit a long one to center, but was caught, Wilkes walked, Koukalik hit to center, and Corrigan fouled out. Zink came in on a passed ball.

In the first of the fourth inning, Koukalik did the hat trick, laying three badgers low with nine balls. Duluth scored four in this inning. Ball and Randall struck out, O'Leary hit, Zink was passed, and Martin scored them both on a pretty double to the right field fence. Quillan and Wilkes were given their bases on balls and Martin and Quillan scored on a passed ball and an error.

Duluth got three more in the fifth on two hits, a fielder's choice and three errors. "Buck" Noldin and Hughes went in for the visitors in the sixth. Wilkes fanned, but Koukalik was presented with a base on a fielder's error. Corrigan hit a pretty single over second and was advanced to third on errors. Another error gave Randall a start and then O'Leary came up with a two-bagger scoring Corrigan and Randall.

In the seventh the White Sox scored six runs. Martin started the carnage with his second home run, with the bases empty. Wilkes fanned, but Koukalik hit and Corrigan followed suit. Ball was given a life by a fielder's error and Randall and O'Leary got hits. Zink brought in Randall, but Martin and Quillan fanned, retiring the side.

This ended the scoring, and the White Sox played horses in the eighth, allowing the visitors to tag them on the bases.

From the indications yesterday, the management will have to enlarge the grounds to accommodate the Sunday crowds, so popular do the games promise to be.

He was finally picked up and carried to a neighboring drug store, while the ambulance was summoned to take him to St. Mary's hospital.

His home is at 612 East Tenth street.

ALL MILLS READY

Sawing of Lumber Will Be In Full Swing This Week.

Lumbermen To Meet and Consider Boat Loading Situation.

Before th close of the present week all th harbor mills that will manufacture lumbr this season will be in operation. The Merrill & Ring mill started last Wednesday with one shift of 180 men. Its anticipated season's cut is about 35,000,000 feet, or 10,000,000 feet less than the 1903 cut.

The Red Cliff Lumber company is sawing with one shift of 150 men and will manufacture somewhere in the neighborhood of 20,000,000 feet this summer.

Algor, Smith & Co. are operating with about 200 men and will cut about 75,000,000 feet this summer, making its total for the entire year in the neighborhood of 125,000,000 feet.

The Murray & McCann mill at Superior began operations for the first time this morning. The mill will be operated with a single shift.

The ice is now well out of the Cloquet and St. Louis rivers, and the mills at Cloquet are all in operation, beginning their season's cut last week.

The Tower Lumber company will start its eVrmilion lake mill today for its seasons' cut. The company received about 8,000,000 feet of logs on the Pike river drive, and these will keep it supplied for a time. The lumber company will do no summer logging, but will erect camps and get everything in readiness to do a big logging business next winter. It is understood that the Tower Lumber company will go into the tie and post business to some extent this season.

The Lesure mill, on the upper harbor, is expected to start up tomorrow, working one shift of about 150 men. The figures of the mill's intended cut this season are not available, but they are estimated at about 15,000,000 feet.

The St. Louis Lumber company will likely start its mill by Wednesday of this week. The company has contracts for sawing about 15,000,000 feet.

A meeting of the Lumber Manufacturers' association of Duluth has been called at the Spalding hotel Tuesday for the purpose of devising some means of loading the lumber boats this season, no settlement having been effected with the longshoremen, who usually load the fleet of the Lumber Carriers' association.

John Millen, of Alger, Smith & Co., is president of the Lumber Manufacturers' association.

It is understood that the local lumbermen will be met by a committee from the Lumber Carriers' association, committees from the longshoremen associations here and from Ashland, Washburn and Port Wing, an effort being proposed to settle the wage question amicably. This season the Lumber Carriers' association offers 50 cents per hour and the longshoremen demand 55 cents per hour.

The Duncan & Brewer company, which sold out its mill plant here a few years ago and which has bene operating a mill in its large timber holdings near Mobile, has sold out there also and retired from the manufacturing field. It is said that the members of the company contemplate a radically different series of interests and have already made a large number of investments.

WOULD BE EXAMINER.

Duluth Man Anxious To Judge Barbers.

George Fifer, a barber on East Superior street near Fifth avenue, has received information to the effect that his application for a position as a member of the barbers' state board of examiners was being given consideration. The petition asking for the appointment, and signed by sixty-two of the leading Republicans of Duluth, was forwarded to the governor during the winter. President Hetzger, of Winona, goes out Jan. 1, and his position is the one sought by the Duluth man.

It is thought the matter of making an appointment to fill this vacancy will go over to Governor Van Sant's successor.

TIE-UP ON THE GREAT LAKES

Masters and Mates and Lake Carriers Fail To Agree.

Cleveland, May 9.—The conference between the Lake Carriers' and the Masters' and Pilots' associations was abruptly terminated late Saturday afternoon and the announcement made that no agreement had been reache' and that a settlement was as far away as at any time since the opening of negotiations.

The conference adjourned without arranging for any future meeting.

This means that commerce on the lakes will continue to be practically tied up for an indefinite period. It is said that fully 70 per cent of all the vessel tonnage on the Great Lakes is represented in the Lake Carriers' association. Under existing conditions no master who is a member of the Masters' and Pilots' association can go aboard his vessel unless a settlement is reached with the Lake Carriers' association.

The failure to reach an agreement was over the classification of the scale of wages. President Livingston said the Lake Carriers' association offered to pay to the masters and mates the same wages as last year, but this offer was declined.

In reply to this statement, Paul Howell, district captain A. A. M. and P. S. V., at Cleveland, said: "This is not the proposition offered to us. They simply say, (and I have their proposition in writing on file in my office), 'We recommend to all members of this association that they pay the masters the same salary they paid last year.' Right here I will say that a great many of the masters' salaries of last year were satisfactory, yes, and even liberal, but a very large percentage were not acceptable to us. We want as near as possible a uniform wage scale, so that it will be impossible for two similar boats owned by two different owners to have a difference of from $300 to $900 in their masters' salary. Mind you, I mean, under identically the same conditions and identically the same class of boats. In other words, there are owners who have paid their masters just whatever they could drive a bargain at, and it was a case of take it or leave it. We want to do away with this injustice and, of course, the master as an individual could accomplish nothing. We want a uniform wage scale for all our members, masters as well as mates."

DULL AND FIRMER

Little Doing In the Wheat Market, But Prices Work Higher.

World's Shipments Very Large—Flax Has An Advance.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 9.—The wheat market advanced again today and Minneapolis was the strongest market. The market was dull everywhere, however, and the government report of tomorrow is being awaited with much interest. The Liverpool market was lower, closing ¼d off, and its heaviness was due to the very large world's shipments.

The visible supply did not show as large a decrease as was expected, but this was due to a gain of more than a half million bus at Fort William, which was far beyond what had been estimated.

The Duluth market showed advances for both May and July of ½c. Minneapolis was up 1c for May and ¾c for July. Chicago ½c on May and ⅝-½c on July and New York ½c on May and ⅝c on July. In Duluth September was ½c lower and in Minneapolis a shade lower.

The world's shipments of wheat and corn last week, the week previous and the corresponding week in last year were as follows:

WHEAT.

The amount of wheat on passage increased 3,016,000 bus, and corn increased 1,762,000 bus.

Car receipt at Duluth were 24 against 19 last year, and at Minneapolis 111, against 184 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 135 against 203 last year. Chicago receipts were 23 cars, Winnipeg received 134 against 150 last year.

The visible supply last week decreased 664,000 bus, and is now 29,093,000 bus., against 32,446,000 bus, a year ago.

Primary receipts of wheat were 198,000 bus., last year 468,759 bus. Shipments, 222,757 bus., last year, 898,198 bus. Clearances were 220,000 bus.

The visible supply of corn decreased 933,000 bus. last week and is now 6,897,000 bus., against 6,210,000 bus., a year ago. Primary receipts of corn were 416,000 bus., last year 470,650 bus. Shipments, 267,671 bus., last year 865,252 bus. Clearances were 18,000 bus. Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¼d lower. In the Chicago market July corn closed ⅝c higher. July oats closed a shade lower.

In the Duluth market there was very little trading, the dullest day seen in a long time. The July option opened ⅛c lower at 91¾c and wheat for the first two hours held at 91¾c and did not vary from that figure. It sold up to 92¾c at 12:55, reacted to 92¼c at 12:45 and closed at 92¾c, an advance of ⅛c. May advanced ⅛c closing at 92¾c, and September fell ⅛c and closed at 81¾c.

Cash offerings were very light. Prices are rather mixed. Wheat in store and to arrive is nominally held at May price for No. 1 northern and ⅛c under No. 2, but for wheat on track from 1 to 3c better than those prices is being paid.

Flax was very dull. May sold ¾c up to $1.08¼ and closed at $1.08. The other options all closed ¾c higher.

Oats made an advance of 1c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Weakness In Wheat Prices From Several Causes.

Chicago, May 9.—Lower cables, heavy world's shipments, and predictions of fair and warmer weather throughout the country in general were influences that caused weakness in wheat today. Primary receipts were liberal, offerings on the market, but the demand was light. July opened ⅛@⅜c to ¾c lower at 85¾@⅞c to 86¾c, and sold off to 85⅝@⅞c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 158 cars, against 162 cars last week and 250 cars a year ago.

During the latter part of the session shorts became active buyers on the supposition that the government crop report to be issued tomorrow would be quite bullish. The market responded to the improved demand, the July option advancing to 86¼@⅞c. The close was at about the top figures, with July at 86¾c, a net gain of ⅞@1c.

An easier tone was manifested in corn, due to the weakness in wheat and in sympathy with foreign markets. Business was confined largely to pit traders. July opened ⅛@¼c lower at 48⅝@48¾c, and held within the opening figures. Local receipts were 147 cars, with 15 of contract grade.

Strength in wheat brought out a better demand for corn and a strong tone developed. After selling up to 48¾c, July closed at 48¾c, a gain of ⅜c for the day.

Oats were easier in sympathy with other grains and on favorable weather for the newly seeded crop. Trading was mainly by scalpers. July opened a shade to ⅛@¼c lower at 38⅜@38¼c, and eased off to 38⅛@38⅜c. Local receipts were 69 cars.

Provisions were firm under the influence of a smaller run of hogs than expected. There was just enough trading to establish prices. July pork opened 2½c lower to 2½c higher at $11.55@11.60, the price holding at the higher figure. July lard was up 2½c, at $6.62½, and ribs were 5c higher at $6.47½.

New York, May 9.—Close: Wheat—May, 93c; July, 91c; September, 84⅝c; December, 84¼c. Corn—May, 49¼c; July, 48¼c; September, 47⅛c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—There was some little weakness early on the large world's shipments and fine weather. It is a dull market, however, and pending the government report tomorrow is without much selling pressure. The little short interest which was sold early was bought back before the close. Cables were dull and showed a dragging tendency. The cash situation is slow. Some of our advices from Ohio say there has been great improvement in the appearance of the crop since May 1, but that a good many fields had been previously plowed up.

Corn—The visible supply decreased 932,000, against a decrease of 249,000 bus last year. This in view of the fact that navigation is not yet open made some covering of local shorts unt out last week; otherwise it is a dull market with very little doing. The best that can be said of it is that it is a waiting one, and without selling presure.

Oats—The firmness in wheat and corn did not impart much strength to the oats market. Oats are in good demand, but the local stocks are liberal. All advices are favorable.

Provisions—It is a dull market, with some covering of local shorts on account of the local receipts of hogs being smaller than expected. The action of the market of late has been unencouraging. We had rather looked for a little better feeling after the May deliveries, but it shows very little snap. The important packing interests covered shorts freely, but do not seem disposed to lend support to a bull market. While there is a fairly good distributive demand, it does not seem sufficient to bring about and maintain an advance in prices.

Coe Commission Co.: Wheat—Lower cables gave us an easier opening in wheat this morning, prices ranged about ⅛c lower all around and ruled steady and dull the first two hours of trading. Temperatures in the Northwest were considerably lower with local rains in Minnesota. Frost reported from Williston, N. D., as far south as Concordia, Kas. The market turned strong after the visible supply statement was published and up to this writing has advanced ⅝c from the low point of this morning, a fair advance considering the dullness. Advise buying September wheat on all the little dips.

Corn—The market opened ⅛c to ¼c lower for July and unchanged for September. The market has ruled very dull all morning, no feature worthy of notice.

Oats—Same as the rest of the markets, very dull and featureless. Visible supply decreased 1,117,000.

Provisions—Dull, but firm. Fair commission house demand gave the market a show of strength. Pork up 10 cents.

B. E. Baker's Chicago Grain Letter: Wheat—Wheat had an early set-back, as did the principal outside markets. The tone became stronger toward midday and the early losses were fully recovered in all options while the July made gains. The primary movement was again a bullish factor, the total 209,000 bushels being but half of that of a year ago. Practically all of the mills in Minneapolis resumed grinding this morning, and mulling interests are reported buyers of cash wheat. Locally there was a fair demand for good wheat. St. Louis reported sales amounting to 55,000 bushels and it is thought the balance of the stock there will be sold by the end of this week. The trade generally is looking for a May government report tomorrow somewhere between 73 and 74. The April condition was 76.5. European news was bearish. The weather was perfect for growth over all the winter wheat belt. There was some precipitation in the Northwest, but not enough to interfere with seeding. Weather forecast is for fair and warmer. Our opinion regarding the futures unchanged. Estimated receipts wheat 45 cars.

Corn—Corn was a small trade market, with a firm tone early, which later developed considerable strength along with wheat, and on a scarcity of offerings. Mixing houses transferred 73 cars of contract and 105 of the same quality were loaded from store. The lake labor troubles promise to continue indefinitely. No settlement was arrived at at the Cleveland conference. This item is generally taken as a bearish factor. The demand for export is nil and for local consumption but fair. The tone of the market today was firm throughout, and we possibly cannot anticipate any break for at least two weeks, or until the movement commences to increase. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 400 cars.

Oats—There was not much of a market in oats. Trade was light at the start, but picked up some with the strength in wheat, although the advance did not hold. Receipts are small, 111,000 bus. of standard were loaded from store. General rains since Saturday have been beneficial to the growing crop. We continue to feel friendly to the May and July, but believe the September a sale on the bulges. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 130 cars.

Bartlett, Frazier & Co., Chicago: Basing our opinion upon our private advices from wheat-growing counties, we believe the government report tomorrow should show a condition somewhere between 73 and 74. The report will also give an estimate of the percentage of winter wheat acreage which has been plowed up or abandoned. This percentage will be heavy in the Ohio valley and Oklahoma, and it is quite possible that it may leave the total acreage standing for crop the smallest for a number of years.

BOND GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market generally is steady with fairly firm tone. Operations are very small and mainly professional. The bank statement is disregarded. Bond houses report a good investment inquiry for bonds. In this connection we note a better action of the market for Steel fives. This action and the reports we receive both indicate that the liquidation by the underwriting syndicate have been pretty well completed. If this is true, these securities should in our judgment do better.

S. T. Welch & Co.: Stocks—Nothing developed over Sunday to influence prices one way or another. The market opened about the same as Saturday's close and stagnation has been the ruling feature this forenoon. The large decrease in reserve in Saturday's bank statement has added its influence in checking public interest in the securities market. We do not see any reason for any material decline, as the large short interest will be anxious to cover on any recession. Advise taking hold of the better class of railroad shares on the declines.

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: This market has been very dull but has again shown firmness and an undertone of strength. Prices moved within narrow limits but they moved upward. There was no news of importance and nothing developed to influence prices. A strong feature was Louisville & Nashville, which moved up following the publication of the company's earnings and position. The market did not show any fear of an unfavorable crop report tomorrow. The tone at the close was firm.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 9.—The cotton market opened steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 6 points under moderate liquidation and bear pressure, encouraged by lower Liverpool cables and Manchester reports that the recent stiffening in raw cotton prices had checked business in goods. Offerings, however, were limited, and with the weather not altogether favorable, owing to rather low temperatures, the market ruled quiet after the opening, with the new crop positions showing relative steadiness. Local spot people seemed to be selling July, but buying new crop months.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, May 7.—Money on call, easy; 1@1¼, closing bid and offered, 1¼. Time loans easy and dull; 60 days, 2@2¼ per cent; 90 days, 2¼@2½; 6 months, 3@3¼. Prime mercantile paper, 3¾@4¼ per cent. Sterling exchange heavy with actual business in bankers' bills, at $4.86.95@4.87 for demand, and at $4.84.90@4.84.95 for 60 days; posted rates, $4.85@6.00, and $4.88; commercial bills, $4.84¾. Bar silver, 56c Mexican dollars, 44¼c. Government bonds, easier; railroad bonds, irregular.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: After early weakness, the market recovered in a slow, dull trading movement and closing was at a fractional gain from Saturday's final quotations. Copper declined 15s in London, closing weak, and the cable advices explained the drop as due to war news. On any weakness we think it will pay to buy good copper stocks.

Hayden, Stone & Co. to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Copper stocks very dull and without feature, what sales have been made are fractionally higher than Saturday and the tone continues very firm. There is no

DULLNESS RULED

In the Stock Market, But Undertone Was Firm.

Prices Moved Within Narrow Limits, But Went Upwards.

New York, May 9.—The stock market today opened with a slightly easier tone for the more important specialties. Manhattan, Metropolitan Street Railway and Gas were off ⅜@½ and some of the coalers a little less. Railroad stocks were for the most part unchanged.

Prices drifted slowly downward on scanty offerings. Pressure against some of the specialties and the absence of any inquiry for the standard stocks contributed to the market heaviness. Anaconda and Metropolitan Street Railway declined 1, and Kanwaha & Michigan 2½. Woolen preferred gained 1, Kansas Southern 1½ and Wells Fargo 2.

Prices were slightly better, but the demand was apathetic. Special sztocks made sharp declines, New York Air Brake losing 2, Lackawanna 2⅜, New York Central 1¼ and Consolidated Gas a point. Bonds were irregular at noon.

Earlier losses in the specialties were recovered, but Consolidated Gas relapsed to the lowest again on fresh selling. Not much interest was manifested in railroad stocks. Corn products lost 1¼.

Railroad stocks reached a high level despite some evidence of liquidation in the Industrials. Louisville & Nashville was lifted 1¾. Corn products which hitherto had been scarcely dealt in at all showed much activity, this declined 2½ and the preferred stock 3⅝. Consolidated Gas lost 2.

Consolidated Gas was forced down anew to 205 on the belief that the Remsel gas bill will be vetoed. The trading in the general market was checked. Northwest dropped 2¼. Corn Products lost 3, the preferred 5¼ and Schloss-Sheffield Steel preferred a point. Allis-Chalmers rose 2. The close was inactive.

A STRANGE CASE

Dr. Collins Tells of Derangement That Afflicts Him.

Practice of Hypnotism Has Sapped His Will Power.

New York, May 9.—Dr. Patrick H. Collins, self-consigned to the psychopathic ward of Bellevue as suffering from hypnotic mania, was quieter, more lucid and more consistent in his statements yesterday. At times, however, he would show intense mental anxiety and pain, would contract his eyes, wrinkle his brows, flex his muscles and thump his chest.

"I feel as though I am done for," Dr. Collins said in answer to a question.

The doctor passed a restless night, moaning and tossing until the early hours of the morning. While lying propped up on pillows, his blue eyes clear and intelligent and his speech careful and measured, he told Drs. Packer and Gregory the first story of his hypnotic experiences.

"I made a mistake in coming here," Dr. Collins began. "The surroundings have had a bad influence upon me. I should not have come here among insane people, for that would make me insane if I were not so already. Doctor, I wish you would telegraph my brother, John C. Collins, in Buffalo. Perhaps he will arrange to put me in a private sanitarium.

"I was born in Albany county, this state, and have been practicing medicine since the early '80s. When I was 16 I heard a sermon on eternal punishment, and it made a fearful impression upon me. I believe the hypnotic suggestion of that sermon has much to do with my continual fear of dissolution.

"Later along in life I formed the acquaintance of a Methodist, who claimed to heal the sick by the laying on of hands. I became interested in this magnetic treatment, and found that I, too, was a magnetic healer. I began to practic as a magntist, coming to New York and taking a course in the old Medical college of the United States—an electrical institution—in which Professor Alexander Welder had the chair of psychological science and magnetism. I was graduated and won a remunerative practice as a magnetic healer.

"I practiced medicine for ten years before I noticed any bad effects from the use of my magnetic force. Then I observed that in every treatment I was exhausting myself. After a treatment I would be unable to work for some time; my mind would be clouded and I determined to give it up.

"Then I tried hypnotism. It was a little better, but soon it began to affect me the same as the employment of magnetism. The exhaustion and depression continued. I lectured on hypnotism and made a change of scene, but a nameless fear of something I could not explain took possession of me.

"Now I have no power of resistance. I become exhausted when I come in contact with another person and feel that his will is dominating mine, and with this feeling comes the fear of that nameless something. What then is the conclusion. Am I insane through the sapping of my vitality? I become despondent, wretched, frightened, and so I come here to try to save myself if I can."

Dr. Collins will be kept under observation for several days before a full diagnosis is attempted. Professor J. H. Hyslop, hypnotist, who formerly occupied the chair of logic and ethics in Columbia University, said:

"In the case of Dr. Collins it is very probable that his own diagnosis is correct—he is afraid of insanity. But I am inclined to think that some degenerating tendencies have changed his ideas about the theories of hypnosis and hence his imaginations."

Homesteader Gets Permission To Take New Claim.

Frederick Heineman, a foreigner, ignorant of the United States land laws and wholly inexperienced in the matter of loacting on public land and, therefore, obliged to depend on the knowledge and information of others, who was located on the wrong piece of government land through an error on the part of a locater, is allowed to make entry on another piece of land, according to a decision of the general land office at Washington, a copy of which was received at the local office today.

Heineman made homestead entry for lots 3 and 4 and the west half of the southeast quarter of section 22, township 60-25. A reliquishment of this was filed March 6, 1902, and on the same day Mr. Heineman filed an application for a second homestead entry for lots 9, 10 and 13, section 4, and lots 7, 9 and 1, section 5, township 69-23. This application was rejected, and a review of the decision was asked for, which was granted.

A careful investigation of the case developed the fact that the mistake was an easy one to make. The man had been located a full eighty rods west of the land he had chosen, in a swamp unfit for cultivation. He did not discover this to be a fact until August, 1901, when he went to the land to establish a residence. He later found the land he had intended to enter was taken by other parties. Forest fires and logging operations had combined to do away with the corner stakes.

Finding the swamp unfit for cultivation he built a house and made a clearing on another piece of land, and lived there continuously till August 8, 1903, when he was compelled to take his wife to Minneapolis for medical treatment. He had cleared five acres of land and raised two crops, besides making other extensive improvements.

Last fall he tried to submit commutation proof but was not allowed to do so because there was no entry of record for the land. As the land is embraced in no other entries, however, and in view of the circumstances, it is thought the man should be allowed a chance to get hold of the claim on which he has lived, and this is provided for in the decision.

WILL MAKE TEST CASE

It was rumored about the city hall this morning that a warrant would be issued for Manager Van Praagh of the Duluth Baseball club for playing baseball on Sunday. It is understood that a test case is to be made of it and the question of the legality of Sunday baseball in Duluth determined.

To arrest all of the players would put the city to too great an expense and it is understood that only the manager of the team shall be arrested.

No warrant had been served on the Duluth manager up to 3 o'clock this afternoon, but it is expected before night. The case will be tried before a jury in the municipal court.

TO SOUTH SHORE

Ice Headed That Way Under Brisk Northwest Wind.

Severel Miles of Open Water All Way Down the Lake.

As long as the wind remains in the northwest boats will have no difficulty in getting into the Duluth harbor. The ice at the head of the lake is being gradually driven towards the south shore, where it is piling up. There is a wide strip of clear water along the north shore as far as the eye can reach. Forecaster Richardson says that from the weather bureau no ice is visible along the north shore as far as he can see. The clear water measures from three to five miles in width and in places is even wider than that.

Indications are that the wind will continue from the northwest through tonight and tomorrow. There will probably be a few slight variations, and it may possibly switch into the northeast, though this is not considered very likely for a day or two at least.

There is thought to be small chance of the ice remaining away and leaving the Duluth entry clear for the remainder of the season. A northeast wind, and there is pretty sure to be a northeast wind before long, will bring it back towards the west end of the lake, but every change up or down the lakes means a lessening in quantity.

Old lake men say that the present wind, carrying the ice to the south shore of the lake as it does, is better for Duluth and north shore navigation than would be the case if the ice were carried directly east and down the lake. In this case navigation along the north shore might be difficult, and the pack would get back easier and quicker than will be the case if it is piled along the south shore.

The Wisconsin entry is completely blocked, and will probably remain in this condition for several days. The ice is now so rotten and honeycombed that its disappearance, with the continuance of warm weather, will be comparatively rapid. It is more of a menace to navigation in its broken state, however, than it was as a level ice field, for in the latter condition during the last few days a boat could easily make its way through it. A heavy northeast wind would pile it up along the west end of the lake, threatening the blockade of all boats trying to get through the pack.

Considerable landscape gardening will be done to park the grounds and make the new hatchery one of the finest in the Northwest. The buildings will cost in the neighborhood of $20,000.

FIFTH STREET IMPROVEMENT

Estimates of the Different Styles of Bridges to Be Submitted.

The estimates of the cost of improving Fifth street between Twenty-second and Twenty-third avenues east have been completed by City Engineer McGilvray and will be submitted to the council this evening.

Three kinds of bridges for the ravine in the normal school grounds are under consideration, and estimates have been furnished for each. A bridge of some description must be built in order to extend the street through this block.

The first estimate is for a bridge composed of wooden trusses comprising two spans each of which is to be fifty-two feet in length. The bridge will have an eighteen-foot roadway and a carrying capacity of 100 pounds per square foot live weight. The cost of such a bridge would be $1656.60.

The second estimate calls for a riveted steel truss deck bridge composed of two spans each fifty-two feet in length. This bridge would have a roadway twenty feet in width and a carrying capacity of 120 pounds per square foot live weight. The cost would be $3906.

The third estimate calls for a pin connected steel pony truss bridge composed of two spans each fifty-two feet in length. It would have a sixteen-foot roadway and a carrying capacity of 100 pounds per square foot live weight. The cost would be $2933.

The cost of improving the street for the one block between Twenty-second and Twenty-third avenues would be $793.05 in addition to the cost of the bridge.

The estimates will be submitted to the board of public works. They were asked for at a recent meeting of the board in order that the property owners might consider which kind of bridge would be most suitable.

The lots on the lower side of the street lie low and it is claimed that they would not stand a heavy assessment. On the upper side of the street are the normal school grounds, and J. L. Washburn, the resident director of the normal school board, has pledged one-half of the cost of the bridge, providing it does not exceed $5000.

It is hoped that the property owners on each side of the block can be assessed for some of the expense of the bridge for the outlet privileges which it gives them. The matter will be taken up again by the board of public works and some definite action taken.

NEGRO KILLED

By Mob Which Was Trying to Arrest Him.

Sardis, Miss., May 9.—At Balleatine, a small station 12 miles southwest of here, Rufus Bobo, colored, was shot and killed by negro citizens who were attempting to arrest him on a charge of murdering a negro woman. His brother, Mack Bobo was arrested on the same charge. The latter was placed in jail when a mob of four hundred negroes threatened to deal summarily with the prisoner. Sheriff Johnson of Sardis hurried to the scene and removed the negro to Sardis for safekeeping. The sheriff with three deputies practically disarmed the entire mob of negroes.

OPTIMISTIC STILL

Russian General Staff Not Cast Down By Losses.

It Is Certain the War Will Be Long and Bitter.

St. Petersburg, May 9.—The swift march of events at the theater of war—the virtual abandonment by the Russians of all their advanced positions along the Manchurian littoral—has created a deep impression among the people and a feeling of apprehension which the authorities contend is unwarranted by a calm consideration of the situation.

While not attempting to minimize the importance of the advantages gained by the enemy in the occupation of the Liao Tung peninsula and the advance from the Yalu river, the general staff nevertheless declares that if it had not been for Gen. Zassalitch's rash stand at the Yalu, the retreat and concentration of Gen. Kuropatkin's army upon its normal line of defense would have been regarded as a masterly piece of strategy. The equanimity of the government is shown by the free publication of all news telegrams from abroad, some being of a most sensational character. At the general staff, the one dominant idea is that the developments of the last few days make it certain that the war will be long and bitter. There, it is said, that half a million men would have been required to hold southern Manchuria. The real truth seems to be that Gen. Kuropatkin has not much over 200,000 men south of Harbin, and he is determined to pursue the plan which he mapped out at first—to allow the enemy to follow him back into the heart of Manchuria, until strong enough to assume the offensive.

The Associated Press is informed that while the Russian garrison is still at Newchwang, the untenability of the position is fully realized and preparations for dismantling the forts and removing the garrison have been completed. The Russian gunboat Sivouch there will be destroyed. The same thing applies to Hai Cheng, twenty-five miles southeast of Newchwang. The question of holding the Russian position at Liao Yang depends upon circumstances. The Russians hold the pass which commands the westerly approaches, but it is realized that the position there also will be rendered untenable if the enemy succeeds in bringing up a superior force along the northern road to Mukden. An ultimate retirement to Harbin might possibly incur the danger of a Chinese uprising, which increases with the Japanese successes, and must be taken into consideration. Should the news of the enemies' victories inflame the Chinese residents in Manchuria against the Russians, the latter's withdrawal north of the zone of their hostility might become imperative.

The possibility of active operations against Vladivostok also have to be reckoned with.

The general staff inveighs against a too pessimistic view of the situation, pointing out that the Japanese must land another army before they can hope to make a strong advance movement, which will require time. In the meantime the strength of Gen. Kuropatkin's army and his position will daily increase. The general staff repeats the words of the commander-in-chief, "Patience, patience, patience." They also insist that the full extent of the Russian losses on the Yalu river has been published.

"It is no guess work of our losses," said a member of the general staff. "Every man has been accounted for. Let the enemy publish theirs."

Blowing One's Own Horn!

It's natural for every store to praise its own goods, so that is accepted as a matter of course, but—

It takes something more than the say-so of a store or firm to satisfy the demands of good dressers!

They all claim to have the "best," etc., etc., but much of this boasting only excites the curiosity of those who know what good clothes are!

We can't say any more for ours than others say for garments that "don't begin to compare with them," but—

The facts back us up in our claims, and that makes all the difference!

When you can come here and get tailored suits at $12.50 and $15.00, that are splendidly made of good materials—nice fitting and full of style—that even stores that shout "bargains" sell at $16.50 and $18.00—

When you can come here and get splendid Covert Coats at $9.50 and $12.00 that are sold at these same stores for more without the snap and style to them that are found in ours!

When you can come here and get beautiful suits at $18.50 and $22.50 that you're expected to pay from $3.00 to $5.00 more at so-called "cheap" stores—and a dollar or two more for Covert Jackets that we get $15.00 for.

When you can come here and get high-class novelties in Tailored Suits at $25.00, of broadcloths, Venetians, cheviots, etamines and novelty mixtures—beautifully made and trimmed—some all silk lined—that no store would think of selling for less than from $35.00 to $45.00—

Or, beautifully tailored Covert Coats at $18.50, $21.50 and $25.00, that would bring from one to five dollars more—if they had the style and general appearance that ours have—and, which they have not.

When you can come here and get handsome all silk lined voile suits in the season's best shades—richly trimmed—made by the best houses in the land—full of style—at $37.50, $45.00 and $47.50—that some stores get from $10 to $20 more for—without the beauty and general appearance that you find in ours.

When you can come here and get Walking Skirts of finest materials and workmanship at $6.75 that bring $10.00 everywhere—or, nice well-made Dress Skirts at $7.50 and $10.00, of voiles, cheviots, broadcloths, brilliantines, that surpass in general excellence those that you'd pay from $1 to $3 more for at any other store.

When you can come here and get Raincoats, of Rayne-Shine or Cravenette cloth—at $10.00 and $12.00 that bring $12.00 to $15.00 elsewhere—or, beautiful ones at $19.50, $21.50 and $25.00 that are entirely "different" and newer than you could hope to find at any other place in town.

When you can come here and see the very newest, handsomest and most fashionable things that are out—long before any other store hereabouts show them—

In Shirtwaist Suits of silk, brilliantine, linen, cotton etamine, lawn, etc.

In Jacket Suits of taffeta silk, fancy silk, brilliantine, etc.

In Silk Coats, blouse effects, three-quarter length, full length.

In Young Ladies' Suits and Peter Thompson dresses, of serge, cheviot, brilliantine, linen and various other novelty effects.

In Girls' and Children's Coats and Dresses that are new, "smart," and right up to the very minute in style—and, all of these at popular prices!

Is it any wonder that much ado is being made by some of these bargain shouters?

We've turned on the searchlight!

We're giving Duluth a store where women can get things as new, as tasty and as fashionable as they could hope to get in any Eastern city of any size—and, they're appreciating it!

For our business keeps growing by leaps and bounds.

Compare! That's the watchword. We'll leave the rest to your judgment!

BOOMING YOUR BUSINESS

When merchants "drop a stitch" in the CONTINUITY of their advertising they should not, ostrich-like, imagine that nobody has noticed it. Merchants cannot afford to have people "wonder what is the matter."

Given similar space and display and there is still as much difference in the NEWS VALUE of two advertisements as in the news value of two newspapers. An advertiser with a "nose for news" will always make his store-story interesting.

The merchant can afford to do without the patronage of people who do not read newspapers if he seeks the patronage of those who do.

A mere catalogue of the day's news would make an unreadable newspaper, just as a mere price-list makes an unreadable advertisement.

Business growth comes through advertising—IT IS THE UNCHANGEABLE LAW. You cannot break or evade the law. It is "writ in the habits and customs of the times."

JAPANESE OVERTAKE THE RUSSIANS NEAR LIAO YANG AND SEVERE FIGHT FOLLOWS

Japs Dragged Their Guns Up Hills Believed Insurmountable.

Railroad Communication With Port Arthur Has Been Reopened.

The Vladivostok Fleet Is Said to Have Been Shut Out of Harbor.

Shan Hai Kwan, May 10, 9 p. m.—It is reported that the first Japanese army corps, having followed the Russians retreating from the Yalu river, overtook them twenty miles south of Liao Yang yesterday and a severe engagement ensued. The Japanese dragged their guns up hills believed to be insurmountable. The Russians thereupon continued to retreat north.

A division of the First corps is approaching Newchwang, which is now garrisoned by a handful of Russians.

Japanese scouts have been seen six miles from Newchwang.

Nineteen women were the last civilians to leave Newchwang for Shan Hai Kwan. They arrived here tonight and confirmed the reports of the evacuation of Newchwang.

St. Petersburg, May 10, 6:40 p. m.—The correspondent of the Associated Press has obtained absolute confirmation of the report that railroad communication with Port Arthur is again open. The first engine came through last night and the second at 9 o'clock this morning.

According to information received by the general staff the bridge blown up by the Japanese, near Port Adams, Liao Tung peninsula, has been repaired and the permanent way is uninjured. Telegraphic communication with Port Arthur is not yet open.

It is reported that Lieut. Gen. Stoessel, commander of the military forces at Port Arthur, has successfully engaged and driven off the enemy. The general staff has no confirmation of this report, and explains the withdrawal of the Japanese from the railroad as being either due to pressur from Gen. Stoessl or to the forces left by Gen. Kuropatkin at Kai Ping and other points on the railroad.

While without definite information, the impression here is that the strength of the Japanese force landed at Pitsewo was overestimated and that either it was not strong enough to take charge of the railroad, or it moved eastward along the Littoral to effect a junction with the Yalu army.

The emperor received the news of the Arthur last night and seemed greatly reopening of communication with Port pleased. He had a message from Port Arthur an hour before by Pigeon post, via Liao Yang, reporting that all was well at the fortress. As Gen. Stoessel has not reported the investment of Port Dalny the reports from abroad of its capture by the Japanese are now disbelieved by the general staff. The admiralty heard today from Vladivostok. Rear Admiral Jessen's squadron is there and reports all well.

London, May 10.—The Daily Telesecond-flakling 1gt nrb m m m m graph's Seoul correspondent says: "It is believed here that a portion of the Russian Vladivostok fleet has been successfully shut out and is now in the sea of Japan trying to evade the Japanese."

St. Petersburg, May 10.—A semi-official dispatch from Mukden, dated today, denies the reports that the Japanese have captured Port Dalny.

An imperial ukase issued today calls out the reserves of several districts in the governments of Poltava, Kursk, Kharkoff, Ryazan, Kaluga and Tula, with the view of the completion of the units to be sent to the far East from the military districts of Kieff and Moscow.

GENERAL RETREAT

Said to Have Been Ordered By Gen. Kuropatkin.

Paris, May 10.—The correspondent at St. Petersburg of the Echo De Paris, telegraphs as follows:

"Gen. Kuropatkin has ordered a general retreat and no doubt intends to avoid a battle until he has sufficient forces. He actually has at his disposal not more than 150,000 men, exclusive of the garrison at Port Arthur, which consists of 30,000 and the garrison at Newchwng of 15,000.

"A general who knows the secrets of the mobilization, tells me that the last 1000 men making up the required 500,000, will leave Kasan, July 21, adding 'we will be very sick if the railway is not worked well. It is not likely that Gen. Kuropatkin will fatigue his troops unnecessarily. If the Japanese press him he will retire from Liao Yang to Mukden or even to Harbin. Retreat certainly is painful but is now indispensable.'"

THE CHEMULPO FIGHT.

Minister's Report Appears In Official Messenger.

St. Petersburg, May 10.—The final word regarding the combat at Chemulpo, Korea, has been pronounced by M. Pavloff, the Russian minister to Korea, whose official report is gazetted in the Official Messenger this morning. M. Pavloff says:

"The commander of the Vicksburg sent a boat with a surgeon to offer medical help to the wounded on the cruisers Variag and Korletz, but the officer in charge stated, in the name of his commander, that it was impossible for him to take any Russians on board his ship. The commander of the Variag thereupon declined assistance.

"The commander of the Vicksburg offered to receive the imperial mission if it was compelled to leave Korea, but I declined the offer, stating that I would go on a French cruiser.

"Twenty-one Russians who were on the French cruiser Pascal were suffering from gangrene and, fearing that the disease would be communicated to the other wounded, the commander of the Pascal signalled to the Vicksburg and asked if he would receive these men, but the American commander positively refused to do so."

FEAR THE CHINESE.

Japanese Successes May Have Bad Effect on Them.

St. Petersburg, May 10.—Although it is hardly credited here (as it is known that Gen. Kuropatkin is withdrawing his advance posts along the Manchurian littoral on Liao Yang) it is announced this morning from Mukden that the railroad between Port Arthur and Liao Yang has been repaired and is working.

Hai-Cheng, north of Newchwang, is already reported to have been evacuated, but there is nothing official on this point. The Russian garrison still remains at Newchwang, but the abandonment of that place is only considered to be a question of days.

The army organ assumes that the Russians are reterating on Liao Yang, leaving "temporarily" the defense of Port Arthur to the naval squadron and garrison. The organ also assumes that the Japanese have already landed at Taku-Shan, west of the Yalu river, thus assuring a junction between Gen. Kuroki's army and the Japanese force on the peninsula. The army organ thinks the force disembarked at Taku-Shan is probably part of the Third army, "concerning the mobilization of which the Japanese have so scandalously spread misleading reports." It commends the retirement from Feng Wang Cheng, which it considers to be of no strategical importance.

There is a complete absence of official information. The authorities are as silent as the grave concerning Gen. Kuropatkin's plans, only declaring that his tactics will be vindicated. The report of the appearance of the enemy at Kwan Tein Tsen, on the Mukden road from the Yalu, causes some disquietude. The report is three days old. Only small detachments of infantry and cavalry then appeared, but it is possible that they were advance skirmishers of Gen. Kuroki's Fourth division, who were sent northward to protect the Japanese right flank. If the Japanese could get on this road, above Liao Yang, the Russian positon there would be threatened.

The papers heer seem more concerned about the effect of the Japanese successes upon the Chinese than about the ultimate result of the campaign. The Russ, reviewing the war to date, says:

"The fears expressed as to the effect, even of the temporary successes, of the Japanese upon the Asiatics are more general and are beginning to seriously alarm many of the leaders of European politics, who dread further complications. Moderation and caution are now the principal orders of the day for all European governments."

The Bourse Gazette remarks:

"It is not given us to know how long the night will last, but we know the morning will come. This is not only a question of the far East, but of our position in Asia and in the world. Our great development since the Crimean war is not to be destroyed by the Japanese army penetrating into Manchuria."

The admiralty declares positively that the report of the destruction of the armored cruiser Rurik is false.

SPECULATING ON EVENTS.

The London Papers Discuss Probable Happenings.

London, May 10.—In the absence of further stirring news from the seat of war the London newspapers are discussing the probable course of events. The balance of opinion inclines to the belief that Gen. Kuroki will succeed in overtaking the Russians between Feng Wang Chang and Liao Yang, and will compel them to fight at a disadvantage.

It is argued that it will be impossible for Gen. Kuropatkin, depending upon a slender line of railway, and with his army encumbered with baggage, to make his retirement speedy enough to enable him to close his own ground for battle. On the other hand, it is argued that apart from Lieut. Gen. Zassalitch's error in giving battle on the Yalu against the orders of Gen. Kuropatkin, the latter's plan remains unchanged, and that once away from the mountainous country it will be much in his favor.

The question of the possibility of the Japanese finding a weak spot in the defence of Port Arthur is also much debated, and it is believed in some quarters that they will repeat the tactics employed in the war with China, and attempt an assault through the western defences, which are known to be the weakest.

Dispatches from Shanghai say that the Tartar general at Mukden has declined to obey Viceroy Alexieff's order that the Chinese evacuate Mukden.

BANDITS DESTROY ROAD.

Begin Depredations as Russians Leave Newchwang.

London, May 10.—The Tokio correspondent of the Daily Chronicle says that 15,000 Russians are retiring from Newchwang to Liao Yang.

The correspondent says that Chinese bandits have destroyed the road to Tashi Chia and to Hai Cheng. Tashi Chia is the junction for the Newchwang branch of the Port Arthur-Mukden route, and Hai Cheng is further north, on the main line. The Russians are making a new road.

The correspondent adds that bandits have attacked and cut other parts of the railroad and points out that the cepture of Dalny can enable the Japanese to cut off Port Arthur's electric supply.

COAL SHORT AT PORT ARTHUR.

Shan Hai Kwan, May 10.—A merchant here, who is in a position to have trustworthy information, has informed a correspondent of the Associated Press that at Port Arthur there is only coal sufficient to last the warships for six weeks, and the food supply there will feed 8000 men for three months only.

The evacuation of Newchwang continues. The Russian authorities have promised to leave sufficient guard to prevent pillaging by the Chinese bandits, who are in the vicinity and awaiting an opportunity to get into the city.

Nothing further has been heard of the Japanese transports which were recently seen near Kai Chau.

PRICE OF RICE HIGH.

Seoul, Korea, May 10.—Owing to the heavy purchases of rice by the Japanese army the price of that commodity in the vicinity of the American mines at Unsan has doubled and is now quoted at 3 yen per twenty-five pounds. The forces of Korean coolies in military employ are not affected by this advance in price on account of the extraordinarily high wages they receive, but the mine laborers are hard hit and it has been necessary to send some junk loads of rice north to prevent threatened distress.

The Japanese authorities preemptorily refuse to permit steamers to sail from Chemulpo for Chinnampo or to leave that port.

THIRTY THOUSAND MEN

Threaten to Strike at New York Shipyards.

New York, May 10.—Thirty thousand workmen in the shipyards of the city, Hoboken, Staten Island and Shooters Island, are threatening to strike in aid of 5000 boilermakers who have gone out in an effort to enforce their demand for the "closed shop." The Marine Trades' council, representing many organizations of workmen employed in the yards, have decided, at a mass meeting, to order a general sympathetic strike whenever called on to do so by the strikers.

HUNGARIAN BUDGET.

Budapest, Hungary, May 10.—Finance Minister De Lukacs presented the budget for 1904 in the diet today. The expenditure is estimated at $238,016,924, or $21,580,000 above that of 1903. The revenue is estimated at $238,136,389.

NEW POSTMASTER.

Washington, May 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—Jane Dermott has been appointed postmaster at Fridley, Anoka county, Minn., vice Joshua Dermott, deceased.

ON THIS SIDE OF THE GLOBE WE PLAY "BASEBALL;" ON THE OTHER SIDE THEY PLAY "CANNONBALL."

FRATERNAL ADDRESSES THE ORDER OF DAY WITH METHODISTS

Los Angeles, May 10.—Addresses from fraternal delegates to the Methodist general conference was the order today at the morning session, at which Bishop J. H. Vincent, of Zurich, Switzerland, presided.

These addresses were the special order of the day and occupied the entire morning hours until recess.

The final report of the book committee to the general conference is in the hands of the delegates in pamphlet form. The report shows the total sales of the book concern of New York for the past four years to have been $3,597,692, and of the Western book concern for the same period $4,650,800. The Episcopal fund created for ministerial support shows a cash balance of $127,131, a substantial increase over the total at the close of the previous quadrennium.

The report makes only casual allusion to the important question of unification of the publishing houses.

The treasurer today commenced the payment of the expenses of the delegates to the conference upon the presentation of the itemized and audited accounts.

Treasurer Oscar P. Miller estimated that $100,000 would be paid out by the church for the expenses of the delegates during their stay in Los Angeles.

The chairman of the committee on the state of the church had announced the appointment of six sub-committees, to which will be referred the various matters coming under the jurisdiction of the committee. A great number of memorials on various subjects are now in the hands of the committee on state of church, chief among these being those dealing with the amusement question. Thirty-four memorials from as many annual conferences have been received on this single subject.

AMES COUNSEL MAKES STRONG PLEA

Minneapolis, May 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—The state rested late yesterday in the case of ex-Mayor A. A. Ames and the defense at once moved an acquittal on the same charge which is now on trial. The jury was excused and the motion argued by Mr. Cary, of St. Paul, who made an exhaustive plea. The defense contends that the supreme court settled the first case by reversing the verdict of the jury in the district court, and, therefore, any attempt to try him on any of the charges in the "blanket" indictment cannot be sustained in law.

One of the charges in the first indictment was that Dr. Ames received a bribe of $2 from a woman, the identical charges made in the indictment on which Dr. Ames is now being tried. The youthful attorney for the defense made a splendid impression and his remarks were listened to with attention. He continued his argument today.

ASHLAND FOR LA FOLLETTE

Bold Attempt of the Stalwarts to Steal Control.

Ashland, Wis., May 10.—After vainly trying to buy enough La Follette delegates to control the county convention yesterday afternoon for Baensch, the stalwarts attempted upon the dictation of the chairman to declare twelve Baensch delegates elected from Ashland county.

It was the most barefaced attempt to declare against the will of the majority of the convention that Ashland county politics has ever recorded and all classes of citizens are wild with indignation over the bold and disgraceful efforts of the stalwart Republicans in this city.

There were twenty-nine votes in the county convention when it was called to order yesterday, one of the members who was elected being absent.

On the first ballot the La Follette forces were counted out by fraud. Fifteen delegates out of the twenty-nine delegates voted for La Follette delegates. It was counted 14 for La Follette to 15 for Baensch. The convention reassembled in the afternoon and sixteen delegates, a majority of all, elected solid La Follette delegation. Each of the original fifteen delegates to the county convention made affidavits this morning. One delegate, who signed a pledge to support La Follette, deserted. One La Follette delegate, being the sole delegate from his town, was absent from the state.

The delegates are J. W. Good, Fred Smith, E. A. Strong, J. Q. Cobb, J. Nelson, Robert Johnson, John Berg, C. Klernsther, J. J. Stoltz, J. J. Hayden, John Hedman, George Baker.

As there were only twenty-nine votes in the convention the action of these fifteen members in thus voting for delegates and adopting the resolutions settles the selection of La Follette delegates to the state convention from this county despite the fraudulent attempt of stalwart officials to declare that the ballots gave fifteen votes for Baensch delegates.

The secretary of the convention, J. J. Stoltz, has refused to certify that the Baensch delegates received fifteen votes and it is therefore, apparent that the La Follette delegates were duly elected despite the efforts of the stalwarts to buy enough men to win the convention and, failing in this, to attempt with the aid of the chairman to force a decision contrary to the will of the majority of the convention.

Republican caucuses were held in only one county yesterday—Brown—the Second and Depere district, was carried for La Follette by a large majority. La Follette's total vote was increased yesterday to 461, and is now only 72 short of a majority of the convention.

FROM PRESENT INDICATIONS MASTERS AND PILOTS WILL REJECT OFFER OF CARRIERS

Men at All Lake Ports Are Voting Individually on Proposition.

The Owners' Offer Is to Pay the Men Wage Scale of Last Year.

The Men Want Uniform Scale or Propose to Fight All Summer.

Cleveland, May 10.—Members of the Masters' and Pilots' association at all ports on the lakes are today engaged in voting on the question as to whether the offer of the Lake Carriers' association to pay last year's wage scale shall be accepted or rejected. It is expected that the votes will have all been recorded and telegraphed to the headquarters of the association here by Thursday.

A prominent member of the association said today that, judging from the strong sentiment prevailing among the members in Cleveland and vicinity, the proposition of the Lake Carriers would be rejected by a very large majority. He added that the members of the Masters' and Pilots' association generally were determined to secure a uniform wage scale or "fight all summer."

ERSTWHILE FINANCIER HOOLEY ARRESTED ON FRAUD CHARGE

His Meteoric Career In England In 1898 and Colossal Bankruptcy Proceedings Astonished the Financial World at That Time.

London, May 10.—Ernest Terah Hooley, whose meteoric career and company promoting a few years ago astonished the financial world, was arrested here today on the charge of conspiracy to defraud. Hooley's colossal bankruptcy and the proceedings arising therefrom were the sensation of 1898. Since then he has been connected with various promotions, some of which led to court proceedings.

Henry J. Lawson, another company promoter, was arrested today in connection with the Hooley charge.

A receiving order in bankrutcy was issued against Ernest Terah Hooley on June 8, 1898. Hooley, at that time, was the biggest company promoter in England. He was prominently interested in bicycle, land and meat extract concerns and was supposed to be a multi-millionaire. He reached the pinnacle of his prominence in 1896, when he promoted a tire company as the result of which he was supposed to have celared $12,500,000. At that time he was living a sort of Count of Monte Cristo existence, buying yachts and race horses and a number of historic country seats.

The announcement of the bankruptcy proceedings against Hooley caused a great sensation in London, though in the best-informed quarters his failure had been expected for sometime, owing to his inability to float a large Chinese loan. Eventually Hooley was formally adjudged a bankrupt. The capitals of the companies promoted by him up to 1898 aggregated from $60,000,000 to $65,000,000.

On Aug. 10 last application was made to a London magistrate for a warrant for the arrest of Hooley on the charge of fraudulently and by false pretenses obtaining signatures to checks and bills of exchange amounting to over $650,000. The magistrate reserved his decision. Previously, on Aug. 8, the director of public prosecutions had been instructed to investigate some of the transactions of Hooley in connection with a sapphire mine situated in Canada.

HORSES RESCUED IN SIX FEET OF WATER IN BURNED BUILDING

New York, May 10.—Two horses, one a blooded roadster, the other a big truck animal, have been taken alive from beneath the ruins of the Universal Storage house, which was burned last Friday night. They were in the basement, which was filled with nearly six feet of water and apparently had saved themselves from death by holding their heads above the water and near a small window. The horses were found by a fire patrolman hours after the building was destroyed. The flooring in that portion of the warehouse, although piled high with debris, had broken only in a few places. Water, dripping through the ruins, rose steadily but the intelligent animals, somehow kept their heads above it and when they heard the patrolman near made sufficient noise to attract his attention. He quickly procured pails filled with oats and clambered down to their rescue. A runway was soon made and the horses were led out through a window, to the great joy of a large crowd which had gathered. Neither animal seemed to have suffered at all except from hunger.

MANDARINS TO VISIT STEEL PLANTS

Chicago, May 10.— Uk Lee, Tsu King Yuan and Tse Shao Yung, three commissioners of the Chinese government, have arrived here from Pekin. They are mandarins of the first class, and have been sent out to investigate the steel plants of America and England.

"China intends constructing a plant of her own for the manufacture of armor plate and steel rails," said Mr. Lee. She already possesses a steel plant near Shanghai, but it is of an old pattern and not at all up to date. The new plant will be located in the interior somewhere, exactly where has not been decided. But we want the most improved machinery, the newest models, in order to turn out steel in quantity and of the best quality.

"Our party will stay for several days in Chicago and we will investigate the Illinois Steel works. From here we go to Pittsburg, and finally to England. We shall be gone three months or more, and on our return to China will make a report to the imperial government."

Mr. Lee would not say how large a sum China is prepared to put into the establishment of the plant, but he intimated that the amount would be enormous, and that no pains would be spared.

INDIANA DEMOCRATS GATHERING

Indianapolis, May 10.—Democratic leaders are gathering for the first session of the Democratic state convention, which will meet Thursday morning at 11 o'clock to select delegates and alternates-at-large to the St. Louis convention and presidential electors and alternates-at-large. An adjournment will then be taken until July 20, when a platform will be adopted and a state ticket nominated.

Of the 1547 delegates to the state convention it is estimated from 450 to 600 are for W. R. Hearst and the rest for Judge Parker. The state organization, headed by National Committeeman Taggart, is for Parker, and it is believed it will be organized for Parker.

PENNIES TOO HEAVY FOR ROBBERS

New York, May 10.—Enterprising burglars who looted a penny slot machine in a concert hall in Broadway have failed to escape with their plunder because one of their number broke down under the burden of 14,000 pennies.

The party, consisting of three or four men, went through the machine in full view of the street but were supposed to be employes. After placing the coins in a bag they made off but a policeman gave chase. The bag carrier broke down after a short run through a cross street and dropped the money which was recovered intact. None of the men were captured.

With the thoughtless and sure destruction of arbutus going on in this vicinity, the following warning from another locality is applicable to the situation in Duluth. Lovers of flowers have been protesting for the last several years against the destruction of this most dainty and beautiful of the spring flowers. The work has been going on so ruthlessly that scarcely a plant can be found on Minnesota Point, where they were formerly so plentiful. The St. Ignace Enterprise says:

That beautiful product of our woods, the trailing arbutus, or better known as the mayflower, is again the harbinger of coming summer; the signal that the severity of winter is once more past. Already for several days past its welcome blossoms have adorned the coat lapels of those who search for it in its hidden places.

And this suggests to us a timely warning. One ruthless individual was seen upon the street the other day with a spray literaly torn up by the roots, carrying it in his hand.

The trailing arbutus is a coy and dainty specimen; it cannot be coaxed into the artificial atmosphere of civilization: its only home is its native woods, where its romance is connected with the race of aborigines so long disappearing before the invasion of the white race.

Destruction would seem inevitably to follow in the wake of this process of settlement; the making of farms necessitated the cutting up of beautiful hardwoods into mere firewood; progress towards the West led to the extermination of the buffalo; pray—may there not be spared to us, for a little while longer, the gladdest, as it is the bravest, of our northern flora?

One of the songs that has been handed down to posterity from an almost forgotten past is known as "Woodman, Spare That Tree." The Enterprise earnestly advances a plea to the goths and vandals of these days who act thoughtlessly; not, it is charitably assumed intentionally; to be gently protectiv of the future of the mayflower.

PROF. CHARLES W. SEYMOUR

Delivers First Lecture on "Herod."

Professor Charles W. Seymour last night delivered the first of a course of twelve lectures, to be given during the next four weeks at the high school assembly hall. He took "Herod, the King of the Jews," as a subject.

Twice before has this masterful and entertaining speaker appeared in Duluth in the last two years, so that he had many admirers in the audience before he began speaking at all. He appeared, if possible, to even better advantage than when in the city before, and the story of the king of the Jews, as told by him was an intensely interesting one.

Mr. Seymour said that despite Herod's many and ugly crimes, a profound pity for him is born of the knowledge of his life. He was the victim of unscrupulous and wicked women. The lecturer spoke of the hatred of Herod's mother-in-law, Alexandria, the tattling of his sister Salome and the strife and conspiracies within his own castle, saying that these troubles combined were sufficient to destroy any tendency to moral uplift. The accusations of Salome after the death of his wife reduced him to the temporary loss of reason.

Mr. Seymour spoke of the prophecy of Isaac to Esau, that some day he would have domination over Jacob and break the yoke from his neck, and told how, after 1800 years, that prophecy was fulfilled, when Herod, a descendant of Esau, became king of the Jews.

A detailed account was given of the predominance among the Jews of the law and their union in their traditions, faith, prejudices and hatreds. He spoke of the condition of Rome, and of the exciting historical events following one upon the other, dwelling on the death of Ceaser, the civil war which followed and the appearance of Anthony in the East. He told of the efforts of the Jews to force the Idumaeans (Antipus family) from power, and of the rise, at this juncture, of the Parthians. The war which was waged against Herod by the members of his household was told of in a thrilling manner.

Herod's fear of the coming of a Messiah, who would undo all that he had performed, was related. Mr. Seymour told of the arrival of the wise men, announcing the birth of Christ, after which Herod destroyed the children of Bethlehem, in the effort to rid the world of this menace to Augusta. The speaker dwelt on Herod's death and burial, and closed with a description of the coming of Jesus.

SISTER ELLEN TO LEAVE.

Resigns as Deaconess of St. Paul's Church.

Sister Ellen has resigned as deaconess of St. Paul's Episcopal church, and will leave Duluth to take up work in the St. Thomas church, of New York, said to be one of the largest of its kind in the United States.

It is with the keenest regret that the local congregation will witness the departure of Sister Ellen, who, since her arrival from Philadelphia, two years ago, has been faithful and untiring in her efforts in behalf of the church. She has had charge of the missionary and social work of the institution. The position is one of many responsibilities, and a successor to Sister Ellen has not yet been selected.

FAIL TO GET QUORUM.

Y. W. C. A. Annual Meeting Is Postponed.

Last evening the annual meeting of the Young Women's Christian association was to have been held at the association rooms. The meeting was an important one, as three members of the board were to have been elected at this time and other important business to have been transacted, but a quorum was not present. It is required that fifty active members be present before business may be transacted and only thirty were at the rooms last evening. With a membership of over 1000 fifty seems a small number to bring together and it was hoped that the interest in the work would bring at least that many.

The short literary and musical program was given and a short social held and theb usiness meeting adjourned till a later date.

THE EVENING STORY.

HER PROPOSAL

By Josephine E. Suhler.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

One day early in June, Jim Dayton was brought into the hospital. He had been knocked down by a runaway horse and lay unconscious, tossing and moaning upon his cot.

His wounds, upon examination, proved to be more painful than serious, and would require long and tedious nursing. When he regained consciousness, he gazed about him in bewilderment and demanded to know where he was. Clara Maines, the nurse who had been assigned to his case, reassured him, and in a few words told him what had happened.

"Oh!" he exclaimed, "I feared I was in prison."

She glanced at him keenly, and he continued: "One never knows these days where he is going to land."

The strange remark startled her somewhat, but it was the accompanying tone and look of defiance which aroused her suspicions. She, however, mentioned it to no one, but day after day waited upon him tenderly, doing everything in her power to ease his suffering and add to his comfort. Criminal as she suspected him to be, it made no difference in her sympathy for a suffering body, for a bruised soul that was sick and alone.

For the first few days he lay morose and silent, taking no apparent notice of the thoughtful care bestowed upon him; when, however, he was left alone, he would curse and swear, because of that kindness. He didn't like it, it made him think and feel, and—and, he didn't want to think and feel.

He didn't want to look back over his miserable past, nor forward into a future less promising.

But gloomy regrets and reflections came oftener and haunted his waking hours.

One day, when he was more than usually serious, Miss Maines sat down by his side, and regarding him intently for a moment, exclaimed: "Will you trust me?"

He was positive he saw tears in her eyes, and her voice had a forced steadiness.

"Yes, I will trust you," he cried, "You are an angel; and it is your influence that has worked so deftly upon my peace of mind. Life has been a failure. In Chicago, my pals know me as 'The Gentleman Burglar.' Here in Boston I am a stranger. Before long I will return to my old world, and your influence will be forgotten. I will go down step by step until I reach the lowest depth and nothing can stop me. My God! nothing, nothing!" he ended, in a hoarse whisper.

Clara had closed her eyes to shut out the dread vision, and to keep the tears in check.

"Oh, Mr. Dayton, don't say that! it is cruel and unkind to yourself. Listen to me," she went on eagerly, "the seed of virtue has been sown, the blossoms have sprouted and must not be trampled upon. The influence—my influence has given me a power over you, a right, and I want you to trust me, to feel and to know that you must always come to me with your temptations and sorrows. Will you promise?"

"Not yet," he murmured sadly, "some day when I am stronger, perhaps, I will come to you with the promise to be what you would wish me."

He dared not trust himself to look at her. He did not know that her eyes were unusually soft and bright.

Each day, as she became more thoughtful and tender, her power over him grew greater, and he found himself planning a future, clear and honest; but Miss Maines could not be separated from that future; she was always hovering near, to point out to him the light.

At the end of six weeks he was dismissed from the hospital. Only one of its inmates knew what struggles and temptations the world might hold for him.

Why did she place such implicit confidence in him, and why did all his manhood awaken in response to that trust? He went forth with a strong determination to conquer evil, and as each day that determination grew, it shut out all other thoughts—except of her.

Five years had passed. Jim Dayton had won fortune, friends, and the respect of all who knew him; but he was not satisfied.

He loved Clara Maines passionately. All the ardor of his soul went forth in appeal; but his wretched past weighed in the balance against him. He was not a fit mate for the sweetest and purest little girl in the world; so he struggled manfully against that love.

For a time Clara was very happy. Her pride argued with her heart. "Love in return for gratitude," she cried, scornfully. Yet she had moments of strange happiness as some unconscious word or act of his gave her a new hope. Finally she awoke to the truth, and her womanly intuition told her that he would never disclose his love, and it also told her why.

Oh, if he could but know how she yearned for that declaration; how she gave love for love and trust for trust.

One evening, in the midst of her perplexities, Jim Dayton was announced, and in a twinkling Clara Maines had formed a resolution. After the usual greetings had been passed, she seated herself by his side and said in a low voice:

"Mr. Dayton, Jim, I am going away."

"Away!" he exclaimed, aghast, "where to and what for?"

"I am going to San Francisco to live. my sister has sent for me."

"My God! little one, what will I do without you. I had never thought of this," he cried bitterly. "I could bear it while you were near. Yet I must not complain, I deserve all this."

"Yes, and more, too," she cried hysterically, "Faint heart never won fair lady, you know."

He looked up puzzled. "You do not mean?—No, you cannot—"

"That I love you," she interrupted, "That I have read your heart, and have suffered as you have suffered. That it was unkind in you not to discern it; to make me stoop to strategy and an unwomanly act."

"And I never knew this," he cried, as he tenderly drew her to him, "how blind I have been. All these years I have been fighting down a deep, honest love—the noblest thing in my life—because I felt unworthy. I could not forget my past; but I did not know that you were suffering. Forgive me, dearest," he cried.

"Yes, let us forgive and forget," she laughed, "forget that I threw myself at you—but then it's Leap Year, you know."

CONTRACT WORK

At Canadian Niagara Tied Up By Strike.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., May 10.—A strike affecting between 300 and 400 skilled men in the employment of the Canadian Power Works contractors has been inaugurated at the works of the Ontario Power company, and the Canadian Niagara Power company, on the Canadian side of the river. The strike practically ties up the contract work on the two plants, inasmuch as the men out are the hoist engineers, the channel drillers and the tripod drillers.

Some weeks they presented a request to their employers that they be given $3 a day instead of $2.50. This request was not granuted and the strike was called.

Remove the cause and you remove the disease. Dr. Hickox's Malarial Capsules removes the cause in typhoid fever, neuralgia and penumonia. Go to Kugler's.

BOOKBINDERS STRIKE.

Eight Hundred Men Go Out at Chicago.

Chicago, May 10.—Eight hundred bookbinders struck today in shops of the Chicago typothatae. Sympathetic strikes of the women binders, blankbook binders and rulers are threatened if an effort is made to run the shops with non-union binders.

The R. R. Donnelly & Sons company and Rand-McNally & Co., who employ a large number of non-union bookbinders, continued to operate today practically free from trouble. The union may order the tie up of the bindery industry in other shops to compel the typothatae to force these two members to employ only union bindery men.

BY REV. FATHER PONTUR.

How a Young Woman of His Parish Was Cured of Consumption by Father John's Medicine.

Writing from La Fargeville, N. Y., on February 7, 1902, Rev. Fr. Joseph Pontur, of St. John's Parish, said: "One of my parishioners, almost despondent of ever getting cured, given up by the doctors as a consumptive, upon my firm advice is using Father John's Medicine and since has been constantly improving to the great joy of herself, parents and friends."

Again four months later, Rev. Fr. Pontur writes: "The young woman referred to in my letter of February 7, 1902, who was given up by all the doctors as a consumtive, continues to improve wonderfully by using Father John's Medicine." Remember, not a patent medicine, and free from weakening stimulants or dangerous drugs—all pure nourishment. Cures grip, colds, and all throat and lung troubles—prevents pneumonia and consumption. It is guaranteed to cure consumption, and the money is refunded in any case where it does not do all that is claimed for it. Fifty years in use.

RECORD OF BEDE

At the Late Session of Congress Was Excellent.

Made Great Reputation—Has Done Much For District.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU

Washington, May 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—The session of congress just closed presented but few opportunities for the members who are starting upon a congressional career. The majority issued an emphatic statement at the commencement of the Fifty-eighth congress that nothing whatever, practically, aside from the regular appropriation bills, would receive consideration and this plan was faithfully adhered to till the very moment the gavel fell adjourning the session. The fact that the minority taunted the majority, characterizing it as a "Do-Nothing Congress" did not swerve Speaker Cannon and his committee on rules. They did nothing, aside from passing upon such measures as were absolutely necessary, with but a very few exceptions. Of course, all the general appropriation bills were passed, and upon these a few members managed to tack a few pieces of new legislation and worked the same through the conference committees. But these items were small and bcause of their insignificance escaped general notice and were allowed to slip through and become law. Because of the general policy of the managers of the majority to do little outside of providing appropriations for the actual necessities to carry on the government, the average new member has been compelled to take a very inconspicuous seat on the back row, fold his hands and not have an opportunity to say "Boo."

Some of the new members of the Fifty-eighth congress have been able to over-ride this mandate of the committee on rules to "go way back and sit down," notable among those of this class being J. Adam Bede, representing the Duluth district in congress.

Mr. Bede is of modest demeanor, genial and a hail fellow well met with his asosciates. He came to congress with somewhat of a reputation as a first-class off-hand speaker and debater—able to take care of himself in almost any emergency where logic or wit served as foils. During the early days of the session Mr. Bede did not put himself to the front in debate, in fact had it not been for the fact that he continuously answered to his name on roll call the general public would not have been aware of his presence at all. However, there came a time when the "spirit" seemed to arouse Mr. Bede, and he arose in meeting and during an hour and a half his oratory and his natural sense of humor held the house spellbound and made his reputation in that short space of time as one of the most graceful, witty and forceful speakers who now hold a seat in the present congress. Mr. Bede is not to be considered by any means merely a wit or buffoon in dealing with public questions. He is sound in his logic, and his witticisms merely serve him to turn a point to his or rather his party's advantage. Mr. Bede, undoubtedly, made a great hit in congress by his maiden speech, and his fame has traveled with exceedingly great speed. He has, since that speech, received more invitations to addrss clubs, speak at political dinners and assist members of the house in their campaigns for renomination and election than any ten men could possibly fulfill.

Congressman Bede is proverbially good-natured and he has been pained to be forced to refuse many urgent invitations to address political dinners at clubs. He has accepted many of these invitations, out of the greatness of his heart, but it must not be thought for a moment that while assisting comrades in the house to put a few props under their fences he has neglected his duties as a representative of the Eighth Minnesota congressional district. Mr. Bede has had and still has many matters of interest to the Duluth district well in hand, and is now remaining in Washington long after other members have left to endeavor to place "pipe lines" which shall redound to the benefit of his constituency during the short session of the Fiftyeighth congress.

To enumerate what Mr. Bede has accomplished, aside from making himself a national character as an orator, would take considerable space. He has set the ground wires which will bring about an appropriation for the purchase of additional land for the Duluth public building. This is one of the best things he has done for the city of Duluth. He has secured the passage of a bill which reimburses several merchants at Fond du Lac and Cloquet for goods purchased from them by the Indians, which were never paid for and which by moral right the government stood responsible for. He secured the passage of a bill granting to the county commissioners of Itasca county permission to bridge the Mississippi. He also secured the passage of a bill changing the dates upon which terms of the United States district and circuit courts should sit in Minnesota. The private pension bills which he has slipped under the congressional canvas are too many to mention. Another matter, which will be of interest to mariners of Lake Superior is the passage of a paragraph in the sundry civil appropriation bill providing an appropriation of $75,000 for a lighthouse tender for use on Lake Superior. These things Mr. Bede has accomplished, and he has many other propositions which he is quietly working upon with a view of pressing them at the coming session. He has been working unostensibly upon a plan to secure a vessel for the naval reserve of Duluth. The Duluth naval reserves want a ship upon which they may gain practical knowledge in gunnery and seamanship, just as is allowed the naval reserve of Michigan, Illinois and other great lake coast cities, and J. Adam Bede is working hard to secure this concession for the Minnesota boys.

Aside from all this, Mr. Bede has labored and continues to work to familiarize himself with departmental details, so as to be thoroughly in touch with every phase of the situation when the second session of the Fifty-eighth congress convenes. It has been promised that, though the next session will, because of statutory limitation, be a short one, it will be a busy one, and those who have the foresight to get their propositions into tangible shape may expect to realize splendid results. Mr. Bede has all the plans which will best serve the people of his district well in hand for the coming session, and his wires are so laid that he will, beyond doubt, accomplish nearly everything he has in view for the Eighth district.

MARCH, APRIL, MAY.

Weak Nerves, Poor Digestion, Impure Blood, Depressed Spirits.

The sun has just crossed the equator on its yearly trip north. The real equator is shifted toward the north nearly eighteen miles every day. With the return of the sun comes the bodily ills peculiar to spring. With one person the nerves are weak; another person digestion poor; with others the blood is out of order; and still others have depressed spirits and tired feeling.

All these things are especially true of catarrh in any form or in grippe. A course of Peruna is sure to correct all these conditions. It is an ideal spring medicine. Peruna does not irritate—it invigorates. It does not temporarily stimulate—it strengthens. It equalizes the circulation of the blood, tranquilizes the nervous system and regulates the bodily functions. Peruna, unlike so many spring medicines is not simply a physic or stimulant of nervine. It is a natural tonic and invigorater.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Is Proper to Resist Arrest When Warrant Is Void.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—The supreme court of this state has decided that a man may resist arrest if the warrant is void. The point was raised on the attempt of the deputy sheriffs to arrest T. M. Davis and his sons for resisting arrest because they held the officials had no legal authority to proceed against them. The local justice, the district court and the supreme court all held the same way.

The Eagles of Fargo are preparing for a big time Thursday evening. The grand worthy president, T. D. Sullivan, of New York, will be here and a hundred candidates are to be initiated. Members of the order from the Twin Cities, Duluth and Grand Forks are expected.

There is a contest over the estate of the late C. J. Calmer, a grocer. Calmer's widow was his second wife and was appinted special administratrix and asked to have the appointment made permanent. A cross petition has been filed for the appointment of the eldest son.

Five years ago the men failed to come to a settlement, and the suit for an accounting resulted.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Mitchell—An attempt was made to burn the Salvation Army barracks in the city. Two men passing by the building saw flames and breaking in the front door extinguished them before much damage was done. On investigation it was ascertained that a carpet on the stage and some flags were saturated with coal oil, as also were the papers on the floor. A string was run from the papers to the outside of the building, which was soaked in oil, and the fire was started from this. No clew was secured as to who started the fire.

Deadwood—James T. Taylor and Miss Mamie E. Terry, of Terraville, were married this week. They will make their home at Terraville.

It's interesting to note the improvements in the New Arrivals over last season's styles. The betterment is in the details of construction and such only as an expert shoeman could think out. The new models are things of beauty—seems almost a shame to soil the soles by wearing, yet they'll wear as well—and keep their shape as long as the most expensive shoes that are made. Every pair of The Burrows Regent Shoes are either hand-sewn welted or hand-sewn turn soled.

SPRANG FROM CHURCH SEATS

And Grappled With the Preacher Who Had Assailed Masonry.

Springfield, Ohio, May 10.—Rev. Mr. Nye, of Dayton, who claims to be a converted Jew, came near being mobbed here Sunday while occupying the pulpit at the morning service of the North Street A. M. E. church, the leading colored congregation of the city. Rev. Mr. Nye made a most vicious attack on Free Masonry, and began reading what he claimed to be the first three obligations and the penalty for exposing the same.

Before he had finished Hugh Logan, infirmary director; Maj. R. R. Rudd, of the Ninth battalion, O. N. G.; Otis Fletcher, John McKee and John White, prominent members of the congregation, sprang from their seats and rushed upon the rostrum and dragged Nye from the pulpit. They handled him very roughly, and Nye pleaded with them not to do him bodily harm.

A number of women in the congregation began screaming, and the greatest excitement prevailed. Other men crowded forward, and numerous threats were made.

Rev. Mr. Nixon, pastor of the congregation, who was occupying a seat near the speaker, probably saved Nye from serious injury. Dixon implored the men to release Nye, impressing on their minds that they were in a house dedicated to God and beseeching them not to stain it with blood.

Finally quiet was restored, and the five men agreed to release him upon condition that he would not be permitted to speak further. The pastor promised them and Nye was satisfied. Still trembling, he hastily left the church by a rear door.

Nye was formerly in the clothing business in Newark, Ohio, but recently moved to Dayton. He claims he has been converted and is spending most of his time preaching.

An Open Letter.

From the Chapin, S. C., News: Early in the spring my wife and I were taken with diarrhoea and so severe were the pains that we called a physician who prescribed for us, but his medicines failed to give any relief. A friend who had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy on hand gave each of us a dose and we at once felt the effects. I procured a bottle and before using the entire contents we were entirely cured. It is a wonderful remedy and should be found in every household. H. C. Bailes, Editor. This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

NEW JERSEY REPUBLICANS

Hold State Convention and Endorse Administration of Roosevelt.

Trenton, N. J., May 10.—Delegates began arriving early today to attend the Republican state convention called to meet in Talor Opera house at noon to elect delegates to the national convention at Chicago. Most of the morning was taken up with conferences of delegates from the various congressional districts for the purpose of selecting delegates to Chicago.

The convention was called to order by Senator E. E. Stokes, who introduced as temporary chairman of the convention United States Senator Kean. Senator Kean said in part:

Happily we are not compelled, like our opponents, the Democratic party, to seek for an issue with a searchlight and for a candidate without a record or the gift of political speech. We have a policy, and our policy is that which has always been the policy of the Republican party, the maintenance of our protection system and the honest and economical administration of the affairs of the government.

When President Roosevelt was into the conduct of the affairs of formed there was any question as the postoffice department, he at once set to work to hove that department thoroughly investigated and the guilty men brought to trial. They were brought to trial, found guilty and convicted, and wherever wrong is practiced and it can be discovered by our party, that party is ready to correct that wrong and punish those responsible for it.

There has been somewhat of criticism upon the conduct of the president in regard to the matter of the Panama canal. What he did has commended itself since to the best judgment of the American people. The canal, after being a dream or a vision for more than four centuries, is about to be built by American enterprise and by American capital, and it will be controlled by Americans.

The platform prepared by a sub-committee of the state committee for ratification by the state convention endorses the administration of President Roosevelt.

FOUND DEAD IN HIS BED

Frank Johnson, West End Resident, Dies In Night.

Frank Johnson, an aged resident of the West End, was found dead in bed this morning by some of his neighbors.

Johnson, who was a man of about 56 years of age, was keeping bachelor's quarters on Eighth street between Twentieth and Twenty-first avenues west. He has been ill for some time past but his neighbors did not think his trouble was serious. Some of them were in attendance on him last evening and left believing that he would rest quietly until morning. When they went to visit him again this morning they found him dead.

Coroner Boyer was immediately notified and he ordered the body removed to the undertaking establishment of Durkan & Crawford, where a post-mortem examination will be held this afternoon.

Dr. Boyer stated this afternoon that he believed the death to have been due to consumption, but that a post-mortem would be necessary since there was no physician in attendance at the time of his death.

Johnson has no known relatives in the city, and the body is being held while the authorities endeavor to ascertain whether he has any friends living in this part of the country.

ITS FIRST EMPLOYE

Duluth Street Railway Company Finds Him In Jury Box.

Took Care of Stables When Line Was First Built.

The trial of two personal injury cases, in which the aggregate damages asked exceed $20,000, were begun in district court this morning.

In Judge Cant's room the case of Mrs. Catherine Hurley, of Superior, Wis., against the Duluth Street Railway company, is on trial. Mrs. Hurley claims that while getting on a car at the corner of Garfield avenue and Michigan street, in May, 1903, the car was started and she was thrown to the ground, breaking her left arm in two places and receiving other injuries from the effects of which she has never fully recovered. She asks general damages in the amount of $10,000, and about $200 for special damages on account of doctor and nurse bills.

Mrs. Hurley is represented by D. M. De Vore and H. H. Hawkins and the street railway company is defended by Thomas S. Wood.

Only three jurors were challenged this morning in this case. One of the jurors examined, O. N. Nelson, a janitor for some East First street property, when examined by Mr. Wood, stated that he was the first man hired by the Duluth Street Railway company, being engaged to look after the company's stables when it first started its mule cars in this city. He said he quit the job when he found employment that would pay him better elsewhere. He was accepted as a juror.

In Judge Ensign's room the personal injury cases of Alton R. Radley against Nolan Bros. & Laird, lumber manufacturers at Skibo, Minn., is on trial. Radley claims that by reason of obstructions left between the rails of the spur track to the sawmill a car was derailed and he was seriously injured. He asks general damages in the amount of $10,000 and special damages in the amount of $1000. He is represented by John Jenswold, Jr. The lumber company is defended by Davis & Hollister.

In Judge Dibell's room, this morning, the court took the case of S. Lifpitz against E. S. Woolfan from the jury, there being no appearance of Woolfan, and found for Lifpitz. The action was one to recover a small amount on account of goods sold.

This afternoon the second trial of the personal injury case of Belle McKenzie against Sarah Banks was begun in Judge Dibell's room. The action is one in which Mrs. McKenzie alleges that Mrs. Banks assaulted and beat her when she was in a pregnant condition, causing premature confinement and birth of a child. She demands general damages in the amount of $5000 and special damages amounting to $50. The alleged assault took place May 12, 1903.

When the case was first tried the jury returned a verdict of $2650 for Mrs. McKenzie, but this verdict was afterward set aside by the court, and a new trial was ordered.

Marshall & Whipple, who represented Mrs. McKenzie at the former trial, will have charge of her side of the case. Mrs. Banks was represented at the former trial by R. S. Powell. In this trial Mr. Powell will be assisted by W. D. Bailey.

The following jury cases are on call:

Today—Nos. 43, 44, 45, 47, 49, 50, 52, 53 and 57.

Wednesday—Nos. 68, 69, 70, 71, 83, 95, 97, 98, 51, 60 and 4.

Thursday—No. 56.

This concludes the jury calendar.

Given Further Time.

At the conclusion of the hearing, yesterday, in the case of the Fidelity Casualty company against the Duluth Logging and Contracting company, in which the casualty company asked that the concern be held in contempt for not obeying an order of the court to permit the former to examine its books, Judge Cant issued a new order setting May 11 as the date at which the logging company should have its books and accounts ready for inspection. The logging company contended that it did not have notice required by law relative to the previous order and refused to show its accounts on demand of the casualty company.

IN PITIFUL CONDITION

Agent Withrow Finds Small Children In Sad State.

Deserted by their father, with their mother under the influence of whisky, and with their infant sister lying dead in her cradle, was the pitiful condition in which Humane Officer Withrow discovered four small children in Chisholm, yesterday.

Mr. Withrow was notified of the case by some neighbors of the family and left Sunday afternoon to investigate the matter.

He found that the mother was addicted to the use of liquor and neglected her children. The father had left home and had not been heard of for some time. A little 3-months-old baby was lying in the cradle dead. It had evidently been dead for three or four days.

The family is named Anderson and the children are all girls, the oldest being 13 years of age and the youngest 3 years. They were taken in charge by the officer and brought to Duluth to be placed in the Children's home until some permanent home can be found for them. There is also a boy about 15 years of age for whom a home has been found in Chisholm.

Mr. Withrow stated that the girls were in a most destitute condition, and badly in need of a liberal application of soap and water, although they were bright and intelligent children. The Children's home is in such an overcrowded condition that it was with difficulty they were provided for. The society has many more children on its hands than it can accommodate in the present building and until the new building is ready for occupancy the home will be badly overcrowded.

WANTS OILERS AND FIREMEN

Pittsburg Company Is Directed to Have Them Report.

At the offices of the Pittsburg Steamship company in the Wolvin building there was received this afternoon a message directing that all oilers and firemen for vessels now at the head of the lakes be summoned for duty.

This looks very much as though the company is getting in complete readiness for taking out its boats in consequence of an agreement being likely between the vessel owners and the masters. But no word of a settlement had reached the local office.

GERMANY'S SECTION

In Palace of Fine Arts Is Duly Dedicated.

St. Louis, May 10.—Germany's section in the palace of fine arts at the World's Fair grounds was dedicated today and a reception to the officials and other invited guests was tendered by Dr. Theo. Lewald, commissioner-general from Germany. Prof. Maximillan Schaffer of the royal academy of Berlin who has been in charge of the arrangements and his assistant, Herr Max A. Schaff, were present. Commissioner Lewald was assisted in receiving by Assistant Commissioner H. Albert an dthe members of his staff. Prominent among the guests were Prince and Princess Hohenlohe of Germany and Prince Pulun of China.

All the scaffolding that has surrounded the eBlgium pavilion in its course of erection was removed today and what little work remains is being rushed to completion in anticipation of the arrival next Thursday of the Belgian minister to the United States, who will participate in the opening of the pavilion. The exhibit of the Prussian government in the forestry, fish and game building, is completed. The largest wine cask ever constructed has been placed in the palace of agriculture. It is 17½ feet in diameter, 17½ feet long and has a capacity of 14,300 gallons.

FEW NEGROES ATTEND ALABAMA CONVENTION.

Birmingham, Ala., May 10.—The Republican state convention met here today. Notwithstanding the fact the convention is controlled by the anti-lily white element, very few negroes were in the hall when the convention began. The convention will select four delegates-at-large to the national convention, one of whom it is conceded will be a negro.

The convention will endorse President Roosevelt and the policy of his Alabania referees.

RICH WOMAN

Weds Peanut Vender of Twice Her Age.

Kalamazoo, Mich., May 10.—The marriage of Julia Damon and Henry Chamberlain, which occurred last week, just coming to light Sunday, has presented some interesting developments.

Chamberlain was a peanut vender, nearly pauperized and about to be admitted to the county poor farm. Proceedings for license ejectment had been started against him by the city council. Miss Damon, 30 years of age, is a heavy property holder here, and has considerable capital in local banks. The couple are spending their honeymoon in Chicago. Tacked in front of the vender's old stand is the placard: "Closed; are on honeymoon."

Chamberlain is 62 years old.

I use Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets for indigestion and find that they suit my case better than any dyspepsia remedy I have ever tried and I have used many different remedies. I am nearly fifty-one years of age and have suffered a great deal from indigestion. I can eat almost anything I want to now. —Geo. W. Emory, Rock Mills, Ala. For sale by all druggists.

FAST TIME CLAIMED

By Brooklyn Man For New Electric Motor on Trains.

Speed of Mile and Three-Tenths In Fifteen Seconds.

New York, May 10.—A mile and three-tenths in fifteen seconds is the speed promised by Prof. Albert C. Albertson, president of the Electro-Magnetic railway construction company. By July 1 he expects to have in operation in Staten Island a railroad equipped with his new magnetic motor. He has figured it all out with a model.

According to Prof. Albertson's time schedule, this train will travel at a rate of about 432 miles an hour which is approximately five times as fast as the swiftest express in the United States. He says he himself does not yet know the exact maximum of speed that his invention can attain to, but is convinced that it can haul a train along a straight track at more than 400 miles an hour.

The rails of the Staten Island road rest on a steel framework, eight feet above the ground. The object of this is to give the train what the inventor regards as absolute immunity from wreck. The wheels are to run on rails and then to make sure that they cannot jump the track, magnets will be run along under the rails. No matter how high is the rate of speed reached, Prof. Albertson says, this mode of construction will effectually prevent the train from leaving the track.

"The principle of the invention is so simple that even a layman may readily understand it," said the inventor. "I have given seven years to its study and perfection."

THE CROCODILE TREE.

A Curious Bit of Mexican Indian Love.

Along the coast lands of Mexico there is found a class of legends that differ quite materially from those of the island regions, says Modern Mexico. They are of a less exalted type than the legends that are supposed to have a Toltec origin, and they more nearly resemble the stories handed down by the Northern Indians. This is particularly true of the animal legends that are told in the hot country adjacent to the sea. A characteristic story of this class is about the crocodiles that frequent the rivers and bayous of the hot country. It will not require an ethnologist to see the human nature that is woven into the fantastic legend of the uninteresting reptile. A particularly interesting point is the disclosure of the fact that the Darwinian theory of the origin of man prevailed at this time among the primative story tellers of the tierra caliente, or at least along the banks of the river of the Winding Snake.

Long ago, before man lived upon the earth, the banks of the Winding Snake were the homes of the crocodiles. They lived there in great numbers, and were taught by their elders that all they had to do in life was to lie in the sun and warm themselves and sleep. The young crocodiles sometimes wished to wander off in the thick wood, where they heard the monkeys chattering and the parrots mocking them, and the spotted cats fighting with each other. They wondered now wide the woods were, and where the paths led to that wound away into the dark depths beyond, and if there really were danger, as their elders said.

One day two strange animals came in sight, walking on the banks of the Winding Snake. They were men, but the crocodiles did not know it. When the crocodiles first heard the men's voices they all plunged headlong into the water, but when the men sat down at the root of a great tree the young crocodiles were so curious to hear what they were talking about that they swam close to the shore and put their heads up among the reeds to listen. The foolish creatures thought that the men could not see them, and paid no heed to the warnings of their parents.

Presently one of the men said to the other: "Do you see those crocodiles in the water? They are exactly like the ones I saw on the other side of the mountains. The foolish people over there believe that the crocodiles are gods, and feed them and protect them till they grow as long as a house."

When the men had gone away, the young crocodiles hurried out into the deep water to tell their elders what they had heard.

"What! have you not been told that all men were once monkeys and lived in trees, and that now they are all liars? To be sure, they have cut off their tails and assumed a false wisdom, but beware of them! Men never worship any but themselves."

But the young crocodiles, like other young creatures, having once heard tales from the great world, were not satisfied. They wanted to see it, and see the folly of it themselves, so the next day they called a meeting of all the youngsters, and the ones who had heard the talk of the men led a revolt.

"Our parents do not know as much as monkeys," said one, "and they know much less than men."

"They are too lazy and too fat to do anything," said another, "and they lie in the hot sand and the mud and sleep until their heads are as thick as green cocoanuts before the milk is in them, and they are afraid of their own shadows," said a third.

Then they all agreed that they would run away and climb over the great mountain and see the world. For, they reasoned, if monkeys with their tails cut off travel all over the land, so can we, and we will not cut off our tails, either. The meeting lasted from early morning until the sun stood still in the middle of the sky, and before they parted the young crocodiles promised to meet at sunrise the following morning, at the same place, to start on their journey.

Sure enough, the rising sun saw hundreds and hundreds of young crocodiles swimming in the waters of Winding Snake, all bound for the spot under the cocoa palms whence they were to start out to see the world. The old crocodiles were all fast asleep, foolishly trusting that the young ones would heed their good advice. All day they swam up stream, for of course they were trying to reach the mountain top so that they could go down into the happy land on the other side, where the crocodiles were worshiped as gods. They could not travel on the land because the forest was so dense that they could not make their way through the trees and vines, but sometimes they were obliged to climb along the banks to get around a waterfall or over a fallen tree. When night came they were very tired, and crept out into some tall grass that grew in a marshy inlet of the Winding Snake and quickly fell asleep.

Alas, while the young crocodiles slept the water god and his sister came upon them. They had told the old crocodiles long ago that the young ones must never leave the hot country, and they had a great deal to do besides looking after crocodiles. They summon the rains and the springs and the streams, and are very industrious people. For many years the crocodiles had obeyed the wishes of the water god, but knowing the habits of crocodiles he was aware that if he overlooked this breach of law he should have perpetual trouble with the tribe. So, in order to settle the matter for all times, he called the spirits from the hills and told them to take all the sleeping crocodiles and stand them on their heads in the soft earth of the forest.

The spirits of the hills obeyed the water god, and carried all but one of the little crocodiles into the dark forest where the sun never penetrates, and stood them up like posts. There they stand today, with their heads buried in the earth and their flat brown tails standing straight up in the air, a warning, that is always being renewed, to other crocodiles not to leave the lowlands. For these little wandering crocodiles have now all turned to trees, and the people call them the Rabo de Lagarto (the crocodile's tail). They cannot live in the sun, and they are only found in the dense shade of the coffee and orange groves or the wild forest. They are as sensitive to the cold winds and fogs as they are to the sun, and suffer from any change because they are not in their native lagoons along the Winding Snake.

When the one little crocodile that the water god overlooked awoke in the morning and learned what had happened to his companions, he ran as fast as he could to the banks of the Winding Snake, jumped in and swam home. When he told the old crocodiles the fate of all their young ones they began to weep. For a whole year they mourned and they shed so many tears that the mouth of the Winding Snake has ever since been salty. Since that time no crocodiles in all the world have ever climbed to the hills.

EAT BEAVER MEAT.

Newell Bear, who was chief of the old Tobique Indian tribe sixty-five years ago, has reached the great age of 100 years, and is probably the olrest Indian of full blood in America today, says the Bangor, Me., correspondent of the New York Sun. Chief Newell enjoyed robust health until he reached the age of 95, when he began to lose flesh and strength. Thereupon he went into the woods and remained for some months, subsisting entirely upon beaver meat, with the result, as he claims, that his strength was fully restored. Beaver meat, he declares, will cure any of the ills that flesh is heir to, if taken in time and in sufficient quantity.

There are now living in the valley of the Tobique river, in New Brunswick, and in Northern Maine four generations of the Bear family, something very unusual among Indians, and all are in good health. Chief Newell's eldest son, Peter, 75 years old, is one of the best guides in the Maine fish and game service. Chief Newell formerly guided many New York parties on hunting trips, but he has given that up now, making short journeys in the woods, as he desires to be in his own home at night, not knowing, he says, when the Great Spirit may call him.

The old chief used to be a great poacher, but no warden was ever able to catch him. Eight years ago he took to Boston the largest and finest caribou head ever taken in Maine.

Chief Bear was born in Andover, N. B., in April, 1788, and lived alternately in Maine and New Brunswick, according to hunting conditions. He has killed in his time over 1000 moose and as many deer, he says, "as there are cedars on the St. John."

This week there was a rumor that Bald mountain, on the Tobique river, near Chief Bear's home, had disappeared, swallowed up in the earthquake that shook New England last month. "Him lie fast, big," says Chief Bear. "can't shake down mountain—bottom of mountain ten-mile deep—heap strong."

FINE OUTLOOK FOR SUMMER SCHOOL

Attendance of Teachers at Duluth Will Be Unusually Large.

Accomodations In Way of Board and Room Are Needed.

The prospects for the state summer school at Duluth during the latter part of June and first part of July are regarded by the management as being very encouraging. President E. W. Bohannon, of the Duluth state normal school, who will be conductor of the summer school this year, says that he has already received letters of inquiry from teachers all over the Northwest, asking what the facilities will be for room and board during the session, which will begin June 20 and close July 29.

If the correspondence can be taken as a criterion, President Bohannon says the indications are that Duluth will have by far the most largely attended summer school ever held here.

The delightful summer climate of the head of the lakes, together with the opportunities offered for pleasure to the teachers during their recretion hours is proving a strong incentive for attendance here during the months of June and July, aside from the splendid advantages offered in the course of instruction under an able corp of teachers.

The prospectus of the summer school is now in the hands of the printers and will be distributed within the next few days.

President Bohannon has suggested that Duluth people having friends in other places who are interested in summer school work could greatly aid the cause by writing them of the advantages that will be offered here this year and mailing them copies of the prospectus. He believes that this personal method of advertising the school and the city will result in thronging Duluth with teachers for the summer school.

The sessions of the summer school will all be held at the Duluth state normal school.

The full complement of instructors, announced for the first time, since it was decided by the state educational authorities to hold a summer school here, this year, is as follows:

E. W. Bohannon, conductor ..... School management.
L. W. Kline ..... Psychology and pedagogy.
H. C. Strong..... History and civics.
J. W. Hubbard..... Geography, physics.
Herbert Blair ..... Botany, algebra and geometry.
Nellie W. Farnsworth ..... Music.
Dora Eaton ..... Arithmetic and physiology.
Olive B. Horne ..... Grammar.
Alice E. Woodman.. Drawing.

By virtue of an arrangement between the state superintendent of public instruction and the county superintendents of schools of St. Louis, Carlton, Lake, Cook and Itasca counties, the coming term is to be a joint state summer school and the teachers from all of the counties named are given a special invitation to attend.

The work of the summer school will be offered to meet the needs of two classes of students; those who desire to review the common branches and those who desire to earn normal credits.

Those carrying the reviews will not take more than four subjects, will recite once a day and will not receive normal credits unless they should pass examinations given at the end of the term to those seeking regular standings.

Persons electing the normal credits will be admitted and enrolled as regular students. Their records will become a part of the permanent records of the normal school and will be accepted in lieu of examinations for state teacher's certificates in accordance with the rules of the department of public instruction. Such students will carry not more than two subjects and recite twice a day in each. It is hoped that a large number will enroll for this class of work and so permanently identify themselves with the interests of the institution. Students already in the school and wishing to remove conditions or to make up deficiencies, in order to obtain a regular standing, will be provided for. Also all prospective students of the graduate courses who may be deficient in one or more subjects on the list of entrance requirements should take advantage of the opportunity to remove the deficiency.

Should there be a sufficient number desiring it provision will be made for a limited amount of more advanced and special work.

Any one holding a state teachers' certificate of the second grade, a county diploma, or certificates of the state high school board in arithmetic, geography, English grammar, United States history and physiology, will be admitted without examination to classes for those who are seeking normal credits. Entrance examinations in the subjects named will be held on the day of opening, June 20, for those who are unable to enter in any of the above described ways.

The daily work will begin at half past eight and close at 1 o'clock, unless it should prove impossible to accommodate all classes within this period. In any event all laboratory work will be done in the afternoon.

The daily program will provide for classes in English grammar, United States history, arithmetic, physics, algebra, geometry, geography, physiology, civics, reading, drawing, school management, psychology and general method. Other work, as already stated, will be offered if the number desiring it is sufficient and the time will permit.

All students are expected to enter on the first day and to be prepared to begin the regular class work on the day following. Enrollment cards will be furnished each person on the day of opening. It is desired that prospective students notify the conductor of their intention to enter the school, some time in advance of the opening.

Each person should bring with him any text books at all likely to be of service. Such other books as may be desired, and any supplies, can be had at the school at cost.

A list of rooms and boarding places will be on file at the office of President E. W. Bohannon, of the Duluth state normal school, to whom those desiring any further information should direct their inquiries.

ATTORNEYS DISAGREE

Two of Counsel For Diamond Match Company Pull Out.

Of the three prominent attorneys who represented the Diamond Match company at the hearing before Judge Morris in federal court of arguments on the motion for a temporary injunction against the Union Match company, of West Duluth, two, Paul Bakewell and F. R. Cornwall, of St. Louis, have withdrawn from the case, owing to a disagreement with John R. Nolan, of New York, the other attorney. Messrs. Bakewell and Cornwall have severed their conection with the company because they disagreed with Mr. Nolan on some of the points.

Thomas R. Pressnell, clerk of the federal court, yesterday received the following explanatory letter from Mr. Bakewell:

"On account of a misunderstanding between myself and John Nolan, who is the local counsel and solicitor for the Diamond Match company, of New York, F. R. Cornwall and myself are no longer solicitors for the complaintant and withdraw from all connection with the action in your court. I will ask you to communicate with John R. Nolan, 7 William street, New York, in all matters affecting the interest of the complainant's case.

"PAUL BAKEWELL,
"Of Bakewell & Cornwall."

Capt. Pressnell has filed the withdrawal and notified Mr. Nolan of the action.

HOPEFUL OF SETTLEMENT

Local Harbors to Vote on Lake Carriers' Proposition.

Cleveland, May 10.—Upon the request of representatives of the Masters' and Pilots' association, a joint conference between the executive committee of the Lake Carriers' asociation and the Masters' and Pilots' asosciation was held here yesterday afternoon. President Livingston, of the Lake Carriers, who presided at the conference, was seen last night and beyond expressing the belief that a settlement would be reached probably at the end of this week and that he thought it would be satisfactory to the Lake Carriers' association would make no statement as to what occurred at the meeting. From one of those in attendance it was learned that the Lake Carriers' association stands by its first position as embodied in the statement sent out Saturday night, in which it was announced that the association was willing to pay last season's wages. The matter was then taken up by the Masters' and Pilots', who agreed to recommend the acceptance of the proposition submitted by the several harbors along the lakes. The harbors are to hold meetings not later than Wednesday night of this week and their decision is to be made known to the headquarters in this city.

FARMER MURDERED.

Florence, Ala., May 10.—Great excitement prevails at Lexington, a small village twenty-three miles east of here, in Lauderdale county, where Bill Hammond, a prominent farmer, about 60 years old, was found murdered on the floor of his home, by members of his family, when they returned from church Sunday afternoon. His head had been beaten to a pulp with a dull instrument. Sheriff Hill returned to Florence without having found any clue to the murder.

OBJECT TO COST

Aldermen Disturbed at Expense of Aerial Bridge Approaches.

Expense of Armory Architect Also Causes a Protest.

The council last evening
Referred proposed appropriation of $8000 for bridge approach to city attorney.
Took steps to establish secondary water connection with West End.
Discontinued Second street improvement.

The depleted condition of the permanent improvement fund was one of the chief topics of discussion at the meeting of the council last evening.

The matter was brought up by the question of appropriating $8000 for approaches to the ferry bridge and $125 for an architect to superintend the construction of the addition to the armory. Aldermen McEwen and Sang fought the latter appropriation vigorously, as they did the original one.

"This is a serious matter with me," said Alderman McEwen. "You appropriated $2650 from this fund in the first place for the addition. Now there comes $8000 for the bridge approaches, and $125 for the architect for the armory. I am given to understand that the armory needs $1500 for improvements, and where does that leave our fund. We won't have a cent for roads when you get through. I won't oppose this last appropriation for an architect if there is a clear understanding that it is to come from the original appropriation of $2650, but I am opposed to giving any more money than has already been granted."

"I hold exactly the same views as Alderman McEwen," said Alderman Sang. "I want to have it clearly understood that no more than the original appropriation shall be spent on the armory addition. The pay of the architect should be included in the cost, and I am opposed to any further expenditures."

The authority to employ an architect was finaly granted with the understanding that he should be paid from the original appropriation.

The question of appropriating $8000 for the ferry bridge approaches also aroused some discussion.

"As I remember it, we were led to understand that the total cost of the bridge would not exceed $100,000," said Alderman McEwen. "It seems to me that some of the other parts of the city are in need of money, and I would like to know if there is not some other fund from which this could be taken."

"I am frank to say that I also thought that $100,000 would cover it," said Alderman Walker. "But the contract is let and I don't see how we can get around it. I don't care what fund the money is taken from as long as it is forthcoming, but the bridge would be of no use without the approaches."

"The old members of the council will remember that I asked the members of the bridge commission if $100,000 covered all of the expenses in connection with the bridge," said Alderman Sang. "They told us that it did, and now we find ourselves asked to contribute $8000 more. I would like to ask the city attorney if it is legal for us to appropriate this extra $8000 after the state law was passed limiting the expense to $100,000."

The matter was finally referred to the city attorney for his opinion.

The plan to build an additional water main connecting the West End and West Duluth with the main part of the city, will be taken up at a conference between the water board and the council committee on light and water. It is proposed to extend the main on West First street to Piedmont avenue, where it will connect with a main already laid, and will form a secondary connection with the West End in case of emergency.

"After our experience in being shut off from a water supply for several hours," said Alderman Haven, "I think the necessity for a secondary system is clear, and I believe the water board owes it to the people west of the point of rocks to put in a second connection."

"Before we decide on the conference," said Alderman Waugh, "I should like to find out how to get the information needed. On several occasions since I have been a member of this council I have attempted to get information from the management of the water department, but have failed in all cases except where it was forced."

The conference was finally ordered.

A petition asking for the improvement of East Fifth street from Woodland avenue to Twenty-third avenue east, was presented. It involves the construction of a steel bridge over the ravine between Twenty-second and Twenty-third avenues in accordance with the plans submitted by the city engineer. The petition was referred to the board of public works.

A petition containing the signatures of a number of the property owners on East Fourth street, between Eighteenth and Twenty-third avenues, was presented to the council. The petition protested against the construction of a sewer in this portion of the street. The matter was referred to the proper committee.

City Attorney Bert Fesler reported that no resolution which the council could pass at this time could make the old petition for improving Second street valid next year, and that if the improvements were to be taken up again at that time a new petition would be necessary. The improvement was ordered to be discontinued.

City Engineer McGilvray reported that the cost of repairing the bridges on Grand avenue west so that they accommodate the small cars would be $2656.50, and that it would require $5636.40 to put them in condition to carry the large cars. The report was asked for by Alderman Sang.

The contracts for the West Duluth sewers were confirmed as awarded by the board of public works.

The appointments of Mayor Cullum to the library board, as given in The Herald last evening, were confirmed.

The council ordered the circulation of a petition to improve Fifth avenue west between Superior and Michigan streets.

Additional fire hydrants were ordered at Fourth street and Twentieth avenue east, Oxford and Wilkin streets, on Oneota street at Forty-fourth, Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth avenues west, and at Rene street and Forty-fifth avenue.

The license of Joseph Sheehy to run an employment office was held up for a week to secure the report of the chief of police.

HE COUNSELS MODERATION

Official of Longshoremen Advises Against Hasty Demands.

In a circular letter from H. C. Barter, general secretary-treasurer of the International Longshoremen, Marine and Transport Workers' association, members of the local longshoremen's union are warned against making hasty demands of their employers, for the reason that it is thought the extreme height of prosperity which the country has been enjoying has been reached, and that the chances of gaining increases of wages during what is regarded as a time of depression are very slim.

The letter states that such attempts to get increases in wages are foolhardy and often result in losing all of the advantages and advancement that has been gained by years of hard work, and that the union itself becomes imperiled. It is further stated that the full power of the union is needed to protect its members. Its resources should not be taxed to support unwise attempts to force up wages in the face of unfavorable conditions.

The letter asserts that a gradual depression, partly due to the fact that this is presidential year, is setting in, and a bad year predicted.

TRAIN MAKES FAST RUN.

Lincoln, Neb., May 10.—A special train on the Northwestern carrying a party of Lincoln business men on a tour of the state, made a record run yesterday between Fremont and Norfolk Junction. The distance is eighty-one miles and the actual running time was sixty minutes. This establishes a new record for Northwestern trains in Nebraska.

NECESSARY.

People May Go Without Food For Days But Not Without Sleep.

Fasters have gone without food for many days at a time but no one can go without sleep. "For a long time I have not been sleeping well often lying awake for two or three hours during the night up to three weeks ago, but now I sleep sound every night and wake up refreshed and vigorous," says a California woman.

"Do you know why? It's because I used to drink coffee but three weeks ago I cut off the coffee and begun using Postum. Twice since then I have drank coffee and both times I passed a sleepless night, and so I am doubly convinced coffee caused the trouble and Postum removed it.

"My brother has been in the habit of drinking coffee three times a day. He has been troubled with sour stomach and I often would notice him getting soda from the can to relieve the distress in his stomach; lately hardly a day passed without a dose of soda for relief.

"About two weeks ago he asked me for a cup of Postum—said he liked it well enough to give up coffee and since then has been drinking Postum three times a day and says he has not once been troubled with sour stomach." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Even after this lady's experience with coffee her brother did not suspect coffee was causing his sour stomach, but easily proved it.

Coffee is not suspected in thousands of cases just like this but it's easily proved. A 10-days' trial works wonders, and of course "there's a reason."

The White Sox are playing a picked team from the Commercial league this afternoon at the baseball park.

The grounds are in good condition for the game. They were thoroughly rolled yesterday and are now level and dry. The team will thus have a fair chance to show what it can do on a fast field, and the game should be a good one to witness.

The amateur team which will oppose the Northern league men is one of the strongest that could be picked in the city. Earle Lowe will be in the box, with Menelce as substitute pitcher. Gehring will pitch for the White Sox.

THE ANSWER OF BRAZIL

Final Rejoinder to Peru on the Acre Dispute.

Washington, May 10.—The Associated Press last night was furnished by the Brazilian charge his legation's final rejoinder to the Peruvian legation regarding the Acre dispute. The rejoinder of Brazil asserts that Peru, when she adopted the treaty of 1851 the principle of uti possitets recognized the right of Brazil to the territories in the Alta Yuora and Alta Purus. Futhermore, it is said, Peru further recognized Brazil's rights by the treaty of 1851, when it was expicitly stipulated that the boundary line should not go any further in the south than the river Yarway. The statement then says:

"Notwithstanding this, Brazel, acting in a fair and friendly spirit always was disposed to admit and reserve the claim of Peru, especially in a very formal way in the treaty of Petropolis of November last, settling our dispute with Bolivia. But between allowing a claim and recognizing a right there is great difference. The admission of the claim is, on the part of Brazil, a proof of good will, but it does not preclude the assertion of her right recognized by Peru and still less any implication or right on behalf of Peru.

"Going still further, Brazil doing honor to her traditions and the perscription of her constitution, has always shown her readiness to submit the dispute to arbitration, on two elementary conditions:

"The presentation for discussion of the titles on which Peru bases her claim, in order to seek first, a direct agreement, and the evacuation of the territory unlawfully occupied by Peru.

"There is, therefore, no exaction on the part of Brazil."

New York, May 10.—A dispatch from Manaos announces that an important battle has been fought between Brazilian forces and the Peruvians, near the river Chandlos, cables the Herald's correspondent at Rio Janeiro, Brazil. The Peruvians were completely routed.

The Brazilian troops, under Gen. Medirlos, started from Manaos, going directly to the front when the Acre dispute became acute.

In spite of the importance of this news it is the general opinion here that there will be no war between Peru and Brazil.

ARREST IS MADE

L. Van Praagh Charged With Playing Baseball on Sunday.

Expectation That Test of Matter Is to Be Made.

L. J. Van Praagh, manager of the Duluth baseball team, was arrested this morning on a warrant, charging him with playing baseball on Sunday.

The warrant was sworn out by a man named P. O. Sloan, whose name does not appear in the directory. It reads as follows:

"P. A. Sloan, being duly sworn, alleges that on the eighth day of May, Leonard J. Van Praagh did unlawfully, wrongfully and wilfully engage in playing baseball and made a noise disturbing the peace of the day upon the said eighth day of May, 1904, said day being the first day of the week, commonly known as the Sabbath day, by then and there as aforesaid, engaging in a game of baseball upon the grounds known as baseball park in the said city of Duluth, Minn., which said game of baseball is a serious interruption of the repose and religious liberty of the community, contrary to the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace and dignity of the state of Minnesota."

The warrant was served upon Mr. Van Praagh this morning and he appeared in the municipal court before Judge Windom shortly before noon. He stated to the court that L. C. Harris had been engaged to act as counsel and he asked time in which to communicate with him before entering a plea. An attempt was made to reach Mr. Harris by telephone, but he was engaged in the district court, and Judge Windom allowed the case to stand over until this afternoon, when a plea will be entered.

There is but little doubt that P. A. Sloan whose name appeared on the complaint, is a "straw" man, who is representing some person or persons who wish their names to remain unknown. It is claimed by some that he is appearing in the interests of the opponents of Sunday baseball, while others assert that he is a representative of the baseball men themselves, who desire to have the question fought out and determined as quickly as possible.

It is not likely that any attempt will be made to bring the players themselves into court, as the arrest of the manager will be sufficient to decide the matter.

The Duluth manager will doubtless enter a plea of not guilty this afternoon, and will probably ask for a jury trial.

The baseball men are much elated over the recent decision of a New York judge and they claim that their position is a strong one from a legal standpoint.

Mr. Van Praagh was allowed to go on his own recognizance.

WILL MEET AT HOUGHTON

Western Passenger Association to Convene There In July.

George W. Hibbard, general passenger agent of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road, some time ago extended on behalf of the road an invitation to the Western Passenger association to hold its annual meeting this summer at Houghton and become the guests of the South Shore. At a meeting of the association held last week in Chicago, it was decided to accept the invitation and a jolly lot of general passenger agents will meet in Houghton on July 12, and continue their deliberations as long as necessary to get done their business and show their respects to the host.

The visitors are to be provided with special excursion trains to run through the copper country when they visit Houghton and it is expected that they will include Hancock, Calumet, Lake Linden and Dollar Bay among the points of interest to which they will go. A steamer trip from Houghton to Isle Royale is among the incidents promised for their pleasure.

Last June the Duluth-Superior association was invited to visit the copper country by the South Shore, and held its meeting at Houghton, at which time representatives of the general offices of the roads centering in St. Paul were present.

The house of lords in giving judgment expressed doubt as to whether Mr. Winans intended to abandon his American domicile but said the crown certainly had not made out a conclusive case.

The board of control of the Michigan College of Mines of Houghton has awarded the contract for the construction of the metallurgical and gymnasium buildings to Paul F. P. Mueller, who underbid ten contractors. His bid for the metallurgical building was $26,000, and for the gymnasium, $25,000.

Iron Mountain—A postoffice is to be opened at the little village of Granite Bluff. There are about a dozen families there.

Menominee—A new record for mail delivery in the rural districts of Menominee county was made in April, when there were 5,671 pieces delivered at homes on the Menominee-Ingalliston route. This is an average of 218 pieces a day, which is considered a large delivery for any rural route. Mail is delivered at over a hundred homes and the route covers about twenty miles.

Richard H. Kirtland, superintendent of the schools of Flint, Mich., has been elected superintendent of the Menominee schools for the coming year to succeed B. S. Hopkins, resigned, at a salary of $1,900 per year. He is a graduate of the University of Michigan, has had ten years' experience as superintendent and has made a good record at Flint, the board of education of which desired to retain him. His application for the Menominee position was one of fifty.

Sault Ste. Marie—Cora Tripp, five year old daughter of J. Tripp, proprietor of the Clifton hotel, at the Soo, was the victim of a peculiar accident which fortunately did not terminate seriously. The little girl was walking along the side of the dining room holding a plate in each hand when she suddenly disappeared through the floor, falling to the basement. She had stepped on a small mat which had covered an open hot air register not in commission and had dropped like a flash. Those in the dining room rushed to the basement and found the little tot standing up with both plates still in her hands. She was quite uninjured and hadn't even broken the plates after dropping twelve feet to a cement floor.

Escanaba—After baffling postoffice officials for over ten months Joseph H. Ledoux, wanted on a charge of forging the name of another to postoffice money orders, upon which he obtained $150, was arrested at a lumber camp near Escanaba by Deputy Postoffice Inspector Bernard J. Falch. The prisoner made a full confession. By taking the name of an acquaintance whose home was at St. Flavian, Quebec, and sending appeals to friends home for money and, it is alleged, forging other names to his letters, several sums of money were received by him in postoffice money orders. By impersonating the person to whom the orders were made payable, it is said, he obtained $150 in small amounts at frequent intervals.

PLANTING TREES

Park Board Setting Out Those Received Just Arrived.

Those Ordered By Individuals Are Going In First.

The park board commenced the work of planting trees this morning, and a number of men are at work in the vicinity of Woodland avenue and Fourth street, setting out the young saplings.

The trees are some of those which arrived last Saturday and which have been sold to private individuals. About 225 of them are being planted on East Fourth street by the different property owners in that vicinity. The employes of the park board are doing the work and the cost is charged up to the property owners.

Between 700 and 800 trees in all were received Saturday. This will be a sufficient number to fill all the orders which have been received from private individuals up to the present time, and leave a small surplus to be used in the parks. Secretary Helm, of the park board, stated this morning that he did not expect many further orders for trees on account ofg the lateness of the season.

The work of planting the trees in the parks has not yet been commenced. The orders from private citizens will be attended to first, and it is not likely that the men will commence setting out the trees in the parks until the early part of next week.

In addition to the trees the park board received a large number of shrubs and hedge plants Saturday, making a total of about 2600 pieces in all. These will also be set out in the parks as soon as the work of planting the trees is completed.

The shrubs will be equally distributed among the different parks in the city, but the majority of the young saplings will be set out in Central or Zenith park, at Fifteenth avenue west.

A force of men was set at work this morning cleaning up the parks and getting them in condition for the rush of summer visitors. The trees are just commencing to show their foliage and within a week or ten days the parks will assume their regular summer appearance. There will be no extensive changes this year, beyond the addition of a few trees and shrubs in each of them and probably some new flower gardens in Lester park.

The work on the stone culvert on the boulevard is nearing completion. This was commenced last fall, and it will replace the last of the old wooden bridges on the drive. The board expects to have it completed before the summer visitors commence to arrive.

RESPONSE WAS QUICK

The account of the burning of the home of Axel Erickson, the settler living about five miles beyond Woodland, which appeared in an issue of The Herald last week, has resulted in a large number of contributions being received by the family, and the immediate wants of the mother and the children are now being supplied.

Humane Officer Withrow received contributions of bedding, clothes, furniture and money, which were immediately forwarded to the sticken family.

Erickson has succeeded in erecting a temporary shelter for his family and will be able to erect a more permanent structure during the summer weather.

The family is now well supplied with all the necessities of life and is probably in that respect in as good circumstances as before the fire.

Erickson was unable to express his gratitude to the humane officer for the interest he had shown in the case.

CIGARMAKERS' STRIKE.

Chicago, May 10.—Three hundred union cigarmakers have gone on a strike here. The union two weeks ago decided to ask for changes, which meant the establishment of a higher minimum wage rate, through the doing away of certain smaller sizes of cigars. A third of the 800 shops in the city have signed.

HARDENED CRIMINAL

Self-Confessed Thief Has Long Record of Crime.

Frank P. Sherwood, who pleaded guilty to grand larceny in the first degree in the district court yesterday, has one of the worst criminal records of any prisoner who has been confined in the county jail for many years past.

Sentence was suspended on him by Judge Cant, while the police authorities endeavored to secure some details of his past history. Chief Troyer received word from the Minneapolis police this morning that Sherwood was wel known in that city. Chief Conroy stated that he had served time in the Massachusetts state training school and reformatory. Later he was sentenced to three years in the Stillwater prison for a burglary committed in Moorhead. He was arrested in St. Paul for holding up a Chinese restaurant, but was acquitted. He was also served six or seven short sentences in the Minneapolis workhouse for vagrancy.

The police will lay the record before Judge Cant before sentence is passed on the prisoner.

St. Paul, May 10.—Gen. John B. Sanborn, brother of Judge W. H. Sanborn, of the United States circuit court of appeals, who has been sick for several weeks at his home here, is in a critical condition. Gangrene of the foot set in several days ago and his condition has become alarming. A general berakdown has reduced his weakened condition and rendered his chances of recovery very slight.

TAGGART HAS BATTLE WON

Hearst Forces Have Been Badly Beaten In Indiana.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 10.—Estimates based on reports from every county in Indiana indicates that National Committeeman Taggart and his associates will have at least 874 votes in the state convention Thursday to select delegates to the national convention, while William Randolph Hearst will have 526. There are now 120 contested votes and 33 delegates to select. If Hearst should get these he would still be in a hopeless minority, as there will be 1547 delegates, making 774 necessary to choice.

While these figures are not official they come in most cases from members of the various delegations or men in very close touch with the local conditions and unless the Hearst people are able to turn a few unexpected tricks after the crowd arrives, it would not be surprising if the strength of the opposing forces should be shown to be as here given. On the face of these returns Taggart will have no serious trouble in knocking out Hearst and delivering the state to Judge Parker.

A summary of the reports show that Hearst is sure of but one district—the Twelfth—which means but two out of thirty delegates. He seems to have an excellent chance in the Third, Sixth and Tenth unless the contests are decided against him.

JAPS TO LOCATE

Direct "Development Effect" of World's Fair.

New Orleans, May 10.—Probably the first "development effect" to be felt in the Louisiana territory as a result of the Louisiana purchase exposition, is the semi-official recognition given by the Japanese commission to the immigration movement from Japan to the rice growing ground in Louisiana and Texas. About the first of June a number of Japanese will be taken through the rice country on a tour of inspection. About the same time a party of farmers will arrive at Houston. They will settle.

U. S. ATTACHES ARRIVE.

St. Petersburg, May 10.—Capt. Bentley Mott, the military attache of the United States embassy at Paris, and Maj. Macomb, United States army, have arrived here. The former will remain in this city as military attache of the embassy during the progress of the war. Maj. Macomb will proceed to the front. Both officers have been invited to ride with the suite of the emperor in the big May review, which is to take place tomorow.

TOOK MORPHINE

Because She Thought Her Husband Loved Another.

Sioux Falls, Iowa, May 10.—Mrs. Henry Smith, aged 29, committed suicide yesterday. Remorse for sin and unhappy because she believed her husband was showing attention to her sister, who was visiting them, caused her to take morphine. She staggered to the room occupied by her little daughter and fell prostrate beside the little one on the bed and expired. She was married to Smith at Alcester, S. D., three years ago, he being her third husband. Her mother, Mrs. C. S. Lewis, resides near Mapleton, Iowa.

HILL'S GIFT.

May Get a Red Hat For Ireland.

Rome, May 10.—Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul, may be appointed cardinal as a result of the gift of James J. Hill and wife of $1,500,000 for the erection of a cathedral in St. Paul to cost $3,000,000.

American churchmen caught the significance of the gift as soon as the announcement was made at the vatican. Other prelates now agree that if Ireland secures a cathedral, the red hat will soon follow.

It really looks like spring.

So tomorrow will be a good day to come and see the new spring things we show in such profusion.

THAT EXTRA MAIN.

It is a matter of general gratification among the residents of the western end of the city that the council last night took the initiatory steps previous to the laying of a second main for the water supply of that district. It was stated some time ago in a council meeting that the second main could not be built this year because it would cost too much, on account of the length of main necessary, but where there is a will there is generally found a way, and it has been discovered that the laying of a new main on First street from Thirteenth to Seventeenth avenues west, at comparatively small cost, will at least assure water protection to the western end of the city in case the other main should break anywhere in he vicinity of the point of rocks.

In discussing this matter before the council last evening Alderman Waugh used some langnage which would indicate that a spirit of hostility exists between the water board and the council. If this is true it is unfortunate, and steps should at once be taken to arbitrate these differences and reach a basis of mutual understanding and mutual helpfulness. No department of the city can be expected to do as well where there is friction of this kind as it will if all city officers can work together for its success. It certainly ought not to be a difficult matter either for the council or for any citizen to secure information that may be necessary as to the water system and if there is any reason why such information cannot be obtained the people will be disposed to resent it when they find out where the fault lies. And they will find out in time.

It is to be hoped that nothing will prevent the early completion of a second water main along the point of rocks. There is no improvement in the city where the necessity is more imperative.

A HOPEFUL SIGN.

Another large corporation has discovered that it pays best to keep out of politics and trust to the honor and integrity of the people that justice will be done. Some months ago it was announced by the Amalgamated Copper company that it would take no further hand in Montana politics, and the Anaconda Standard asserts that it has kept its word as far as municipal politics is concerned. Now comes John Morney, a representative of the company, who, in addressing the Jefferson club of Great Falls, made the statement "authoritatively and advisedly and for publication," that the Amalgamated company will take no further hand in the politics of Montana; that it asks no favors that are not accorded to individuals and companies whose business interests are in the state; that it has no slate for the approaching state convention or for any other convention.

This announcement is considered by the press of Montana as authoritative and convincing, and a matter that gives general satisfaction to the voters throughout the state.

It is a matter of frequent remark in this state, that if certain large corporate interests in Minnesota would discontinue the habit of meddling in political affairs entirely it would not only be better for the corporations, and less costly in a financial way, but the interests of the people would be better served. The corporation that would rather pay out its money for political expenses and for legislative lobbying than to pay it out in just taxation is making a mistake that will result ultimately in its own financial loss.

It is a matter for general gratification that a concern like the Amalgamated Copper company has recognized the folly of mixing in political affairs with the expectation of receiving favors that will redound to its financial benefit. The net result there as elsewhere must be a balance on the wrong side of the ledger.

IT ALL DEPENDS.

In a recent issue The Herald called attention to this assertion of the New York Sun: "When the Republican leaders turn their backs on 'trust busting,' the merry prosperity which began and ended with McKinley may come bounding back to us." In commenting thereon, The Herald suggested that possibly the end of this "merry prosperity" and McKinley's demise were simply events coincident and that the stock waterers might have brought their present punishment upon themselves as a result of their own rapacity and greed.

Now comes the Wall Street Journal, a financial organ of recognized authority, which refers to the Sun's statement as "a very good example of the kind of humbug that becomes current coin in a presidential campaign." The Journal ventures the statement that there are a few people in the community who do not make it a practice to surrender their reasoning powers, and declares "prosperity, so far as the great mass of the people are concerned, is not measured necessarily by the success or failure of financial schemes," but rather "prosperity for the general mass depends in the main upon an abundance of useful commodities, such as fuel, food and clothing, and upon the moderate prices for the same."

It depends much upon the point of view whether times are prosperous or not. The present affords a season of prosperity to the man who, having bought at a low price, sells at a higher one, but the wage-earner who finds the cost of his living increased without corresponding increase in his wages, and the speculator who purchased watered stocks at two and three times their present value would feel, perhaps, that prosperity had departed. But it is hardly fair to lay these conditions to the death of McKinley and the succession of Roosevelt. Rather they are a result of the people's own folly in expecting to get something for nothing or the effort to add to their prosperity by taxing themselves for the benefit of a few. Certainly Roosevelt has done nothing during his term, with the exception of talking, that McKinley would not have done had he lived.

The Wall Street Journal states the case plainly and concisely when it says: "When these commodities once more rule at moderate prices, the general community will be in a fair way to become prosperous, and not until then. People who are interested in difficult investigations may amuse themselves by endeavoring to trace the connection between Mr. McKinley and the supply of these commodities. When they have done so they will be in a position to decide how much real meaning there is in the expression, 'McKinley prosperity.'"

ADVERTISING MINNESOTA.

Minnesota has attained a high rank as a producer of wealth. It is one of the foremost states in the output of lumber, and in the production of iron ore it leads not only the Union, but every country in the world, except England and Germany. The superior quality of its flour and dairy products has won for it the name of the "bread and butter state." Wheat and iron are the sinews of the world's commerce today, and thus Minnesota occupies a commanding position.

But Minnesota as yet is sparsely settled. If it were as densely populated as Massachusetts, there would be 28,000,000 people in the North Star state. Three counties—St. Louis, Itasca and Beltrami—are larger than the states of Vermont, Connecticut and Rhode Island combined. The population of these counties by the last census was 108,535, more than half of that number being in the city of Duluth. There has been a large increase since the taking of the federal census, but there is room here for many thousands more people. The three states named have sixteen times the population of the three counties, yet no one will question the fact that the natural agricultural resources of these three counties are at least as great as of the three well-known New England states, and it is safely within bounds to say that they are greater.

Not one-fourth of the area of Minnesota is put to real profitable use, that is to say scientifically cultivated and made to pay what each acre should. The question of how to give the country at large a knowledge of the opportunities of our state for homeseekers and investors will be discussed at a state convention to be held in St. Paul June 14 and 15. If people who are alive today want to enjoy the prosperity which attends the active development of a country abounding in resources and divert a portion of the tide of growth now sweeping to South, Southwest, West and to other states of the Northwest, even to Canada, they should be present at this convention or give it their cordial endorsement in some form. Its importance to the state cannot be over-estimated.

DULUTH'S FILTHY ALLEYS.

Were it not for the exceptional purity and cleansing properties of Lake Superior air, Duluth by rights would be suffering from a pestilence of some nature. No man ever saw alleys in more filthy condition than those in many sections of Duluth at this time, especially in those sections not served by sewers.

Talk about purifying Havana and Santiago—it is a question whether those places ever were as filthy as some of Duluth's alleys are at the present moment. It only needs a short trip through the alleys of West Duluth to convince any fair-minded person that this charge is absolutely true. After an inspection of this sort it will become at once a question whether some of the people whose homes adjoin these festering cesspools and rotting stinkpots are in their right minds. It is at once a convincing argument that the health department inspectors are neither doing their duty nor compelling the people to do theirs.

This may be considered strong language, but it is no stronger than the present situation warrants. Many people are living in the vicinity of these filthy alleys in blissful ignorance of the actual condition of affairs and if these conditions are allowed to continue much longer, a pestilence of some kind is sure to result. Then these same blissfully ignorant people will perhaps wonder why there is a rage of typhoid fever, scarlet fever, diphtheria or other malignant disease.

It is time for the people to wake up and not only demand better work from the health office, but do something themselves. The present condition of many alleys in Duluth is a result of nothing less than criminal negligence.

THE FIELD SURVEY

The New York World shows that Grover Cleveland at least "stretches the truth" in regard to those bond sales during his last administration. If Grover misrepresents in regard to this, why would he hesitate to misrepresent his former attitude toward negroes and railroad riots?

Whether it was the threat of "free silver and free riot," or the course of Grover Cleveland's administration that defeated the Democratic party in 1894, it will remain a disputed point as long as time lasts, because it never can be proved which was responsible. But the fact remains that the party was defeated in that year and never has been successful since.

The New York Times has sued William R. Hearst for libel because he published a story to the effect that August Belmont controlled the Times. It was hardly supposed that Belmont was as tough a character as that.

Uncle Joe Cannon refuses to became the administration's political popgun.

Grover evidently wishes it understood that he never entertained Altgeld at lunch either.

The Indianapolis News says: "Mr. Cleveland never has any trouble in making his meaning clear." No; his meaning is clear that he would like to get the Democratic presidential nomination. But his meaning is much clearer than his record.

TALKS WITH THE STATE PRESS.

"Smiles at the bar mean tears in the home," says C. D. I., in the Cass Lake Times. Yes, sometimes. And there are also tears in some homes where there are no "smiles" at the bar.

This is the way the recent drowning at Rice lake, near Aitkin, is described by the Aitkin Republican:

> It is believed that all the men were overcome with fear, and did not exert any effort at self-preservation; for it is stated the water is no more than five feet deep in any part of the lake, and if presence of mind had been exercised, it is believed they could have held out until help reached them.

The attempt to make heroes of men who were too scared to stand up straight and save their lives is a little far fetched.

> The deree of desecration to which our national flag, the glorious stars and stripes, is subjected to in these days in spite of all the prohibitive legislation state and national against it, is quite surprising. During the recent session of the Daughters of the American Revolution at Washington, the members were furious over the matter. Even at a table in the room they were using, where curios and relics were being sold, an American flag was used for a table cover while in the White House is a decorated pickle dish, upon which the flag also appears, with the monstrous error of its having "fourteen stripes."

This is, indeed, horrible! It is presumed that the Le Sueur Sentinel expects the nation to go to eternal smash as a result of these base uses of a painted piece of cotton.

The Grand Marais Herald reports a building boom in that thriving town. Turning from municipal to political booms, the Grand Marais paper says:

> Joseph W. Folk, the bane of the boodlers, is making a clean sweep for governor of Missouri, without regard to party. Even the Duluth News Tribune is supporting him.

The Albert Lea Tribune has discovered in one the numerous candidates for railroad and warehouse commissioner, a man whom, it thinks, would do something in behalf of the public:

> This is more like it. A. D. Gray of Preston for railroad and warehouse commissioner. Mr. Gray not only has a robust voice but a vigorous backbone to stand for what he thinks is right. If Fillmore county is solid for Mr. Gray he should make an excellent showing in the state convention.

"Mr. Hoch is rather fond of Deer River as his is the only beer sold by the nine saloons here," says the Deer River News. It is also evident that the denizens of Deer River are also very fond of Hoch. Hoch, Reiner!

Bena has won out. Hurrah for Bena! Again—a bas Richards!

The fellow who writes "not exactly news" for the Faribault Journal is in the horse business up to his neck. That is—he is—unless it is somebody else. He says:

> Born, to our old black driving mare, a browse-whiskered, wobbly-legged female mare filly colt of the feminine gender. Horsemen from all over Iowa for three blocks in all directions have examined it and pronounced it as being threatened with speed. It is from Woodline, owned Bill Noonan, damned by everybody. Our boy, who formerly played football, is now on his claim in North Dakota and we want to trade a set of shinguards, a nose guard, a chest protector and a red cap with a tassel on it for a set of toe weights, a pair of trotting boots, a red blanket and two brass disappins four inches long. They say the younger you begin training a fast horse the sooner your bank book will be kept in nice red ink.

IF YOU DO NOT KNOW, YOU OUGHT TO KNOW:

That there is no immediate danger of our supply of alum giving out. In California alone there are two mountains that are estimated to contain 1,000,000 pounds of pure alum.

That our war with Spain cost us $350,000,000; the Boer war ran up to $1,400,000,000.

That the new Railway Exchange building in Chicago houses 5000 people and the new Postoffice in that same city will afford office room to 8000 regular employes.

That there was not a really fireproof building in the burned district of Toronto; there were one or two so-called slow-burning structures, heavily timbered, that the authorities say went just about as fast as the other tinder boxes. It is to be hoped that our Canadian friends will improve their methods and put up a few buildings now, constructed of steel well covered with brick and fireproof tile and thereby reduce not only the risk, but the cost of insurance at a very slight increase in the cost of building. Even there where wood was so plentiful a few years ago a framed structure costs but 10 per cent or so less than a full-fledged fireproof building.

That Germany keeps about $30,000,000 in gold coin stored away for war emergencies and prides herself upon the fact of being able to put 2,500,000 men in the field within ten days' notice.

That up to date the New York subway has cost $32,000,000, when completed, including property, etc., purchased, it will cost $40,000,000.

That there are figures to prove that the cost of living has increased 6 per cent during the past year, and that 1½ per cent of that increase was added during the month of February last. Flour, meat and nearly all commodities have gone up in price, some as much as 100 per cent, yet there has not been any marked increase of salaries during that time. The country, true, is prosperous, but the small fry is not feeling it.

That the revenue of the Suez canal has decreased in the past year though the tonnage has slightly increased, something to a total of 11,906,000 tons for 1903, of which 7,403,000 tons were British in origin and carried in British bottoms. The revenue was $20,000,000.

HOTEL GOSSIP

Amos Shephard, of Hibbing, is at the Spalding. Mr. Shephard is superintendent for the Corrigan & McKinney company, owners of the Stevenson and other mines. Speaking of the mining conditions he said they were very quiet just now with an outlook for no change, owing to the delay in the navigation season of the tie-up of the vessels owing to the hitch between the masters and pilots and the vessel owners.

Most of the underground mines have full stock piles, Mr. Shephard says, and the steam shovel mines cannot operate until the vessels get into place for them to load into. The situation is quieter than for a long while, owing to the unusual combination of circumstances.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Mawhinney, of Hibbing are at the McKay.

A man at the McKay today remarked the fact that he had seen in a Minneapolis paper an advertisement for two barbers to go to Hibbing with the promise of wages of $15 per week and half over $26. The advertisement stated that no "booze fighters" need apply for the places.

"I've seen a good many advertisements for barbers wanted in different places in this country and mighty seldom any better offer of wages, if ever. At any rate I don't recollect of a higher figure. The barber—the kind of journeyman barber that I have in mind—is a great mover, and frequently the boss barber gets a figure up to a pretty high notch for that class of labor in order to get a good man and hold on to him. You notice the 'ad' says that no 'booze fighters' need apply. That's a pretty good phrase, and fits the case in good style, but all the ones that are the journeymen that I speak of are not 'booze fighters' by any means, but simply love to rove, and thereby make their name more apt than they probably think about.

"I had an experience with a barber once in a city where I lived, and it was a good illustration of the roving character of them. He was a colored fellow and a pretty fair handler of the blade. I shaved myself most of the time, but went to him for getting my hair cut, as he knew how I wanted it and I did not have to begin with a preamble and resolutions or the initiative and referendum every time I wanted my locks shingled a little.

"Every little while I'd go to that shop, or place, and find some other enterprise located in it, for Jack (that was his name) had moved. I followed that African around that village as faithfully as I would have hung to a brother. Every new shop he had would be more desirable from any point of view than the former one was. If you would believe what he said. Finally he had a fine new shop in the best location in the town, and I thought he was going to stick. But it was not so to be. One day I went to the place and found it dark and locked up. He was gone and all his crew with him. I saw one of them afterward, and he said Jack had had trouble with the landlord, a scrap about some improvements that he had promised he would do if the landlord would give him the place, and he had to get out. He had at last moved to another town and I had to change barbers. But I suppose if my family had not located in the city I would have moved after him. I had taht fellow cut my hair in six different shops, all his own, in less than that many years."

If a person expected a friend to be in the city and did not know when that friend was going to arrive nor where he might stop, and would visit some of the leading hotels daily for a while and scan the register of the incoming and outgoing nomads, the aforesaid anxious person doing the hunting would run across some peculiar things. He would want them explained, and he might ask the clerk or the proprietor or somebody, and he might get the right information. Then again he might not.

One of the most noticeable things on the hotel register from day to day is the frequency of the same signature. This is often the entry made by someone who drops in for meals only, and it is oftener made by the one who wants to avoid paying a full day's rate day in and day out. For there are all sorts of dodges in this world for the practice of economy, and these economical guests are usually the ones that the landlord has a well-seasoned harpoon ready for.

The economical one is usually from up country somewhere, and may come in to stay a couple of days—sometimes a week. He comes in late at night and gets a room. In the morning he takes breakfast.

He has been stopping on the American plan, so that bed and breakfast foots up to half a day's board, which he pays. He says he will be back that evening and would like the same room reserved for him. The clerk says "all right." The request is considered pretty nearly the apex of nerve, for in busy times hotels have plenty of people wanting rooms that are willing to take them by the twenty-four hours, with meals included, and not for one night at a time.

"Yes, sir, those are the boys we've got it in for," said a clerk to his Inquisitor. "Our rate is so much per day, say two dollars, and these fellows want bed and breakfast for a dollar, give up the room, want it reserved for them for the night to come, and in the meantime we may be doing a good business and got a chance to let that room a dozen times over to some fellow who comes in before dinner. If he don't come in before dinner it's almost sure some fellow's going to want it before supper time. But it leaves us in the position of a man who has something he wants to sell but can't sell it. During those two meals the man that asks the room to be held is out probably getting free lunches with a schooner of beer or eating coffee and 'sinkers' at some not over 'tony' restaurant. But we usually get back at those fellows some way or another. Oh yes, they pay for the room during the time it's reserved, and don't you let it slip your memory. There are more ways of killing a cat than by feeding it pate des fois gras. Don't know what pate des fol gras is? Well, say goose liver, then. At any rate, they pay for the room."

Self-control is when you can play cards with women and make them think you are enjoying it.

The cleverest thing is for a girl to pretend she is afraid you will see her shoe tops when she isn't.

A woman's idea of the way to make a good bargain is when she wants to sell a thing to pretend is isn't worth having, and when she wants to buy it that she couldn't live without it.

ASPHALT PAVEMENTS.

Chicago Chronicle: Chicago is not greatly plensed with its asphalt pavements. It may be true that a perfect asphalt pavement makes an ideal street because it is beautiful to the eye, is easily kept clean and makes all sorts of transportation rapid and comfortable. If all asphalt pavements were of perfect construction perhaps they would be universally esteemed, but there are very few such in this city.

If a perfect asphalt pavement would make an ideal street it is just as certain that a dishonest and badly constructed asphalt pavement makes the most unpresentable and disgusting street imaginable, and that is almost the only kind with which the people of Chicago are familiar. It is said that nothing lies like figures and a companion paradox to that opinion is this, that the roughest road that a man can travel is an asphalt pavement.

Such a pavement is soon worn into holes and the bump which a vehicle gets when it reaches a hole is all the more sensibly felt after a rod or two of smooth riding. In like manner these holes when filled with mud or water look all the more revolting for the suggestion of cleanliness made by the rest of the pavement. A monkey is hideous because of his resemblance to a man and an asphalt pavement is repulsive because it comes so near to something desirable without reaching it.

It would seem to be more than fair to ask the asphalt pavement people doing business in Chicago to explain why such pavements go so soon to ruin. If the climate is too warm in the summer or too ecold in the winter we ought to know it. If the workmen who lay the pavements are not skilled in the work or if the material is poor these evils ought to be remedied. Unless some light is shed on this subject by these contractors and unless good and sufficient bonds are given for good work it is to be hoped that not another asphalt pavement will be laid in this city.

WEST DULUTH

Now that the St. Louis river is free from ice, preparations are being made by pleasure boat owners for the summer trips to Fond du Lac. The same boats will make the regular runs as last year, and it is understood that one or two smaller boats may be pressed into service on the river run.

The proprietors of the steamer Newsboy, the largest steamer plying regularly between Duluth and Fond du Lac, expect to make the first trip up the river June 1, and to continue the daily trips regularly after that date. Last season was a good one for the pleasure boats, and it is expected that the present year will be equally successful from the owner's standpoint, if not more so. Twenty thousand passengers were carried by the Newsboy alone last summer.

There will be more private launches on the bay and river this summer than ever before. A number have been built for local parties during the winter. They range from the row boat in size up to those with a capacity of from twenty-five to thirty persons.

PRACTICAL JOKERS

Do Strenuous Things With Dr. Greeley's Outfit.

Dr. H. W. Greely has found that the supposed theft of furniture, false teeth and dental apparatus from his offices, in the Silvey block, Sunday night, was nothing more than a practical joke, played on him by a number of young men friends. Just who the culprits are he has been unable to ascertain. One of them called him up this morning and represented himself to be Chief Troyer, investigating the case. The doctor was told that a detective would be on the scene this afternoon, despite his violent protestations that the services of a plain clothes man were not desired.

Dr. Greely visited in Duluth Sunday evening, leaving the door to his office unlocked. On his return he found that the rooms had been rifled. Most of the furniture was taken, together with books and false teeth to the number of seventy-five. No clew as to who the robbers were could be found, but next day the stolen property was discovered piled in front of a real estate office on Central avenue little the worse for wear.

COUNCIL MATTERS.

Some of Those That Affect West Duluth.

At the meeting of the common council last night a committee, consisting of Aldermen Sang, Waugh and Barnes was appointed to meet with the members of the water and light board in regard to an additional water main to West Duluth and the East End.

It is proposed to extend the West First street line from a point 200 feet west of Thirteenth avenue to Piedmont or Seventeenth avenue, where it will connect with a main already established and afford a supply, in case of emergency or accident to either line.

In a communication to the council, City Engineer McGilvray reported that the cost of repairing the two bridges on Grand avenue, west of Sixty-first avenue west, would be $2656, with capacity for carrying the light street cars. Before the structures will be able to bear the weight of the double truck cars an expenditure of $5636 will be necessary. It will be necessary to strengthen the bridges before the extension of the street car line to Seventy-first avenue west is laid.

West Duulth will have four new fire hydrants, as follows:

Oneota street, at Forty-fourth, Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth avenues west, and Rene street, at Forty-fourth avenue.

Mayor Cullum's appointments of John Bartz, as poundmaster and policeman for New Duluth, and Max Clements, at Duluth Heights, were confirmed.

At the meeting of the Twentieth Century Progress club last night, at the home of Rev. John Feehely, resolutions of sympathy on the death of the 5-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August Schulte were passed. A copy of the resolutions will be forwarded the bereaved parents, and a record made of them on the lodge books.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDS TRIAL OF GILLESPIE.

Rising Sun, Ind., May 10.—There was a very large crowd here today on account of the trial of James Gillespie, Mrs. Belle S. Ward and Mr. and Mrs. Barbour for the murder last December of Elizabeth Gillespie, but only a small percentage to the court house. Most of the examinations today resulted in the new men being excused on account of opposition to hanging women. When the panel was again filled, Henry Kerr and Wade Hampton Rogers were chosen, and the prosecution announced that it was satisfied with the jury. The defense reserved all challenges when a recess was taken until this afternoon.

WASHBURN ENJOINED

From Selling His Road to the Soo Line.

St. Paul, May 10.—A special to the Dispatch from Bismarck, N. D., says: General Manager W. D. Washburn, of the Washburn road, was served with an injunction restraining him from transferring the Washburn road to the Soo line, pending the determination of two claims of J. F. Philbrick and A. T. Patterson, local attorneys, for $1800, which they allege is due them for right-of-ways for the road several years ago.

TRIAL OF WHITE

Hearing of Murderer Will Be Taken Up Next Monday.

Archibald Peyton Gets One Year For Attempted Assault.

Frank White, the slayer of Jerome Menaige, who was indicted for murder in the first degree, will be placed on trial in district court next Monday morning. The trial will be by jury before Judge Cant, who has charge of the criminal calendar.

Neither White nor his attorney, W. E. Greer will state what will constitute the line of defense, but it is assumed that drunkenness will be pleaded in the hope of saving White from conviction of murder in the first degree.

Archibald Peyton, charged with the grand jury of indecent assault on a nine-year-old girl, entered a plea of guilty before Judge Cant, yesterday afternoon, and was sentenced to a term of one year at hard labor in the state penitentiary at Stillwater.

While standing before the court to make his plea, Peyton presented a picture of abjectness, with tears running down his cheeks and sobbing bitterly.

When asked by the court if he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced, Peyton declared that he was a sick man, that his mind often fails him and he has no knowledge of his acts, doing things that he afterward very much regrets. He claimed that he was not responsible for his actions.

Peyton could not remember how long he has been in the city nor could he give a satisfactory account of what he has been doing in the past six years.

He was arrested by the local police charged with enticing a young girl into a boxcar in the Northern Pacific yards, with criminal intent. At his preliminary hearing in police court it was thought by many that he was a degenerate.

Judge Cant has overruled the demurrer of Alfred Scrase to the indictment charging him with forgery in the second degree.

John Moran and Frank Sherwood, indicted for grand larceny in the first degree, have entered pleas of guilty. Sentence was suspended in each case to give attorneys an opportunity of presenting any argument in their behalf.

EGYPTIANS CULTIVATED WHEAT. Ancient monuments show that the Egyptians cultivated wheat before that country was invaded by the Shepherds. Wheat has been cultivated and eaten in many forms, but it remained for America to give to man pillsbury's vitos, the greatest of all brain and brawn foods. It is the concentration of all the life-giving properties of wheat—the food of millions.

METHODIST DEBATE

On Roman Catholic Church Ends In Reference to Committee.

Divorce, Sunday Closing and Other Matters Before Conference.

Los Angeles, May 10.—The attitude of the Roman Catholic church toward the public school system of the United States furnished the subject of a sensational debate in the Methodist general conference yesterday.

While there was a strong disposition on the part of certain delegates to have the conference to adopt resolutions committing it to extreme utterances upon the subject, there was an overwhelming sentiment as it developed, against any such action, and the entire matter was finally disposed of by referring it to a committee from which it is unlikely ever to be reported.

Several other resolutions bearing upon the subjects of divorce, the termination of membership of neglectful members, Sunday closing of the Lewis and Clark exposition, the endowment of the American university at Washington, the changes in the wording of various paragraphs in the discipline, and other matters of importance to Methodists were submitted and debated by several commissions.

Rev. J. R. King, secretary of the Church Extension society of Philadelphia, having secured the floor, presented a resolution strongly criticising the Roman Catholic church, declaring that "its efforts to control the secular press, its influence in politics and its assaults on the public school system demand the vigilance of Protestants and patriots."

Dr. King read extracts from a letter written by Vicar General Peter Harnett, of the Roman Catholic diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles, in which the latter sought to refute the statements made in the above quotations from the Episcopal address, Dr. King then spoke at length in support of the resolution.

When Dr. King had finished there was commotion among the delegates. Many sought to gain recognition from the chair in order to reply. Charles B. Lohr, chief justice of the Delaware supreme court, lay delegate, was recognized.

"But are we to gain anything by any phase of denunciation against any other Christian body? Cries of "No," "No."

"The Roman Catholic church has done a magnificent work in this country. It has taken hold of a class of people whom perhaps no other form of religion could have molded so well for the well being of our common land. I feel like putting my hands under every evangelising agency in this world that helps to uplift men and not pull them down."

This expression was received with applause by the delegates and the galleries.

A motion by Dr. S. L. Beller to refer the resolutions to the committee on the state of the church was carried. In the opinion of many prominent delegates this disposes of the matter finally.

Rev. R. F. Bishop presented a resolution "to make certain changes in the discipline that would provide a more simple method of terminating the memberships of persons living in "habitual neglect of their obligations to the church."

It was referred to the committee on the state of the church.

Judge Sibley of Ohio offered an important resolution on the subject of divorce. He wanted paragraph 35 of the discipline changed to read as follows:

"No divorce, except for adultery, final desertion or cruelty or neglect, such as to compel an innocent partner to separate from the offender, shall be regarded by the church as morally lawful, and none of our ministers or laymen shall solemnize marriage where there is a divorced wife or husband living, unless the divorces were granted upon grounds hereinbefore specified. But this resolution does not apply in cases where divorced parties are seeking re-marriage."

This resolution was referred to the committee on the state of the church.

Harbor at Port Arthur Opens With One Here.

Boats leaving the Duluth harbor within the next few days for north shore points will not meet with the trouble anticipated in gaining entrance to the harbor at Port Arthur. This port usually opens from ten days to two weeks later than Duluth, but from telegraphic dispatches received in Duluth yesterday it appears that navigation was open as soon there as at the head of the lakes and grain boats have gone out.

The first boat from Duluth to touch at Port Arthur this spring will be the Mabel Bradshaw, of the White Line Transportation company, which leaves the local dock Thursday morning. It is also thought that she will be able to make a landing at Washington Harbor on Isle Royale.

A number of interlake boats are now on their way to Duluth. Among these is the steamer Huronic of the Northwest Transportation company, which left Sarnia yesterday for Port Arthur and Duluth. The steamer Mcrarch will leave Sarnia for Port Arthur tomorrow.

FEMALE SHOPLIFTERS.

Dangerous Thieves Arrested In New York Store.

New York, May 10.—Central office detectives yesterday arrested two women, said to be well-known shoplifters, as they were about to leave a New York department store. The women gave the names of May Morris, of this city, said by the police to have several aliases, and her picture in the rogues' gallery, and Annie Gleason, also of this city.

It is said the retail dry goods associations of both Chicago and New York have been looking for the women for some time.

The women were seen in a Broadway store yesterday and at the request of the manager were arrested.

Later a dress suit case and parcel were removed from a cab, said to have been hired by the women, and articles worth several hundred dollars were found. These were identified by a store manager as having been taken from his place of business.

Other department stores complain of losses by shoplifting within the past few days.

PRINTER SAW OTHERS FEAST

In His Honor, While He Was Tied In a Chair.

Crawfordsville, Ind., May 10.—Walter R. Cruce, a printer in a newspaper office here, wishes he had been born on Feb. 29, for that would diminish his troubles.

In the office where Cruce is employed are twenty-five printers, all friends of his, and they remembered that he was about to have a birthday and determined to celebrate it appropriately.

To this end they posted large signs on all the trees and telephone poles in the town leading from Cruce's home to the office that he had a birthday celebration coming and that he would be open to congratulations.

The day of the anniversary passed in suspicious quiet. When the day's work was done—the last form in and the printers washing up—waiters appeared and spread a banquet table in the composing room.

Cruce beamed happily and his eyes filled with tears of appreciation as he observed the preparation in his honor.

The tables were piled with the best there was in the market and cheering drink was plenty. Cruce watched the preparations with growing hunger, meanwhile framing a speech of thanks for the honor about to be his.

At last the preparations were completed and Cruce was surrounded by his friends.

Suddenly he was grasped and forced into a chair. His arms and legs were bound with ropes. A crown, made of his last edition, was thrust upon his head and in this plight he was hoisted in his chair, which was set upon the table, from which a fine view of the diners could be had.

The feast began and Cruce sat in his chair watching the good things disappear and listening to the quips of the celebrators, his mouth watering, and his pleas for food falling on deaf ears. The diners toasted him and in laudatory speeches congratulated him on having arrived at years of wisdom. They sang odes to his good fellowship, and cheered his accomplishments.

But not a mouthful of food or a sip of wine passed his lips.

Then the post-prandial exercises began. His guests pelted him with torpedoes, and occasionally discharged a shotgun back of his head to cheer him up. Later they carried him about town in his chair, shoulder high, and had him photographed.

As the crowning honor they set him on his own front steps, rang the bell and left him.

When moving why not engage covered vans. It costs no more.

Hints To Advertisers

Make it a point to have your copy in by Tuesday and Thursday noon for the Wednesday and Friday issues of The Herald. Your ad will look better and will then appear in the Iron Range editions.

Barnum would not have been a great advertiser or a great showman if he had really believed in his own grim adage that "the American people like to be humbugged." If he had practiced his little joke he would have died in jail.

If a merchant is really selling a better line of goods, of some particular kind, than any competitor, and there is still a man or woman in this city who don't know this fact, that merchant is not a successful advertiser.

"Sufficient unto the day—" is the advertising thereof, in every successful store or business. A merchant's advertising campaign is not much stronger than its weakest link; and usually the weak link consists in breaking the continuity of the campaign.

"Stagnation" is a horrible word; and "business stagnation" is a horrible condition. It is death-in-life; the plight of the stalled locomotive—of the stranded vessel; of the clock that has stopped running. And the only remedy in the world for it is newspaper advertising.

The whole structure of store-pros perity rests upo nthe foundation of publicity. Any other foundation is as sand.

"How is business?" is a question which the wise advertiser always answers smilingly—never with evasion or lamentation.

If your competitor is an aggressive advertiser, the only way to compete unmistakable signs of nervous debility. with him is to make your advertising as much bigger and better than his as your store is bigger and better than his.

If you were steering a ship you would avoid rocks and reefs that were plainly charted. In the business sea most of the danger spots have been charted, and "bad advertising" leads all the rest.

The business man who is a timid advertiser makes it easy, indeed, for his competitor.

Advertising is the engine that pulls the store along. A small engine can't pull a heavy train—especitly up-grade. A small advertising appropriation cannot pull a heavy business—except on the down-grades.

ROMANTIC LIFE

Of Former Millionaire Merchant Who Died In Poverty.

Lived to Become Caretaker on Estate He Once Owned.

New York, May 10.—Robert A. Johnston, fifteen years ago respected as a citizen and admired for his business sagacity, the head of one of the largest and most prosperous dry goods houses in the city, was worth $2,000,000.

He died early last week in poverty in the insane ward of the city hospital on Ward's island, unattended by friend or relative—just a derelict, the wreck of a strong, stout-hearted man of a decade ago. A requiem mass was sung for his soul in the Carmelite church, in East Twenty-eighth street. Then the body was removed to Calvary cemetery, in Long Island and deposited in the $200,000 mausoleum erected in 1873, when J. and C. and Robert A. Johnston were beginning to reach the zenith of their prosperity.

Johnston's body was saved from Potter's field by a nephew, Terrence McMarrus, of Glenwood, near Yonkers, who had proved a friend of the white haired old man in defeat as well as in success.

Johnston's life reads like a romance. He was one of three brothers, who left Ireland for the new world less than half a century ago. They were thrifty, shrewd and with a faculty for accepting opportunities for making money. They prospered. John was the head of the house. He conceived the possibilities of the dry goods business. From a none too secure foothold he established his house at Broadway and Twenty-second street, and extended it to Fifth avenue. Twenty years ago it was regarded as one of the leading stores.

The second brother was Charles. He became a partner in the concern. Robert A., the youngest, was instructed and drilled to run the business.

Charles Johnston died in May, 1886, leaving the business to John. The latter was one of the most certain men in the trade. His spare moments were devoted to instructing his younger brother. Seven years later he died, and the entire business came into the possession of Robert. No one knew or appreciated just how the business came to decline. Decline it did, however, and Robert tried by every means to stem the tide against him. He had then $2,000,000, but even this amount of money was useless to avert disaster. His friends of that period tell the story of his sturdy effort to reclaim the trade that was drifting from him. It was impossible. The business suspended two years after his brother John's death.

Before this Johnston purchase an estate lying between Riversdale and Mount Vincent—an estate of thirty-two acres, which commanded a splendid view of the Hudson river. The house Johnston erected was not one of unusual splendor. It was a well built house—a comfortable home. He did not spend a great deal of money on it, but he did purchase choice paintings and statuary of worth, filling every nook and corner with treasures which cost him many thousands of dollars. He took exceptional pride in these treasures and their loss later was the means of making him a morbid man, without ambition.

One financial reverse followed another, until he saw in the immediate future total oblivion. When the dry goods business failed, in 1888, he tried to recoup his fortune in business along other lines, and for which he was unfitted. He failed to make money. He saw foreshadowed the doom of his hopes and ambition. The Central Trust company advanced him money on his place, and during the later eighties foreclosed the mortgage. Johnston could not meet the payments.

Nothing could convince the now elderly man that the property did not belong to him. He lived for a few months in the house upon the bounty of the trust organization. The climax was rapidly approaching.

On the night of Feb. 27, 1900, a wild glustering night, the house caught fire. Johnston was asleep in a room of the second story. He was awakened by the screams of the servants in a lower hall. Escape by the staircase was cut off. In his room was a surveying chain. This he threw through the window and by its aid reached the snow covered ground in the scantiest attire. In his bare feet he ran across the snow and ice, to fall half frozen upon the doorsteps of a friend, Edmund D. Randolph.

After that experience Johnston was never himself. He could not bring himself to believe that his art treasures had been consumed by fire. Although deprived by law of the ownership of the property, he refused to leave it.

He made his home in a barn upon the estate, a pitiful relic of his once robust self. He was employed through charity by the Central Trust Co., as a caretaker of the property. He held little communication with anybody. Mr. Randolph exerised every care over the unfortunate man when Johnston would permit. While living in the barn Johnston cooked all of his own meals. He washed his own dishes and he mended his own clothing. He wandered aimlessly about the estate on which he had planned to spend the happy days of his declining years.

This life continued until a few weeks ago, when he was stricken with vertigo. The kind offices of Mr. Randolph saw Johnston taken to Fordham hospital. While his mind was not a blank totally he was irresponsible. A week ago he was removed to Ward's Island. He continued to grow weaker under a second stroke of paralysis to the moment when he ceased to breathe, cherishing the illusion that he was strong, prosperous and the owner of the estate along the banks of the Hudson river.

When in 1879, the Johnstons built the splendid mausoleum in the old Calvary cemetery, it was intended to make it a model of beauty. It is composed of massive granite blocks and stands upon an eminence, commanding a view of the surrounding country, where it is a landmark for miles around. In this costly tomb lie the remains of John, Charles, another brother Terrence and his wife and those of Ann McGovern, an old nurse that accompanied the family from Ireland.

TWO MEN ARE KILLED IN WRECK OF EXPRESS TRAIN

New York, May 10.—Two men were killed at 1 o'clock this morning in the wreck of a southbound Adams express special at Port Chester, N. Y., on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad.

The dead:
ENGINEER LARY KEENAN.
FIREMAN JOHN HOWES.

The engine and two express cars left the track and toppled over the embankment. Keenan and Howes were carried over in the locomotive and crushed to death. So far as reported no person was injured and the train carried no passengers.

MINERS GIVEN UP AS DEAD.

Shamokin, Pa., May 10.—All hope that the five men who were imprisoned on Thursday last in the burning Locust Cap mine are alive has been abandoned and the mine will now be flooded to distinguish the flames. A fierce fire is still raging in the mine. James E. Roderick, chief of the state bureau of mines; John Fahey and Miles Dougherty, officers of the United Mine Workers, officials of the Philadelphia & Reading company and relatives of the five men in the burning mine agreed that the missing miners were dead, whereupon Chief Roderick gave permission to the company to flood the mine.

INJUNCTION DISSOLVED.

Meadville, Pa., May 10.—The preliminary injunction restraining striking employes of the Phoenix Iron works from establishing pickets was dissolved by Judge Frank J. Thomas yesterday. The company will file exceptions. Judge Thomas' opinion said no evidence was produced to show that the men had used violence. There was no evidence that a conspiracy had been formed and consequently there was none to be enjoined. He knew of no law to prevent the defendants from presenting their case to proposed employes so long as they refrained from intimidation or coercion.

COPPER IS DULL

Foreigners Buying None and Home Consumers Very Little.

Walker Thinks Advance In Copper Shares Has Started.

Copper is very dull, according to G. L. Walker's last report on the market. Export buying has ceased and home consumers are buying little. As to copper shares, Walker says there are signs that the long delayed advance has started. His letter says:

"Copper is duller at the moment than it has been for some weeks past. There has been a temporary cessation of the buying for export, and home consumers are holding to their practice of buying in small lots as the needs of their business dictate. Lake has recently sold at 13⅜ cents and 13½ cents, electrolytic is obtainable at about 13¼ cents and the best brands of casting are selling at 13 cents. There is reason for the belief that certain branches of the copper and brass business are nearly or quite as active as last year, and that the falling off in domestic consumption from the highest point reached does not average any more than 20 per cent.

"London copper quotations advanced early in the week and then declined, being at present a small fraction lower than a week ago. 'Best selected' copper is selling in London at £63, 5s., equal to about 13.7 cents per pound. This indicates that there is still a fair profit offered on export business, and that the foreign buying demand may be expected to continue for some time to come.

"Exports of copper during April dropped back to about the normal level, the total being almost exactly the same as in the corresponding month a year ago. So far this year exports have averaged about 46,500,000 pounds monthly, and this country's production has not exceeded 50,000,000 pounds monthly. Though exports have averaged nearly twice as great as last year they have shown an increase of only about 25 per cent over those of the corresponding months of 1902, in which year of low prices there was a moderate accumulation of copper in the hands of foreign consumers. That accumulation, however, did not result in a later decline in copper prices, and there is no reason for the belief that this year's havy buying will do other than permanently strengthen the situation.

"So far as can be learned, there is only one interest that really believes there is any surplus of copper in existence at the present time, and I know of not less than ten authorities that are well satisfied that the foreign buying and export have been legitimate in every sense. The story of an accumulation of copper in German is amusing. A considerable portion of the copper sent to Germany has been immediately manufactured into war munitions and equipment for Russia, and more of it has been reshipped overland to that country. This is the explanation of the heavy German imports, which will undoubtedly continue as long as the war lasts.

COPPER SHARES.

"The action of the market inspires the belief that the long delayed advance movement in copper mining stocks has started. Copper Range's annual report made a most excellent impression on speculative, investment and banking interests, and since its appearance Range has been the leader in both activity and strength. Its action has encouraged the leading interest in other coppers, and the feeling is now opened that there will be an advance in prices all along the line. There are already more buyers, and the sellers are disappearing; and the ratio will be practically sure to go on increasing as quotations rise.

"It will be remembered that there has been nothing like general speculation in the Boston copper shares since September, 1901, now nearly three years ago. It was about the first of December, 1901, that the copper corner collapsed, the price of the metal declining in a few weeks from above 16 cents to below 11 cents per pound. Since that time the coppers have constantly been regarded with suspicion, and hundreds of former holders have sold their stocks. Notwithstanding this selling, however, the low range of prices has proved an attraction to many small investors, and the number of stockholders in nearly all of the good companies has been greatly increased. This sort of buying has cleared the market of floating stocks, and the best judges believe that the selling fever has now had its full run.

"It stands to reason that there will be fewer sellers of copper stocks while the metal market is strong and advancing around present prices than there would be if it were lower and declining. The copper producers are earning a lot of money. Some that have never distributed anything to their stockholders will begin dividend payments this year, and others will increase their rate of payments. Now that the coppers are coming to stand a little better in public favor the realization of their attractiveness as investments around this level will grow and there will likely be a steady gain in prices. If this view is correct, the early buyer will catch the biggest profit."

SUIT AGAINST POST

Continued to Some Time Late in Summer.

Milwaukee, May 9.—All proceedings in the suit that the Prudential Insurance company has brought against Insurance Commissioner Post to restrain him from revoking the license of the company to do business in Wisconsin or prevent it from so doing, were continued by Judge Seaman until the final hearing upon the merits. This will probably not take place until August.

In the meanwhile the injunction preventing the commissioner from revoking the company's license stands.

ARCHITECTS TO COMPETE

In Making Designs For McKinley Monument.

New York, May 10.—The board of trustees of the McKinley National Memorial association at a meeting here yesterday, accepted the report of the advisory commission of experts appointed some time ago in which the recommendation was made that a limited and paid competition should be instituted for the selection of an architect. From those who had already submitted designs the commission chose the following names: E. Casey Wilkinson and MacGonagle, W. R. Ross and Guy Lowell. Six other names will be added by the commission and from the ten an architect will be chosen. The members of the advisory committee are: Walter Cook, New York; R. S. Peabody, Boston, architects, and Daniel Chester French, New York, sculptor. Memorial resolutions relative to the death of Senator Marcus A. Hanna, who was the vice president of the commission, were adopted. It is purposed to continue his name on the list, as vice president, no one being selected to fill his place.

MILLIONAIRE WAS A MISER

Samuel Davis Lived In Squalor and Starved to Death.

San Francisco, May 9.—Samuel Davis was a "money hog." He lived in squalor, died in misery and left over $1,000,000 behind him when he died.

His father was a butcher, and he was born in Saratoga county, New York. In 1853, when he was young, he fared out to California, the land of gold. Going into the mines, he settled at Downieville, Sierra county, and opened a butcher shop. Soon he was known as a stingy man. In any event, he kept the money he made and kept his eyes open for shrewd bargains and sharp investments.

He had a way of shaving county warrants and all manner of scrip, and picked up a lot of easy money in this way during the careless days when a man wanted his money and was ready to pay handsomely rather than wait for it. Samuel Davis could wait if he saw a chance to turn a dollar pr two. It began to be said that he was rich.

But no "apartments" for Samuel Davis. He went to a small and squalid room over his office. It was dingy, then. Its dingier now.

There he rusted out. There he starved himself to death. But there he accumulated wealth until he left over $1,000,000, with an aged sister and a niece, both living in the East, as his heirs.

Davis lived all alone. He sought no companionship. No one called on him. He never knew the touch of caressing baby fingers. To a woman's watchful care he was a stranger after he had left his mother in the old boyhood days before the love of money became the root of all his evil. He never clinked glasses with a friend. He could not even afford the consolation of religion. Gold was his god, his only love, only friend, only worship. His one companion was a Gordon setter dog, and even that creature died some time ago.

He went shabby and dirty to save the money he should have spent for clothing, cooked his own meals to save the wages of a servant. He made those meals so meager that in the end he died of starvation. But he left an estate of over $1,000,000 filthy dollars, and so many have felt that he lived out his life as it should have been lived.

ASSINIBOINE VERY HIGH.

More Than Forty Buildings Under Water at Brandon.

Brandon, Man., May 9.—The Assiniboine river is higher than it has been for twenty years. It rose three feet in twelve hours and is still rising. More than forty buildings are under water. Roadways leading to the north side of the river are submerged and it is feared the bridges will be washed away. Buildings on the flats are under water almost to their roofs. The railroad bridge is so weakened that trains cannot cross owing to the rapid rise of the water. The waterworks pump house is out of business and the city is without fire protection.

HIGH CLASS DRUGGISTS AND — OTHERS.

The better class of druggists, everywhere, are men of scientific attainments and high integrity, who devote their lives to the welfare of their fellow men in supplying the best of remedies and purest medicinal agents of known value, in accordance with physicians' prescriptions and scientific formula. Druggists of the better class manufacture many excellent remedies, but always under original or officinal names and they never sell false brands, or imitation medicines. They are the men to deal with when in need of anything in their line, which usually includes all standard remedies and corresponding adjuncts of a first-class pharmacy and the finest and best of toilet articles and preparations and many useful accessories and remedial appliances. The earning of a fair living, with the satisfaction which arises from a knowledge of the benefits conferred upon their patrons and assistance to the medical profession, is usually their greatest reward for long years of study and many hours of daily toil. They all know that Syrup of Figs is an excellent laxative remedy and that it gives universal satisfaction, and therefore they are selling many millions of bottles annually to the well informed purchasers of the choicest remedies, and they always take pleasure in handing out the genuine article bearing the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package. They know that in cases of colds and headaches attended by biliousness and constipation and of weakness or torpidity of the liver and bowels, arising from irregular habits, indigestion, or over-eating, that there is no other remedy so pleasant, prompt and beneficial in its effects as Syrup of Figs, and they are glad to sell it because it gives universal satisfaction.

Owing to the excellence of Syrup of Figs, the universal satisfaction which it gives and the immense demand for it, imitations have been made, tried and condemned, but there are individual druggists to be found, here and there, who do not maintain the dignity and principles of the profession and whose greed gets the better of their judgment, and who do not hesitate to recommend and try to sell the imitations in order to make a larger profit. Such preparations sometimes have the name—"Syrup of Figs"—or "Fig Syrup" and of some piratical concern, or fictitious fig syrup company, printed on the package, but they never have the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of the package. The imitations should be rejected because they are injurious to the system. In order to sell the imitations they find it necessary to resort to misrepresentation or deception, and whenever a dealer passes off on a customer a preparation under the name of "Syrup of Figs" or "Fig Syrup," which does not bear the full name of the California Fig Syrup Co. printed on the front of the package, he is attempting to deceive and mislead the patron who has been so unfortunate as to enter his establishment, whether it be large or small, for if the dealer resorts to misrepresentation and and deception in one case he will do so with other medicinal agents, and in the filling of physicians' prescriptions, and should be avoided by every one who values health and happiness. Knowing that the great majority of druggists are reliable, we supply the immense demand for our excellent remedy entirely through the druggists, of whom it may be purchased everywhere, in original packages only, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, but as exceptions exist it is necessary to inform the public of the facts, in order that all may decline or return any imitation which may be sold to them. If it does not bear the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package, do not hesitate to return the article and to demand the return of your money, and in future go to one of the better class of druggists who will sell you what you wish and the best of everything in his line at reasonable prices.

CONVICT WHO WAS SAVED

By Love For a Woman of Refinement and Wealth.

New York, May 10.—The Herald says: William Grube, illiterate, one time "tough" and never higher in life than a stoker on a warship, was buried in Evergreens cemetery by the side of Mrs. Mary W. Bentley, a woman of refinement, of wealth and family, for years a worker in the mission field of the extreme lower East Side. Almost the last wish of Mrs. Bentley in life was that this should be done. The reason was explained in the narration of the story of the ten years of reformed life led by the man, at the simple funeral services in the Jerry McAuley mission, No. 316 Water street.

It was ten years ago that F. K. Hadley, superintendent of the mission, preached one Sunday afternoonin the Kings county penitentiary. It was the only time he ever spoke there, and he invited all to visit the mission when freedom came, to see if a start could not be made in a new life.

Months afterward the mission door opened and in slouched a young man whose prison-made clothes could not hide the suggestion of great physical strength. Six feet two inches in height, and with fists like maces, he approached Mr. Hadley to ask what start could be given a man like him. It was "Bill" Grube.

He had been in the penitentiary that Sunday afternoon, serving a term of imprisonment for nearly beating a man to death. It was not the first time he had been in prison, he said. He was a sailor, ready to fight at a moments' notice, and proud of it.

It wasn't so long afterward that Mrs. Bentley came into Grube's life. It was the first time he had ever met a refined woman that he could remember. When he had known her for a few days he became her slave.

"She molded the man," said Mr. Hadley, "so that he became as docile as a child. From that hour of his conversion until the day of his death never another drop of liquor passed his lips; where before he was noisy and quarrelsome, he was now quiet and tractable. Mrs. Bentley's word was absolute with him.

"He would go to sea on long voyages and return to tell of almost his every word and deed and to be encouraged and praised until he was as blushing and happy as a schoolboy.

"Grube enlisted in the United States navy as a stocker, but whenever his ship was in New York he spent all his time at the mission. He was in the firemom of the battleship Iowa at the defeat of Cervera's fleet. He was never well after the war, and except for the last two years, which he had spent under medical treatment, he always earned his own living.

"When Mrs. Bentley died the blow was a heavy one for Grube. He never recovered from it, we think. He gave up all hope then, lost heart and talked about her constantly. In her will sufficient money was left for him to have a place to live in for the remainder of his life. He went to Gitthgs, N. J., then to live, and we did not see him until he came back a week or more ago, saying his time had come to die. He went to the Brooklyn city hospital, where he passed away May 3. I think he was glad to go."

The sailor convert was about 35 years old, and so far as is known left no relatives.

The story of the regeneration of the Magdalen, through her meeting with the Savior and the influence of His divine presence upon her moral nature, is presented by Mrs. Fiske in "Mary of Magdala," in which she appeared at the Metropolitan theater last evening. The character of the world-weary woman who has drunk the full measure of the frivolities of life, finding no happiness in them and finally meets Him whose single look changes her whole nature and opens her eyes to a new world where penitence and the renunciation of all that is of the flesh brings true peace to the soul, is developed as only the greatest actress of America could develop it, with a consistency, beauty and appealing sympathy that places it among the great characters of the stage.

It must be confessed that the Metropolitan, while a very pretty theater in its way, has not the stage room required to present the settings that should be given this great drama, but the exigencies of business unfortunately are such that in order to allow Duluth people an opportunity to see the play at all it had to be done, and it but fair to say that the Metropolitan was able to accommodate it to a far better extent than was anticipated.

"Mary of Magdala" is a historical and romantic drama of Jerusalem under the rule of Rome, and is written by Paul Heyse, one of the most noted of German playwrights. It was adopted into English by William Whited, one of the most distinguished dramatic critics and men of letters of America and the result is a work that for beauty of lines and excellence of literary quality is quite as noted as it is dramatically. The story is one whose interest touches the whole world and while it dwells upon things that are held in reverence by a great part of the world there is nothing sacred that is not treated reverently and nothing that can give offense to the most orthodox.

The Magdalen is first presented in her own luxurious home, mooding upon the unsatisfied longings that are left her in spite of the revelry in which she lives, and reflecting upon the failures of sinful love and a life of dissipation to bring peace to the soul or drown the quickenings of a conscience that is sensitive to better things. She is presented as the victim of unfortunate circumstances that have driven her to what she is, and as one to be pitied rather than reviled. The protestations of ardent lovers fall upon a wearied and satiated woman. Then comes the story of the wonderful following of the Nazarene and her desire to see Him. She goes and gazes upon Him, the people attack her as a wanton, and she is saved from their fury by one of His followers, but she is scarcely conscious of the tumult she has created. Burning into her very soul, opening her moral nature to its very bottom, are the eyes of the Savior —her renegeration has begun. Then comes a terrible temptation, the Nazarene has been arrested and is in prison, awaiting the judgment of the people, which means death. Flavius, the Roman, deeply in love with Mary, offers to effect His release in return for her love. Her soul is torn in conflict. Shall she allow the Master to be dragged to death or shall she save Him at the price of her own soul? She prays that His voice may guide her, may give her the light to see her duty, and at the moment of the test, a flood comes upon her and she rejects the Roman.

Mrs. Fiske unfolds this story with an art that is consummate. The character of the Magdalen up to the moment of the meeting that turns her life is developed in a way mental rather than otherwise. For those who would have action indicate what she was, there would be disappointment. It is more subtly done, psychologically rather than dramatically. It is hardly until the fourth act that she rises to dramatic intensity, but the awful conflict that rages within her as she fights within herself as to whether she will save the Master and lose her soul is enough of intensity for one play. She moves with tremendous force and emotion, and one awaits the issue scarcely breathing and with all of his faculties upon their keenest edge.

It is somewhat unfortunate that Mrs. Fiske's voice is not more distinct. Much of the lines is lost, especially where she speaks quickly. It is a voice rather metallic in quality and strikingly so when forceful.

A striking feature of the play is the drawing character of Judas. He is made to betray the Master through zeal for his country. He is one of the Jews who look upon the Messiah as the man who is to be in truth the king of the Jews, the man to lead them with violence, if necessary, from the oppression of the Roman. He cannot understand a kingdom of peace and while he first refuses the tempting of Caiphas to deliver up the Nazarene, when the young Roman taunts him with His teachings to "love thine enemy" and "do good to them that hate you," it tears at all the hate and revenge that has been in the soul of the Jew and he rushes in a frenzy and gives Him up. Judas is also made to be in love with Mary. The part was played by Hobart Bosworth and was one of the most superb things ever seen on a Duluth stage. His method is unlike Mrs. Fiske's, being demonstrative rather than introspective, but it is difficult to see how the fearful passions that beset the Jew, the conflict that raged in him would have been more perfectly expressed. His despair and self-denunciation as he staggered down the heights after the death pleading that the lightning might strike him dead, were fearful. It was a most magnificent piece of work throughout.

Not much less striking was the young Roman, Flanvius, of Frank Gilmore. He is graceful, manly and finished and his reading of the lines was inteligent. The characters throughout were excellent and the company is a finely balanced one and in keeping with the dignity and elegance of the play.

The settings of the drama are superb. The scenes are faithful to the times and the costuming no less so. All of the appointments are elegant and every detail has been cared for to an extent almost profligate. Especially realistic was the storm scene in the final act.

The attendance and enthusiastic applause which greeted "The Charity Ball" at the Lyceum last evening, showed that the Florence Stone company was making a great hit in the production of Belasco's comedy drama.

Miss Stone, Miss Harcort and other members of the company were given a gratifying reception. Miss Stone being presented with a large bouquet of American beauty roses, by the Eagles.

In the lovable character of Ann Cruger, the wealthy New York girl who devotes herself to charitable enterprises and displays a womanly sympathy that is pleasing at all times, Miss Stone added fresh laureels to her fame already gained during her stay in the city.

John Milton, as John Van Buren, the rector, gave a splendid representation of the noble character of the New York divine who, unselfish and self-sacrificing to the end, finally comes into his own happiness with the love of Ann Cruger.

Richardson Cotten, as Dick Van Buren gave a remarkably strong interpretation of the part of the young Wall street man in his battle for financial supremacy. His portrayal of the selfishness and determination of his kind to win at all costs until touched by the appeal of the performance.

William Munroe in the part of Judge Peter Gurney Knox made a great hit in the comedy element and was ably assisted by iss Harcourt as Mrs. Camillia De Peyster. The love-making scenes of Miss Lilia Shaw as Bess Van Buren and Leslie Morosco in the part of Alec Robinson, were delightful and humorous portions of the entertainment.

Miss Helen McKerran did excellently in the difficult part of Phyllis Lee. Tim O. Russ, a diminutive actor, made a great hit as Cain, the street waif. The biograph performance after the third act was a very satisfying feature of the entertainment.

"The Charity Ball" will be repeated tonight, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings and at the Wednesday matinee.

WORD FROM HILL

In Regard to Dunn's Charges Awaited By Politicians.

Judge Willis Claims He Was Defeated By Corruption.

St. Paul, May 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—The eyes of the politicians of the Twin Cities and of Minnesota are turned toward President James J. Hill, of the Great Northern railroad, for a confirmation or a denial of the statements of Robert C. Dunn, of Princeton, that the railroad magnate contributed from $30,000 to $40,000 to Judge Collins' campaign against Judge Willis in 1894, and that State Librarian E. A. Nelson solicited $25,000 from Mr. Hill for Judge Collins' present campaign.

The general sentiment in the Twin Cities is that should Mr. Hill repudiate the statements of Mr. Dunn, the fate of the Prinecton candidate for governor will be settled. On the other hand, if the railroad magnate should positively confirm the charge of Mr. Dunn, the affair will inevitably terminate disastrously for Judge Collins. Judge Collins has denied that he ever solicited or received a dollar from Mr. Hill, but if the Dunn men prove beyond doubt that Mr. Hill contributed from $30,000 to $40,000 in the interest of the judge's campaign, whether or not the judge asked for the money or actually supervised the distribution of it, the judge will be placed in an inconsistent light in view of his recent charge that Dunn is the corporation man and that he represents the interests of the common people.

Both Judge Collins and State Librarian Nelson yesterday addressed letters to Mr. Hill asking if he made the statements which Mr. Dunn said he made. There is considerable doubt among the politicians in the Capital City that Mr. Hill will take congnizance of the letters, for he has repeatedly refused to be interviewed on the subject.

Mr. Dunn did not answer yesterday Judge Collins' letter asking if he made the charges attributed to him in the Twin City papers. Mr. Dunn gave as a reason for the delay the fact that he had not received a letter from a man in St. Louis from whom he wished to hear before answering the judge's letter. One of the Dunn managers said last night that Mr. Dunn will answer the letter today.

Judge Colins' letter of inquiry enclosed several newspaper clippings and asked the following questions:

Did you use this language or any other of like import?

If you are correctly reported, you accused Mr. Hill as well as myself of a very serious offense. You placed him in the attitude of a furnisher of funds to corrupt the voters of this state—a common boodler; and I am accused of soliciting and receiving a large sum of money from Mr. Hill for the purpose of corrupting and booding the voters.

I simply want to know if you used this or similar language, and an early and direct reply is earnestly solicited.

Respectfully, L. W. COLLINS.

A third person entered the scramble between Judge Collins and Mr. Dunn yesterday in the person of Judge Willis, against whom Judge Collins ran in 1894. Judge Willis says that he was defeated in 1894 by wholesale corruption, which is taken to mean that some financier contributed large sums to the Collins' campaign.

"All I have to say concerning the campaign of 1894," said Judge Willis yesterday, "is that I was defeated by wholesale corruption. Judge Canty two years before was elected with 109,000 votes. I received 113,000 in 1894 but was defeated. Three men came to my office during the 1894 campaign and said they had been offered a large amount of money by George Walsh in Judge Collins' presence, if they would work for Judge Collins."

Judge Collins says he is not frightened at the threats of Mr. Dunn to reveal some secrets concerning the judge's appointment to the United States senate by Gov. Lind.

"Let Mr. Dunn tell it," said Judge Collins yesterday. "He knows more about it than I do. He speaks of a conference between Governor Lind, Mr. Rosing, A. T. Koerner and myself. I did not attend any such conference and do not know what occurred. I do not know of a conference between Governor Lind, Mr. Dunn, A. T. Koerner and myself. Mr. Lind knows what happened there and I think he could tell it, if Mr. Dunn will not. I am perfectly willing to submit my attitude on that question and that of Mr. Dunn for the judgment of fair-minded people."

OUTLAW DEFIES THE SHERIFF

Dietz Threatens to Kill Anyone Crossing His "Dead Line."

Rice Lake, Wis., May 10.—Guarded by an outlaw with a rifle in hand, the body of Detective John Elliott, of Eau Claire, Wis., lies just across the "dead line" in front of John Dietz's home, fourteen miles from Raddison, while Sheriff Peterson, of Hayward, and a posse are attempting to smoke the desperado out.

Dietz had sworn to kill the first man who crossed the dead line and fired upon Elliot as the detective passed it with a warrant for his arrest, Sunday. The officer fell across the line and the outlaw threatens to put a bullet in the first man who attempts to touch him.

Sheriff Peterson, on learning of the tragedy, promptly organized a posse and a dozen men, armed to the teeth, started for the scene. They will shoot Deitz on sight and are determined to avenge the death of Elliott.

It is possible that the detective may be alive, although, if not instantly killed, he has probably bled to death by this time. Deitz is known to be a crack shot, and from accounts of the men who were with him, Elliott was shot through the heart.

Arrangements have been made by the posse to smoke Deitz out if he will not surrender, or if they are unable to get a shot at him. The party is prepared for a long siege and the sheriff stated that he would not return without Deitz, dead or alive.

Owing to the fact that Deitzs desperate plight and his shooting ability are known here, Sheriff Peterson found it difficult to secure a posse, but several Eau Claire officers, enraged at the loss of their comrade, volunteered and made up the party.

Deitz is the owner of a dam on a small creek, which had blocked a quantity of logs owned by the Dells Lumber company, of Eau Claire. He refused to open the dam without being paid a royalty and the company procured a warrant for his arrest.

According to the latest story of the shooting Detective Elliott accompanied by two men and a driver, went to serve the warrant and had stopped in front of Deitz's home when the man appeared armed with a rifle and ordered them to threw up their hands. The officer, who was sitting on the front seat, reached over for a rifle, and Deitz fired, the body falling over the side of the wagon to the ground, inside the dead line.

The others started to run and the outlaw put a bullet through the hat of the driver. The team ran away and the three men reached Rice Lake late Sunday night.

Deitz was formerly sheriff of Barron county, and Elliott is a son of the chief of police of Eau Claire.

ASSAULT MAY CAUSE DEATH

Magnus Swenson Strikes Edward Peterson With Cant Hook.

Edward Peterson, a laborer employed at the Hubbard & Vincent mill, is lying at the Red Cross hospital with a fractured skull, the result of a quarrel with the foreman, Magnus Swenson, last evening about 7 o'clock.

Swanson is claimed to have struck Peterson with a cant hook handle. According to the story of three Finlanders, who were witnesses to the quarrel, Swenson came into the lumber yard about 7 o'clock last evening and angrily told the members of the night gang that they were not piling the boards close enough.

"It was good enough for the day foreman and it ought to suit you," Peterson is claimed to have said. Swenson then struck the speaker a heavy blow with his fist, according to the story of the witnesses, and turned to go toward the office.

Peterson claims he took the foreman's action for his discharge and followed him to the office to get his pay.

In the office the quarrel is claimed to have been renewed, and the men say that Swenson struck Peterson a heavy blow from behind with the handle of a cant hook.

He was taken to his boarding house and later removed to the Red Cross hospital. He was unconscious during the night, but has shown some improvement this morning, and his recovery is hoped for, although he is still in a very critical condition.

Swenson was arrested about 9 o'clock last evening in the mill office by Captain Resche, Detective Terry and Sergeant Fritz.

He is claimed to have told the police that Peterson followed him to the office for the purpose of renewing the quarrel and that he struck him in self-defense only.

Peterson has a family living in Finland, while Swenson is a single man and boards at the Sherman house, corner of Twenty-third avenue west and Michigan street.

Swenson was arraigned this morning on a charge of assault in the first degree and his hearing was set for this afternoon.

EXPLORER DEAD

Sir Henry M. Stanley, Who Found Dr. David Livingstone.

Received Many Honors For His Explorations In Africa.

London, May 10.—Sir Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer, whose death was announced early this morning, passed away peacefully shortly after 6 o'clock. He was quite conscious to the last and able to recognize his wife. Before he died Sir Henry expressed a wish to be buried at his country seat, Furze Hill, Pirbright, Surrey. The question, however, is being discussed of burying him beside Livingstone in Westminster abbey.

Henry Morton Stanley was born near Denbigh, Wales, in 1840. His name was originally John Rowlands. He was placed in the poorhouse at St. Asaph, when he was 3 years old, remaining there and being educated for ten years. In 1855 he sailed as a cabin boy to New Orleans, where he was adopted by a merchant, whose name he took instead of his own. This merchant died without leaving a will, and young Stanley enlisted in the Confederate army, was taken prisoner, and subsequently volunteered in the United States navy, serving as acting ensign on the ironclad Ticonderoga. At the close of the war he went as a newspaper correspondent to Turkey. In 1868 he accompanied the British army to Abyssinia, as correspondent of the New York Herald. When he was in Spain in the service of the same paper he was asked by its proprietor, James Gordon Bennett, in October, 1869, to go and find Dr. David Livingstone, the African explorer, of whom nothing definite had been heard for more than two years.

After attending the opening of the Suez canal, visiting Constantinople, the Crimea, Palestine, the valley of the Euphrates, Persia and India, Stanley sailed from Bombay, Oct. 12, 1870, and reached Zanzibar, on the eastern coast of Africa, early in January, 1871. There he organized his search expedition and set out for the interior on March 21 with 192 followers. On Nov. 10 he found Dr. Livingstone at Ujiji, on Lake Tanganyika, where he had just arriver from the southwest. Stanley furnished Dr. Livingstone with supplies, explored the northern part of Lake Tanganyika with him, and remained till February, 1872, when Livingstone set out on that journey from which he never returned, while Stanley made his way back to the coast, sailing thence on March 14, 1872, and reaching England late in July. The British association entertained him at Brighton, where on Aug. 16 he gave an account of his expedition. On Aug. 27 the queen sent him a gold snuff-box set with diamonds, and on Oct. 21 a banquet was given him by the Royal Geographical society. In 1874 he received the patron's gold medal of the Royal Geographical society.

The New York Herald and the London Daily Telegraph again sent Stanley to explore the lake region of equatorial Africa. He reached Zanzibar in the autumn of 1874. There, learning that Livingstone had died in central Africa, he determined to shape his course northwest and explore the region of Lake Victoria N'yanza. Leaving at the head of 200 men, after many hardships and severe encounters with the natives, he reached it in February, 1874, having lost on the way 104 men by death or desertion. He circumnavigated the lake, sailing about 1000 miles and minutely examining all the inlets, and found it to be a single large lake, instead of a series of lagoons, as had been supposed by Richard F. Burton and Livingstone, so that the opinion of the explorers Speke and Grant was confirmed. Thus was Lake Victoria N'yanza proved to be the largest body of fresh water in the world, having an area of 40,000 square miles.

Stanley also found that Lake Albert Nyanza was not, as had been supposed, connected with Lake Tanganyika. The hostility of the natives barred his further advance. He descended the great river discovered by Livingstone and named the Lualaba, and found it was part of the Congo. The descent of eight months and cost him the lives of thirty-five men. He reached a west coast settlement and thence went by way of St. Paul de Loanda and Cape of Good Hope, to Zanzibar. Stanley reached England in February, 1878. At the Sorbonne, Paris, he was presented with the cross of chevalier of the Legion of Honor by the president of the French Geographical society.

In 1879-82 Stanley was again in Africa, with a view to develop the great basin of the river Congo. The king of the Belgians devoted $250,000 a year from his own private means toward this enterprise. In 1884 Stanley completed the work, establishing trading stations and founding the free state of the Congo, but he declined to be its first governor. On Jan. 13, 1887, he was presented with the freedom of the city of London. In 1888 he engaged in an African expedition to the Soudan, sent out for the relief of Emin Pasha, and was successful. On his return to England he was knighted by the queen. Of late years, Stanley has been living in retirement.

PARKER'S BOOM HURT.

Losing Ground Since the Platform Was Issued.

Chicago, May 10.—Walter Wellman, in a Washington special to the Record-Herald, says: Judge Parker is still the most likely candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, but he is not as strong as he was three weeks ago, when the New York Democratic convention declared for him. The best judgment here is that it is Parker against the field, with about an even chance between them.

It is apparent that Judge Parker's interests have been handled badly. Several mistakes have been made by those who are managing his affairs, and in one of these blunders he himself had a hand. This was the blunder of the platform.

It was so weak, vapid and platitudinous that it became at once an object of attack. And from the moment it was issued Judge Parker has been losing ground, and largely on account of it.

There is little reason to doubt that the document was written by McCarren, who is a Brooklyn politician, and who knows little or nothing of national affairs in a broad way.

It hurts Judge Parker because it convinces every one who wanted to be convinced, and not a few who did not, that he is timid, colorless, flabby; or, that he is deliberately trying to be smart and "smooth" and to "slide in" without showing his hand.

BURIED TREASURE.

Dispute Over Its Ownership In Oklahoma.

Guthrie, Okla., May 10.—Ownership of buried treasure to the amount of $80,000 is in dispute at Kildare, Okla., and a detective has been summoned to work on the case. An offer of one-half the amount recovered has been made the officer if he finds the money and establishes the claim of G. S. Scudder, of Kildare, to the treasure.

Scudder is a Western Union telegraph operator at Kildare, and owns a tract of land near that city, until recent years the property of the Tonkawa Indians.

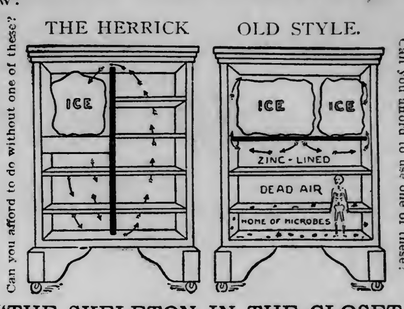
The detective has been told that $80,000 had been buried on land owned by Scudder, and that the treasure had been unearthed by another party and taken away.

Scudder says he knows the other man's name and where he can be found, but the latter has reburied the money and its hiding place is now unknown.

The treasure is supposed to have been first buried at least forty years ago by returning California gold seekers.

Be Careful of the Children!

Do you honestly believe your zinc-lined refrigerator to be a safe place to keep milk you feed the precious baby? Read what Dr. Cyrus Edson, M. D., Sanitary Superintendent of the New York Board of Health, says on the subject below:



"THE SKELETON IN THE CLOSET."

"Her ice-box became the most dangerous thing in the house. This is true with such delicate foods as milk. There is a marked increase in the number of deaths from diarrhoea diseases among children, so soon as the hot weather sets in, during which it is necessary to place the milk in the refrigerator. Children form the most delicate thermometer of health. Being more delicate, having less strength, being almost wholly without that reserve force of life we call stamina, they show quickly the evil effects of any cause. On the other hand, milk being a food in which the food elements are adjusted for digestion more perfectly than in any other, it will putrify more quickly than any other."

Parents should respect hygienic truth for the baby's sake, even though they do not for themselves.

DOG WAS THE THIEF.

Had Stolen His Master's Vest and Money.

Chicago, May 10.—Guilt expressed in the countenance of a terrier owned by Louis Friedman, 366 West Madison street, attracted the atteiton of Detective Bomer, sent to investigate a robbery reported by the dog's owner. In the night a vest containing $85 had been taken from a bedroom. The dog attempted to slink from the room.

"He knows too much," declared Bonner, as he tiptoed after the puppy.

Following the dog to the basement the detective caught him as he curled upon the missing vest, either to conceal it or to sleep. The watch and money were found in the improvised mattress stolen by the animal.

DANGER IN BOOKS.

Problems Referring to Negroes Cause Trouble.

Richmond, Va., May 10.—There is trouble in Richmond over an arithmetic which has just been adopted by the local school board. The work is being bitterly criticised, and an attempt will be made to have it removed from the list. The chief objection to it is by former Confederate soldiers, and their opposition is based principally on this problem:

"In a school room containing 567 white children, every tenth child is colored. How many children are in the school?"

It is said that in the samples presented to the board for inspection a strip was pasted over this problem.

"Nobody knows," says a local publication, "how many similar subtle dangers lurk in Northern school books which the various Virginia boards have adopted."

POKER HIS DOWNFALL.

Sioux City Youth Used a Firm's Money.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 10.—Detectives have discovered the reason for the sudden disappearance of John J. Donahue, son of P. J. Donahue, general agent here for the Great Northern railroad. The youth of 20, who was the trusted bookkeeper for J. J. Farrelly & Co., commission men at the Sioux City stock yards, absconded last week. The shortage, at first supposed to be $750, has grown to $3000. Detectives have found that the boy was actually robbed by a gang of unscrupulous poker sharks at the yards. They set about and laid plans to get his money, knowing full well he could not afford to lose the sums he did. One day $150 was left in their hands by the young man, who was game and thought he knew the ways of the world. It is not believed he took much money with him.

An investigation of the poker clique at the stock yards is imminent, and sensational developments are expected.

BONDE RETURNS.

Mystery of Several Months Is Cleared Up.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., May 10.—The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Edmund Bonde on Nov. 12, 1903, has been explained by his return. Bonde says he was under the influence of liquor when he left Chippewa Falls for St. Paul. When he reached that city he heard some one shout: "This way for tickets to Seattle," and he thereupon purchased a ticket to Washington. He remained in the West about five months when the desire to make his whereabouts known and see his wife influenced him to return.

When Bonde disappeared stories began to take root that he had absconded with $600 of his employers' money, that he had eloped with a former sweetheart, and finally that he had met with foul play. He says there is no truth whatever in any of these reports.

BLEW OFF HIS HEAD.

Desperate Suicide of a Montana Miner.

Butte, Mont., May 10.—Telephone advices from Radersburg, a small mining camp eighty miles north of this city, tell of the shocking suicide near there of Joseph Lethlean, a miner. Lethlean grew despondent because of hard drinking, and placed dygamite in his mouth and ignited it, the explosion blowing his head into atoms.

The terrible deed is believed to have been committed Thursday. Lethlean's body and shoulders, without any head, were found in his cabin. When Sheriff Munden and his party arrived at the shack a horrible scene met their eyes. The headless body was lying on the floor of the cabin, the walls and ceiling of which were spattered with blood and brains.

Sheriff Munden instituted a search of the cabin for some portion of the man's head, but beyond finding a piece of bone not larger than a half dollar, his search was in vain.

HEATWOLE THROWS HOT SHOT AT COLLINS

Says His Crowd Have Record Beat For Dirty Politics.

Knows Who Carried Hill's Money to Collins' Headquarters.

St. Paul, May 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—Ex-Congressman Joel P. Heatwole, of Northfield, lent his presence to the Dunn headquarters today, and that had the effect of bringing about a number of conferences, which were prominent for their length and heat.

Mr. Heatwole is Mr. Dunn's manager, and his sudden appearance was for the purpose of screwing down the safety valve on the Dunn end of the present controversy between Mr. Dunn and Judge Collins.

Said he: "I know Judge Collins and his crowd and I know their tactics. I have seen some dirty politics, but they have the record beat. I know all about that campaign of '94.

"Judge Collins says he only spent $1500 for his campaign for the supreme bench. It is rot. I saw twice that amount, in printed matter alone, stacked in his headquarters. Now, as for that Hill story, it's straight. Mr. Dunn has told the truth about it.

"You say Judge Collins has asked Mr. Hill for details regarding this money the Great Northern contributed to his campaign. I supposet he answer will be news to him. Why, I can tell him who carried the money between the Great Northern office and the campaign headquarters. Possibly one Mr. Gilman might refresh his memory as to how it was distributed. Now I am not talking. I am telling facts, and Judge Collins does not have to go to Mr. Hill for them either."

Mr. Dunn refused to say whether he had forwarded a reply to Judge Collins' letter, but said he would get one in ample time.

Judge Collins stated today that he had not received any answers to his letters either from Former State Auditor Dunn or President J. J. Hill, of the Great Northern Railroad company.

Judge Collins yesterday addressed letters, asking each if they had said and made charges as reported, regarding his (Judge Collins) use of railroad money in the 1894 campaign.

"There is nothing to give out," was the reply of Judge Collins' managers. "Judge Collins will have a statement to make when these replies are received and not until then."

State Librarian Nelson, at the Collins headquarters, made a similar statement. He had not heard from Mr. Hill and, therefore, was not in a position to talk.

Judge Collins has not made public his letter to President Hill, but its contents are understood to be straight to the point.

It is said that Judge Collins put four pointed questions to the Great Northern magnate and an early reply was solicited. They are:

"Did you contribute to my campaign in '94?"

"To whom was the money paid?

"Did I or some member of the campaign committee solicit this aid?

"How much money did you contribute?"

Included in the letter, it is understood, is a request for a statement whether the Great Northern at any time ever contributed to Mr. Dunn's campaign.

Judge Collins' managers said today: If Mr. Dunn was so intimate with Mr. Hill that the latter furnished him information regarding past interferences in matters political, Mr. Dunn surely has the well wishes of that big corporation.

ASSETS ARE TO BE SOLD

W. M. Prindle, Trustee of Leland Estate Advertises Some.

W. M. Prindle has given notice that on the afternoon of May 18, at the Lonsdale building, there will be offered for sale to the highest bidder for cash all items of furniture and other personal property, all stocks and bonds, all notes and judgments and all items of property then remaining in his hands as trustee of the estate of Charles F. The petition of Mr. Leland for discharge in bankruptcy has been ordered by Judge Page Morris to be heard in federal court room on May 21. Dividends amounting to 27 per cent of the liabilities have been paid by Trustee Prindle, and on April 26 Leland applied for discharge. Mr. Leland, as president of the Commercial banking company, made application to be adjudged a bankrupt, and $212,000 in claims have been proven against his estate.

Thus far creditors of the estate have been paid only $56,240 of the total amount due.

THOSE WHO HAVE DIED

New York, May 10.—Conrad F. Stollmeyer, known as the "Pitch Lake King," and the wealthiest man in the Caribbeans, is dead at Port of Spain, Trinidad, according to private advices received here. He was 91 years old. From a penniless German immigrant to the United States, he became the editor of a German paper in Philadelphia, which pro-slavery partisans tried to wreck in 1845. Again penniless he became an adventurer in Trinidad and, finally, the owner of an asphalt lake worth millions which he discovered. Stollmeyer, although born in Germany where he received a university education, was a British subject, having been naturalized by a special act of parliament in 1848. In his later years he became an ardent supporter of the movement for universal peace.

New York, May 10.—Edward Erskine Gwynne, nephew of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, is dead in this city from acute gastritis, kidney trouble and complications affecting his heart. He had not been in health for several weeks, but had so far improved a week ago that his wife sailed for France, taking her three children. Mr. Gwynne was 35 years old. He was well known socially in New York and Paris, where he had lived much of the time for the last few years. It was while he was living in Paris that he got into financial difficulties which brought him considerable publicity two years ago, when he filed a schedule in bankruptcy proceedings showing liabilities of $56,250 and assets of $57.

THE TYNER TRIAL.

Test mony In Regard To Barrett-Nelms Partnership.

Washington, May 10.—Testimony in regard to the Barrett-Nelms partnership announcements was given again today by A. Smith Bowman, secretary of the Southern Mutual Investment company of Lexington, Ky., at the trial of Jas. N. Tyner and Harrison J. Barrett on charges of conspiracy. It did not appear from his testimony who sent the announcements to the company, Mr. Nelms or Mr. Barrett. Mr. Bowman explained a difference between himself and Gen. Tyner in regard to closing up of old business and the submitting of a new certificate for the approval of Gen. Tyner. The witness said that the contract first submitted to Gen. Tyner had never been intended to be of a permanent character. He said that Gen. Tyner had agreed that the company should be given sufficient time to wind up old business.

JAPANESE SUCCESSES

Will Have No Effect on Japan's Post-War Policy.

London, May 10.—Baron Suyematsu, son-in-law of the Marquis Ito, and former Japanese minister of the interior, who lately arrived here by way of the United States, in the course of an interview today with reference to the fears expressed on the continent as to the effect of Japanese successes on Japan's policy after the war, declared emphatically that Japan's policy is well defined and her success will make no difference. The future status of Korea would be that of a Japanese Cuba or a Japanese Egypt. Russia will not be allowed the least political or territorial hold there. Regarding Manchuria, Japan desires no rights there beyond what are enjoyed by the other powers. Manchuria will be given back to China, but under conditions. Possibly Manchuria may be made a buffer state under China's sovereignty.

Discussing China's neutrality, M Suyematsu said the chief danger was Russia, which was either willingly or unconsciously irritating the Chinese, thus tending to a breach of neutrality.

PALMER HOUSE PASSES OUT OF PALMER CONTROL.

Chicago, May 10.—After nearly forty years the Palmer house, for a long time the best known hotel in Chicago, has passed from the hands of the Palmer family into the control of the Chicago Hotel company, recently incorporated. Mrs. Potter Palmer and the other heirs to the estate, will have an interest in the corporation.

The transfer of control of the hotel itself in no manner affects the real estate. The Chicago Hotel company merely leases the hotel.

The officers of the company are Willis Howe, president of the corporation, and Edwin Palmer, a distant relative of Potter Palmer, who is secretary and treasurer. Both have been connected with the management of the hotel for a long time.

IMPORTERS' ASSOCIATION.

SHOWS NO CHANGE

Winter Wheat Condition on May 1 Same as April 1.

Acreage Reduced 15.4 Per Cent From Last Fall's Seeding.

The government report of the condition of winter wheat on May 1 was issued this afternoon at 3 o'clock and it was a surprise from the fact that it made the condition exactly the same as a month ago, 76.5. The trade had looked for a reduction in percentage, the figures being guessed all the way from 70 to 74 and the larger sentiment was that it would show from 73 to 74.

It also reports an abandonment of 15.4 per cent in the acreage, making the acreage 27,083,500. This is a bullish feature.

The report in detail is as follows:

Washington, May 10.—Condition of winter wheat 76.5 per cent; acres abandoned, 15.4; acres under cultivation, 27,083,500.

Rye condition, 81.2.

The returns made up to May 1 show the area under winter wheat in cultivation on that date to have been about 27,083,500 acres. This is 4,932,700 acres or 15.4 per cent less than the area sown last fall and 5,427,000 acres or 16.7 per cent less than the area of winter wheat harvested last year.

Of this abandonment, Indiana reports 904,000 acres; Kansas, 713,000; Ohio, 465,000; California, 391,000; Oklahoma, 373,000; Texas, 299,000; Illinois, 269,000; Michigan, 259,000; Nebraska, 218,000, and Pennsylvania, Kentucky and Missouri each between 100,000 and 200,000 acres.

It is a noteworthy fact that the whole of the thirty-one states having more or less winter wheat under cultivation, reports some abandonment of acreage.

For 27,083,500 acres, remaining under cultivation, the average condition May 1 was 76.5, which is identical with that reported on April 1 for the entire acreage sown. The general condition averages reported May 1, 1903, and May 1, 1902, were respectively 92.6 and 76.4, the mean of the May averages of the last ten years being 84.2.

Of the report Logan & Bryan of Chicago say: The government report showing condition of 76.5 or the same as last month with a loss of 15.4 per cent in the acres on the basis of 16½ bushels per acre, indicates a crop of about 340,000,000 bushels winter wheat against 401,685,000 harvested last year. It is a bullish report.

BATTLE ON SEA

Two Russian Fleets and Japs Said To Have Met.

Rumored That Japs Lost Three Cruisers and Russians Two.

St. Petersburg, May 10, 7:49 p. m.—A foreign embassy here professes to have information to the effect that the Vladivostok and Port Arthur squadrons have effected a juncture after a naval battle in which the Japanese lost three cruisers and the Russians two, and one torpedo boat destroyer.

Newchang, May 9.—(Delayed in transmission)—A report from hitherto unfailing source says that the Japanese landing at Kai Chou was a feilt and the real landing was made 50 miles further south.

St. Petersburg, May 10.—Viceroy Alexieff has telegraphed to the emperor as follows During the night of May 9-10, railroad communication with Port Arthur was restored. The telegraph line is being repaired.

An Imperial order declaring cotton a contraband of war was officially gazetted this morning. The action of the Russian government in declaring cotton to be contraband of war is due to its being used in the manufacture of high explosives.

Prices on the bourse were still weaker today. Russian imperial fours touching 85.

Gen. Huber has been appointed commissary general of the Russian army in Manchuria.

The following statement was made to the Associated Press today regarding the reported epidemics at Mukden: "There are some cases of dysentery and smal pox and several cases of typhus in the Mukden hospitals, but there has been no application for more surgeons or for special remedies and serum and it is entirely misleading to say that epidemics exist. Smallpox and typhus are endemic in Manchuria and dysentery is inevitable where large bodies of men are crowded together. There is nothing alarming in the situation."

Russia has protested to the powers signatory of The Hague and Geneva conventions against the action of the Japanese in firing on the Red Cross train from Port Arthur May 6, when of 200 sick and wounded on the cars two were struck by the Japanese bullets. The general staff is authority for the statement that the health of the Russian troops is exceptionally good. The total number of cases in the hospitals does not exceed 1 per cent of the Russian forces. The condition of Mukden is no worse than other places.

New York, May 10.—Japanese refugees numbering 342 from the island of Sakhalin, have arrived at Hakodate, says a Times dispatch from Tokio. They reported that every faculty had been granted to them by the Russians and that they sunffered no violence.

St. Petersburg, May 10, 10:10 p. m.—An official investigation shows there is no truth in the report that the Vladivostok and Port Arthur squadrons have effected a juncture after a naval battle in which both squadrons suffered losses.

MESSAGES HELD UP.

American Consul Makes Protest to Russians.

Newchwang, May 10.—The United States consul, Mr. Miller, was prevented for a time from telegraphing to Minister Conger a statement of the situation here. Mr. Miller's message was released after he had made a strong protest on the subject. Many Japanese spies are in this vicinity, disguised as beggars. They have cut the wires to the mines at the mouth of the Liao river. The feeling of unrest is increasing here.

Of the five Russian regiments which were in garrison here four have left and the other received orders to go Monday, but this order was cancelled an hour later.

The Russians are strongly entrenched at Anping, where the guns from the Newchwang forts have been sent.

There is an unconfirmed native report that the Russians are attempting to induce the Chinese guilds to take over the local government here in case of the complete evacuation of the town. If this is done the foreign consuls will protest.

Col. Muenthe, the military adviser of Viceroy Yuan Shi Kai, commander-in-chief of the Chinese forces, arrived here Monday afternoon. It is believed he came to Newchwang to confer with the Russians regarding the proposal to turn Newchwang over to the Chinese.

The Russians are known to be communicating with the Chinese brigands and to be stirring up a state of terror among the natives.

LOST ART DISCOVERED.

Buffalo has a struggling young genius who expects some day to be numbered among the men of wealth and prominence of the country, says the Buffalo correspondent of the Chicago Chronicle. He is Frank McCroy, who, though barely of age, has been able to exercise his inventive skill to such an extent that he has always attracted the attention of some of the noted scientists connected with the government at Washington.

Young McCroy bases his hope of wooing fickle fortune and incidentally having a tablet in the "hall of fame" on his discovery of what is considered one of the lost arts. It is that of tempering copper. He has already given practical demonstration of his discovery, and those who have witnessed the tests have pronounced them nothing short of marvelous.

McCroy came to this city from Halstead, Pa. Soon after he had made his discovery Representative Dubois, of Great Bend, Pa., became interested in the young genius and sent him to Washington, where he gave experiments at the navy department. They were all successful. The young man received offers at the time from persons who wanted to buy his secret, but he decided to wait until he was of age. He was 21 years old a few months ago.

LONG NAMES.

They Are Not Peculiar to Any One Country.

All London is laughing at Uncle Sam's new postmaster in the Hawaiian Islands, the Honorable David Kaphokohoakiniokeweneoah, but I turned the tables on a hilarious crowd of Britishers today by quoting from their own postoffice directory some names, compared with which that of David looks like a mere play on vocable and consonants, writes a London correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Uncle Sam's new postmaster sports twenty-three letters in his signature—I tried to count those in the following name of a Wales village half a dozen times, but gave up in despair. This is the way it looks in print:

Llanfairpwllgwynghnghllgogerchwyrndrobwllllandsilliogogogoch.

In the Queen's English that means: Church-of-St. Mary-situated-in-the hollow-of-the-white - hazelnut-near-the-wild-cataract-and-holy-Tisilio - in-the-neighborhood-of-the-red-cavern, but how the name is pronounced in the vernacular only the Lord and the Welsh people know. Other British subjects steer clear of it unless an attack of lockjaw makes excessive use of vocal arrangements necessary. Needless to say, the British Postmaster General had to consent to accept letters under an abbreviated address. Llanfair will do, if you have friends in the place.

One patriotic Britisher, harping on the above fact, insisted that Wales and Scotch names did not count anyhow, inasmuch as they were "the devil's own work." Quoth the learned gentleman: "When all the people of the earth had acquired their language, the devil procured the vocabularies of them all and put them in a big pot. He stewed them well over a sizzling fire and finally collected the scum at the top and distributed it over Wales and Scotland. That is the way these unfortunate countries got their language so badly mixed."

Scotland certainly owns some names, long and complicated enough to excite the envy of Uncle Sam's new postmaster. Here follows that of a village on the Island of Mull, Argyleshire, Scotland:

"Drimtardhrlyckhillichatan."

To discover the meaning your correspondent was unable at this writing, but the place is down in the postal guide, sure enough. The discusion brought up the subjects of proper names, and, there being a learned company, some interesting and not a few humorous facts developed.

Nowadays Spaniards indulge in the longest personal names, though small fry German royalty runs them a close second. A story was told of a Spanish grandee traveling in England, who having lost his way, late at night, knocked at the door of an inn, asking lodging.

The innkeeper came and without opening the door asked: "Who is there, and what do you want?"

"Duke of——," and the Spaniard rolled off a title of sixty syllables, for he happened to speak English well.

"Sorry," replied the innkeeper withdrawing, "I haven't got room for so many folks." He went to bed again, while the proud Hidalgo sorrowfully started for the next town.

The list of officeholders in the Spanish ministry of finance carried a copyist with a most imposing name. The man would think himself in heaven, I reckon, if he received as many dollars per month as he has letters in his signature to wit:

"Don Juan Nepomuceno-de-Burlonegui-agonalosarelaza-Glazvecha."

A Spaniard in the party explained. Don Juan, he said, is a guarantee, and according to custom includes in his name every village and palace which his family may have owned during the last five or ten centuries. After this we can well understand that once upon a time a Spanish Ambassador refused to dine with an Engyishman namd John Cuts.

John happned to be one of Queen Elizabeth's most opulent subjects. Bess appointed him to lodge the representative of the king of Spain, during his visit to England, and to make him welcome at his great house. But the ambassador objected, thinking himself disparaged by the shortness of his host's name, and when Elizabeth insisted, he replied he could not imagine that a man bearing a monosyllable name could ever, in the great alphabet of civil life, have performed anything great or honorable enough to entitle him to the dignity of playing host to a Spanish noble.

If Elizabeth had a short-named friend, those of the protector indulged in appellations of prodigious length. Praisegod Barebone, he of Barebone's parliament, was an exception, but he had two relatives, who might have been brothers of Uncle Sam's postmaster or commotion strikes the nerves of the Kaphokohoakiniokeweneoah. The young- leaves. Hundreds of sensitive plants have er of the two set off quite well with "Christcameintotheworldtosave," but the elder had a name so long that those shortening it unconsciously laid themselves open to charges of profanity. He was yclept "Ifchristhadnotdiedthouhadstbeendamned." Quite naturally this soldier was called "Damned" by his fellows. Conforming with the tendencies of the times, book titles were both long and curious under Cromwell Here are some furnished by my learned friends.

"Shot Aimed at the Devil's Headquarters through the Tube of the Cannon of Covenant."

"Spiritual Milk for Babes, Drawn out of the Breasts of both Testaments for Your Soul's Nourishment."

"A Spiritual Mustard Pot, to Make the Soul Sneeze with Devotion.

"Tobacco Battered, and Pipes Shattered About Their Ears that Idolize so Loathsome a Vanity, by a Volley of Holy Shot, Thundered from Mount Helicon: A Poem Against the Use of Tobacco."

"A Fan to Drive Away Flies, a Theological Treatise on Purgatory."

"The Gun of Penitents."

"The Snuffers of Divine Law."

Happily the period of name-monsters pased out of English history, and when Sterne exhorted godfathers not "to Nicodemus a baby into nothing," all sensible people said "amen."

Here is a story culled from the Paris Figaro of last week. A proud father reports at the mayor's office to announce the birth of a son. He gives his name and that of the mother: "Rose B."

"How do you spell Madame's name, with ey, ay, ai or aie?"

"B," repeated the stork's latest victim. The official got mad; he thought the citizen was fooling, until the happy father proved by his wife's birth certificate that Rose B was all the name she had before marriage.

"Y" is the name of a French village in the Department of Somme, also that of a large Chinese city and of the famous gulf west of Amsterdam.

"A" is the name of a flourishing Swedish town. A small French village is likewise content with that appellation, while one of the larger Chinese provinces is called "U."

A respectably dressed citizen of Paris was arrested the other day for throwing a stone into a shop window. When questioned he said he did it to secure a name for himself. Here is his explanation: While under age he went by the name of his mother, who had died in giving him life. When he achieved his majority his guardian announced that he was the son of a rich Parisian arisocrat t whom his mother had been secretly married. The courts thereupon forbade him to retain his mother's name, as it involved a blemish on her memory, yet the young man's alleged father secured an order from another judge, prohibiting the boy to take his name. Being now nameless, he cannot obtain employment in France, where on needs an arsenal of legal documents to get any kind of a hearing. The case is still undecided.

A German paper tells of the highly odoriferous names of three villages officials in the circuit of Merseburg. They are, in the order of their proprietors' where one needs an arsenal of legal ran (translated): Parsley (the mayor), Onion (the pastor) and Garlic (the teacher).

The late Field Marshal Gen. von Moltke told the writer that one day while inspecting the Tubingen garrison, he asked a soldier: "What's your name?"

"Meyer, your excellency," answered the man.

"And what is your name, my son?" queried the marshal, addressing the second man.

"Meyer, your excellency."

"And yours?"

"Meyer, your excellency."

"It's to laugh," cried Moltke, much puzzled, "but let's see, what is your name," addressing the fourth man.

"Lachmeyer" (Laugh-Meyer), answered number four. The field marshal stopped asking.

The writer recalls a curious play of names in an Idaho murder trial. The criminal, who was known to have murdered his wife, cutting her body to pieces, was named Hacker. He was hanged by Sheriff Cord, and the two men appointed by the court to keep Hacker under observation day and night, were named Lock and Key, respectively.

In a recent hearing in a petty larceny case in a small town near London the judge, prosecutor, thief and the policeman making the arrest were all named Harrison.

Berlin harbors so many people named Schulz that the police establish separate archives for that branch of the German family. According to last accounts, 60,000 Schulzes of different degree live in the kaiser's capital.

The discussion developed many other curious facts on the subject of names. For instance, in England it is a popular notion that all females of the name of Agnes are fated to become mad. This is in line with the singular fact that all queens of Naples of the name of Joan and also the kings of Scotland of the name of James have been unfortunate, while reference to ancient history shows that all those of the family of Caesar who were surnamed Caius perished by the sword.

Pope Pius X's name is (translated) Tailor. Sergius II. was the first pope to change his name in ascending the papal throne, because his proper name was Hogsmouth.

Novel readers will be interested to know that to give authority to the splendor of his diction, a French writer whom we all love, named Guez (beggar) assumed the name of his estate and became Balzac.

HYSTEICAL PLANTS.

Science claims to have discovered that plants have nerves, and that some species are irritable and nervous to a marked degree, says the New York Times. The peculiar phenomena are not few, for the poets have sung of the sensitive plant's plaintive actions when played upon by the rough wind and of the mimosa's fright when crushed or broken by some strange foot; but these were supposed to be merely figures of speech, and no one believed that the songmakers had such insight as to discover that plant organisms were gifted with nerve centers and brain cells. Science has worked out the fact, however, that the poets were nearer the truth than we gave them credit for, and that certain species of our common woodland growths possess nerves that can be played upon by the east wind as readily as those which afflict mankind. The sensitive plant leads all others in this respect. But what we considered innate modesty at being handled is nothing more than irritable nerves. The genius Mimosa comprises about 200 species, and most of those exhibit peculiarly irritable natures if touched or handled in the wrong way. The Mimosa pudica, the botanical name for the sensitive plant, is so highly organized that it is kept in a state of neurasthenia most of the time. A puff of wind, the tramping of heavy feet near it, or the rude touch of the hand, will cause that plant to go off into nervous hysterics. The exciting cause or commotion strikes the nerves of the their foundation.

In some of the plants the ends of the nerves have been located. Thus if Mimosa pudica is touched with ever so fine a point at the base of a pinna or along its axis, the most remote pair of leaves will shiver and begin to close. Finally, when all the leaves have closed, the pinna which has been touched will drop. The shock has been so great that the whole nervous system has been temporarily disarranged. However, like all nervous, irritable people, there is a point beyond which fright reacts and a control of the system begins to manifest itself. If the sensitive plant is shaken for some time it gets over its attack of neurasthenia and some of the leaves will begin to open again.

The most sensitive place of the plant is at the base of the secondary leaf stalks, where an immense number of nervous corpuscles or delicate tissues are located.

READY WIT.

It may seem rather trite to go back to civil war times for a story, but all the tales of that memorable time have not been told, and as this one was a personal experienc of a relative of mine I can vouch for it. I have never seen it in print nor heard anyone else tell it, says Francis H. Lee in Lippincott's.

My uncle, Maj. Thomas Ridgely, was a surgeon attached to Gen. Grant's staff. It was after the surrender of Vicksburg. The Union forces had entered the city and much merrymaking and entertaining were going on. One night a dinner was in progresss, at which many Northern officers and a large number of Southern ladies were present. Many toasts had been proposed and drunk, all of them practically in honor of the successes of the Union army and the men responsible for them.

Finally one of the Southern ladies, a great beauty and noted for her intense partisan feeling for the South, arose and said: "Gentlemen, may I propose a toast?"

With natural gallantry and a little trepidation the ranking officer said, "Certainly?"

"Well, then, gentlemen, I give you 'The Southern Confederacy.'"

It was an embarrassing situation. But with hardly a moment's hesitation one of the Northern officers relieved the tension.

"Down with it, gentlemen," he cried; and the glasses were drained without embarrassment and without disloyalty.

There are good business chances open for the right men. Do you want to be in on the ground floor? Why spend your time in running about, looking for a position when The Herald's Want Columns will do the work for you?

WHEAT IS SLOW

Disposition to Await the Government Report Is General.

Receipts Liberal and Cables Firmer—Flax Is Lower.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 10.—The disposition to await the government report was very apparent in the market today and trading was dull. A reduced acreage and reduced condition was looked for and there were many guesses as to condition, ranging from 70 to 74. Cables were firmer, Liverpool closing ¼d higher and Paris ¼c higher. Receipts continue small. The market during the early part of the morning sold up but fell off later the Bradstreet report proving rather bearish for one thing. It showed a decrease of 1,180,000 bus. in the world's visible supply against a decrease of 6,327,000 bus., in the corresponding week of a year ago. East of the Rockies there was a decrease of 2,280,000 bus., but in Europe and afloat there was an increase of 1,100,000 bus.

Weather conditions were very good everywhere and seeding in the Northwest is nearing the end. Foreign crop reports are likewise very favorable, Roumania alone reporting a necessity for rain.

Duluth exporters report foreign buyers advancing their bids but not fast enough to keep pace with the Manitoba advance.

In Duluth there was a decline of ¼c in both the May and July option, in Minneapolis May advanced ½c and July was ¼c lower, in Chicago May was up ⅝c and July ½c lower and in New York May lost ¾c and July the same. The September option in Duluth closed ⅜c lower and in Minneapolis ⅛-¼c lower.

Primary receipts of wheat were 171,000 bus, last year 255,000 bus. Shipments 680,000 bus, last year 307,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 84,727 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ½d higher. In the Chicago market July corn closed ⅜-½c lower. July oats closed ½-⅝c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 463,000 bus, last year 704,000 bus. Shipments 463,000 bus, last year 438,000 bus. Clearances were 7000 bus; Bradstreet reported a decrease of 1,551,000 bus in the world's visible.

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market was quiet. July opened ¼c higher at 92c, sold off to 92⅜c at 9:58 and advanced to 93⅛c at 11:14. It then fell back steadily to 92¼c, at which price it closed, a loss of ¼c. May closed ¼c lower at 92¼c, and trading in that option is extremely narrow. September closed ⅝c lower at 81¼c.

Cash prices continued on the same basis and offerings were light.

Flax was dull and May advanced ½c to $1.08½. It then fell off and closed ½c lower than yesterday at $1.07¾. The July lower than yesterday at $1.07¾. The July and October options closed ½c lower and September ¼c lower.

Oats and rye were unchanged.

Following are the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Prices Declined on Favorable Weather Report.

Chicago, May 10.—Faborable weather throughout the greater part of the country brought out sufficient selling of wheat today by pit traders to cause a decline of about half a cent. Owing to the fact that the government crop report would be issued later in the day many traders were disposed to await its coming, and consequently the volume of business was light. The inactivity of trading had some influence in creating the easier tone. The opening was steady on firm cables and small receipts, July being unchanged to ⅛c up at 89⅛@89⅝c. The market received little support, however, and the price declined to 86@86¼c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 127 cars, against 103 cars last week and 165 cars a year ago.

Under a moderate demand from an influential trader the market became quite firm, July advancing to 86¾c. Late in the day the selling became general, due to the bearish Illinois crop report and to the weekly weather bureau report which was also quite bearish. Under these influences the market developed a weak undertone, which continued until the close. After selling at 87⅝@88c, July closed at 86c, a loss of ⅛c for the day.

An easier feeling was manifested in corn, due to excellent weather for planting and to the weakness in wheat. There was considerable selling by commission houses and only a small demand. The opening was steady with July unchanged to a shade lower at 48⅝@48¾c to 48¾c. After selling at 48⅝c, the price reacted to 48⅝-6¼c. Local receipts were 177 cars, with 11 of contract grade.

The market was affected by the weakness in wheat and by the bearish Illinois report. After touching 48⅝@48¾c July declined to 48¼@48¼c and closed with a loss of ⅜@½c at 48¼@48¾c.

Larger receipts, favorable weather and the easier tone in other grains caused a few scalpers to sell oats, but offerings were not large and prices held about steady. July opened unchanged at 38¾c and held at 38⅜c. Local receipts were 143 cars.

Provisions were steady in sympathy with the hog market. Buying of lard by pit traders and selling of pork by outsiders were the features. July pork opened 5c lower at $11.62½. The price sold off to $11.55@11.57½, but rallied to $11.62½. Lard was up 2½c at $6.65. Ribs were a shade lower at $6.47½.

Close: Wheat—May, 91¾c; July, 86c; old, 87¼c; September, 80⅝c; old, 81¾@82c. Corn—May, 47c; July, 48¼@48⅝; September, 48c; December, 43¾c. Oats—May, 40¼c; July, 38⅛@38¼c; September, 30⅝c. Pork—May, $11.20; July, $11.37½; September, $11.60. Lard—May, $6.52½; July $6.55½; September, $6.67½@6.70. Ribs—May, $6.20; July, $6.37½; September, $6.52½. Rye—May, 72c; July, 69c. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Chicago Record-Herald: The private advices have prepared the wheat speculator for a drop in the crop condition. Snow estimates the winter wheat condition at 74.5, and Snow last month was about 4 points higher than the Agricultural Department. The April official wheat condition was 76.5, and if there is any such drop in the official condition for the soft winter states as are estimated by the private reports, the government tomorrow will not show much over 70 for the whole area. There was a May winter wheat condition as low as 70 in 1885, as low as 73.1 in 1888, and as low as 75.3 in 1893.

As the unofficial announcements have prepared the crowd for something sensational in the way of a low condition it is uncertain how a realization of this will be taken. There are other considerations besides the crop condition. There is the price, 1c to 1¢ higher than last year. There is the foreign situation. World's shipments are enormous, although America is contributing very little. There is the flour situation, which is so sick the millers cannot believe present wheat prices can be maintained.

There is the question of the small local contract stock, which makes a situation that might be stead upon, but there is certainly no sign of any one acting upon it. The wheat problem is always a wide one, involving the situation the world over, but this season even the mere domestic situation is a most complicated one. There is the likelihood now of the short winter wheat supply being offset by a very liberal spring wheat crop.

There is nothing particularly bullish in the statistical situation except the small contract supply here. The visible total is only 2,000,000 bus. under last year. The supply at Minneapolis and Duluth is almost 3,0 bus. over last year's; and the supply of wheat and flour afloat and abroad is almost 30,000,000 bus. larger than last year. The expectation of scarcity in the Northwest has entirely disappeared. It looks as if Minneapolis might carry over 10,000,000 bus. into thenew crop; the only lack seems to be at Chicago and there only of the contract quality.

It is a situation of which no one can be sure. The crop situation is one of doubt as yet. The spring wheat result may be good enough to offset the winter wheat losses. The immediate cash situation is undoubtedly bearish; and it seems to be the fast the interests most closely identified with the actual wheat are bearish. It is natural for the speculator to be affected by the prospective crop losses; but it will be impossible for him to maintain advances without popular support and there has bee hardly any of that as yet.

It is easy to get enthusiastic over the crop news. Whether it furnishes any logical excuse for higher prices is not so easy, on reflection, to decide.

B. E. Baker's Chicago Grain Letter: Wheat—Wheat was rather a nervous market, with a limited trade. Operators hesitated about taking a decided stand, in view of the forthcoming report. They also had in mind the fractional break on the day following a bullish report. There was a rumor late in the session that the Michigan state report was 54 compared with 73 last month. Northwestern markets were strong all day. The weather was favorable in every respect and the Government and Illinois weekly bulletin were bearish. If the report this afternoon is equal to or lower than present expectation we may get a sharp rally at the opening. The probability is the market will sell off later. Estimated receipts for tomorrow 20 cars.

Corn—It was hard to maintain yesterday's closing strength in corn. Fluctuations ran along with wheat as a rule with trade small. There were bull tips in way of small receipts compared with a year ago and the relative strength in Kansas City and St. Louis markets. 134,000 bushels of contract were loaded from store yesterday and receipts for 102,000 bushels cancelled. The weather is suitable for plowing and planting, and the Government and Illinois weekly bulletin were construed as bearish. The cash market was steady with Armour & Co. the chief buyers. We do not look for any great amount of activity in this market until receipts commence to increase towards the end of the month. Estimated receipts for tomorrow 40 cars.

Oats—The oat market dragged but showed some firmness on the break. Receipts were light. Ninety-five thousand bushels of standard were loaded from store yesterday. The demand on the whole is good, especially from the South. The cash market was strong and from ½ to 1c up. Weather was favorable for the growing crop. Estimated receipts for tomorrow 40 cars.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The cables are dull and the weather favorable. It was not an active market but being without short interest the liquidation was mainly by holders in view of the uncertainty of the government report of the genera ltone was heavy. The current reports in commercial channels from every section denotes an improving tendency to the crop appearance since the first of the month. Seeding is still progressing and is pretty well completed in all sections except the Red River valley. The government report this afternoon is awaited with much interest. If it is bullish we are inclined to think it has been pretty well discounted.

Corn—It was not very active but there was some little scared liquidation and some selling for bearish local account. The lake strike is still unsettled. The weekly government report says that planting has been delayed in Nebraska, Kansas and parts of Missouri but that elsewhere it has made some progress at little later date than the average. There is a moderate shipping demand.

Oats—There was quite a good deal of liquidation in the market which seemed to be participated in by the Patten houses and by local holders generally, especially in the nearby futures. We are inclined to think the price is high enough.

Provisions—The market is heavy and continues to drag. Receipts are a little light and the shipping demand is a little better than a year ago, but the market suffers from the poor quality and character of the speculative support. Packers do not seem disposed to accumulate holdings and the outsiders who are carrying the load are gradually getting tired.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: The London Statist of April 30, has a rather bearish tone in its wheat article. It says the fact that American and Canada combined now occupy fourth place in our list of sources of supply instead of the first position has evidently no effect on the markets in the face of the liberal movement from Argentine and Russia and the expected abundance from India and Austral-asia. It estimates the surplus for export of South Australia at 44,000,000 bushels and from India 85,000,000 bushels. Its summary of crop conditions is favorable except as to Russia and America. It may be noted that, since the publication of the crude advices as to the Russian crop are more favorable.

"I do not believe," says C. H. Spencer of St. Louis, "that the winter wheat situation is as clear yet as a great many people have claimed. There have, of course, been losses, but there has been ver yfavorable weather for some weeks and I do not believe any one can tell yet just how winter wheat is coming out. I expect to go over the winter wheat country myself, but I shall not start until June, and I do not believe any one can tell definitely what the winter wheat prospect is before June. My own personal experience this year that the crop news is of both sorts from the same localities in a good many instances, and indicating the news is much influenced by the attitude of the senders of it in the market."

Coe Commission Co.: Wheat—Higher cables and the prospects of bullish government figures gave us a fairly strong opening this morning and the market ruled strong up to noon, after which it lost all of the early advance, and at this writing is a fraction below yesterday's close. A fair export business reported from seaboard yesterday. St. Louis also reports some sales of No. 2 red to millers. The government report today is expected to show slightly lower winter wheat condition and decreased acreage. Last May's report made the winter wheat condition 92.6. We feel very bullish on July and September wheat, especially the latter. The September will probably not sell as high as the May did last February, but we look for it to sell into the 90s before Sept. 1; 80c is cheap, in our opinion.

Corn and oats are lower; market dull; not much trade, although most reports on corn planting are favorable, there is good cash demand from the east, which will take care of the large stocks at Chicago. The corn market is in firm position and July corn should be bought on soft spots.

Provisions—The rather weak corn market is reflected in the provision pit, pork is especially weak, looks like professional manipulation with a two-fold purpose in view. First to cheanen the price of hogs, second to force the remaining longs to liquidate.

MINNEAPOLIS WHEAT.

Minneapolis, May 10.—Close: Wheat—May, 94¼c; July, 93½c; September, 81¾@¾c. On track—No. 1 hard, 97c; 1 northern, 96c; 2 northern, 94@½c.

CONDITION OF CROPS

As Shown By Weather Bureau's Weekly Summary.

Washington, May 10.—The weather bureau's wekly summary of crop conditions for the week ending May 9 was favorable in all districts with the exception of the north Pacific coast and middle rocky mountain region where frosts and freezing temperatures were injurious. Heavy rains in portions of the lower Missouri and Red River of the North valleys and in Texas retarded work and caused damage by washing land, but were of great benefit in relieving the drought condition in western Texas. Drought was also relieved in portions of the South Atlantic and East Gulf states but continues over a large part of these districts and at the close of the week rain was generally needed in the Middle Atlantic states. The states of the Ohio valley and lake regions experienced a week of highly favorable conditions. Corn planting is now in operation under very favorable conditions throughout the northern portion of the corn belt. In Nebraska, Kansas and North Missouri, however, planting has been interrupted by rains. In Iowa this work has made good progress and it is likely that the bulk of the crop in that state will be planted earlier than in recent years.

Over the southern portion of the Middle Atlantic states planting is well advanced and has began in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. A general improvement in the condition of winter wheat is indicated, especially over the western portions of the winter wheat belt and in the Middle Atlantic states, but the outlook for this crop in the states of the Ohio valley continues very poor.

Spring wheat seeding is largely finished, except on wet lands in the northern portions of North Dakota and Minnesota. The early sown over the southern portion of the spring wheat region is making good growth. On the north Pacific coast the week has been too col for rapid advancement.

Early sown oats are generally improved and in promising condition throughout the central valleys and middle Atlantic states but in the south Atlantic and east gulf states where oats are now heading the outlook is very poor.

The cotton belt has experienced a week of favorable temperature with abundant rain fall except in the eastern districts.

The reports respecting fruit are somewhat more encouraging.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market was forced down this afternoon by selling that was encouraged by the weakness of New York Central and by rumors that the government crop report to come out tonight would be unfavorable After the shorts got the prices down they waited for the bulls to sell but they were disappointed. The market again developing extreme dullness. The market should have a fairly good rally. Copper recovered five shillings in London today. In trading circles it is said there is no explanation for yesterdays slump in London. We believe that the present is a good time to invest in copper stocks.

Salt Lake City.—Daly West Mining Co. directors yesterday declared a monthly dividend of 40 cents, a reduction of 25 cents from the dividend reccently maintained. The dividend is payable May 10. Boks close May 10, and re-open May 17.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, May 10.—Close: Money on call, easy, 1¼@1½ per cent; closing bid and offered, 1¼ per cent. Time loans, slightly firmer, sixty and ninety days, 2½ per cent; six months, 2¾ per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 3¾@4¼ per cent. Sterling exchange, steady, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.85 for demand and at $4.86.95 for sixty days; posted rates, $4.85½@4.86 and $4.88; commercial bills, $4.84¾. Mar silver, 56c. Mexican dollars, 44¼c. Government bonds, steady; railroad bonds, irregular.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 10.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 4@8 points on moderate covering and room-buying, in response to somewhat better cables than expected. The early weather reports were not particularly unfavorable, but private advices from several sections complained of temperature being too low, and with no little uncertainty as to the showing of the weather bureau, at midday offerings were extremely limited. Consequently it took only a light demand to hold prices, and the market after the opening ruled generally steady as to tone, with quotations showing little change from the initial figures.

Spot closed quiet, 5 points lower; middling uplands, $13.75; middling gulf, $14. Sales, 100 bales. Futures closed quiet; May, $13.30; June, $13.42; July, $13.51; August, $13.19; September, $11.79; October, $11.32; November, $11.23; December, $11.21; January, $11.22.

LARGEST TRADING
Of Day In Stocks Was During the Last Hour.
At Times During Session Prices Were Practically Motionless.

New York, May 10.—The opening stock market today was listless and fluctuations were narrow and unimportant. Only about a dozen stocks were traded in in small lots within the first five minutes. Corn products preferred lost a point.

Liquidation was resumed in the gas stocks, but their decline was without influence elsewhere. Scarcely anything was done in the rest of the market. Consolidated Gas fell 2¾, Brooklyn Union Gas 1½ and Realty preferred ⅞. General Elctric ros ⅛.

Intervals between single transactions lasted several minutes at times and prices were motionless. Wheeling & Lake Erie first preferred rose 1 and Consolidated Gas rallied 1. Brooklyn Union Gas fell 3 in all, New York, Chicago & St. Louis 2 and Sloss-Sheffield Steel preferred a point. Bonds were steady at noon.

Up to 1 o'clock there was no transactions in St. Paul, which conveys some idea of the dullness prevailing. A momentary spurt in Mexican Central lifted it ⅞c. Toledo Railways and Light sagged 1 and Texas Land Trust 2points.

Consolidated Gas was bought more freely and rallied 2 points from the lowest. A few other stocks sold a shade higher, Louisville & Nashville yielding nearly a point and recovered sharply.

A selling movement in the last hour developed the largest dealings of the day. Erie 1st preferred 1¼ and the second preferred 1¾. Chicago Great Western preferred "B" ⅞. Anaconda a point, Lead 1¼ and New York Central 1⅝. Brooklyn Union Gas rebounded to 2 points over last night. The activity was shortlived, very dull and heavy.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Evans to Paine, Webber & Co.: The trading continues to signify nothing in the market. We are still in a period of deadlock where cheap money prevents liquidation and poor business kills all incentive to buy stocks. I don't believe there is any doubt in which sector cheap money or bad business will prevail. When the market develops activity, I look for lower prices, but I have no idea when this will come. All that can be said is that railroad earnings are growing worse. There is an occasional burst of liquidation in some specialty. Yesterday it was Consolidated Gas. No one can say where it will break out.

New York to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The Stockholder: While the general level of securities is likely to sag somewhat lower before thes ummer is over, this is a very good time for investors to be looking over the high grade investments offered by conservative banking houses. There is a very good demand now for the short-time notes issued by various American railways. They return a very comfortable income on the investment and undoubtedly are safe investments. Investors are buying these notes in preference to bonds, with the idea that the funding of these obligations and the floating of other bond issues will tend further to depress market prices of securities bearing a fixed rate of interest.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: With the exception of Consolidated Gas, which is being sold on the report that the governor has vetoed the Remsen bill, the whole market is slightly weaker. There is nothing doing. We see nothing imminent except dullness and nothing to advise. Stocks are not for sale and so far as the public is concerned, are not wanted. All interests seem satisfied to kill time and await developments.

S. T. Welch & Co.: The stock market opened steady but very dull. Up to this writing the market has been about as uninteresting as could well be imagined. Sales to noon 48,800 shares, no ther comment is necessary. We feel convinced, however, with any activity the market will do better and advise buying St. Paul, Atchison, and the Pacifics on any little recession with a view to holding them for a long pull.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The crop report is expected to be unfavorable and the weather advices from the West continue bad. Indications point to further gold exports, though the recent Japanese loan will probably be left here to provide for war purchases. Some betterment is said to be observable in general trade conditions, probably owing to the more seasonable weather. But all these things are what may be called routine developments and there is nothing in any of them to affect the stock market. Old traders say if the market should break a point or two on the crop report, stocks can be bought for a turn. But in case of a rally of a couple of points either before or after the report, they can be sold. These are some indications that within a week the market will become more active.

New York to W. H. Laidley & Co.: There is reason to believe that scale-down buying is taking place in Consolidated Gas. In some quarters of the street the decline in the stock market is attributed entirely to the bear raid. We think that insiders have taken profits, however, expecting to repurchase lower later. There is bull talk again upon Realty pfd. We would not be surprised to see the Gates party take this stock up again, but the best time would be to buy it upon reactions.

HAYWOOD HAS HEARING.

Denver, May 10.—After numerous postponements the trial of William D. Haywood, secretary-treasurer of the Western Federation of Miners, on the charge of desecration of the flag, was held in Justice Hayne's court yesterday. Haywood's defense, which was presented by Attorney Horace N. Hawkins, was the statute does not apply to pictures or representations of the flag, but only to the flag itself. The charge is based on the issuance of a circular bearing a picture of a flag and headed "Is Colorado in America?" Justice will give his decision Thursday.

WORDS OF PRAISE

For Rockefeller Uttered By a Leading Socialist.

St. Louis, Mo., May 10.—Bradford Peck, of Brookline, Mass., a distinguished member of the Socialist party, who is now in St. Louis, the guest of James Eads How, the philanthropist whose name is known and loved all over the West, declared yesterday that the name of John D. Rockefeller will be written in letters of gold by the coming generation; that Rockefeller has been maligned and misunderstood, and that he has accomplished more for his country and his race along practical lines than any living man.

"Rockefeller has taught us how to do business," said Mr. Peck. "He has advanced business 25 per cent. Future generations will honor him for his genius and for his accomplishments. Co-operation, the secret of Mr. Rockefeller's amazing success, is the solution of the problem of promoting the happiness of the human race. The trust is here to stay, just as electricity is here to stay. The co-operation of the people will overcome strife and strikes, but with each coworker sharing the responsibilities and profits of the trust."

WILL FIGHT THE LONGSHOREMEN

Lumber Carriers and Mill Men Consider Wage Matter.

Will Not Pay 55 Cent an Hour Demanded By Men.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Lumber Carriers' association with the mill men of Duluth, held at the Spalding this morning the position of the Lumber Carriers' association with regard to the demands of the Longshoremen's union was set forth. The meeting with the mill men was at the request of the latter, who were represented by men from the following firms: Alger, Smith & Co., Red Cliff Lumber Co., Lesure Lumber Co., Scott-Graff Lumber Co., Merrill & Ring Mill Co., Hubbard & Vincent, of Duluth, and Murray & McCann, of Superior.

The executive committee of the Lumber Carriers' association consists of Edward Hines, chairman; Captain W. D. Hamilton, Captain J. A. Calbick, all three of Chicago; O. W. Blodgett, of Bay City, Mich., and J. B. Comstock, of Alpena, Mich.

Mr. Hines acted as spokesman for the committee and stated to a reporter that the meeting had been satisfactory and that the mill men had agreed with the committee that the stand taken by the latter to pay 50 cents per hour to the Longshoremen for loading boats with lumber, instead of the 55 cents per hour demanded by the union was just.

A meeting was to be held at 1:30 p. m. by the executive committee of the Lumber Carriers' association and representatives of the Longshoremen's union, and it was said that if no agreement was reached that negotiations would be declared off, and that the mill men would help the lumber carriers to load their boats and start them without the assistance of the union, in which case the union would not be recognized during the entire season.

The mill men are said to be well worked up over the matter owing to the lateness of the season, their yards being piled with lumber to be shipped and being unable to saw any more, both by reason of the fact that they are choked with cut lumber and the fact that the most sawing is now being done by the country mills. The latter are getting the business because it has to go below by rail and it is cheaper in this case to have it sawed on the ground and shipped through from the point nearest to where the timber is cut.

It is claimed by the lumber carriers that they have reached agreements with the captains and pilots as well as the engineers and firemen, on a general basis of wages lower than last year, which agreements were reached with the condition imposed by those employes that the longshoremen's wages should be made lower this season also.

It is argued that for the time they work the longshoremen are now getting more than the captains or anybody else aboard the vessels, and the lumber carriers seem determined not to pay the 55 cents per hour demanded.

"All the hitches are very hurtful to the interests of Duluth," said one of the interested men this morning, "and some of the people of the city do not realize the loss being entailed to general business here. The lumber mills at Cloquet are getting all the business there, and the shipments simply pass around this city. The vessels which fail to get here when navigation permits, as it does now, are not bringing their men heer to spend money and are not buying their supplies here. The movement of business men generally identified with shipping is not so great, and those who would otherwise be here frequently stopping at the hotels and spending here in various ways are not here at all.

"But the hitch will not last long now, if appearances do not deceive, for if no agreement is reached with the union the vessels will be loaded anyway and work in this direction will proceed as if there was no union. The lumbermen are not unreasonable men to deal with and are not sticking out at merely a matter of price. It is the unreason of it all that they are unwilling to put up with. They did not make enough last year to pay their insurance, and they are certainly not going to pay as much as is demanded by the longshoremen under the conditions as they now exist.

"Mere statement of this fact amounts to nothing, of course, but the captains know what the lumber carriers are making and have made. They keep the books of the owners and are in a position to know if any deception is attempted to keep down the price of service. And if under such conditions they have agreed to accept less money than they did last year the longshoremen ought to.

"We have no fault to find with the longshoremen as individuals, as they appear to be reasonable, but the union seems to have them tied up in such a way as its members as to permit them no chance to be reasonable."

No conclusion had been reached by the conference of the Longshoremen's union and the lumber carriers up to 3 p. m. today, and at that hour word came down from the meeting that nothing could be determined from the negotiations up to that time. The meeting began at 1:30 p. m. in the sky parlor of the hotel.

YOUNG WOMAN GETS A PART

Causes Prosecution of Man For Carrying Indecent Literature.

The county treasury was enriched yesterday afternoon and this morning by $100 paid in fines in district court.

John Gogin, who was indicted by the grand jury for carrying indecent literature in his pocket, entered a plea of guilty and was fined $50. Under the statutes the person giving information which will lead to the conviction of another who carries indecent literature shall receive one-half the amount paid in fine. In this case a young woman will receive $25 of the fine money.

Antoine LaMont, who was indicted for keeping his saloon open after hours, entered a plea of guilty and was fined $50, which he paid. In passing sentence Judge Cant told LaMont that the alleged general practice of saloonkeepers keeping their places of business open when they are supposed, under the law to be closed, was no excuse for him.

LaMont's arrest, it is said, was due to a little fracas that took place in his saloon recently, in which he was concerned.

FIRE AT LA FOLLETTE, TENN.

Knoxville, Tenn., May 10.—The business section of La Follette, Tenn., burned today. Thirty-five buildings were destroyed, occasioning a loss of about $200,000 with about $60,000 insurance. The fire originated in the lamp room of the Cumberland Inn and the hotel was destroyed. Two guests were injured.

SOME PEOPLE ARE CROSS AND UGLY,

From Stomach and Liver Troubles—Cured by Rea Bros.' Cascarin.

"Do you know that thousands of men become irritable, cross and mean on account of their liver?" Nothing irritates a man so much as the general rundown feeling produced by disorder of the bowels. He can enjoy none of those things which tend to make life pleasant. He becomes isolated from his friends because their good humor grates on his nerves. He looks upon life through blue glasses. He feels miserable all over. If he only took a good dose of Rea Bros.' Cascarin he would soon feel considerable better. This remedy is prescribed by physicians for all stomach troubles, and is a great family laxative, having stood the test for years. If your bowels are not in good order, get a bottle of Cascarin at once. Do not let your complaint drag on until some awful disease like Appendicitis sets in. Take Cascarin. It is the only laxative that deserves a place in every home, being made from roots, barks, herbs, plants and berries, nature's true remedies. The manufacturers guarantee it to be satisfactory or they will refund the money paid for it. A large bottle, fifty cents. At all leading druggists.

DEATH MAY RESULT

Dr. Robert Graham Testifies as to Peterson's Injury.

Inflammation Will Mean His Death Within a Week.

"If his skull is fractured and inflammation sets in he will be a dead man within a week," said Dr. Robert Graham, who was placed on the witness stand this afternoon in the trial of Magnus Swenson, accused of assault with intent to kill.

Swenson asked for a preliminary hearing in the municipal court before Judge Windom. He is represented by H. B. Fryberger, while County Attorney McClintock has charge of the prosecution.

Dr. Graham was the first witness called. He stated that he had visited Peterson, the victim of the quarrel last evening at the Hubbard & Vincent mill, while he was lying in his rooms at 629 West Michigan street and had found blood oozing from his ear.

"There was a bruise on the side of his head," said Dr. Graham, "and he was in a semi-unconscious condition. He was removed to the hospital, and passed a fairly quiet night. It is impossible to state definitely at this time whether or not his skull is fractured. If inflammation does not set in within two or three days he will probably recover, but if his skull should be fractured and the inflammation should set in he will very likely die.

Mattl Nesake, and Sakel Johnson, two Finlanders, who were with Peterson at the time the quarrel occurred were placed on the stand after Dr. Graham had completed his testimony. They were examined through an interpreter and told the story of the fight as related in another column of this evening's paper.

The hearing will probably consume the greater part of the afternoon.

ABANDONS THE CASE

When Refused Continuance and Dismissal, Attorney Fryberger Quits.

An interesting and unusual turn was given the case of Stitt & Howe against the Rat Portage Lumber company, in district court this morning, when H. B. Fryberger, attorney for Stitt & Howe, and his clients, abandoned the case and walked out of court.

Mr. Fryberger moved for a continuance, so that he could secure the deposition of one, D. C. Cameron, but this was denied by the court. Mr. Fryberger then moved for a dismissal of the action, and this being refused, he abandoned the case and left he court room.

R. R. Briggs, attorney for the Rat Portage Lumber company, continued to introduce evidence, and at its conclusion, moved that the court instruct the jury to return a verdict for his clients. Judge Dibell granted the motion, and so instructed the jury.

The action is one in which Stitt & Howe sought to recover about $1600 on an alleged log driving contract on Rainy river.

The case was previously tried in United States circuit court and resulted in favor of the Rat Portage company.

ACTION IS SETTLED.

Suit of Brewing Company Seizure of Property.

A stipulation was filed in district court this morning for the dismissal of the action brought by the Pabst Brewing company against W. C. Sargent, as sheriff of St. Louis county, and others. The action was compromised and settled.

The stipulation is an echo of a case started by the brewing company against the sheriff in his official capacity in August, 1901, in which it sought the return of certain personal property valued by it at $500, or the money and $200 additional for damages on account of its detention.

The brewing company claimed right to the property by reason of a chattel mortgage given it in May, 1900, by Arnit Carlson to secure the payment of $150 per month for a period of five years.

Sheriff Sargent claimed the property on account of a replevin issued at the instance of Smith, Farwell & Steele, who were alleged to have a chattel mortgage covering the property, executed in June, 1900, to secure the payment of $950. The sheriff claimed that the property was valued at $1650 instead of $500.

When the case was tried in January, 1902, the jury returned a verdict of 1 cent a mile for the brewing company and fixed the value of the property at $731.16.

In April, 1903, Judge Cant filed an order denying the sheriff's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or for a new trial.

RUSSIAN FORCES IN REAR OF JAPS MAKE SPIRITED ATTACK ON ANJU, BUT ARE REPULSED

Presence of Russians Behind the Japanese Lines Revealed.

Fleet at Port Arthur Said to Have Been Destroyed.

Blown Up By the Russians to Avoid Capture By Japs.

Seoul, Tuesday, May 10, 1:30 p. m.—(Delayed in Transmission).—A Russian force, estimated to number 200 men, is attacking Anju, about sixty miles southwest of Wiju, Korea. The small Japanese garrison of that place is fighting fiercely.

2:30 p. m.—The sudden attack on the Japanese garrison at Anju by 200 Russians confirms previous reports of the presence of Russian scouting parties behind the Japanese lines. The small Japanese garrison at Anju indicated that the blow was not expected.

3 p. m.—The fighting at Anju commenced early this morning. The Japanese garrison has sent a telegram to nearby posts on the Wiju road for reinforcements.

Tokio, May 11, 7 p. m.—Details of the attack by Russian Cossacks at Anju, Korea, yesterday morning, were received here today. The Russian cavalry numbered 200 men, and their attack was spirited. The Japanese garrison resisted stoutly and succeeded in driving off the enemy. Later Japanese reinforcements arrived from Ping Yang.

Indications point to the presence of a Russian force at Yong Byong, between Anju and Unsan, but it probably is small. It is evident that these Russian cavalrymen were sent south for the purpose of harrassing the Japanese flank and lines of communication.

The Japanese report of the fighting at Anju does not give any losses.

Che Foo, May 11, 5 p. m.—An unofficial Japanese dispatch has been received here to the effect that the Russians have destroyed their fleet in Port Arthur.

Tokio, May 11, noon.—Admiral Togo reports that since the sixth of May many explosions have been heard coming from the vicinity of Port Arthur, but their cause has not been ascertained. The impression here is that the Russians, despairing of their ability to defend Port Arthur, are destroying their ships before evacuating the place.

London, May 11.—The Tokio correspondent of the Morning Post, cabling under date of May 10, says that a high angle bombardment of Port Arthur is progressing.

Paris, May 11—The Matin's St. Petersburg correspondent says it is persistently rumored that there has been a big fight near Mao Tien Ting passes, between the Russians and Gen. Kuroki's army. The Russians, he says, lost heavily, Lieut. Gen. Zassalitch being among the killed.

London, May 11.—A dispatch to the Central News from Liao Yang, dated today, says: "A train hence reached Port Arthur yesterday. The railroad officials say that no Japanese troops were observed near the railroad, but that some Japanese cavalry were seen behind Feng Wang Cheng."

CASUALTIES ON YALU.

An Official Report of the Losses In Battle.

Antung, May 6, (via Seoul, May 11.)—An official report of the casualties at the battle of the Yalu shows a list of thirty-one Japanese officers killed and twenty-nine wounded, 160 men killed and 666 wounded. On the Russian side 1362 men were found dead on the field—475 wounded are in Japanese hospitals and 138 men were taken prisoners.

Most of the Russians who surrendered at Hamatan, west of Chiu Lien Cheng, where the Japanese charges the Russian rearguard, were wounded.

The Russian soldiers who have since died in the hospitals are buried on a hilltop, near Antung, and were followed to the grave by a Japanese guard of honor and the staff officers. A Danish Lutheran minister, the only foreigner living at Antung, read the funeral services over the remains.

The captured Russian munitions of war being brought into Antung include twenty field pieces, ten machine guns, much small arm ammunition, twenty transport wagons, two ambulances and band instruments, the latter perforated with bullets. Most of these things were abandoned in the precipitate flight of the Russian troops.

PORT ARTHUR GARRISON

Is Much Stronger Than Has Been Reported.

St. Petersburg, May 11.—The Associated Press is informed that the garrison at Port Arthur is stronger than heretofore has been stated.

"There is no reason to keep the strength of the garrison at Port Arthur a secret," said the informant of the Associated Press. "The Japanese know it because of their perfect information. We have 26,000 soldiers and 10,000 sailors there. The latter will not be used on the fortifications, except as a last extremity. The Japanese will not obtain possession of our fleet, even if they capture Port Arthur. The orders to the commander there are that he shall, when a fall is inevitable, put to sea and engage the enemy. We do not propose for the Japanese to find in the harbor a number of valuable warships which they can seize and add to their fleet. Moreover, in battle the Japanese will suffer as well as our ships, and those of the latter which do not escape will go down to the bottom.

LIBRARIAN NELSON GETS AN ANSWER FROM J. J. HILL BUT DECLINES TO MAKE IT PUBLIC

It Is Reported That It Confirms the Statements of Dunn—Believed That Collins Also Received Answer From President Hill.

St. Paul, May 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern railroad, yesterday answered the letter of State Librarian E. A. Nelson, asking if Mr. Hill had stated to Robert C. Dunn of Princeton that the state librarian had solicited from the president of the Great Northern $25,000 for Judge Collins' campaign. It is thought also that Mr. Hill has answered Judge Collins' letter of inquiry whether the railroad magnate told Mr. Dunn that he had contributed from $30,000 to $40,000 to Judge Collins' campaign against Judge Willis in 1984.

"Yes, I have received a letter from Mr. Hill," said Mr. Nelson last night, "but his reply is evasive. He does not answer the question that I asked, which was whether he authorized Mr. Dunn to make the statement that Mr. Dunn made. I do not know whether I shall press Mr. Hill for a more definite reply, but at any rate I have decided not to give out Mr. Hill's letter at present."

It is generally believed in St. Paul that Mr. Hill practically substantiates Mr. Dunn's statements that the president of the Great Northern had contributed large sums of money in the Republican campaign of 1894, when the election of a justice of the supreme court was the main issue. Mr. Dunn was quoted in some of the papers as stating that Collins had solicited and received the money from Mr. Hill. Mr. Dunn denies that he ever made these statements, and it is presumed that Mr. Hill likewise repudiates them. Mr. Dunn says that the following interview that appeared in The Herald is substantially what he said at the Minneapolis meeting:

"I have it upon the authority of James J. Hill that when Judge Collins was running against Judge Willis for the supreme bench, the Great Northern railroad contributed between $30,000 and $40,000 to his campaign fund. I have it on the same authority that E. A. Nelson, state librarian, went to the Great Northern railroad to get $25,000 for Judge Collins in his present campaign.

"I will withdraw from the gubernatorial campaign right now if it can be proved that the Great Northern has been asked or that money has been given by the road for me in this campaign."

Judge Collins was not in the city last night and it could not be definitely ascertained whether he had received a reply from Mr. Hill, but it is generally believed that Mr. Hill answered both letters at the same time. James A. Martin, Judge Collins' campaign manager, said last evening he did not know whether Judge Collins had heard from Mr. Hill, but he knew that the judge had not received a reply from Mr. Dunn.

Some of the friends of Mr. Dunn believe he made a mistake in repeating the statements of Mr. Hill, although they admit that he was driven to it by the claim of Judge Collins that "Dunn is a corporation man." It is hinted that Joel P. Heatwole of Northfield, Mr. Dunn's campaign manager, does not entirely approve of Mr. Dunn's tactics and that he is trying to keep the Princeton candidate for governor quiet.

The tilt between Judge Collins and Mr. Dunn has given rise to the rumor that Governor Van Sant will enter the race, but the governor declines to discuss the question.

A state officer who is a candidate for nomination at the Republican convention, said yesterday regarding the growth of the belief that Governor Van Sant will finally be a candidate:

"I presume that the governor has a secret belief that the result of the squabble between Dunn and Collins will be a call for 'the hero of the merger' for re-nomination. The governor and his friends undoubtedly figure that Dunn and Collins will kill each other off if they keep up their present tactics and the governor will be the only man that can save the party. There are many people of the same opinion and I would not be a bit surprised to see it come about."

OFFERED TRANSPORT.

American Commander's Action After Battle at Chemulpo

Washington, May 11.—The attention of the bureau of navigation of the navy department has been called to the official report of M. Pavloff, Russian minister to Korea, which was gazetted in the Official Messenger, stating that the commander of the Vicksburg refused, after the engagement at Chemulpo, to take aboard his vessel wounded men from the Russian warships Variag and Korietz. The bureau produced the following extract from the report of Commander W. A. Marshall, commanding the Vicksburg at Chemulpo, which the officials regard as a complete rebuttal:

"About 12:30 p. m. (Feb. 9), both Russian vessels (Korietz and Variag) headed in toward their anchorage at full speed, and as they approached it was seen that the Variag had a list to port and appeared to be on fire aft, on the port quarter, with the Japanese in pursuit, until about a mile inside of Yi Dolim, but not firing, as the foreign men-of-war were directly in line of fire, when they gave up the chase and rejoined their squadron outside. At 12.50 the Variag anchored about 400 yards to the northward and westward of the Talbot, with the Elba about 60 yards to the southward of her.

"On learning that she had quite a number of wounded men, I sent our medical officer on board to render assistance. The same was done by the Talbot, Elba and Pascal. A little later, on its being reported that the Variag was in a sinking condition, two of our cutters and the whaleboat, with boats from the other cruisers, assisted in taking off her personnel and putting them on board the Talbot and Elba. Two Russian officers (engineers) were brought on board the Vicksburg and taken care of for some time, and on my offering to have Zafiro used as temporary quarters, they were taken to the Elba, where their captain detained them and declined my offer with thanks."

It is pointed out by the chief of the navigation bureau that the Zafiro, which was tendered as a hospital ship, is a roomy naval transport and was much more suitable for the accommodation of the wounded than the little Vicksburg, with its cramped quarters.

A REWARD FOR BUNAU-VARILLA

Made an Officer In the French Legion of Honor.

Paris, May 11.—The government has made M. Philippe Bunau-Varilla, the first minister of Panama to the United States, an officer of the legion of honor. President Loubet acted in this matter on the request of Foreign Minister Delcasse and it is understood that this is expressive of the government's approval of the winding up of the Panama transfer and of M. Bunau-Varilla's services in that connection.

W. A. Day and Charles W. Russell, the assistant United States attorney generals, who came here from Washington to assist in the transfer of the canal property, sailed today from Cherbourg on the North-German Lloyd steamer Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, taking with them the deed for the Panama canal and all the papers connected with the transfer. They expressed themselves entirely satisfied with the success of their mission and gratified at the government's recognition of M. Bunau-aVrilla, who materially aided them in their work.

A TERRIBLE CRIME

People of Menominee, Mich., Shocked By Brutal Murder.

Man Cuts His Wife's Throat and Then His Own.

Milwaukee, May 11.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Menominee, Mich., says:

"One of the most terrible crimes in the history of Menominee was committed today. Fred Ziemann, of Neenah, murdered his wife by cutting her throat with a razor, then he half severed his own head with the same weapon. The crime was done in the house of James Smith, brother-in-law of the dead woman, on Pine street, The Ziemanns had not lived together for some time. Mrs. Ziemann had lately arrived from Neenah, and was followed by her husband. At last accounts Ziemann was still alive with slight chances of recovery."

CONNECTICUT IS FOR ROOSEVELT

Administration Endorsed at Republican State Convention.

New Haven, Conn., May 11.—The administration of President Roosevelt was endorsed at the Connecticut Republican convention today and it was recommended that the 14 delegates chosen for the national convention at Chicago should vote as a unit for his nomination.

Charles F. Brooker, of Ansonia, and John L. Robinson, of Hartford, were elected delegates at large to the national convention.

The platform, which was adopted unanimously, was as follows:

We, the Republicans of Connecticut, in state convention assembled, express our unwavering fidelity to the principles of the Republican party as set forth in the national platform of 1900.

We heartily endorse the administration of President Roosevelt under which the country has attained a commercial development and prosperity unexampled in modern times. He has discharged the duties and responsibilities of his high office with such marked fidelity and conspicuous ability, and his wisdom and statesmanship have so impressed the country at large that his nomination is demanded by the Republicans of the country and his election is assured by the people.

We respectfully recommend that the delegates chosen by this convention act as a unit in securing his nomination.

EXPLOSION OF FIFTY KEGS OF POWDER BRINGS DEATH AND DESTRUCTION IN COAL MINE

Awful Casualty In Shaft at Herrin, Near Murphysboro.

Six Men Killed and Over Eighty Seriously Burned.

Mine Badly Wrecked, Making Rescue Work Difficult.

Murphysboro, Ill., May 11.—Six men were killed and a large number burned, are the known results of an explosion of powder today in shaft No. 7 of the Big Muddy Coal & Iron Mine company at Herrin, twenty miles from here.

About 325 men are employed in the mine and they had just begun work. A car containing fifty kegs of powder exploded. The cause of the explosion is not known.

At noon eighty injured men and the following dead were removed from the mine:

THOMAS GREEN.
FRED SEIBERG.
JOHN MILLER.
—— GRAIN.
Two brothers named Williams.

The mine was badly wrecked, making the rescue work hard. Thirty mules were killed.

Luckily the majority of the miners were working in other parts of the shaft when the explosion occurred and were uninjured, thus being able to assist with the rescue work. It is not known how many men were working in the vicinity of the explosion and it is believed that several are dead and covered with wreckage. It is also feared that some of the wounded may be shut off from the rescuers and that they may die before being reached.

Herrin is in Williamson county and is twenty miles east of Murphysboro.

It has been impossible to secure the names of the wounded.

Seiberg lived in Murphysboro, but has no family here and but little is known of him in this city.

HAD WHIP FOR GIRL.

Wife Created a Sensation at Benton Harbor.

Benton Harbor, Mich., May 11.—Mrs. Ray Moats, a prominent young lady of this city, made a sensational attempt to horsewhip a St. Joseph society girl, in Mr. Moats' business place Sunday afternoon. Moats, it is alleged, had been in company with the St. Joseph girl and seeing the approach of his wife, armed with a whip, locked the store door and refused her admittance. A large crowd gatherd on the street in front of the place watching the proceedings. When the girl had been given a chance to escape through a rear entrance the husband submitted himself to the wrath of his spouse. Further disturbance was prevented.

VOTE OF MASTERS AND PILOTS THUS FAR TAKEN IS STRONGLY AGAINST OFFER OF CARRIERS

Many Telegraphic Reports Have Been Received at the Headquarters at Cleveland—The Great Majority Is Opposed to Acceptance.

Cleveland, May 11.—Many telegraphic reports were received at the headquarters of the Masters' and Pilots' association in this city, giving the result of the vote taken at various points on the question as to whether the proposition of the Lake Carriers' association to pay last year's wage scale shall be accepted or rejected. Thus far, it can be stated, the vote stands against the acceptance of the offer of the Lake Carriers' association by a large majority. At several ports the vote against the proposition, it has been stated, has been unanimous. It is now thought that the voting will be completed and the result known here by midnight tonight.

RELATIVES OF HAROLD CLARKE RIDICULE THE IDEA OF SUICIDE

New York, May 1.—It is asserted by the mother and sister of Harold A. Clarke, says a World dispatch from Paris, that the wealthy young Californian, who was found dead in his room in a Paris hotel Monday, did not commit suicide, despite the fact that all circumstances point that way. His sister, Mrs. Lyman, said:

"Harold's body was found lying across the foot of the bed in evening dress, with one foot crossed peacefully over the other. The hotel manager was indignant when I pointed out how easily a person could have entered the room through one of the windows.

Harold was 31 years old, but did not look to be over 22. He spent Friday evening with us after his return from Monte Carlo, and he was particularly gay, making light of his losses, which he admitted sustaining. He was not pressed for money, for he had a few thousand francs in the hotel office. Neither did he have any love affair so far as we knew. He threw off trouble lightly and no man was less likely to do such a ghastly thing."

Clarke dined at a restaurant Sunday evening. He entered the hotel at about 10 p. m. The employes say they heard the shot half an hour later. Clarke had taken a revolver from the bottom of his trunk. They ridicult the idea that it was anything but suicide, but admit that Clarke had some thousands of francs in the hotel safe.

FIREMEN HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

Chicago, May 11.—Five firemen narrowly escaped death in a burning building at 51 Institute Place, early today. When the firemen arrived the three upper floors of the structure, which is tenanted by cabinet and piano makers, were blazing hotly. Three pipemen climbed ladders to the third floor and forced their way into the center of the building. Finding the heat too great, they tried to retreat and then discovered the door had been caught by falling wreckage. When ten minutes passed and the three men did not appear, other firemen went to the rescue and carried them from the building. They saved themselves by clinging to the wall until ladders could be run up to them. The loss is $50,000.

FOURTEEN HUNDRED DELEGATES ATTEND Y. M. C. A. CONVENTION

Buffalo, May 11.—The international convention of the Young Men's Christian association of North America convened here today. The convention marks the fiftieth anniversary of the first international convention in America when the international committees formed and the first meeting on this continent of association delegates was held. It has brought about 1400 delegates, representing 600 city associations, 700 student associations, 200 railroad associations and a large number of miscellaneous associations representing the amy, navy, negro and Indian races and industrial concerns.

An interesting feature of the big gathering are eight frames which spread over the entire length of a spacious room, made up of maps, charts, diagrams and photographs, showing at a glance, the development of the work of the association all over the world. The program includes not only meetings for the delegates but meetings for the women and the members of the boys' department. Workers are present from every state in the union, Canada, Mexico and European countries.

MEASURER OF THIEVES CROOKED

Chicago, May 11.—George M. Porteous, for three years a pupil of Bertillon in Paris, and the man who introduced into the United States the Bertillon system of measuring criminals, has been arrested here on a charge of embezlement. Hildare G. Ogden declares Porteous retained $64 a week ago while employed by him as a real estate and insurance agent. When Bertillon made public his system about ten years ago, Porteous was a Chicago detective. He immediately secured a leave of absence and went to Paris, spending three years under the master of criminology and means of identification. Returning to Chicago, he was placed in charge of the national bureau of identification, which he was instrumental in founding and remained as its chief during several years. Then he was succeeded by Edward Evans, and the bureau was removed to Washington.

MAN MURDERED BY TWO NEGROES

Kansas City, May 11.—Clarence Meyer, aged 22, a printer, was terribly slashed and killed in his home in the southern part of the city some time during the night. According to Mrs. Meyer, who reported the matter to the police today, two negroes entered the house at 2 o'clock in the morning. While one held the woman to prevent her giving the alarm, the other struggled with Meyer, slashing him with a razor on the head, throat and body. Mrs. Meyer became unconscious and did not recover until many hours later, when she found her husband dead. The house had been ransacked. The police have found no trace of the negroes.

ELLIOTT NOT SHOT BY FARMER DIETZ

The Lumber Company's Crew to Be Armed With Guns.

Hayward, Wis., May 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—William Elliott, reported to have been shot by John Dietz, is alive and unhurt. He is at the scene of the trouble trying to capture Dietz. Dietz has shot two men, Pat Magin and a man named Tracey from Fifield, Wis., breaking their arms. Deputy Sheriff Giblins' posse think they have wounded Valentine Weisenbach, a homesteader helping Dietz. He was shot at and fell and has not been seen since. Dietz is desperate and will kill as many men as he can before being taken. Guns and ammunition are being sent from here to arm the lumber company's crew.

WEST DULUTH

The Duluth Stone Crusher company now employs twenty-five men at its plant at the head of Fifty-seventh avenue west. The rock crusher itself has not yet been put in operation, but it will probably start Friday or Saturday, doing only light work at first, and with less than a full crew of men employed.

From the number of men who have applied at the plant for work within the past few days it would appear that stone crushing was the most popular line of work to be found at the head of the lakes. Men to the number of about five times the force actually needed have applied for jobs, according to statements made by the management. Some days as high as fifty men have applied for positions. The whole crew employed, when the plant is running at full capacity, is less than 100 men.

With the opening of the sowing season, and the renewed activity in West Duluth factories, business is looking up in this section of the city. The effect is already noticeable in the increased sales of the merchants, who are well pleased with the prospects of an excellent summer's business.

WILL ALL BE RUNNING.

St. Louis Mill Will Soon Be In Operation.

The last of the West Duluth saw mills to comence operations this year, the St. Louis, will start in on the season's work tomorrow morning, with a force of about 200 men employed. As with the other mills, only a day shift will be engaged at first. It is expected that the cut at the St. Louis mill the present season will amount to about 15,000,000 feet, possibly more.

The four West Duluth mills will employ in the aggregate about 900 men. The Lesuer mill started work last Monday with a crew of 150 men. Both the Merrill & Ring and the Alger-Smith plants started in on the season's cut last week. It is estimated that the four mills will have a combined output this season of about 185,000,000 feet of lumber.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to extend our heartfelt thanks to the many friends who so kindly assisted us and expressed their sympathy during our recent bereavement.

MR. and MRS. AUGUST SCHULTE.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

POSTAL DEPARTMENT

To Prevent Evasion of Rural Carrier Law.

Washington, May 11.—Preparations are being made at the postoffice department to issue orders to rural free delivery carriers regarding the handling of merchandise for patrons along their routes. At present these carriers are permitted to act as agents for commercial houses and newspapers, to solicit orders from their patrons, and to deliver packages. Congress at its last session adopted a law depriving them of the privilege of acting as agents for commercial houses and newspapers, but allowed them to deliver merchandise at the request of their patrons when this service does not interfere with their duties. The law becomes effective on July 1, and great care will be exercised that the regulations are drawn so as to prevent an evasion of the law, as it is feared various schemes will be devised to nullify it.

WILL LAUD HAY

Secretary of State to Be Extolled In Republican Platform.

Friends of President Ready to Defend Entire Administration.

Chicago, May 11.—Walter Wellman says in a Washington dispatch to the Record-Herald: John Hay will loom up largely in the Republican national platform to be adopted in Chicago. The management of the foreign relations of our government under President Roosevelt and Secretary Hay will be praised warmly and conspicuously in that declaration of principles. In effect, though of ocourse not in so many words, the platform will ask:

"When did the United States ever have a more sane, cautious, conservative, dignified and yet effective administration of our foreign affairs than Roosevelt and Hay have given? The opposition party says Roosevelt is 'unsafe' as president. If that is true, if he is inclined to rashness and recklessness and trouble-seeking, where would this weakness first show itself? In what field of government activity would it be most likely to do harm? In the management of our important and often delicate relations with other nations. We challenge the critics of the president to show that his administration has been anything but safe and conservative and peacemaking in this respect. We assert that the proof of President Roosevelt's strength and restraint and fitness for the great office which he holds is found in his wise and careful management of our foreign affairs through the instrumentality of Secretary Hay."

This is what the platform will mean. What it will say is, of course, to be governed by the form which such declarations must take. It briefly will review the foreign relations and commend the skill shown in their management. Secretary Hay's leadership of all civilization in the establishment of the great principle of the open door in China will come first on the list—a principle, it will be declared, which has widened vastly the moral prestige of the United States and brought assurance of an extension of American commerce in the future. The Republicans will make the most of this really important triumph of American diplomacy—a triumph, by the way, which will be far better appreciated when President Roosevelt and Secretary Hay are dead and gone than it is at the present day. Posterity's judgment upon it will be more enthusiastic than contemporaneous opinion, because its underlying principle, now pretty well established, and daily being more firmly fixed in the amazing successes of Japan's sailors and soldiers, will prove of greater and greater value as the years roll by.

Another achievement of the Roosevelt administration through the firm though deft hand of John Hay, to be commended in the Republican national platform, will be the manner in which the Monroe Doctrine was protected in the Venezuelan episode—protected so skillfully and tactfully, yet so effectually, that the United States came out of it with the respect and admiration of all the powers involved in the trouble and with the Monroe Doctrine stronger than ever. Throughout this whole episode the Republicans will try to say in their platform, there were possibilities of friction and trouble, yet all such dangers were averted and not a cloud of serious disagreement between the United States and another power appeared even for a moment in the international skies.

Though the platform will be debarred by dignity from throwing down the challenge, Republican orators will labor under no such limitations, and they will defy the opposition, which seeks to make as its chief issue the claim that President Roosevelt is "unsafe," to compare the Venezuela episode of the Roosevelt-Hay administration with that of the Cleveland-Olney regime. If the Democrats dare take it up the Republican leaders say they will show the country that what Cleveland and Olney did in Venezuela was the wildest sort of recklessness compared with anything that Mr. Roosevelt has ever done. They believe they can convince the voters that the Cleveland-Olney Venezuela demand upon Great Britain was a huge but dangerous "bluff," designed primarily to bring popularity to the administration, but that it was a most hazardous game, a playing with fire and dynamite.

The friends of President Roosevelt declare if the Democrats attack him on the ground of his "unsafeness," they will spike the gun by showing that even the sainted Cleveland, the model of "conservatism and sanity," sought to popularize himself by twisting the lion's tail and threatening the country with a terrible war—an adventure so reckless that if it had been entered upon by young Mr. Roosevelt instead of by staid Mr. Cleveland the whole opposition would have risen as one man and cried, "Impeach him!"

Still another foreign affair episode to which the Republican platform will "point with pride" is the Panama episode. The Republican leaders say that they are eager to meet the opposition on that. They hope the Democrats will use it as a basis of attack. Their only fear is that the opposition will think discretion the better part of valor and ignore the subject.

An interesting contribution to the history of the Panama episode is found in the latest number of the Nouvelle Review of Paris. Philippe Bunau-Varilla, late minister from Panama, gives a full history of his remarkable pro-Panama campaign in the United States. He does not deny that he aided in organizing the revolution on the isthmus. But he distinctly declares he had no understanding or arrangement whatever with the American government, direct or indirect. As he knew that two and two make four, so he knew what the American government would do in a given emergency, and he simply went ahead and provided the necessary emergency.

Still other features of our foreign policy will be adverted to, and on the whole the Republicans believe they can clinch their argument that President Roosevelt has shown himself to be conservative and careful and safe in that part of his work which is most delicate and most likely to lead to untoward results if blunderingly or recklessly handled.

In this way will come to pass a belated but signal and well-deserved recognition of the truly great services John Hay has rendered his country in the state department. Americans are slow to recognize that in this man they have the foremost world-statesman of our times. Curiously enough his fame is better established abroad than at home; hence his admirers are not sorry the exigencies of party politics are presently to push his achievements into the limelight of publicity and discussion.

The critics of the president may say, it is true, Mr. Hay is a great man, and has done notable work, but Mr. Roosevelt is not entitled to any credit for that. In the opinion of the Republican managers, however, the country will give President Roosevelt credit for all the good done by his ministers just the same as it holds him responsible for whatever ill they work. By the rule of fair play he must have it both ways, the fat as well as the lean.

Besides, it is a fact known to everyone in Washington that President Roosevelt and Secretary Hay work together as if they had been in the same harness all their lives. They are the warmest sort of personal friends. Nothing of importance is done in foreign affairs without a full and free conference between them. Mr. Hay is one of the most loyal and unselfish men that ever lived, and, with those he loves, Mr. Roosevelt is one of the most considerate and appreciative. Almost every day Mr. Hay is at the White House for a talk with his chief, and rarely a Sunday passes that Mr. Roosevelt does not stop at Mr. Hay's home on his way back from church for an hour's visit with his secretary of state. In John Hay, President Roosevelt has a great secretary of state, and he knows it and is proud of it, and Mr. Hay himself says that in President Roosevelt he has a chief whose breadth, whose learning, whose good sense, whose Dutch caution, whose familiarity with the men and the affairs of the whole world are things almost amazing and altogether delightful. Under such circumstances it is difficult to see how the Republican national platform can extol the foreign policy of President Roosevelt without giving due credit to Secretary Hay, or how the critics of the administration can praise Hay and damn Roosevelt.

The wise men of the Republican party believe the issue in the coming campaign is to be President Roosevelt and his administration, and they are shrewdly cutting out their work and preparing their plan of battle.

Postponed!

The dance to be held under the auspices of the Fell-o's Club this evening at Lincoln Park Pavillion is postponed until Wednesday evening, May 25th.

SLEEPING YOUTH

In Missouri Becomes an Expert In Burglary.

Albany, Mo., May 11.—While walking in his sleep Hardin Hughes broke into the postoffice Sunday morning and was trying to open a cash drawer when he woke up.

Frightened at his predicament the youth ran home and told his father, a Baptist minister, of what had occurred. Father and son then aroused the postmaster and with him traversed the route traveled by the boy. This is what they discovered:

The somnambulist left his bed, secured a brace and bit, and went to the postoffice, four blocks away. Securing a box he climbed high enough to bore holes through a door and turn the lock. Then entering he went to a delivery window, climbed eight feet into the private office, and bored three holes into a cash drawer.

FINDS HIS IDEAL

Long Search By Rev. Dr. Brownback For Ideal Woman.

Miss Blanche De Con of Newark Answers Requirements.

Reading, Pa., May 11.—Miss Blanche De Con, daughter of Mrs. Cordelie De Con of Newark, N. J., is the ideal woman. She is 30 years old, can bake, do housework, is good looking, and does not know what it is to gossip.

The Rev. George W. Brownback of this city about a year ago began a search for an ideal wife and used every proper means to find her.

As a result of his year's search he concluded Miss De Con has all the qualifications, and the announcement of their marriage on April 29 has been made public.

Something of a sensation was caused when the Rev. Dr. Brownback advertised for a wife, enumerating qualities she must possess, and the fact that he had succeeded became known when the wedding was announced as having taken place. The ceremony was quietly performed, the only witnesses being the Misses Guinevere and Marjorie Fennell, daughters of the Rev. William G. Fennell, the officiating clergyman.

Little information in addition to the official records could be obtained, as the couple are supposed to be on their wedding tour.

When the Rev. Mr. Brownback advertised for a wife he received hundreds of answers, and, though he is said to have met several candidates, none came up to the requirements he specified. Then he was reproached for advertising for a wife when he had many good women in his congregation.

It is said he maintained he was justified in advertising for a wife if the women he knew did not attract his affection.

Whether Miss De Con was one of those who answered his advertisement could not be learned.

To a large audience at a camp meeting the Rev. Dr. Brownback thus defined his ideal wife:

"One who can cook, bake, and sew; is not too tired to work; and who cares little for dress and the outside world and whose only pleasure is her home and God."

He said until he found such a woman he would remain single.

TAKEN BY WOMAN

Used $3600 of Funds of Elgin, Ill., Woman's Club.

She Says Her Aged Father Needed Some Comforts.

Elgin, Ill., May 11.—Defalcation in the sum of $3600 is alleged against Elizabeth J. Lunn, treasurer of the Elgin Woman's club.

In a statement Miss Lunn admitted the charge, and justified herself on the ground that her aged father needed the comforts the money brought him more than the club needed the funds.

This defense is disputed by those who claim that Miss Lunn and her sister lost the money in speculation on the board of trade, in mining ventures, and in "get rich quick" schemes.

Members of the club will hold a meeting shortly to consider the matter of prosecution. The feeling in the club is bitter against the women, but the members see no means by which to regain the funds. Because of inability to recover the money, and the advanced age of Miss Lunn, who is 58 years old, there is a sentiment against prosecuting the woman. This sentiment was checked, however, when it became known that Miss Lunn is impenitent.

"Father is old and infirm," she said. "We are all getting old, and needed the money worse than the woman's club. I am not sorry that I took it."

Announcement of the facts connected with the alleged shortage has created a profound sensation, both in church and club circles, in which Miss Lunn and her sister Mattie have been prominent for years. The Woman's club is one of the most famed charitable institutions in Northern Illinois. Sherman hospital, containing nearly fifty wards, is operated by this organization. Large sums of money were handled yearly by the treasurer, and the deposits had grown in size in order to erect a new $12,000 addition.

On last Friday devloped suspicions of dishonesty in this official. Mrs. R. D. Hollenbeak, president of the club, found that there was but $50 in the bank where the rport of the treasurer showed $3600. The facts were made public when Mrs. R. D. Hollenbeak demanded the passbook belonging to the treasurer, and then discovered a series of withdrawals covering the last two and a half years and aggregating not less than $3000.

For years the Misses Lunn apparently have led exemplary lives, and were allied with church circles. Each had grown gray, and because of their extreme zeal in benevolent works, preachers used them as examples to direct the footsteps of the children in their congregations.

Miss Elizabeth Lunn, a week ago, went among the members of the club asking for re-election as treasurer, because, she said, she found it the only way in which she could serve the organization. Her anxiety over the election excited slight suspicions. Then followed the president's investigation and the exposure.

L. A. ROSING TALKS OF POLITICAL OUTLOOK

Discusses Forthcoming National Convention and Candidates.

Does Not Believe That Mr. Bryan May Bolt.

L. A. Rosing is here presumably looking after the interest of his candidacy for delegate-at-large to the national Democratic convention at St. Louis, although he does not say so. He registered this morning at the St. Louis from Cannon Falls, and during the morning went out to see a few friends and also received some in Room 224 at the hotel.

Mr. Rosing was Democratic candidate for governor two years ago, is a former Democratic state chairman and was secretary for John Lind when that gentleman was governor of the state.

"Are you here in the interests of any political work?" he was asked.

"I am here on a little business, I am not a candidate for any office. While I am here, however, I expect to see some of my political friends, although there is no particular political significance in my visit, and I expect to be here a day or two."

"Do you think the Democratic chances in the state situation good?"

"There is not much doing yet in the state matters. It is a little early for the Democrats to begin work in that direction. I do not know of any Democratic names having been mentioned for governor."

"How about the national issues?"

"It seems to me that so far as the Democrats are concerned, the platform as advocated by the minority leaders in the house is the proper one for the party to use as a national standard. I mean the platform as outlined by such people as Congressman John Sharp Williams and Mr. Lind, of this state.

"According to my view we could not do better than adopt as an issue the question of trade relations between North and South America—continental trade relations. Chamberlain stands for colonial trade federation in England and we would do well, I believe, to stand for continental trade federation in this country.

"Some people are for free tade and want it all at one jump, but I believe in going step by step, as humanity is more logically apt to move, and attain our position by degrees. I believe in a method that will let the trade of South America and Canada come into our country and let our trade find a way into theirs.

"We can establish trade lines and later exchange lines will follow and in time we can make New York the great exchange center of the two continents, as it is now the banking center, and it would in this respect hold the same position in this country and the others allied in trade that the city of London does to the world."

"Do you think the Democratic chances are good this year in the national campaign?"

"With wise action at St. Louis I certainly do. So far as my own position is concerned I am for a Democrat."

"How about Hearst as a candidate?"

"As to Mr. Hearst's candidacy I must say that I do not think he measures up to the standard necessary for a candidate for president on the Democratic ticket, but as far as personality is concerned I do not care to enter into that side of it."

"Do you think Mr. Cleveland is a receptive candidate?"

"So far as that is concerned I cannot say that I have heard anything about it. I do not think that either Mr. Cleveland or Mr. Hearst is an available candidate for the party in the national campaign. As to Judge Parker, I can freely say that I favor him as against Mr. Hearst, but I am for any first-class man in the party who can stand as a party representative."

"What do you think Mr. Bryan's position will be? There is talk of his being likely to bolt the convention."

"Such talk I believe is doing Mr. Bryan a great injustice. Mr. Bryan is too good a Democrat to do anything of that sort when the convention names its choice I think you will see Mr. Bryan giving his support to the ticket in every way he can. There is no doubt that Mr. Bryan has ideas of his own which he would use every endeavor to see furthered in the convention, but so far as bolting is concerned I believe there is no good ground for such reports."

"Prosperity is the great slogan of the Republicans. What do you think of it?"

"Well, that's something that reminds me of a story told a couple of years ago about a well-known Democrat in Marshall county. He was asked what he thought of the outlook. He said the Democrats were not in it. His questioner then said the issues were so and so, and that with such issues placed side by side he thought the Democrats ought to have things their own way. But our well known Democratic friend replied that with hogs at $5.80 the issues might be blowed. At this time hogs are not $5.80, which is a very high price. So with hogs as a basis, you see prosperity is not so powerful a factor as our friend would figure it. You see I speak of an illustration which I get from a farming community. The farmers down that way do not seem to be taking much interest in the situation up to this time and there is no talk to speak of one way or another.

"I do not think that Mr. Hearst stands any show of carrying the state of Minnesota. His strength seems to be localized in St. Louis county with some sentiment in his favor in Hennepin, Morrison county, in the Sixth district, Winona,, and about three counties in the extreme southwestern portion of the state.

"I have received a great many letters from all over the state, and about 85 per cent of my correspondents are absolutely opposed to Mr. Hearst. Personally I would favor an uninstructed delegation.

"I believe that the time has come for Democrats to stop attaching prefixes or affixes to the name Democracy. We have had Cleveland Democrats, Bryan Democrats, and now we have added to the list Hearst Democrats.

"It would be well for the plain, ordinary Democrats to assert themselves. I for one am willing to trust the representatives of the Democratic party who will meet in St. Louis to frame a Democratic platform and nominate a Democratic candidate. If we cannot trust the Democratic organization to do this, how can we ask the independent voters to trust the party?"

TWENTY-FIVE HUNDRED BERLIN BAKERS STRIKE.

Berlin, May 11.—A strike of 2500 journeymen bakers began in Berlin today. They demanded higher wages and a discontinuance of the system of boarding with their employers, which the latter rejected. The employers have prepared to resist the strike, summoning by telegraph members of the Association of Master Bakers' Sons, which was organized several years ago throughout Germany to assist the fathers in strikes. Many of the sons arrived in Berlin this morning and were immediately assigned to bakeries. Some trouble occurred today, occasioning several arrests.

COTTON MEN'S ASSOCIATION

Holds Annual Session at Washington—Speech By Cortelyou.

Washington, May 11.—The American Cotton Manufacturers' association met here today for its fifteenth annual session, at the Arlington hotel. The meeting will last two days. President Heath said in his annual address that the most serious condition now confronting the cotton manufacturers is the high prices of raw cotton coupled with the small returns for the manufactured product. The manufacturers, he said, were largely responsible for this condition.

Secretary Cortelyou, who followed Mr. Heath, said in part:

"Of course, you have problems peculiar to your industry. That you will solve them can not be doubted. In order to maintain and increase your hold on the domestic and international markets it will be necessary to introduce new economics in production and manufacture, to study trade opportunities throughout the world, to seize upon every advantage offered by superior facilities—in short, to bring to bear upon the problem of a more extended field for the products of your industry the resources of energy and initiative which have brought the United States to the forefront as a manufacturing and an exporting nation.

"Whatever affects the producer of cotton is naturally of concern to the manufacturer. Here again we have a number of internal problems which the producer is called upon to solve. He must apply himself to the question of increasing productivity by extending and adjusting his acreage, by improving his methods of cultivation, by eliminating wasteful ness in the various stages of cultivation, harvesting, and marketing, and by placing the whole process of cotton production upon the systematic basis demanded by modern business.

"This country produces three-fourths of the cotton of the world. It has a much larger available coal supply than any other country. It has shown itself capable of producing the most ingenious and most successful machinery. Its transportation facilities and its opportunities for supplying its products in the manufactured form are unsurpassed. Cotton manufactures are required by a larger number of people than perhaps any other single article of manufacture. Only one other great class of manufactures—iron and steel—compares favorably in value with them. They form an important part of the requirements of the world's population. The demand for them is well-nigh universal."

President Roosevelt is to receive the members of the association at the White House tomorrow.

CONCEDE A PART

Longshoremen Would Divide Amount That Is In Dispute.

Lumber Carriers Wil Pay No More Than Fifty Cents.

This morning the longshoremen and lumber carriers continued their conference at the Spalding without coming to an agreement and at noon it was said that there was no likelihood of an agreement. During yesterday the longshoremen intimated their willingness to accept 52½ cents per hour for loading vessels instead of the 55 cents they originally asked. But the carriers are determined to pay 50 cents or have no dealings with the union.

At Chicago 50 cents is the agreed price and the longshoremen there have been engaged to go to work for that price provided the Duluth men of the union accept the same. If the union here is not agreed with on terms the union at Chicago will not be recognized and the companies will load their boats with open labor at both Chicago and this point.

At Manistee the local union has agreed to 50 cents but the longshoremen claim that this region is more expensive to live in than the other points where the contention has been made. Some of the longshoremen seen this morning were unwilling to say anything on their side of the matter, and said the less they said the better.

One of the interested lumbermen said this morning that it was not a question of whether the men's wages should be cut or not, without relation to other circumstances.

"All that is being asked of the longshoremen is that they accept the same proportion of wages that the others who work on the boats have agreed to," he asserted. "So far as that is concerned they are not asked to accept what the pilers have stood, in the way of a cut. The pilers got 25 cents an hour last year and will work this year for 20. That is a 25 per cent reduction, but the longshoremen are not asked to load at a basis of 25 per cent. less than a year ago. It is 5 cents off 55, which is about 9 per cent. The contrast between the loaders and pilers even at 50 cents and 20 cents would be absurd for the loading is certainly not twice as hard work as the piling if it is any harder at all.

"They want to be paid 52½ cents here and 50 at Chicago and we are simply unable to have such a condition. We cannot afford to pay more than 50 cents. We made no money last year and don't expect to make any this year to speak of, even if we pay only 50 cents. We had no trouble at all in Chicago in getting a signature to a 50-cent rate. The men were glad to get it and I venture to say we could have gotten a 45-cent rate without trouble, but we were not anxious to gouge the men. We did not want to submit any figure that we have to haggle over and raise a nitch at a time so we did not say we would pay 40 cents, or 45 cents, but gave our best terms right on the jump—50 cents.

"There are only 175 men in the Duluth union and we feel sure that we can go out on the street and find plenty of men to do this labor at much less money than we are offering the union. We feel confident we can get the work done without any trouble for 40 cents with men that we can go out on the streets of Duluth and pick up at any time, but we have no desire to do that. As long as there is the slightest chance of treating with these same men that we have dealt with we wish to do so. But we will not work union one place and non-union another. It is to be union all places or no place."

As no result was reached at the morning session the committees resumed their session in the Spalding at 2 p. m. The lonshoremen were represented by Joseph F. Gaunthier, recording secretary; J. Clough and Tom Altigan, of the Duluth local; Andrew Washburn, president of the Washburn local; Dan Keefe and Morris Maginnis, of the Superior local; Tim Tracy, president, John C. Reardon and Daniel Weir, of the Ashland local.

SHOW SOME IRE

Witness Comments Sarcastically on Mr. Hollister's Chicken Raising.

Thomas S. Wood Also Gets Sharp Retort From a Witness.

"You can't roast me. Your long suit is raising chickens," was the wrathy answer given Theodore Hollister, counsel for Nolan Bros. & Laird, while he was examining Alton R. Radley, a Duluth, Missabe & Northern conductor, who was on the witness stand this morning, in his own behalf in a $10,000 personal injury suit.

"Yes, I can raise chickens and I can raise you," was Mr. Hollister's retort as he proceeded to stir up the witnesses' ire under another fire of questions on the cross examinations.

Mr. Radley, having been a railroad man for some years, is very decided as to the proper methods to run a train and under the persistent cross-examination he had a frequent clash of words with the counsel for the lumber company.

In Judge Cant's room all the testimony was introduced in the personal injury suit of Mrs. Catharine Hurley against the Street Railway company and the arguments are being made to the jury this afternoon.

Just before the case was closed Thomas S. Wood, for the Street Railway company moved for a dismissal of the action on the ground that there had been no evidence tending to show negligence on the part of the company and that there was evidence to show that the plaintiff, Mrs. Hurley, was guilty of contributary negligence.

Judge Cant denied the motion, holding that the question of contributory negligence is for the jury to decide.

In this action Mrs. Hurley brought suit for $10,000 for a broken arm, claimed to have been received in being jerked from a West Duluth car step at Garfield avenue and Michigan street.

The street railway company introduced the evidence of a stenographer to show that subsequent to the accident Mrs. Hurley visited the office of the general manager and there claimed to have been pushed off the car by two young men who were strangers to her.

She denied that she ever told anybody that she once started a similar action in West Superior against the company claiming that it was on Connor's Point that she was hurt.

Mrs. Hurley also denied the testimony of witnesses for the company that she was intoxicated when she took the car at West Duluth the evening she was hurt.

Mrs. James Hall, of West Duluth, who was a witness for Mrs. Hurley, also denied that she was drunk when she took the car with the former and she criticized severely a neighbor woman who was on the stand yesterday and who claimed Mrs. Hall told her that Mrs. Hurley was drunk and broke her arm by falling against a curb.

"If she was rubbering out of the window," declared the witness with an angry toss of the head, "she wasn't very busy."

"Do you ever rush the growler?" queried Mr. Wood.

"No," responded Mrs. Hall, indignantly.

"I suppose you know perfectly well what I mean by the growler?" asked Mr. Wood.

"If I didn't, I presume you could tell me," was the reply.

Another witness for Mrs. Hurley, a Mr. Brown, father of Mrs. Hall, was so stirred up over his cross-examination by the street railway company's attorney, that he persisted in "talking out in meeting," even after he was off the stand.

In Judge Dibell's room a jury had been chosen and the personal injury case of Mrs. Belle McKenuzie against Mrs. Sarah Banks is on trial. Mrs. McKenzie, who asks $5050 damages for injuries claimed to have been inflicted by Mrs. Banks, was still introducing evidence.

MURDER WILL NOT BE CHARGE

Excellent Reason to Look For Recovery of Edward Peterson.

What promised to be the second murder case within the course of the past three weeks, will probably be averted.

Edward Peterson, who lies in the Red Cross hospital suffering from injuries claimed to have been inflicted by a blow from a cant hook held in the hands of Magnus Swenson, is reported to be recovering.

"He is decidedly better this morning," said Dr. Robert Graham, who is attending him. "It is still too early to state definiely whether or not the skull is fractured and inflammation will set in, but I do not think it is likely from present indications. If no complications develop during the next day or two he should be out of danger. It is even yet possible that there is a fracture there and he may take a turn for the worse, but from present indications he should recover without any serious after effects. He is conscious today and his temperature is lower."

Swenson was bound over to the grand jury yesterday afternoon in the municipal court by Judge Windom. The charge against him is assault with intent to kill, or assault in the first degree. The defendant did not take the stand yesterday, but it is understood that he will plead self-defense when arraigned before the grand jury. He did not appear to be nervous during the course of the hearing, and made frequent suggestions to his attorney, H. B. Fryberger.

According to the story told by one of the witnesses through an interpreter, Swenson struck Peterson in the back with his fist, and the latter raised a slab threateningly, but dropped it when Swenson picked up the cant hook handle and struck him on the side of the head, felling him to the ground.

Swenson was not allowed to furnish bonds and was sent to the county jail to await the action of the grand jury.

Frank White is confined in the same building awaiting trial for murder in the first degree.

PUNCH BOWL FOR GOVERNOR

Handsome Gift of Grand Chapter of the Eastern Star.

St. Paul, May 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—The grand chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, held its opening session today in the Masonic Temple. Governor Van Sant delivered the address of welcome to the capital city.

Today was the governor's birthday, as well as the anniversary of the day that saw Minnesota's birth, and, in his response to the hearty welcome given, E. G. Valentine of Breckenridge presented the governor with a resplendent cut glass punch bowl, glasses and tray, the gift of the grand chapter. The present was a very substantial one, representing an outlay of $125. The recipient was profoundly surprised and as profoundly pleased.

Mrs. Mary T. Earhuff, welcomed the delegates on behalf of the city chapters, and A. J. Swanson of St. Paul presented Mrs. Carrie McCauley, who is retiring from the office of grand matron, after three years of useful service, with a jewel of the order, richly set with diamonds, one for each year of her reign. This gift also was on behalf of the grand chapter.

In her annual address, this afternon, Mrs. McCauley stated that the order had increased 33 per cent during the past three years. It has now about 13,000 members in Minnesota, approximately 1,000 having been admitted during the past year.

STIRRING SPEECH

By John Sharp Williams In Praise of Foreign Born.

Irish, German and French Names Notable In Nation's History.

Washington, May 11.—Representative Dalzell's recent excoriation of Bourke Cockran contained one utterance that is likely to cause Dalzell's party a great deal of embarrassment. Dalzell took up part of a sentence spoken by Mr. Cockran several months previously and quoted the following words:

"We have reached the point where America is regarded as an international hoodlum."

Mr. Dalzell was moved to pass the amazing stricture upon Cockran's words:

"That is a sentence," he said, "that is interesting to you gentlemen upon the other side of the house—Americans as we all are—as much as it is of interest to me. If there be any hoodlums among us they are not the product of American soil, American institutions or an American civilization. (Applause on the Republican side.) They are to be found among those adventurers who, having left their country for their country's good, find in the field of American politics a prolific source of notoriety and pelf; men who, without conscience and without conviction, find an opportunity, now with one party and now with another, to secure a market for their peculiar wares, among which is not respectability." (Loud and long-continued cheering and applause on the Republican side.)

Mr. Dalzell in thus quoting Mr. Cockran, employing the license of a special pleader, neglected to repeat what Mr. Cockran had said preceding the sentence quoted, as well as much that followed it, which would have made its meaning clear and softened its seeming brutality. Mr. Cockran himself explained what he had said in replying to Dalzell.

It remained for John Sharp Williams, the Democratic leader, in a brilliant, forceful and incisive review of Dalzell's language and its meaning, to create a political issue which is certain to attract wide attention during the coming campaign. Here is that portion of Mr. Williams' speech bearing upon Dalzell's thoughtless and sweeping condemnation of foreign-born American citizens. It does credit to Mr. Williams as a man and a statesman, and, moreover, it will stand from a literary point of view as one of the finest contributions that has been made to the pages of the Congressional Record in a generation. Here is the speech as taken from the Record:

"It is perhaps a good thing, at any rate a certain thing, that God has made certain unalterable rules that neither oratory nor debate can change. The gentleman from Maine said in the course of his remarks, quoting from William Shakespeare, that 'changes come over the spirit of our dreams.' I concede there are limitations within which changes can come over the spirit of our dreams. For each individual man who has heredity behind him and environment around him the limitations are exceedingly great, and for each party in any country, if it has a history behind it, its limitations are exceedingly great. There is one principle running through the woof of time that has been expressed in a plain way—that, 'the leopard cannot change his spots.'

"The party, Mr. Speaker, that is founded upon the idea that men, because they happen to live in different climates and different countries, are necessarily in an inimical attitude toward one another and must not engage in amicable relations with each other except when it is absolute necessary; that party, under whatever name it has been known in this country, whether as federalists, when trying to pass the alien and sedition laws, or as know-nothings, when saying 'No Irish need apply,' cannot have a change come over the 'spirit of its dreams' except the change be subject to the inbred historical limitations which make it narrow and characteristic—narrow in its welcome of foreigners to our shores, narrow in world sympathies, narrow in its trade relations with the peoples of the earth. I think that was not the exact language used here yesterday, but the spirit was the same—'No Irish need apply.' Whenever my friends on the Republican side take that as a rule of action it is idle to quarrel with them because they take the second step and want to deprive a man of entry into the grand arena of benefit which America furnishes to the world in its very civilization and of which it availed itself in its national need, when durng the war the government wanted all such volunteers as it could get. (Applause.) It asked no questions about nativity then.

"Mr. Speaker, I say, 'the leopard cannot change his spots.' Here is a significant illustration, strange in appearance though it is in that it comes from the state where the battle of Gettysburg was fought. The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Dalzell), who made his eloquent peroration tirade yesterday against foreign-born hoodlums, does not live far from the field of Gettysburg. During the last war the Sixty-ninth Pennsylvania, 'Owens' Own,' as it was called, an Irish regiment, was in evidence in defending Pennsylvania soil. As a man of Welsh descent, I am glad to see the old Welsh name 'Owen' at the head of the regiment; but the thing I wish you to note now is this, that the great majority of is members were Irishmen, 'nearly all of them,' as I read in Alexander H. Stephens' 'Pictorial Historic Views,' in which he quoted the statement from a federal officer, Mr. Wilson:

"'The only thing throughtout that day that met the elan of the Southern chivalry headed by Pickett in the grandest charge the world ever saw was this brigade of Pennsylvania Irishmen.'

"It strikes me, my friends, that it comes with a strange ring for a man, even on that side, but a Pennsylvanian, the hearthstones of whose people those Irieshmen protected, to have uttered these words which were uttered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Dalzell) on yesterday: 'If there be any hoodlums among us,' he said, 'they are not the product of American soil, American institutions or American civilization.' The old know-nothing cry, 'America for Americans,' 'American soil for American institutions,' Mark that fact, gentlemen!

"Now, Mr. Speaker, I think I have a right to speak upon this subject without being charged with a personal motive. There is not a drop of blood in my veins that does not come from the English-speaking race—Scotch, English and Welsh. I am, of course, proud of my race—proud as the Germans are and ought to be of their race, as the French are and ought to be, as the Poles are and ought to be of their race.

"Mr. Speaker, my people came to America in the latter part of the seventeenth century, and if I chose I could 'out-America' the gentleman from Pennsylvania, I suppose, I represent a consttituency 96 per cent of whom are native-born. His is exactly the language of old know-nothingism. His language was followed by 'loud and long-continued applause on the Republican side.' That is the significant fact. Federalism had to drop 'alien and sedition laws,' because 'alien and sedition laws' scotched though they did not kill federalism. Know-nothingism was stamped into the pretense of nonexistence by the horse sense of Americans. The historic child of both—the Republican party—through its chosen mouthpiece, amid uproarious applause, re-echoes their voices.

"Can the leopard change its spots? Is there not a historic, scientific, fixed limit to this appearance of a change that comes over the spirit of our dreams?' I ask this question—I, one of whose anecstors wore the king's uniform against French and Indians, and afterward the continental uniform, in which he battled against king and colonialism for American liberty!

"Now, then, Mr. Speaker, I am no provincialist. I am intensely a Southerner and intensely American, but, perhaps, beyond that to a large extent, a cosmopolitan. I know the German people. I have studied with them, slept in their houses, eaten their salt, and I love them. What does the distinguished gentleman from the St. Louis district of the great state of Missouri (Mr. Bartholdt) think about being one of the only possible 'hoodlums' that can be furnished in America? (Applause.) What does the distinguished gentleman of Swedish ancestry who represents so nobly and so bravely and intelligently upon this side of the house a district in the state of Minnesota, Governor Lind, think of this federalistic outcropping? (Applause.) What does the gentleman from a Boston district who bears the Irish name of one of the ablest and bravest and one of the noblest soldiers of the revolution, Gen. Sullivan, think of it? (Applause.)

"Now, let us go on. The gentleman from Pennsylvania said:

"'They are to be found, rather among those adventurers who, having left their own country for their country's good, find in the field of American politics prolific source of notoriety and pelf; men who, without conscience and without conviction, find an opporunity, now with one party, now with another, to find a market for their peculiar wares, among which is not respectability.'

"Oh, this supposition that because a man left Europe and came to America he must have 'left his country for his country's good!' Why, even the 10,000,000, more or less, of descendants of the Mayflower pilgrims know better than that, at least so far as the Mayflower fellows were concerned. They say they left their old country for the world's betterment. They say that they left for the purpose of developing a new world and giving to it religious and civil liberty and to the white man's civilization. They will tell you that they left because conditions 'at home' were worse for a man who would be free and follow his own conscience than they could be even in the wilderness among the wild red men, and because they could better there take their chances under God's providence to make a new civiliaztion out of the wilderness in the presence of savages, carrying the white man's flag farther and farther in this world, and higher and higher, than to have remained back 'at home' amidst oppression and all that was narrow, chauvinistic and wrong. (Appluse.)

"I love la belle France, too. I have danced with her girls at the vintage; noted that, noble or peasant, the Frenchman is always polite and apt to be a getleman. I love Moliere and Scarron. What does the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Broussard) think? What does the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. Legare), the descendant of the Huguenots, think of the know-nothing renaissance?

"Mr. Speaker, I have a good deal of impatience with 'hyphenated Americans.' I do not know what a German-American is; I do not know what an Irish-American is; I do not know what an Italian-American is, or what a French-American is, but I do know what a German is, what a Frenchman is, what an Italian is and what an American is, and I know, moreover, what an American of foreign birth, no longer hyphenated, except in popular and newspaper phrase mongering, but devoted to the free institutions of a free country that he came to voluntarily and not by the accident of birth is, and I know what they have done in the history of this country. Why, gentlemen, I mentioned Gen. Sullivan. I might mention Commodore Barry. I might go back to revolutionary days and recall him who distinguished himself in the person of Kosciusko. I might go back to Pulaski's time and in him learn to love the men of the knights' republic—Poland. I might go back to Lafayette's day if I chose, but I need not go that far.

"Who are your bravest and boldest? Who made the twenty-mile ride down the valley, wonderful, but the subject of overboasting? Phil Sheridan, an Irishman. Who was the one man in the federal infantry whom Stonewall Jackson ever met with nearly equal forces that he did not rout in almost no time? Shields, at Fort Royal, with his Irishmen. My friends where are the great orators of the world—Burke and Curran? Where are the great writers of the world—Goethe and Schiller and Racine and Fontaine and Lessing and Dante and Petrarch and all the balance of them? Its great painters, sculptors, architects—are they all Americans? There is nothing, in my opinion, more foolish than the notion that because you happen to be a Frenchman, or because you happen to be an Englishman, or becaues you happen to be an American, thereby you are better than anybody else. You are better if you are better, and you are not if you are not. (Applause.) Within certain great, broad, indelible race lines human nature is the same from the mouth of the Hudson to the mouth of the Danube. Wherever peoples are within the lines of mutual assimiliation God has marked them practically the same. He has laid down metes and bounds and race characters within certain broad lines, but no more than that. Now, my friends, the party of restriction, the party of chauvinism, the party which regards foreigners as necessarily more or less enemies, is the party that you represent.

"Your thoughts along economical lines run with your thoughts along international lines. Your are the men who, if you carried out your theories to their end, to their logical result, would not sell or buy, or at any rate would not buy one single article upon the surface of the earth from anybody but yourselves; let nobody serve you with his wares unless he were an American, no matter how much he robbed you in the name of 'Americanism.' The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Dalzell) the other day expressed that idea right frankly when he was discussing the question of reciprocal trade relations, and said that it was 'not Republican' to have reciprocity unless it was in 'noncompeting' articles. What does that mean, in that great 'imperial Republic' of ours—with an imperial domain and Republican institutions—except it means nothing; that you cannot buy anything from abroad? The gentleman from Maine (Mr. Littlefield) this evening has propounded questions and demanded answers, yes or no. Where is the thing that you can mention now—and I will not confine you to a yes or no answer—which is not raised or made or mined somewhere under the flag of the United States? Where is the noncompeting article? Give it to me. Somebody do it. Will the gentleman from Maine (Mr. Littlefield) do it? (Applause on the Democratic side.) Why, Mr. Speaker, I doubt if even my genial and non-partisan personal friend, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Grosvenor), who can do mighty near anything, could do it." (Laughter and applause).

The Republicans who had cheered and applauded Mr. Dalzell's know-nothing utterances listened to Mr. Williams with long and serious faces. They realized that they had not caught the full significance of Mr. Dalzell's words, and before Mr. Williams was through they heartily wished that Dalzell had not spoken.

JUDGE GIVES WAY TO MILITIA

Will Not Attempt to Hold Court In San Miguel County.

Telluride, Colo., May 11.—Judge Therron Stevens yesterday adjourned the May term of court, as this county (San Miguel) is under martial law. No action was taken on the application to make permanent the injunction granted by the court at Ouray restraining the Citizen's Alliance and Mine Owners from interfering with the return of deported miners to their homes in Telluride.

In announcing his decision Judge Stevens referred to the fact that when he came into town Monday evening he was forced to walk through files of soldiers, who had been stationed at the depot with orders to arrest deported union men, who, it was falsely reported, were returning with the judge.

"The demonstration at the depot upon the arrival of the train," said Judge Stevens, "could only have been planned and executed for the purpose of showing the contempt of the militia and a certain portion of this community for the civil authority of the state and civil authority of this district. I had always been led to suppose from such research as I had been able to make that in a republic like ours that the people were supreme, that the people had expressed their will in a constitution which was enacted for the government of all in this state. That constitution provides that the militia shall always be in strict supervision to the civil authorities. It is doubtless construed differently by the executive, who has declared this county to be in a state of insurrection and has declared martial law within its limits. Such being the case, it would simply be a farce to attempt to enforce civil law in this county."

RETURNED TO LIFE

When Undertaker Was Preparing to Open Arteries.

Goshen, Ind., May 11.—The 14-year-old son of Will Peterson, of Elkhart, apparently died at 10 o'clock last Saturday morning of cholera infantum. Two physicians were present, and pronounced the child dead.

At noon the undertaker was called and preparations were made to embalm the body. The body was placed on the embalming table, but the undertaker found that the body was not cool. He waited an hour, and was preparing to open the arteries when to his horror the boy's lips appeared to move. An investigation followed, and it was found that life was not extinct. Restoratives were administered, and the child revived.

Everything that medical science could do was done for the child, and he rapidly gained strength. The child is living, and indications point to his complete recovery. The parents are Danish people, and their joy over the return of their son as if from the valley of death is beyond description. The physicians are baffled over the case and can give no explanation.

The undertaker, Charles Walley, is a veteran in the business, and says that never in his experience can he remember to have even heard of so remarkable a case. He says he never doubted for a moment that he was handling a corpse.

WONG ON AND WONG GOW

Are Found Guilty of Murdering Man Quong.

Victoria, B. C., May 11.—The jury in the case of Wong On and Wong Gow, charged with the murder of Man Quong, manager of the Victoria Chinees theater in January last, found the prisoners guilty today.

They were sentenced to be hanged July 22. The condemned men had four accomplices, who are thought to be still in hiding in Chinatown. The murder was remarkable for its brutality, the victim being pounded into insensibility with iron bars and his body tossed over a balcony into the court yard below.

THEY RUB IT IN

High School Juniors Again Humble Pride of Seniors.

Nail Their Colors Where They Cannot Be Reached.

In the cold gray hours of early dawn this morning, a little party of high school juniors wended its way toward the school building. One of the boys had a piece of bunting tucked under his coat, on which was inscribed the numbers "05."

Arriving at the high school the boys disappeared through one of the entrances, and a few minutes later one of them might have been seen in the gray light of early dawn shinning up the flag pole on the top of the building. He carried the flag and a hammer and some nails. The flag was firmly nailed to the ball on the top of the mast and it floated gently in the breeze when the scholars assembled at 9 o'clock this morning.

About a week or ten days ago the senior emblem was hoisted in position on the tower, but was torn down by the members of the junior class, who used it for shoestrings.

The appearance of the juniors' flag this morning, was therefore adding insult to injury. It was more than the wrathy seniors could stand and an attempt was made to tear down the colors. They could not be reached, however, and the flag had been too firmly nailed to be removed in any other way than to be torn down.

When school assembled the juniors' flag was still floating from the pole much to the delight of the members of the class of 1905.

At this juncture Principal Smith interfered and informed the members of the two classes that hostilities must cease. It is the understanding that the flag shall remain up during the day and that the juniors shall remove it this evening and be entitled to its possession as a class relic.

The names of the boys who nailed the colors to the pole are not known, and the juniors refuse to disclose them. When questioned this morning concerning the matter some of them claimed that the first time they saw the flag on the pole was when they came to school at 9 o'clock. It is rumored that they kept their eyes shut while they were nailing it up. At any rate an investigation of the matter is rendered difficult by a certain diffidence in the manner of the scholars questioned.

The flag is still floating from the top of the pole about 150 feet from the ground, and can be plainly seen from Superior street.

The juniors are elated over their victory and the manner in which they claim to have made the seniors "crawl." The latter are planning vengeance, and the end is not yet.

WILL MAKE NO PROTEST

United States Will Let Pavloff's Report Go Unchallenged.

Washington, May 11.—The state department has concluded not to make an official protest to the Russian government against the latest utterances of M. Pavloff, late Russian minister to Korea, relative to the conduct of the officers of the United States warship Vicksburg in connection with the succoring of survivors of the Variag and Korietz.

Naval officers here have shown considerable feeling over the criticisms as affecting the honor of the United States navy and are desirous of having an inquiry made as to why these statements were given publication in the Official Messenger, thus stamping them as official. The state department officials, however, are disposed to ignore the incident, one of them explaining that M. Pavloff's utterances are, in a measure, pardonable, in view of the humiliations which he has suffered, in being expelled from Korea. Making due allowances for his state of mind, according to the state department official, the department will not notice the matter.

A curious statement is made by a naval officer here, who has been in correspondence with some of the officers on the Vicksburg as to what occurred in Chemulpo harbor among the vessels of the international fleet. It is said that on the morning of Feb. 9, the day of the fight, the captain of the British warship Talbot began to make signals with the international code. These were directed to the French and German warships, and a lively exchange went on for a long time, but not for a moment was the Vicksburg signalled, nor was she taken into the care of the other ships.

But the Vicksburg signalman read all of the conversation, and, indeed, Commander Marshall has reported officially some part of the exchanges to the navy department, particularly that relating to the delivery of the triple protest against the Japanese attack, in which he was not invited to join. Just why the Vicksburg was excluded from the conference by signal is a subject of much speculation here.

VICTIM OF QUACK

Is Pretty Olive Carr and "Doctor" Is Under Arrest.

Held at London Awaiting Arrival of Extradition Papers.

Kankakee, Ill., May 11.—There is a new-made grave in the cemetery at Mound City, Ill., a disconsolate young widower here in Kankakee and a physician held at Queenstown, Ireland, with a price upon his head.

The grave is that of Mrs. Olive Connell Carr, formerly of Mound City; the widower is Charles Carr, of this city, and the accused is Dr. Peter R. Langdon, a man who has practiced medicine in Kankakee for several years, who has served two terms in the penitentiary and has figured in many sensational episode during his 62 years of life.

The story is a sad one. Olive Connell, pretty, piquant and coquettish, used to come up from Mound City to visit the family of A. E. Barton, of this city. She was fascinated with Kankakee and made many warm friends. During one of her visits she met Charles Carr, one of the clerks in the general offices of the Illinois, Indiana & Iowa railway.

It was not a long courtship. They were married Feb. 17, 1904, at the home of the young man's sister, Mrs. S. W. Tracy. Both were popular, both well known, and the future looked bright for the young married couple. They did not go away for a honeymoon, but had planned to go to the Louisiana Purchase exposition later in the season for their wedding trip.

But, instead of the honeymoon in the great white city, the girl is in her grave, the young man's life blighted and sadened and a charge of murder is hanging over the head of the physician, who is accused of having been guilty of causing the bride's death.

It is the old story of the unwelcome stork. The pretty bride sought out Dr. Langdon. The physician gave her brutal treatment and she died April 16. After it was too late, the friends and relatives decided to prosecute the physician. He saw the way things were going, so he drew about $6000 from his bank, drove fourteen miles across the country to the Wabash railway and made his escape. The people of the city are indignant over the case and public sentiment runs high against the physician, and when he returns fears ars entertained that he would meet a terrible fate.

The people say that if the doctor had one spark of manhood or one iota of compassion he could have saved the little woman. She was very young and her husband is also youthful. Neither one is blamed very much. The blame rests on the shoulders of Dr. Langdon, the ex-convict, who has been allowed to practice medicine in Kankakee for several years, simply because the people were afraid to molest him.

Dr. Peter R. Langdon, whose real name is Patrick Lanigan, has had a stormy career. The earliest known of him he was a gambler in the town of Little Rock, Ark. It was in the days when the times were turbulent and the man was then, as he always is, well dressed. He was passing along the street one day when he saw a commotion in the street. He hastened to see what was the matter.

There was a man in the crowd with a gun and he took a shot at Langdon just for the fun of it. The result was that Langdon's silk hat was riddled with bullets and the poor man was so frightened that he left the city and went to Knoville, Tenn., where he pursued his eventful career. He finally drifted to southern Illinois after a time and began to practice medicine.

He was found guilty of grand larceny down there and served a term in the penitentiary for that crime. His next venture into the criminal arena was in 1889, when he was convicted of forgery.

London, May 11.—Patrick Lanigan, who was arrested May 5 at Queenstown, Ireland, on the arrival there of the White Star liner Majestic, from New York, he answering to the description of Peter Lanigan, charged by the police of Kankakee, Ill., with murder, was arraigned at Bow street police court today and remanded to await extradition papers. The venerable appearance of the prisoner excited much interest. A detective testified that Lanigan, when he arrived, said: "I would sooner waive the right to fight the papers and go straight back to the United States with the officers. I never left the United States on account of this charge."

In the past fifty years Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has made over 4,000,000 cures. It is a gentle, invigorating tonic-stimulant and disease germ killer. It brings into healthy action all the vital forces, aids digestion, and enables one to get from food all the nourishment it contains. Purifies and enriches the blood, strengthens the circulation, soothes the nerves and steadies the heart's action.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

builds up and sustains the entire system. Mrs. Bernard Wolf, 518 Champlain St., Detroit, Mich., says: "Two years ago this spring I was run down, nervous and thin, did not seem to get back my strength. A friend recommended Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. Three bottles cured me, and I never looked or felt better. My father had asthma for years, and though nearly ninety, 'Duffy's' completely cured him and keeps him strong and hearty, with a good digestion."

"Duffy's" is the only sure cure for consumption, bronchitis and all diseases of throat and lungs. It cures dyspepsia.

LA FOLLETTE WINS

In Trempealeau and the Second Sheboygan District.

Milwaukee, May 11.—Delegates were elected to the state Republican convention yesterday in two counties—Sheboygan and Trempealeau.

The La Follette men carried Trempealeau county two to one and secured fourteen delegates.

The La Follette men carried the Second Sheboygan district, fourteen delegates.

Baensch has probably carried the First Sheboygan district, as he has carried Sheboygan city except one ward. This district has ten delegates.

Washington, May 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—The application of N. E. Andersen, Harry Dranger, Charles A. Smith, C. J. Johnson and Fred E. Saderberg to organize the First National Bank of Barnam, Minn., with $5,000 capital has been approved by the comptroller of the currency.

TO REOPEN IROQUOIS.

Chicago, May 11.—A step toward opening the Iroquois theater has been taken, plans for remodeling the interior in strict compliance with the ordinance, having been laid before Commissioner Williams by the new owners, Hyde & Behman, of New York, and Harry Davis, of Pittsburg. A seating capacity of 1606 which is not far from the old capacity, is provided for. The steep pitch of the gallery is modified. In the rear of the main floor of the balcony and of the gallery are planned fire proof walls which will make passage ways leading to exits.

AGONY AND ART.

In order that she may get photographs of the face of a man in the greatest agony for reproduction in a realistic painting, Mrs. Josephine De Voir, an artist of Morristown, N. J., has hired a man who will consent to have his hand mutilated while the camera acts, says a dispatch from Denver. This is the story told by Clerk Rudy, of the Windsor Hotel, where Mrs. De Voir stopped while engaged in a search for a man who would undergo agony for the advancement of art—and a consideration. Rudy quotes Miss De Voir as saying that the ordeal will be gone through with some time within the next month, and that the hand is to be crushed by a locomotive. Miss De Voir wishes to use the photograph in obtaining "expression" for an oil painting.

MUSCLE IS TESTED

Candidates For Police Force Given Physical Examination.

Difficult Feats Not Required But Must Prove Soundness.

Twenty would-be "coppers" spent about three-quarters of an hour in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium this morning running, jumping, "chinning" themselves on the horizontal bar, and going through other gymnastics.

The men were going through the physical examination required of candidates for positions on the force. The written examination was held yesterday in the city hall.

The men all proved to be in good physical condition and made a good showing under a rigid test. No difficult feats were required of them, but they had to be in first-class physical condition to pass the examination.

The written examination yesterday was a very simple one. A grade school education and a fair knowledge of the city was all that was necessary in order to be able to pass it.

The examination was for the purpose of establishing an eligible list from which vacancies on the force may be filled. There are already several names on the eligible list, but should the candidates who tried the examination yesterday take a higher standing than those who passed the previous examination, they will take precedence. No vacancies on the force exist at present.

Several candidates for promotion also wrote on the examination yesterday.

There is a scarcity of candidates for positions as firemen. Of the twenty-nine candidates yesterday only six wrote on the examination for firemen. The department is now in need of two drivers, two truckmen and one pipeman and should all of the six candidates be successful it will leave only one man on the eligible list for any vacancies that may occur.

During the summer months it is always difficult to keep the force up to the required number. The men secure better situations and leave and they object to being confined to the stations in pleasant weather. In the winter months vacancies seldom occur except through death.

The results will be made public by the civil service commissioners May 20, and Mayor Cullum will then fill whatever vacancies there are in the two departments from the candidates taking the highest percentage.

INFANTRY KILLED 250 THIBETANS

New York, May 11.—Mounted infantrymen returned May 6 to camp on the Karola and reported that they had killed 250 Thibetans during the pursuit after the force that oposed the advance of Col. Younghusband's mission, says a Times dispatch from Gyang-Tse, Thibet.

There is some suspicion of collusion between the Thibetans and the Chinese. Two English rifles were recaptured, one of which had been lost by Lieut. Grant at Phari some months ago.

The Thibetans have strongly fortified Jongo and heavy firing is kept up on everyone entering the town. Persons of importance arrive daily at Jongo and L'Hasi sends conscripts from monasteries and villages in a wide radius.

In the attack on the mission compound May 5, when eight servants were killed, the Thibetans actualy gained the walls. Only their shouting betrayed them in time to prevent indiscriminate slaughter of the post weakened by the detachment of men for an expedition. The defenders were quickly in position and drove off the invaders. The sick men in theh ospital insisted in joining the fighters and gave valuable assistance.

The correspondent adds that Col. Brander's victory at Karola probably will have a great effect, but it is clear the Thibetans contemplate a combined effort to exterminate the mission.

VATICAN HAS HAD NO COMPLAINTS.

Rome, May 11.—The vatican authorities deny having received objections from American archbishops regarding the impossibility of enforcing the papal decree providing for the restoration of the Georgian chant and the banishment of women from church choirs. It is pointed out in this connection that the decree did not call for the exclusive use of the Georgian chant, nor did it forbid congregational singing, including, naturally, female voices.

GREATLY EXAGGERATED

Rio Janeiro, May 11.—Reports from Europe received here show that the border skirmishes have been going on between the Peruvian and Brazilian troops in the Alto Purus and Alto Jurua districts have been ridiculously exaggerated. The Associated Press correspondent is authorized by the Brazilian government to say that successful negotiations for an amicable settlement between the two governments are fully expected. The departure of the Peruvian minister to Brazil was purely a personal matter and without any political significance.

IN WOMAN'S SPHERE

Social, Musical and Art Circles.

Last evening the annual meeting of the Bishop's club was held at the library. The election of officers took place and the following will serve the club for the ensuing year:

Honorary president—Mr. L. H. Corcoran.

President—Miss Jean Poirier.

First vice president—Mrs. John Killorin.

Second vice president—Mrs. H. S. Ely.

Third vice president—Miss Ella Stringer.

Secretary—Miss McCourt.

Treasurer—Miss Anna Knauf.

Historian—Miss Shesgreen.

The reports of the officers were read and Bishop McGolrick gave a short talk on the influence a club like this should and does exert. He also recommended a course of public lectures for the next year's work.

The following history of the club will be interesting to many who are unacquainted with the work it has been carrying on for the past number of years, and it was read at last evening's meeting by Miss Lydia Poirier:

"The earliest years of the club when it was called the St. Rose Literary society seem to be shrouded in deepest mystery. For a time a member myself, I cannot recall the minutest detail of the course of study, the officers or anything in connection with it. I have asked a number of the early members and their minds seem to be equally a blank so I ascribe the lapse of memory not to lack of gray matter but to some peculiarly evanescent quality or atmosphere pertaining to both study and membership and begin this brief sketch with the Ladies' union.

"The Ladies' Union held is first meeting on May 6th, 1895, with a good membership. Its objects were to promote social intercourse and to carry on the study of religion and literature. Catholic belief was taken as the foundation stone of the union in order to gain further knowledge concerning the questions of faith and history of the church. The study of Longfellow was also taken up and Evangeline and The Spanish Student were read.

"During the winter of '96 and '97, a more varied program was carried out. A series of papers on the great reformers was read, and a course in modern Catholic writers taken up.

"During this year it was decided to continue the study of Catholic belief and scripture, with current events at roll call, and to take up Longfellow's Hiawatha for special study. In connection with the latter the history of the discovery and settling of this part of the country and the legends of several of the Indian tribes were studied. One evening each month was devoted to travel, the object being to gain knowledge of our country by means of personal descriptions of places visited, illustrated with pictures, curiosities, souvenirs, etc.

"Committees were appointed to report from the various parishes in the city the number and size of their societies, their Sunday schools, libraries and general progress, also from the jail hospital and poor farm and to distribute books, magazines and C. T. S. literature.

"In 1898-99 the course of study was still literary, Catholic writers, Catholic belief, Catholic women and pertinent questions relating to religion were discussed. The program was a delightful one and some year I would suggest that we repeat it and renew the acquaintance of many well known literary names.

"The year of 1899-00 was spent in France. History pure and simple with a real program in covers—the first in the history of the club—and a list of references—a valuable adition to any outline of study. The Christian doctrine study was continued and current events introduced as a new feature. The officers were Mrs. Corcoran, president; Miss Miller, vice president, and Miss Kinney, secretary and treasurer, as during the previous year.

"Another change was in the name of the club. Probably the minutes show some reason for these numerous changes in names; to a casual observer they are most startling. Four names in ten years is as many as the most enterprising Chicago widow could hope for. In 1900 and 1901 the officers remained the same with the substitution of Mrs. Shields' name for first vice president and Miss Miller for second vice president. Rome was studied and a most delightful and helpful year it proved, as guided by our bishop we visited the various places of interest and learned to look beneath the surface and search out the real meaning in paintings and to know the true value in architecture.

The study of history the following season of 1902-3 led our willing feet to Holland. A new interest this year was the art side, which we discussed more thoroughly than ever before. During the year we had the privilege of listening to two lectures by Mrs. Seymour on Dutch art. These were of special interest as Mrs. Seymour had just returned from a trip abroad and her enthusiasm was delightfully contagious. Three evenings were given to the study of Catholic writers, many of whom were personally known to the bishop and the personal interest was thus deepened. Catholic belief was continued and a 'series in' readings and ceremonies of the church proved helpful. The officers for the year were Mrs. Corcoran, Mrs. Kennedy, Miss Shesgren and Miss Poirier, secretary.

"This brings us to the present year—a most eventful season for the club, for with a new name, a new place of meeting and a new topic for study, we seem to have taken a new lease of life. The changes at the school and church made it necessary to meet at the library. Next year we will occupy the parish club rooms in the new building. The new topic of study, the Bible, has proven most helpful and with the bishop's interpretations is most enjoyable. For the first time in the club's history we have had an honorary president, for at the end of last year our efficient president, who had served so long and faithfully, refused to accept a new term and it necessitated creating a new officer for her. Miss Poirier was elected to fill the vacancy and although inexperienced, has filled the position acceptably. Mrs. Stephans, Miss Stringer, Mrs. Daugherty and Miss McCourt have also served as officers.

"The past year was spent in the study of German life and history and a new feature, the weekly book review, has proven interesting. It remains for future committees to outline new courses and introduce new features, but let us hope that we will always remain the Bishop's club—under his protection and guidance."

MONTHLY SOCIALS.

Elks to Give Them In Place of Stag Events.

The stag socials of the Elks, which have been a prominent feature of their organization and of which their women friends were greatly envious, have been discontinued and in their place a social will be given the last Wednesday of each month, at which the wives, sisters and sweethearts of the members will be welcomed. The change instituted has received the unbiased approval of the women who are likely to be guests.

The first of these socials will be held Wednesday, May 25, at the Elks' hall, and a delightful program has been arranged for that evening. A vaudeville performance will be held the early part of the evening and at each of the socials a short dramatic performance of some sort will be given. This will help bring out the latent dramatic talent and train it for their annual performance. An informal dance will follow these Wednesday evenings, which will be looked forward to with pleasure.

MAN AS A MATCHMAKER

Has Conviction That Every Woman Pines to Marry.

It is the intimate conviction of every man that breathes that every unmarried woman wants to marry, says Nixola Greeley Smith in the New York World. Rosy, happy, ebullient in her celibacy as she may appear, he knows that her gayety is a huge bluff and that deep down in her innocent heart she is pining.

If after a breakfast table quarrel with his wife over her milliner's bill he glances from his morning newspaper, where he reads chronicles of domestic infelicity aired daily in the divorce courts to the array of befrilled and husbandless breadwinners that accompany him down town, his mind is filled with vague questions as to the reason of their detached condition and his heart with genuine if somewhat ingenuous pity.

Pretty girls, many of them, are they not? Gay, smiling, buoyant, with health and youthful spirits. And yet, he reflects sadly, in their hearts there is the gnawing canker of unwilling celibacy, a strong, even if unconscious longing for love in a cottage, a hopeless, husbandless discontent.

If this man, with all the instincts of a matchmaker, happens to know any attractive single woman well enough to question her as to the motives of her unmarried state, he will do so in the naive belief that she may possibly take him into her confidence and tell him the truth.

"Why don't you get married?" he asks. "You are young, pretty, charming. You have everything to make a man happy. Why don't you do it?"

Now, the girl may have very good reasons for not marrying, or she may have no reasons at all.

But, at any rate, she does not share the average man's belief that—for women—any marriage is better than none at all. Before she exchanges the certain content of her independent bachelorhood for the uncertain happiness of dependent matrimony she wants to be very sure of her emotions. She knows that love, a little word of one syllable, cannot always be stretched through the experience of polysyllabic matrimony, and she would like to be sure before sentencing herself for life, that she feels an enduring affection and not one born of propinquity and the sympathy of a moment. In brief, she asks too many questions of an emotion which lasts longest when no questions are asked.

Because women nowadays are not apt to take their emotions for granted —which after all is the only way to take them—they are slower to marry.

But once married, they are apt to be satisfied with their lot.

We look for the man, nowadays, not for a man, as our grandmothers were apt to do, and even the matchmaking masculine person who asks questions ought to realize that he is harder to find and grant us a little more time to make up our minds.

COMPANY A. BALL.

Annual Event Is Held at the Armory.

The annual ball of Company A, of the "third regiment, Minnesota National Guard, was held last evening at the Armory. The decorations were, of course, in the national colors and in the many flags draped about the hall and the large flag suspended from the ceiling with the many yards of bunting, the desired military effect was achieved. The programs bore the flag and the date in blue. Flaaten's orchestra played delightfully and a large number watched the affair from the balcony. The committees were:

THE EVENING STORY.

THE DOG UNDER THE TABLE

By F. H. Lancaster.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"What is it you think that you can never forgive?" From her position on the hearth rug the business woman spoke patiently to the girl in the deep chair. She was a strong, slight woman, and wore strong glasses, with heavy gold rims to them. The cork grip for constant use betrayed the fact that the business woman looked on life with near-sighted eyes. The girl before her looked on life with lovely eyes—though, just at present, they were rather marred by weeping. The girl sobbed, and the woman repeated her patient query:

"What is it you can never forgive?"

"Oh, Molly, Molly! He was positively brutal."

"It is not like Pack to be brutal. He must be"—she stopped and looked at her watch. "I shouldn't decide hastily about it, Madge, if I were you. Jack is a pretty good sort. It is not safe to expect perpetual top-notch from anybody. Good-by." But out on the street she completed the sentence prudence had checked in the parlor. "He must be bothered about money matters—badly bothered." She walked slowly past his uptown office, then turned and walked resolutely back to it. The elevator sat her down before a ground-glass door. The boy in the front office took her card, went a few steps, hesitated, and came back to her. "The orders were sharp, miss. He was not to be interrupted on any account." The eyes behind the strong glasses grew grave.

"I will take in my own card," she said to the boy; tried the handle of the door and, as it yielded, walked quietly into the private office of Mr. John Holden. A voice, harsh with indignation, greeted her roughly:

"Didn't I tell you, sir, that I was not to be interrupted?"

Molly came around to the front of his high desk, leaned one shoulder against the upper corner, and fell to flicking at the dust with the brim of her soft hat.

"Molly!"

"Yes—I heard you were mixed in your matter"—she stopped his start with a gesture—"It's all right. I've plugged up the leak." Then, significantly, "Cotton?"

"Yes." He hesitated, looked at her, and took the plunge.

"I've been dancing to forbidden music; now I'm going to pay the forbidden fiddler." He spoke with grim self-disgust. Molly went on flicking lazily at the dust.

"How deep do you go?"

"Down to ruin."

"Sure? Let's have the figures before we pass on to the dramatic." She paused, and added, "There are others."

John Holden bent his head.

"Don't I know it!"

"How near can you come to it?" Molly persisted.

"By standing my credit until it cracks, within five thousand."

He could not see the fierce relief that leaped into those anguish-stricken eyes behind the glasses. A black hat dropper softly to his desk, a leisurely hand went to her pocket, her tone was coolly matter-of-fact:

"That three thousand I came into is still in the bank. Can't we mortgage the old house on Royal for two?" She opened her check book and reached a pen from his desk.

"What are you going to do? What old house? Your home? Wait, Molly, Molly! You must be mad to think of such a thing."

"I'm not mad, most noble Festus."

"Don't you know I wouldn't do that—I couldn't do that?"

She filled in the check while he expostulated.

"Don't be absurd, Jack. How many times have you pulled me out of a hole?"

"I never have—you don't get into holes. Well, but that's not worth speaking of. By the Lord, I won't touch that. I've got some manhood left—in spite of cotton."

She blotted the check, and put it under a paper-weight. "Don't take yourself so tragic"—her voice thickened. She cleared it and again added: "There are others."

And Jack again bent his head. He had indeed given hostages to fortune. "I should have thought of that before," he muttered, humiliated. Molly, leaning against the desk, while she glanced over some papers she had taken from her pocket, quoted softly:

"The moving finger writes, and having writ,
Moves on; not all your piety or wit
Shall lure it back to cancel half a line,
Nor all your tears wash out a word of it."

"Here's the deeds, Jack. You get the mortgage in shape and I'll drop in to sign up as I pass this evening. Oh, I know it's bad; but you can give me your note. See here, old fellow, don't take it like that. Don't I know how you feel?"

"Molly, Molly! How did you ever get hold of it?"

"Why, Madge called me in this morning. She was a bit cut up. It seems that when you left last evening you forgot—something. I—er—inferred that you were badly bothered, and the—er—influence naturally suggested cotton."

"Molly," he insisted, following her to the door, "I'm not worth all this—"

She laughed: "Don't say how much you are worth until the post office site is selected. You may get a fancy price yet for your rat's nest."

Jack started happily. "Why, I hadn't thought of that." Then, sobering, "I'm not worth the risk you are taking, dear girl."

Molly's fingers tightened on the door-knob.

"Oh, I don't know," she said, hurriedly. "You are a pretty good sort, Jack." She steadied, and added: "You won't forget about the state of things on Rampart. It seems silly, but Madge is really distressed."

"Poor little girl," he said, tenderly, and Molly, safe behind her glasses, went forth to receive with steady patience the severe remarks of a long-waiting, exasperated employer. All during the day she turned the other cheek, and yet other cheeks. She could not afford to lose her job now. On the way home she went around by the clerk's office and secured copying to be done at night. She was getting ready to pay off that mortgage. Jack's note was as good as gold, but life is uncertain, and she would relish a bit of extra work just at this time.

Mollys mother objected to the night-work. She preferred her daughter's pleasant society to the few dollars to be earned by the drudgery.

"Surely, Molly, it is not necessary, with your salary and the legacy—"

"Oh, mamma, dear, you don't understand," Molly explained, humorously; "I've been going in for frills."

But mamma did understand—enough to silence further protest. A mother's eyes are not to be baffled by even the most baffling of gold-rimmed glasses. So, without being plagued about it, Molly took up her load and carried it true.

It was several weeks later that she encountered Jack and Madge on a corner, where they were waiting for a went end car. They were in a joyous mood and greeted her gaily. She gave them as gay as they sent, and went home to her conying. She had been at work transcripts for an hour before it occurred to her to apply the salve of time to her ugly wound.

"Why, you see," she said then to her inmost soul, "it is up to me to be, gratefully, the dog under the table."

A CAMPAIGN PRIZE PUZZLE

Presented By a Duluth Man to President Roosevelt.

Washington, May 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—George F. Wieland, of Duluth, was introduced to President Roosevelt this morning by Congressman J. Adam Bede. Mr. Wieland has patented a campaign prize puzzle and he presented his first complete design to Mr. Roosevelt. It represents the president astride of the G. O. P. elephant. A tube runs through the elephant's trunk and the scheme is to try to blow the rider off, but although there may be lots of "hot air" and wind expended, the rider of the elephant cannot be dismounted.

Below the design will appear the legend, suggested by Congressman Bede. "They can do lots of blowing against Teddy but it only gives him a lift; they can't get him off."

When moving why not engage covered vans. It costs no more.

MAKE GOOD FIGHT

Commercial Leaguers Show Up Well Against the Professionals.

Lowe Fans Seven Men Although Hit Pretty Hard.

In a slugging match which was marked by fast, clean fielding, the White Sox defeated the picked team from the Commercial league yesterday afternoon at the baseball park, by the score of 15 to 5.

The amateurs surprised even their friends by the hard battle they put up, and the game was the closest yet played by the Duluth team, with the exception of that against the Minneapolis Jawas. Lowe pitched a great game for the amateurs, and had he been accorded the support given Gehring he would have made a much better showing. While the White Sox landed on him for sixteen hits, ten of which were two-baggers and one a home run, many of them were made after the side should have been retired and had been given an extension of life by a fielder's error. Lowe succeeded in making seven of the professionals saw the air.

Gehring had the amateurs at his mercy in all but two innings. In the sixth inning, with the score at 7 to 0, he let up and allowed two men to get to their bases. Wagman then came to bat and lined out a timely two-bagger scoring two runs and coming in later on a hit by Rondo.

Once again in the ninth inning Gehring allowed the amateurs to find him. Rondo started off with a pretty single to center field, and Peterson got four bad ones after spoiling about ten strikes with foul tips. Wernham bunted a swift one and Quillan instinctively ran in toward the plate thinking a slow grounder was coming. The ball was a short infield fly, however, and Quillan was unable to recover himself in time to reach it, although it fell beside the third bag. This left the bases full. Honnold, who took Campbell's place, fanned and Menelce scored Rondo with a pretty single to left field. He was caught at second, however, on Lowe's liner to Ball, after Peterson had scored.

In the other seven innings the all-stars never had a look-in and secured but two hits. Gehring struck out fourteen men altogether and assisted in retiring four others.

The White Sox thought they had an easy mark when the game started and Corrigan after receiving a base on balls started to steal second. He was nipped by Wagman, and when Ball tried to turn the same trick, he was also caught at the second bag.

In the second inning O'Leary got a nice single and went to third on Zink's two-bagger. Martin walked and Quillan brought the first two in with a pretty single. While Gehring was at bat Martin started to steal home and Lowe shot the ball to the catcher. Gehring bunted it and Martin scored while the Duluth pitcher was caught at first. Martin started off with a two-bagger in the four. Quillan failed to beat out a bunt and Wilkes fanned. Gehring drove one up against the left field fence, scoring Martin and came in himself on Corrigan's single.

In the fifth Randall got a double while O'Leary and Zink singled, scoring Randall. Martin fanned, Quillan forced O'Leary at the plate, Wilkes was given a base on balls, and Gehring drove a long fly to center field, which Menelce gathered in.

The White Sox got two more in the sixth on an error by Wernham, a sacrifice by Ball, Randall's double, and an error by Rondo.

In the eighth the White Sox got into the game in earnest. Corrigan led off with a double and Ball singled, Randall went out on an infield fly and O'Leary sent an easy one to Lowe. Zink was given a life on Dennis' error and Martin scored Corrigan with a clean single. Quillan allowed Zink and Ball to cross the plate while the fielders were chasing his two bagger. Then Joe Wilkes who had been fanning so consistently that the usual "knockers" in the grand stand were commencing to roast him, showed how he used to do it last year by lifting one of Lowe's well meant efforts over the right field fence for a home run. Gehring ended the agony by sawing at three good ones.

The fans were pleased at the showing made by the White Sox and expressed no little surprise at the perfect game with the exception of the sixth inning, when Martin made an excusable error on a wild throw to the plate. The amateurs played a less perfect fielding game, but lack of speed was not one of their faults They handled the ball like professionals. Dennis on first and Wernham on third were the chief offenders. Dennis fumbled two easy grounders and his errors were costly ones. Werham dropped an easy fly through over anxiety.

The batting of Wegman and Rondo, the fielding of Menelce and Patrick, and the pitching of Lowe were the features of the game.

About 300 fans, a large number of whom were women witnessed the game.

In Trouble With the City of St. Louis.

St. Louis, May 11.—The trouble between Mayor Wells and the management of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition over the Park restoration bond which the exposition promised to give the city in return for the free use of a part of Forest Park as the exposition site, threatens to grow serious and to involve the prospects of the world's fair itself.

Two bonds which have been submitted to the city by President D. R. Francis and the exposition company have been accepted by the city council and vetoed by Mayor Wells.

Judge Franklin Ferris, general counsel for the exposition, yesterday frankly said to Mayor Wells: "The World's Fair management is unable to furnish a bond such as the city requires for the restoration of Forest park." This is expected to bring matters to a speedy crisis.

It is inferred from the mayor's remarks and the present status of the bond matter that the council is considering the advisability of taking legal action against the exposition.

DOCTOR CARRIED AWAY IN HIS OWN AMBULANCE.

St. Louis, May 11.—A bar of iron fell from the top of the Ferris wheel at the world's fair yesterday, striking a laborer on the head and killing him instantly. Dr. Edward Lewis responded from the emergency hospital in an ambulance, and upon arriving found the laborer dead and refused to take him to the hospital, suggesting that the morgue wagon be called. This angered the laborer's 100 fellow workmen, who insisted that the body should be taken in the ambulance. Dr. Lewis was knocked down, beaten and kicked by the crowd until it became necessary for him to be carried away in his own ambulance.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN DULUTH

TO SUBSCRIBERS:
It is important when desiring the address of your paper changed, to give both old and new addresses.

DULUTH'S SUMMER SCHOOL.

The outlook is promising for a very large attendance at the summer school to be held in Duluth beginning on June 20 and closing on July 29. Already there is much inquiry from prospective attendants as to board and rooms. The school will be held at the state normal and President Bohannan, who will conduct it, has made arrangements with state and county superintendents that the teachers of St. Louis, Carlton, Lake, Cook and Itasca counties will be given special invitations. The Herald yesterday gave the names of the instructors in the different departments and all other details.

No doubt many of the public school teachers of the counties named will consider it a great privilege that they are enabled to attend a summer school in Duluth under such favorable conditions. Perhaps no similar institution ever organized in the state began its labors with such an efficient array of teaching talent. Then the cool and charming weather that is almost certain to prevail between the dates named wil have a tendency to make the work and study of the students a pleasure.

Those teachers from outside the city who desire to enter will find a list of rooms and boarding places with President Bohannon and all those citizens who have such accommodations to offer at reasonable rates should make the fact known to the president.

Every citizen of Duluth should do what he can to promote the welfare and success of this enterprice. It should and will no doubt become a permanent institution which will not only be of great benefit to the city, but to the city's children and to those of the entire district.

COLLEGE TRAINING DOES HELP.

That a college education is a help to the successful man or that the successful man usually secures a college training in shown in a recent compilation made by the United States bureau of education. The figures were prepared by William T. Smith, chancellor of the Randolph-Macon system, and have been verified by Commissioner W. T. Harris. The advance sheet says:

The editors of "Who's Who in America" have rendered the country a service by inducing more than 10,000 of the men now living in the United States who are "most notable in all departments of usefulness and reputable endeavor" to report their education. These men have won enviable distinction and the facts they give will help answer the questions, "Does education help one to success?" and "What amount of school training helps most?"

According to the last census there are in the United States 14,794,493 males over 30 years old. The United States bureau of education estimates that these are divided educationally as follows:

Class 1. Without education	1,757,023
Class 2. With only common school training outside of organized schools.	12,054,335
Class 3. With regular high school training added	657,432
Class 4. With college or higher education added	325,613

Omitting the few persons under 30 years old, the report from 10,704 notables shows: Without education, none; self-taught, 24; home-taught, 278; with common school training only, 1066; with high school training, 1627; with college training, 7709, of whom 6129 were college graduates. That is: From the 1,757,023 of Class 1 no notable reported.

From the 12,054,335 of Class 2 came 1368, one for every 8,812

1. That from 1800 to 1870 the uneducated boy in the United States failed entirely to become so notable in any department of usefulness and reputable endeavor as to attract the attention of the Who's Who editors, and that only 24 self-taught men succeeded.

2. That a boy with only a common school education had, in round numbers, one chance in 9000.

3. That a high school training increased this chance nearly 22 times.

4. That college education added gave the young man about ten times the chance of a high school boy, and 200 times the chance of the boy whose training stopped with the common school.

5. That the A. B. graduate was pre-eminently successful and that the self-educated man was inconspicuous.

From the nature of the case it cannot be claimed that these classifications are exact, but they are based upon the fullest statistics ever obtained, and the necessary estimates have been made by government experts. It is also doubtless true that other circumstances contributed to the success of these trained men, but after all reasonable allowances are made, the figures force the conclusion that the more school training the American boy of that period had, the greater were his chances of distinction. How will it be in this century?

It is unnecessary to extend this inquiry to women. Education is practically her only door to eminence.

This report is important only in the fact that it confirms a general belief that has been slightly disturbed of late by the utterances of a few individuals like Schwab, who have reached the mistaken conclusion that because they had been able to make a financial success without higher education, such education was a waste of time.

THE SOCIALIST PROGRAM.

The increase of the Socialist vote in the city of Milwaukee and all through Wisconsin has started many inquiries as to the cause thereof, and in a recent issue of the Outlook is found an outline of the platform of the Milwaukee Socialists. One cause for the increase of this vote in Wisconsin is no doubt due to the fact that the state contains a large number of Germans who come to this country pregnant with socialistic ideas, and the recent trend of political affairs in this country has led them to renew their allegiance to that political dogma.

The Outlook finds that the Milwaukee Socialists (strange to say) do not expect to abolish civil government and private property at one blow. Such was never the purpose of the party anywhere. They are striving for reforms in municipal government substantially identical with the objects sought and attained in the British provincial cities where municipal ownership has met with great success.

The Minneapolis Tribune, discussing the matter, says: "Besides some obvious reforms, like regulation of street car and gas service, employment of organized labor, municipal court reform and abolition of the contract system, nearly all the objects sought by the Milwaukee Socialists involve raising money by taxation to spend unproductively. In fine, the platform of the Milwaukee Socialists is a platform of municipal bankruptcy."

If this is so it is important, because we all want to fight against bankruptcy, as long as possible. But let us analyze this platform and see how much real evil there is in it.

1. Providing work for the unemployed.

Duluth already has a free employment bureau, and surely it cannot result in harm to bring worker and employer together. Time was when both the city of Duluth and St. Louis county provided work for idle workingmen and it was not only considered a necessity, but a duty.

2. Public coal and wood yard and ice yard.

Whenever in large cities monopoly would endeavor to control these necessities of the poor, and place the prices so high as to be beyond their reach, why should not the municipality interfere in the interests of its citizens? Most cities already provide a market for foodstuffs—why not for wood, coal and ice?

3. Employment of attorneys by the city to conduct cases for the poor.

What this means is not plain, but it is a practice in almost every state for the people to employ legal talent for the poor man charged with crime. Is the principle wrong?

4. Free medical service and regulation of the cost of medicine.

Free medical service is already provided by public and private charity. If physicians were employed to guard the health of the citizens instead of doctoring them after they are sick, there would be little need of regulating the price of medicine because little would be needed.

5. Public crematory.

This is something that should be provided by every city.

6. Public baths in all wards.

7. Street closets.

8. Plumbing and sewerage to be done by city on installment plan.

9. Open-air gymnasiums.

All these things are essential to preservation of the public health and would in reality prove paying investments for any city. The public health should be the first consideration everywhere. Many poor people are deprived of the use of sewers and pure water because unable to pay the cost of plumbing. Why would it not benefit the municipality to make these improvements and take its pay on the installment plan?

10. Care by city of all trees on streets.

11. Free school books.

12. Erection of labor temple.

13. Free concerts.

14. Raise in teachers' salaries.

Not one of these demands is unreasonable. Every one is praiseworthy. Nearly all have already been adopted in this country. The only practical means of securing shade trees in streets is through city supervision. It is as reasonable to ask for a labor temple for the elevation of mankind as for an armory for the training of men to keep the public peace. A general raise in the salaries of public school teachers is an imperative need.

What, then, is there objectionable about this platform? The principal objection seems to be the word socialism, which has the same effect on some people that a red rag has on a vicious bull.

FIRST CATCH YOUR HARE.

Even if the Russian troops are retreating into the interior as rapidly as their legs will carry them, the Muskovite officers and newspapers continue to make "heap big talk." The latest outbreak of a boastful character comes from the Moskovskaia Viedomosti, which details a program which Russia should insist upon when making terms of peace with Japan. The four clauses of its peace program follow:

1. Korea should for once and all be annexed to Russia, the more because it has already twice asked for annexation and the protection of Russia, while its government is now allied with the enemies of Russia. The government and the people, having suffered so much, look to Russia. Moreover, the territory of Korea enters like a wedge into the Russian possessions.

2. The island of Kiu-siu should be occupied and fortified as an advanced post of the new Russian coast, which is extensive and for the most part without defence.

3. Formosa should be given back to its legitimate proprietor, China, and Russia should retain on it only a port convenient for a coaling station and a fortified shelter for its fleet.

4. Japan should have imposed on it such a war indemnity (comprising in it her war ships) that for decades this troublesome neighbor might be deprived of all thoughts of military adventure. It is of no consequence that Japan has not much money; Russia can take from it its state bonds. Let the Japanese pay for at least half a century and be reminded of the war which they and not Russia began.

The island of Kiu-siu, mentioned in the second clause, is a portion of the Japanese empire, the southernmost island, and thereon are situated Nagasaki, Moji, Sabeso, the naval station, and other important places. The Russian paper is modest. Why not, while at it, demand annexation of the whole Japanese empire?

Possibly the Russians have reason for this feeling of assurance that they will crush Japan in the end. Perhaps this is not all bluff and bluster, such as Spanish officials and newspapers used toward the United States during our little difficulty. But, considering the present situation of affairs, it would seem to be at least a little bit premature.

The Japanese might reasonably offer the old-time advice: "First catch your hare."

STATE OR FEDERAL CONTROL.

The proposition first given public prominence by W. J. Bryan, that the corporations should be controlled by federal authority and thus taken out of the hands of the different states, has found endorsement in many quarters, and much as it may be opposed by those Democrats of the old school who insist upon state's rights and individualism, the federal control of corporations is bound to come because the different states are incapable of exercising proper restrictions.

Judge Peter Grosscup, of the United States circuit court, in his address before the Grant club, of Des Moines, last week, advanced the idea that the day had gone by for state control of corporations. It was a matter of national interest, and the time had come for "an American corporate policy."

This may be disagreeable medicine to many Americans, but they will finally be compelled to take it. According to the figures which Judge Grosscup gives in his address, one-quarter of all of the property of the country is owned today by corporations. Practically every man in the United States is in some way directly connected with corporations. The idea of allowing some state like New Jersey to grant these concerns immunity from punishment for unjust and illegal acts in return for a certain tax, to grant them power to unjustly rob not only the people of one state, but of all the states, is simply monstrous. The people of the other states will not stand for it very much longer. And the only alternative is absolute federal control.

This may reduce the importance of the states and their legislatures. But what of it? Why would not the individual prefer to live under just federal control than under impossible state control?

To make this change would necessitate a constitutional amendment, but there is reason to believe the people are ready for it. For the humblest man cannot fail to note the utter failure of the different states to properly deal with corporations. But to extend the powers of the federal government and then let it use this power to no better purpose with regard to the trusts than it does its present powers would avail the people little. Whatever may be done there must first be the will to do it.

THE FIELD SURVEY

Dr. Austin Flint, a New York criminologist, says that left-handedness is a concomitant of crime. If he should get what he deserved it would be a back-handed left-hander. Too many people now-a-days are engaged in the task of discovering things that are not so.

Gen. Miles, as a presidential candidate, is too peaceful for this militant republic. The American people appear to prefer a man who will shoot a fleeing soldier in the back, and boast about it, to one who can gain victories by bloodless methods.

The question whether a married woman should earn wages or not depends much upon whether she can live comfortably and has plenty to do without. The question whether womankind should earn wages ought to be a matter entirely of individual preference, for woman as well as man should be free to do as she wills. But when a women does go to work, she should insist on sufficient pay so that somebody else is not compelled to assist in her support.

A business man of Benton Harbor, Mich., with a church connection, writes a warm letter to a local paper, concerning the refusal of the Methodist Episcopal board of foreign missions to accept the bequest of $80,000 from the late Willis S. Cooper, who lost his life in the Iroquois fire at Chicago, "whose only questionable act was in being found dead in a theater." He advises the board to "change its diet from yellow-legged chicken to one of calf brains." Now, hold your horses. Possibly there is method in the board's madness. Perhaps it is fishing for a larger contribution from some capitalist who hates the theater because other people enjoy themselves there while he cannot.

Speaking of the probability that Mr. Cleveland will next write an article on the trusts and what he did not do to them, the Pittsburg Dispatch says: "Among thinking men not one particle of luster would be removed from the record of Attorney General Knox by having American political history written as the data demand." No; it would be an exceedingly difficult matter to squeeze blood from a turnip or rub luster off a rusted record.

In discussing this present war, people should not lose sight of the fact that during the Boxer uprising when the troops of the different nations marched on the Chinese capital, the Japanese soldiers were inside the walls four hours ahead of any others, and when a brutalized American soldier stuck his bayonet into a Chinese child and tossed it up into the air, it was the Japanese who interposed and put a quietus on that method of warfare.

There is one thing certain: The people of the United States learned a great deal more about the government of Cuba by Spain than they now learn about United States government of Porto Rico and the Philippines.

Man would not get the opinion that every single woman is dying to marry were it not for the fact that so many, by word or act, give him so to understand.

There is not much danger of a "yellow peril," but the present war will teach the imperialists of the world to treat the Orientals with a little more respect and consideration in future.

HOTEL GOSSIP

C. H. Carhart, of Grand Marais, register of deeds of Cook county, it at the St. Louis, having come in this morning on the Bon Ami. He says that although the winter was hard up in that part of the country there was enough to go around in the way of supplies, and that there was no shortage.

"While we were pretty well shut in, we always had enough to eat," said Mr. Carhart. "They had us reported short two or three times I believe, but it was not altogether true. Grand Marais will have a pretty progressive appearance soon now, for some cottages are to be built, fifteen or twenty. Business is pretty good and we hope for a good season.

"Politics are not very warm up there yet, but there has been some work done. I think Cook county will be for Dunn and I am certain that I am for him and will do whatever I can to help his campaign."

Mr. Carhart has been a delegate to the convention a number of times and will probably be selected to serve again for the convention at St. Paul, June 30. He is manager at Grand Marais for Charles Johnson's general mercantile store.

"Here's a ticket that I have been having a lot of fun with," remarked a ticket seller at the Union depot, as he exhibited a long green coupon ticket with many punch holes and stampings of the word "Spoiled" across its face.

"Sold a Swedish lumberman a ticket to New York a while ago and in about fifteen minutes he came back with some soldier in uniform who told me that the fellow had been stopping at a cheap hotel up town and on going back there after buying the ticket had found a telegram saying that his mother had died up on the range and asking him to come up there.

"Ticket was good only starting on the day it was issued and the soldier wanted to know if I would not give the fellow back his money. I said I would certainly, but I wanted to see the telegram. The soldier said they did not have it with them, but that it had been left up town.

"Did I have to see it? I said I guessed I would have to as I did not care to make any refunds without some documents to prove that kind of a story. The soldier was a little put out, but I stuck to the point and pretty soon he and the Swede went away. Not long after the Swede came back by himself, without the telegram, and asked for his money. I let him have it. I did not care about letting him have it when the soldier boy was with him for the soldier was lying about the telegram and I knew it.

"I suppose the Swede had a chance to enlist, maybe, and they wanted to get his money back for him before they got him in the ranks, or maybe he would not go in until he did get back his money. I did not care to put anyone to any trouble, but I hate to have any one come around here and lie about something when there is not the slightest necessity for it.

"We're not here to gull the public nor to keep anybody out of their money if they can't use a ticket they have bought, but at the same time we are not on deck for the purpose of letting every Tom, Dick and Harry work us to the queen's taste. But I'll bet it'll be a long time before the shadow of that lumberman's light hair darkens the Rialto in New York."

Charles MacDonald, an actor who was recently at one of the hotels, told a remarkable incident of contrast in the lives of two well known actors who died within the past few weeks. One of these was Shridan Tupper, who was well known as one of he best men in the support of Roland Reed before that actor's death and later in "David Harum" with W. H. Crane. Tupper was a genial but thrifty man whose salary was comparatively nominal. The amount he may have drawn each week, might, for the sake of illustration only, he placed at $50 per wek, out of which he had to pay all his hotel bills, as all actors do.

He was a man of family and kept them in nice comfortable style at their home in New York state all the year round on what he could keep out of his salary after paying his road expenses. He owned the home in which the folks lived and kept it up in very trim style. When he died he left the family comfortably well off, with the house to live in and some five hundreds in the bank to fall back on, besides some insurance.

The other was William Bevere, otherwise well known as "Big Bill" Devere. He was a large man, a fine comedian and is supposed to have made a salary of at least $100 per week. He took the part of the editor in Hoyt's "A Black Sheep" and made the part a great success owing to his homely and rural appearance, which was nevertheless very substantial and kindly. He was the sort of man whose appearance would be a guarantee of his fun loving and friendly nature. He was as much in demand for his companionship as he was popular in the parts he played. And the funiest part of it all is that he is said to have been a country editor before he went on the stage and gave a likeness of one behind the footlights.

He liked to have everything good, and spent his money with great freedom. Anyone who wanted to borrow could always get a "loan from "Big Bill", whose heart was as soft as anyone's could well be.

He died with practically nothing for his family, however.

Smoothing Trouble of Sea.

Harry Lehr happened to talk on sea voyaging, and he said:

"Once crossing the Atlantic, a tremendous row arose among the sailors. They fought down in the forecastle like a pack of wild beasts. Luncheon was going on at the time, and the first officer left the table to see if he could quell the disturbance.

"He had only been gone a little while when the hubbub began to die down. Every thing was quiet when he returned. The captain called across the saloon to him in an approving tone:

"'Things seem to be smoother now.'

"'Yes,' returned the first officer, 'we have ironed the sailors, sir.'"

A NEW PRINCIPLE IN MEDICAL SCIENCE.

For years it has been the practice of medical men to treat patients suffering from piles by local, external applications. These treatments give but temporary relief, but have never affected a positive cure.

After months of research and study, accompanied by actual experience with various patients, Dr. C. A. Perrin arrived at a positive conclusion as to the exact action of the various parts of the bowel system, under different conditions, and when subjected to various prescriptions.

He finally prepared that wonderful internal remedy known as DR. PERRIN'S PILE SPECIFIC, which is put up in bottles, retailing at all reliable drug stores for $1.00 each. This internal remedy has been on the market for the past ten years, and in all of that time there has been but three cases where a positive cure has not been effected.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific is sold under a positive guarantee by the druggist making the sale, to refund the full purchase price, providing the remedy fails to cure. This is the absolute proof of its merit. Any man or woman who suffers from blind, bleeding, itching or internal piles can try this internal remedy with the absolute certainty that it will cost nothing unless it cures. Here is what one sufferer says of this wonderful remedy:

DR C. A. Perrin, Helena, Mont.—I wish to thank you for the cure your wonderful medicine has done for me. I had the piles some five years, and under the advice of a doctor had them removed by the knife and felt free for awhile, but they returned and I at once got a bottle of your Perrin's Pile Specific and one bottle has entirely cured me, and I am as good as I ever was.
Yours truly,
JACK SULLIVAN,
October 16, 1902. Chicago.

Better get a bottle of your druggist today and get relief from present and future suffering.

DR. PERRIN MEDICAL CO., HELENA, MONT.

INTEREST IN INDIANS

Tepees and Other Things Attract Visitors at World's Fair.

St. Louis, May 11.—Much interest has been manifested by visitors to the World's Fair, in the construction of the tepees, lodges and wigwams of the Indian village. As the different kinds of living quarters have been put up by the Indians, curious visitors have congregated in crowds. It was announced today that the Indian village exhibit will be opened on June 1, and a full day's program will be carried out. At first it was intended that the opening would not be of length but because of the general interest in the Indians, the program will be extended in details. Speeches will be made by celebrated chiefs, by Commissioner of Indian affairs Jones and others. Geronimo, the famous Apache chief, who is now a prisoner of war at Ft. Sill, I. T., is expected to arrive within a few days.

Arrangements are being made for the re-organization of a school on the World's Fair grounds for instructing about seventy-five non-commissioned officers of the Filipino scouts in the English language.

The formal opening of the Indian building will be held upon July 23, the decision having been reached today. In the evening, a reception will be tendered the state and foreign commissioners.

Holland's art exhibit was informally opened to the public today. The exhibit includes a beautiful display of pottery and delft ware and occupies nine rooms in the art palace. The collection of water colors, is said to be one of the finest ever exhibited.

A large consignment of famous old box trees, trimmed to the shape of animals, birds and other queer forms, arrived today at the British pavilion, together with about twenty varieties of old English ivies. The trees will be set out around the British pavilion, but is is undetermined whether to use the ivies in decorating the exterior of the pavilion or place them on exhibition in the palace of horticulture. The question will be settled within a few days.

DEPUTIES PLEASED

By Announcement of Prospective Royal Child.

Rome, May 11.—The president of the house announced in the chamber of deputies today that he had received an offi lal letter from the prefect of the royal palace, stating that Queen Helena expects to give birth to a child in September. The deputies thereupon rose from their seats, applauded and charged the president to present the congratulations of the chamber to the king and queen.

There is considerable interest in the accouchement and as their majesties have no son, it is hoped that their next child will be a boy.

NO REQUEST

Has Been Made For Gunboat at Newchwang.

London, May 11.—Earl Percy, under foreign secretary, replying to a question in the house of commons today, said the British consul at Newchwang had not asked for a gunboat for the protection of British interests there in view of the possibility of an attack by brigands. Newchwang being in the theater of war, his majesty's government some time ago took the only step possible in requesting the belligerents to safeguard the interests of British subjects. The Russian government promised that all precautions would be taken. Should the Russians retire from Newchwang, he (the secretary) did not suppose there would be any protection for British life or property against brigandage until the entry of the Japanese into the town.

GROWTH OF CITIES

Government Estimate of Recent Increases In Population.

Duluth's Percentage Is Larger Than Other Cities In State.

The census bureau at Washington has issued Bulletin No. 7, giving estimates of population of the larger cities of the United States for the years 1901, 1902 and 1903. The table showing the growth of the leading cities of Minnesota during these years together with the figures for 1890 and 1900 is given below:

	Census, 1890.	Census, 1900.	Decennial increase.
Minneapolis	164,738	202,718	37,980
St. Paul	133,156	163,065	29,909
Stillwater	11,260	12,318	1,058
Winona	18,208	19,714	1,506
Total	369,315	461,383	92,068
	1901.	1902.	1903.
Minneapolis	206,516	210,314	214,112
St. Paul	166,056	169,047	172,023

Duluth has the largest acreage of any of the cities, the figures being as follows: Duluth, 43,116.8; Mankato, 4,321.4; Minneapolis, 34,166.6; St. Paul, 35,483; Stillwater, 2,318.8; Winona, 6,250.

This shows that while Minneapolis increased its population by 3798, St. Paul by 2991 and Duluth by 1476, during the past year, Duluth had by far the greatest proportionate growth, leading all other Minnesota cities in the matter of percentage.

City Marshal of Belle Fourche Exonerated In Couch Suit.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Belle Fourche—The jury in the case of James Couch vs. Lee Brooks, the city marshal and his bondsmen, Edgar Giles and H. T. Adams, returned a verdict exonerating the marshal. It was a case for $20,000 damages. When Couch was being held a prisoner in the city jail the marshal is alleged to have turned upon him the water hose for certain misconduct.

Elk Point—Mrs. S. G. Thornton, wife of a prominent merchant, is dead of peritonitis. She was 39.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Ericson have returned from a month's visit at Fort Scott, Kas., taken largely on account of Mr. Erickson's health. He is somewhat improved.

Sioux alls—From what has been learned, those thousands of persons who intend to attempt to secure homes on the 416,000-acre tract of the Rosebud reservation will have to be constantly on their guard against unscrupulous real estate men, some of whom are said to be sending out circular letters in which they assert that they can guarantee first choice (for a certain consideration) in the selection of quarter sections.

Applicants for an opportunity to try their luck at drawing one of the farms should secure information solely from the officials of the United States land office at Chamberlain, or from other officers of the government.

Senator Kitteredge announces that the drawing will take place at the United States land office at Chamberlain, and that a registration bureau will be established at some point near the tract to be opened, probably at Bonesteel. When the proper time comes, those wishing to register can also do so at Chamberlain.

At the request of the local police, the second Carrie Nation, in the person of Mrs. Louise Victoria, has shaken the dust of Sioux Falls from her feet. Mrs. Victoria arrived in the city several days ago. She alleges that she is a daughter of "Lucky" Baldwin, of California. Mrs. Victoria did not attempt to do any "joint smashing," but finally took to making speeches on the business streets. The police then decided to interfere.

The Federated Order of Cowboys, recently chartered under the laws of South Dakota, has just instituted lodge No. 1 in this city with a good membership. It is the intention to push the organization to all parts of the state and ultimately to all portions of the Northwest.

Pierre—Capt. Seneschal's new packet boat at Fort Pierre has been placed in the water and the upper works are being constructed while the machinery is being placed in position. It is expected she will be ready by the first of next month.

Farmers living northwest of Blunt have called a meeting for the purpose of putting in a farmers' telephone line from Blunt northeast into Sully county.

The Grain Valley Chief, published at the county seat of Buffalo county, strenuously advocates a division of Sunday hours between the churches and the gun club of that town. As it is, the worshippers find it hard to keep their minds on things spiritual, and at the same time wonder which of their favorites is leading in the score at the practice shoot which they hear in progress just back of the church.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—Rev. E. S. Shaw, field secretary of Fargo college, announces that he has accepted the call from the Congregational church at Crookston and will assume his duties as pastor about July 15.

Col. Lounsberry has received a telegraphic order from the department at Washington to resume his duties as special agent of the land department in this state.

The movement of Fargoans to improve the city park is growing, and a mass meeting will be held Thursday evening at which plans will be submitted. The old river bed would make an ideal lake, and facilities for boating and bathing in the summer time and skating in the winter could be easily provided.

DRAWING TEACHES MEET.

Milwaukee, May 11.—Social events occupied the greater portion of the program of the Western drawing teachers' convention. One session was held. Hugo Froehlich, of New York, gave an illustrated talk of "Art Side of Manual Training" and William T. Baudon, of Normal, Ill., read a paper on "Manual Training in Graded Schools." Mrs. Ina Hood Clark, of Milwaukee, read a paper on "Handicraft or Elementary Manual Training."

TO PRESERVE NEUTRALITY.

St. Petersburg, May 1.—The Swedish-Norwegian minister in an interview today explained that the mining of the Port of Slite, on the island of Gothland, and other Swedish ports was in order to preserve the neutrality of Sweden in the event of complications in the Baltic arising from the war in the far East.

Lively Fist Fight a Mile Below Surface of Earth.

Calumet—Fist fights one mile beneath the surface of the earth arenot a common occurence, but it was on an assault and battery chargo that Frank Rade had George Maerle, a fellow miner in the Tamarack mine, arrested. The two were working about a mile beneath the earth's crust in No. 5 shaft of the Tamarck.

The mandate has gone forth that saloons must close at 11 o'clock or answer to the law. There are about two score saloons in Red Jacket and there promises to be some exciting times unless the saloonkeepers obey the authorities, rivalling the days of the Calumet civic federation.

Iron Mountain—The republican city committee has been organized for two years with the following officers: Joseph Corlin, chairman; G. V. Carpenter, secretary; R. T. Miller, treasurer. The county is strongly republican.

Ishpeming—After suffering for a week James McGlynn, engineer on the South Shore road, succumbed to injuries received in the wreck of his locomotive and was buried at Marquette, his home.

Ontonagon—The Ontonagon Lumber and Cedar company has purchased 20,000,000 feet of pine logs from the Diamond Match company and will convert the timber into lumber at its mill plant at Ontonagon.

Sault Ste. Marie—Eleven warrants have been issud for the arrest of merchants who kept their places open Sunday. Most of them are owners of confectionery, book and cigar stores.

Houghton—The suit of Joseph Croze against the St. Mary's Canal Mineral Land company ended in a verdict of $9,931.62 for the plaintiff. The suit was over 4,000,000 feet of logs.

WORKED TOO WELL.

Ardent Yonng Man's Attempt to Advertise His Firm.

"Speaking of advertising," said the sad faced man with a wan smile to the Denver Republican, "reminds me that I used to be in the business myself. Hustler? Of course I was a hustler. That's what overcame me. I hustled till I busted, with the accent on the 'bust.' You see, it was this way: I was a graduate of one of those advertising founts of knowledge by mail, and I got a job when there was a bull movement in labor circles and the horny hand was busy. Most any kind of an industrial proposition goes then, you know, and when I asked for a job it was shoved to me.

"The firm which secured my invaluable services was putting out a brand new style of liniment, warranted to cure cuts, colds, burns, bruises, consumption, eczema, insomnia, sprains, stomach troubles, rheumatism, catarrh, nervous prostration and a few other of the ills that flesh is legatee of. They told me that what they wanted was originality, something new and novel, something that would attract, something that would make everybody talk about Livingstone's Loo-loo Liniment, and more off the same stalk of flowery flattery.

"Of course that fired my young ambition, and I began to sit up of nights working out schemes. At last I got one. I had been paid off that day and had eaten dinner enough to last me till next pay day, and I dreamed a scheme. Nightmary? Well, mebbe so. Anyway, two or three days later, somewhere in the city, a policeman found the finger of a dead woman—at least, he supposed she must be dead. No policeman with any sort of sleuth instinct would fancy for a moment that a live woman would be leaving her finger around in that way.

"She was dead, of course, and that meant murder. And murder was the meat the cop fed on, so to speak. Of course he reported his find to the police station. Also left the finger there. It was wrapped up in a sheet of paper that had a clew to the bloody crime. Later in the day another policeman in another part of town found a toe. It was a man's toe. Dead man, of course—on the same principle that the finger was a dead woman's. Cops couldn't imagine anything else.

"Before the day was over other policemen brought to headquarters other remnants. By cripes, it began to look like a remnant sale of anatomy in that station house. Who had done it? What was the motive? Mafia or money? Love or lucre? Where was the rest of the remains? And the questions flew around till the air was so full of interrogation points that you couldn't see across the room. 'Was there any clew?' asked all the reporters at once. The sleuths were sly and secretive. There was, but they were not giving it away. That made the reporters get busy. When reporters get busy then it is busy from Busy Center. Pretty soon one of them got onto the sheet of paper wrapped around one of the fingers. Then another got another sheet. Each one was a letter head of Livingston's Loo-loo Liniment. 'Whoop!' they shouted and shot for our office.

"The sleuths followed. It was nip and tuck, with odds on the reporters. Our people were on their heads and heels and over-the-fence-is-out in forty-seven places at once. Nobody knew anything about dead fingers and toes in that caravansary. One of our good-looking typewriters had gone off two days before to be married. They hadn't left any address. You know bridal couples do that way sometimes. It's so full of mystery. Wow!

"Well, it kept getting warmer, right up to the time of going to press, and next morning Livingston's Loo-loo Liniment had preferred position, top of column, next to reading matter, display type and all the rest of the things advertisers pray for and pay for, and it didn't cost a cent. But I lost my job. I kept still, but the medical student friend of mine who had supplied the fingers as an act of friendship merely told his story before I could get around to him, and that let me out. I ought to have been promoted and my pay pushed to the limit, but I was bounced instead, and my career as an orilgnal and novel advertiser was nipped in the bud. I tried with other firms for a job, but all they did was to hold up a finger at me and wink, and I had to walk out. Nit advertising for me, and I went West, and got comfortable, buying acreage and selling it off at a slight advance as town lots."

SHARKS AT WORK

They Have Selected Prospective Homeseekers as Their Victims.

Warning Has Been Issued By the Geological Survey.

Washington, May 11.—The geological survey has issued the following bulletin warning prospective homesteaders against believing all they may hear or receive through the mails:

"An organized band of swindlers is actively at work in several western states, notably Utah, North and South Dakota, and also operating to a lesser extent in the East. These sharpers have selected as easy victims prospective homeseekers who are greatly interested in the various reclammation projects undertaken by the government.

"By means of advertisements cleverly worded, in which they claim to have secured inside information regarding the plans of the engineers, and by the display of alleged copies of government maps and surveys, they have been successful in duping many unwary homeseekers. For a consideration of from $50 to $200, these swindlers guarantee to locate settlers upon the best irrigable lands under the government works.

"Notwithstanding that the government some time ago issued a circular warning the people against being taken in by just such fraud, the swindling goes right along and the sharks are reaping a rich harvest. It should be clearly understood that these sharpers have no inside information. Their maps are mere township plats, or rough drafts such as can be obtained from the land office. The swindlers have no data or other than any intending settler can obtain upon request of the department.

"The lands under these government projects are withdrawn from all entry excepting homestead before any actual work of construction is ordered, and the secretary is by law required to outline the size and location of each farm. Until the plans are completed for construction and the contract has been let for the works it is impossible to state with any degree of accuracy what the cost of the water will be or what lands will be irrigated. Settlers who make filings based on the information received from these swindlers will not only lose the money paid out, but are liable later to find the lands are not included in the government's proposed system, and thus will have exhausted their homestead entry upon worthless land. When the proper time comes for throwing open to homestead entry the lands under these great irrigation projects, the secretary of the interior will give due notice through the public press. Until such announcement it will not be safe for settlers to locate upon these lands."

NEAR HIS BRIDE

For Week Before He Disclosed His Identity.

Madisonville, Ky., May 11.—A pretty romance preceded the marriage at the Boyd Tavern, at Oak City, Ky., last week, of J. N. Orgdon, of Redlands, Cal., and Miss Susie Boyd. In answer to an advertisement the couple began to correspond about a year ago, when portraits were exchanged. The young lady engaged in the matter for mere pastime, but a real betrothal by mail followed.

About a week ago a young man arrived at Oak Grove and took lodging at Boyd Inn, giving his name as Don Carlos Greene. He claimed to be prospecting in mineral lands around the place. He kept up his incognito for a few days, during which he was a close observer of his bride-to-be. When he was satisfied that all his expectations as to her conduct and character were realized, he announced himself to her as her future husband.

They are now on their way to the home of the groom in California. Mr. Orgdon is reputed to be very wealthy.

INDIGNANT WOMAN

Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch Dislikes Her Notoriety.

Resents Intrusion of Curiosity Hunters and Gets Desperate.

Louisville, Ky., May 11.—Behind the closed shutters of her humble home Mrs. Wiggs, of the Cabbage Patch, stands today awaiting the arrival of the next pilgrim. By her side—in fact, all over the house—are great buckets filled to the brim and the sudden downpour of the contents is to be Mrs. Wiggs' greeting. It matters not whom it may be—the stout, charitably inclined person, with an offer to adopt the fictitious Lovey Mary; the angular, gushing visitor who does so love to know noted characters, the autograph hunter—as if Mrs. Wiggs has anything to do with the autograph—the relic hunter, the souvenir fiend or the amateur camera fiend. For the last named Mrs. Wiggs intimates that she has particularly large buckets containing undiluted carbolic acid.

All this because the law has said she can escape the persecution of publicity in any way she chooses. It upheld her when she used this method on Mrs. Frederick Guy Smith last week, and she will stick to it. Mrs. Smith, wife of a very estimable citizen of Hazlewood, determined that she would see the cheerful, optimistic resident of the patch, and she went there. She didn't see Mrs. Wiggs until they met in the court room. Before that Mrs. Smith had worn home a new gown drenched by a large bucket of water thrown from an upper window of the Wiggs home. Mrs. Wiggs' simple and forceful narration of the trials of a heroine of a popular novel was such as to win instant acquittal from the judge.

The Cabbage Patch is not unlike certain other portions of Louisville, and there are sections of almost any American city which bear a general resemblance. The Cabbage Patch of today belies its name. A few years ago it was a cabbage patch, to be sure. That section of the city lying along Twelfth street, just south of St. Mary and Elizabeth hospital, beyond the point where five railroads cross, a few years ago was a cabbage patch, doing its share toward supplying the city with its garden truck.

As the city grew the land became more valuable. Factories sprang up along the lines of the railways which skirted it and the industrious truck farmer who owned it sold it to a shrewd investor at a good price and bought a new tract some miles farther out.

Streets were laid out from Tenth to Fourteenth, and cottages began to appear. They are not the patchwork cottages of the story. For this part of her book Mrs. Rice chose the now fast disappearing Tintown—that city dump of years gone by on the river bank, fast giving way to coal elevators. In the Cabbage Patch are cottages, all frame, some of two stories, mostly in the Queen Anne style, and all built in the last few years. The rents are cheap, and here live that poor but industrious class of citizens who go to make up such a large part of our urban population.

Mrs. Wiggs has another name—Mrs. Mary A. Bass. She is a widow with two children. A few years ago she had a struggle for existence, since her girl and boy were then small and unable to earn a livelihood. Then she was more or less an object of charity, and in accepting this charity she became known to Mrs. Rice, who was accustomed to visit the Cabbage Patch on missions of love. Thus it chanced that Mrs. Bass came in later years to be the Mrs. Wiggs, although that character is composite. Though not no philosophical, Mrs. Bass answers for Mrs. Wiggs in many other ways, and is as near the original as one might expect to find. In fact, she is far too near the Mrs. Wiggs of the book for her own comfort, and that is the cause of this story.

Mrs. Bass is rough and somewhat uncouth of manner, but she has a good heart, but she is lacking in the patience of Mrs. Wiggs. Yet it must be admitted in her defense that her patience has been sorely tried since the book achieved its great popularity. Her modest home is fairly furnished, and, instead of having the two rooms of the story, she has two floors, for Mr. Bass, in his life, was a good provider. He was one of the few residents of the Cabbage Patch who owned his house, though it took him many years to pay for it at a rate not greater than he would have put out for rent. It has two stories and is one of the best in the patch. It is located on Twelfth street and faces west.

Mrs. Bass is at home alone most of the day, since her two children are now at work. True, she has neighborhood callers answering in a general way to the Miss Hazy, Mrs. Schulz and Mrs. Eichorn of the story, and there are troops of children.

At first she did not mind the visitors who came to see her. They were town folk, who, having read the story, called out of mere curiosity. Being town folk, they knew that Mrs. Bass was not the prototype of Mrs. Wiggs in the full sense of the word, so they simply inspected the house and neighborhood and, with a pleasant good-day to Mrs. Bass, went back to the street cars or entered their carriages.

But after a few weeks the interest, instead of dying out, as Mrs. Bass had expected it would, increased. In addition, some misguided lover of the story, placed a copy of the book in Mrs. Bass' hands. She read the story, saw herself pictured as Mrs. Rice had drawn the composite caharacter, and her whole being changed. Had Mrs. Bass been the clever and philosophical woman that Mrs. Wiggs is, she would have received her visitors gracefully and would have had for sale souvenirs that might be carried back to Boston, Kankakee and kingdom come. But she wasn't and she didn't.

Instead Mrs. Bass refuses to see visitors. Knocks at the door she will not answer, yet she keeps an eye on the front of the house, trying to save a few pickets of her fence, for much of it has already been carried away for souvenirs. When visitors first came they begged for souvenirs. When they could not gain admittance to the house they stole whatever they could lay their hands upon in the yard. Her rosebushes disappeared, as did her shrubs. A few shells that surrounded the little flower garden went one by one, and so did other things until the yard was bare. Then the visitors began on the fence pailings. Perhaps the gate will go next.

Louisville citienzs have long since ceased to trouble Mrs. Bass. Yet it must be said of Mrs. Bass that she is really mild mannered and if assured that her visitor is not a mere curiosity seeker will cheerfully chat with him. But she will not permit any more publicity. She refuses absolutely to have her picture taken and she spurned tickets offered her to go to see "Mrs. Wiggs" on the stage because she knew the reporter who offered them to her had retained in his pocket the coupon for an adjoining seat. Mrs. Bass is nobody's fool, if she is a trifle hot tempered at times.

Mrs. Bass has turned mostly against Mrs. Rice, the author of the book. If she had been permitted to share even one-fiftieth of Mrs. Rice's prosperity as the result of the liberties taken with her home and some of her peculiritities, it might have been different. But Mrs. Rice is not even a visitor at the Bass home. At this late day she would meet a hostile reception. Mrs. Bass intimates very strongly that Mrs. Rice should have paid her something for the trouble she has brought upon her. And therefore it makes her more indignant than ever when she reads that Mrs. Rice and her husband are about to take a trip to Europe on the profits reaped out of the book.

Mrs. Bass' visitors have during the last year been almost exclusively confined to strangers in the city, and if they have met with hostile receptions few have become public in Louisville. Any hackdriver will tel you he has carried hundreds of fares to the Cabbage Patch and the hotel clerks say they daily give directions how to reach it. Tourists passing through the city en route to Mammoth cave, invariably visit the Cabbage Patch and generally have the book in their hand, going along in a manner not unlike an American tourist in Paris with his ever present Baedecker.

Since the dramatization of the stories of "Mrs. Wiggs" and "Lovey Mary" the interest among visitors to the city is even more acute, and this applies with equal force to theatrical folk. When the Mrs. Wiggs company first appeared in Louisville its members drove in a tallyho to the Cabbage Patch. But Mrs. Bass had heard of their coming and the blinds of her house were closely drawn. The visitors knocked and knocked in vain.

Early efforts of Mrs. Bass to drive away her visitors were confined to a refusal to answer the door. The knocks being unanswered, the vistors began boldly to walk in and Mrs Bass usually resorted to a broom to drive them out. But in March she adopted sterner measures and one that brought her into police court last week. During the third week of March the company playing "His Last Dollar" appeared in Louisville.

Among the members of the company was Miss Isabel O'Madigan, a great admirer of Mrs. Rice's stories. Accompanied by Mrs. Jean Caffrey of Louisville, they drove out to the Cabbage Patch one afternoon. Their knock at Mrs. Bass' door bein answered they opened the door and quietly walked in. Hardly had they got inside the door than they were visited with the contents of a bucket of slop water hurled by Mrs. Bass from her bedroom at the head of the stairs, the sousing being accompanied by a torrent of abuse at the invasion of her home.

The women beat a hasty retreat. Their frocks were ruined and it was fortunate that they went in a cab, for they were so drenched they could not have returned to town in a street car. This incident—the first real act of hostility upon the part of Mrs. Bass to become publicly known—did not obtain circulation until the following week.

Mrs. Bass tried the same tactics, according to Mrs. Smith.

"I had read the book written by Mrs. Rice," said Mrs. Smith, "and from the information it contained I supposed the family was in dire straits. Several times I had made up my mind to call on them and see if I could not in some way minister to their sufferings. Last Saturday I told my husband I intended visiting Mrs. Wiggs that afternoon and proffer assistance. He acquiesced, and without any thought as to the probable consequences, the books having left the impression that Mrs. Wiggs was of a sweet and gentle disposition. I started to her home.

"Upon reaching the Cabbage Patch I asked to be directed to the famous house. As my request was granted I noticed a twinkle in the eye of the urchin of whom I had asked the information. Unaware, however, of the hostile attitude of 'Mrs. Wiggs' toward visitors and particularly those bent on sharing her burden, I followed the directions and walked boldly up to the front daor."

Doctors Say Drink More Schlitz

The body requires ten glasses of fluid per day. Most people drink too little to flush the body of its waste. The result is bad blood, nervousness, disease.

Then the doctor says "Drink More;" and he knows this advice to be worth more than medicine.

That's one reason why pure beer is good for you. It leads you to drink more. And the beer is also a food and a tonic. But the beer must be pure.

Schlitz beer is brewed in absolute cleanliness and cooled in filtered air. It is aged for months so it will not cause biliousness.

That's why doctors say "Schlitz." Ask for the Brewery Bottling.

JOHN LIND AS A LEADER

His Tariff and Reciprocity Speech to Be Campaign Document.

Washington, May 11.—The Democratic congressional committee feels so certain of the return of John Lind to the house that it is not exercising itself about his campaign, but hopes to use him in certain other districts where Republicans are to be displaced by Democrats.

As a member of this congress, Mr. Lind's friends say, he has "made good" in a way which cannot fail to commend him to his constituents. He has not only looked after the interests of the Hennepin county people in a most indust ious and able manner, but he has done a good deal more. He has taken his place among the leaders of the minority and is one of the closest counselors of John Sharp Williams, the minority leader. His speech on tariff revision and Canadian reciprocity is to be one of the campaign documents in the coming fight, and the arguments which he has voiced in the house will be heard in every congressional district where there is a serious contest.

It is an open secret here that the Republican managers have no hope of defeating Lind. The congressional committee has been informed that Loren Fletcher is to be his Republican opponent, which means that Lind is to have no fight.

The excuse offered for the nomina ion of Fletcher—and it is generally admitted that such a course requires an apology—is that it is the only way to get rid of Uncle Loren, who has become a sort of traditional incubus on the Hennepin county organization. The advice is to let him run this time, and get beaten so badly that he will be down and out for good.

German Has Made the Longest Wheeling Trip.

Buffalo, May 11.—William Schwiegerhausen, a young bicyclist of Leipsc, Germany, who arrived in this city, enjoys the distinction of having taken the longest wheeling trip on record. On June 10, 1899, the young German, in company with two youthful countrymen, left Leipsic to wheel around the world. One of the three was taken seriously ill in the holy land and was forced to return and the other was murdered by a band of Bedouins in Arabia. Young Schwiegerhausen was severely injured at the time, but managed to continue his journey.

Schweigerhausen secures the autographs of the mayors of all the cities through which he passes and his collection of autographs and accompanying sentiments is very interesting. He is only 26 years old, but speaks besides his native language, French, English, Spanish, Armany and Persian. He has had a great many adventures, especially through Asia, where the bicycle was considered by the superstitious natives as an instrument of the devil and his own white complexion only lent color to their belief. His strange vehicle was called the "devil's wagon" and often was in serious danger at the hands of the frightened natives. On long stretches of the desert countries through which he passed he was unable to ride for days at a time and had to walk and push his bike. He began with a German wheel, then a French and afterward an English and finally an American wheel. His outfit weighs fifty pounds on the average, besides the wheel.

WOMAN ENDS LIFE.

Mrs. George Ranz of Fertile, Minn., Shoots Herself.

Crookston, May 11.—Partially insane, imagining she was the object of unjust treatment by friends and relatives, Mrs. George Ranz, of Fertile, yesterday afternoon committed suicide by placing a double barrelled shotgun to her breast and pulling the trigger by means of a long stick.

Early in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Ranz had some sort of a quarrel and Mr. Ranz with great difficulty took away from his wife a 38-caliber revolver which she turned upon herself in his presence and attempted to discharge.

After securing the gun Ranz went to the barn and was recalled shortly by the sound of a gunshot which came from his wife's room.

The woman had locked herself in her room and thrown her two-year-old child out of the window. Then placing her husband's shot gun to her breast she pulled the trigger.

The heavy charge of shot entered her heart, death resulting instantly.

THE STAGE

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Florence Stone company in "The Charity Ball."

METROPOLITAN—Kennedy Stock company in "Robert McCair."

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Saturday afternoon and evening, Al H. Wilson in "A Prince of Tatters."

"ROBERT McCAIR."

"Robert McCair, or Two Jolly Tramps," was played last night at the Metropolitan to a large audience and proved to be one of the most entertaining plays that the popular Kennedy Stock company has put on. There is a plot, laid by the two tramps and frustrated, as far as possible, by Javoth, a flower girl. The scenes are laid at the time of the French empire, and the gowns and costumes of that period prove eminently becoming to the company. Miss Kennedy and Bannister have some gorgeous costumes; and Miss Evans wears two stunning gowns also. Stone and Bannister both do excellent work, and Miss Kennedy also finds a congenial role in that of Javoth. John Kennedy is very funny as Jack Strop and also in a monologue specialty. It is interesting to note that Mr. Kennedy is not only a comedian of good ability, but has a very fair singing voice.

The Flamme Sisters danced well, and Miss Hassan, a new addition to the company, gave a refreshing bit of German impersonation. The play will be repeated tonight.

"THE CHARITY BALL."

"The Charity Ball" at the Lyceum last evening drew another large audience, and the Florence Stone company's performance of the great play is giving complete satisfaction. Miss Stone makes a most pleasing Ann Eruger, and the part exhibits her in a character which her friends like very much.

"The Biograph" is making a hit, and the pictures shown are among the finest Duluth has seen.

"The Charity Ball" will be repeated this evening.

AL H. WILSON.

Al H. Wilson in "A Prince of Tatters" Saturday afternoon and evening will sing a number of songs, among them several that will prove very popular, "The Jolly Rover," "The Winding of the Horn," "Schnitzelbank," "Whispering Breeze," "Memory" and "My Old Pipe."

BULLET IS FOUND

In the Body of Edward Wentz In Virginia Mountains.

Two Men Arrested Charged With Murdering the Young Man.

Bristol, Va., May 11.—The shrunken and decayed body of Edward Wentz, who has been missing since last October, was literally taken to pieces yesterday afternoon by physicians and detectives in the course of the coroner's inquest, which was begun at 4 o'clock in the Black Tavern and was closed without a verdict.

The startling feature of the inquest was the discovery of a 32 calibre pistol ball in the body, which might have been discharged from the empty pistol of the same calibre found eighteen feet from the remains. The ball had passed through the fifth rib, entering in front, had penetrated the heart, a back rib and lodged in the muscles of the back, one and a half inches from the spine. Several holes were found in the clothing where other bullets entered, but beneath them the body was intact. The right hand was missing and was probably borne away by wild beasts. A white pearl button, which could not have belonged to the murdered man, was found nearby. There is little doubt that the ball penetrated the heart, as the physicians found evidence of hemorrhage in that portion of the body and an immense amount of blood congested back of the lung. Detectives on the scene made careful examination of the pistol, finding it to be a Smith & Wesson, No. 85-L-50. Two cartridges were on either side of the hammer, but the chamber under the hammer contained an empty shell, as well as the two lower chambers. A loaded cartridge of 32 calibre was found seven feet from the body. Many articles in his pockets were found intact.

Knoxville, Tenn., May 11.—Warrants were served yesterday on Silas Ison and Tom Wright, prisoners in jail at Tazewell, Tenn., charging them with the murder of E. L. Wentz, whose body was found near Big Stone Gap, last Sunday. The two men were being held in jail on the charge of being fugitives from justice, awaiting orders from Virginia. These men were first suspected of being the murderers of Wentz because a rising suit similar to one worn by Wentz when he went riding was found in their quarters in the mountains. This suit of clothing had blood stains on it. A probable cause of enmity between the men and Wentz was that Wentz was strongly opposed to them running a blind tiger in Wise county, Va., on Wentz's property. Another reason for believing them guilty is that the men were in communication with persons outside of jail and wrote as if they were trying to cover up some graver crime of which they were guilty.

SALE OF RED LAKE LANDS

Auction Begins at Thief River Falls, on June 12.

Washington, May 11.—With the approval of the secretary of the interior, the commissioner of the general land office, has issued a proclamation stating the conditions under which the ceded lands of the Red Lake Indian reservation in Minnesota will be disposed of, as provided for in the act for the sale of these lands passed at the last session of congress.

The lands include 25,000 acres and they are to be disposed under the terms of the homstead laws, except that the entryman will be required to pay not less than $4 per acre and will not be required to show that he has exhausted his rights under that law. The proclamation issued fixes Monday, June 12, for the beginning of the sale, which is to take place at Thief River Falls, Minn. The sale will be by public auction and the land will be disposed of in tracts of 160 acres at not less than $4 per acre. The sales will begin at 9 o'clock each day. Sixty tracts will be offered the first and second days and eighty tracts on each succeeding day. Purchasers will be required to pay one-fifth of the price agreed on in cash.

Much interest is manifested in the sale. It is expected that some of the lands will bring considerably more than the price fixed. All the funds realized in excess of $1,000,000, the sum to be paid to the Indians, will be converted into the treasury.

Whooping Cough.

"In the spring of 1901 my children had whooping cough," says Mrs. D. W. Capps, of Capps, Ala. "I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with the most satisfactory results. I think this is the best remedy I have ever seen for whooping cough." This remedy keeps the cough loose, lessens the severity and frequency of the coughing spells and counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. For sale by all druggists.

MAPLE SYRUP

Used By the Maid on Hardwood Floors.

Milwaukee, May 11.—John D. McLeod, general manager of the Wisconsin Telegraph company, is mourning the loss of a two-gallon can of the finest Vermont maple syrup and his wife and others of the household are trying to think of some good way to get the maple sugar out of the hardwood floors. In his residence at 406 Keene street Mr. McLeod has hardwood floors and they would like to get the syrup out before it becomes too much of a temptation to the early flies. Incidentally Mr. McLeod says that he will not put his floor varnish in a sirup can any more. Once is enough.

It happened that way: Mrs. McLeod had decided that the floors needed revarnishing. The maid declared that she knew how to do it and would attend to it herself. She went into the cellar, came up with what seemed to be the varnish can and went to work painting the floors with its contents. It did not seem to go just right, but she persevered and blamed its sticky condition on the weather. She kept at it and soon had all the floors smeared with the stuff, and then she complained to Mrs. McLeod.

"This varnish is the funniest I ever saw. It all seems to be turning to sugar. I dont know what to do with it."

Mrs. McLeod investigated and one whiff of the "varnish" told her the story. She looked at the can and then at the girl and then said nothing. It was an occasion when words did not seem adequate. Mr. McLeod remarked mournfully when he was told the story that it was the finest maple syrup made and that he had sent to Vermont for it. Now he does not care for hot cakes.

POISON IN BOTTLE

Patrick Kiley of Cass Lake Victim of Mistake.

Took Aconite, Supposing It Cough Medicine, and Died.

Cass Lake, Minn., May 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—Patrick Kiley, an old and respected citizen of Cass Lake, died Monday forenoon at one of the logging camps of the J. Neils Lumber company, death resulting from the taking of some poison in a bottle supposed to contain cough medicine. It appears that Kiley and wife, who were employed in watching the Neils camp, taking care of the premises during the summer season, went to bed as usual on Sunday night. Early Monday morning Kiley was seized with a violent fit of coughing, and he got up and took a drink from a bottle lying near, which was labeled balsam, and which he believed was cough medicine. The dose caused him to vomit violently, and awoke his wife. The latter asked him what was the matter and was told, "nothing, only vomiting a little." He wase seized with other fits of vomiting, and was with difficulty that the sick man was gotten into bed again.

Mrs. Kiley did everythink she could think of to remove the liquid from her husband's stomach, but in vain. He continued to grow worse and after suffering terrible agony died at 8 a. m. Monday. Coroner Wilcox came up from Walker Monday evening, and in company with Dr. Rodwell, examined the remains. The coroner decided that it was not necessary to hold an inquest, as it was very evident that the deceased came to his death through aconite poisoning. The funeral was held at the Catholic church in Cass Lake today. Patrick Kiley was born in Canada and was 64 years of age. He was the father of two sons, both of whom are alive and reside in Cass Lake.

LOW CHURCH

Parishioner Not Awed By the Bishop's Service.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 11.—St. James' church under the ministrations of Rev. E. G. Richardson, who for nineteen years has been its rector, has always been the leading exponent of low church ideas in this community, while the high church sentiment has been represented by the bishop and St. Paul's. Mr. Richardson broke down a few weeks ago, was in a sanitarium at Baltimore and has just started on a long trip to Europe, which is not to be so extended that his place will be filled here. Since his departure Rev. R. G. Noland, of Covington, Ky., has filled his place very acceptably, but there have been many St. James' people who have visited St. Paul's. For some of them it was their first visit and one of these was telling Mr. Noland what she had seen there.

"I don't think it was so awfully high church," she said. "Why, the bishop had only two acrobats to assist him."

PRISONER ACQUITTED.

Eats Food Said to Have Been Poisoned By Him.

Belville, Ill., May 11.—A test for poison in food was made in Justice Canday's court yesterday, which resulted in the acquittal of John A. Fletcher, who was arrested and charged with having prepared the edibles to cause the death of members of his household. The justice's test, consisting in having Fletcher eat a dish of beans and drink a cup of coffee submitted as evidence. The test was suggested by Fletcher's attorney, who said he was willing that his client should prove his innocence in this manner. Fletcher ate the beans and swallowed the coffee, showed no signs of illness and was discharged.

WOMAN INDICTED ON SERIOUS CHARGE.

St. Louis, May 11.—The grand jury has returned eight indictments against Mrs. Sophia Weinzeirt, charging her with enticing young women from Germany to this country for improper purposes. The woman, who has been twice arrested on the same charge, said, when first taken into custody Saturday, that the girls were brought to this country by her to serve as witresses in a garden of a World's fair concessionaire. She now asserts she had nothing to do with bringing them to this country.

NATURE'S AWAKENING

Seasons Change and we Change with them.

As warm weather approaches nature awakes from her long winter sleep. The dreary months of bitter cold give way to sunshine, the ice king vanishes and the swelling buds and tender sprouts give evidence of spring's awakening. The sap, the life blood of all vegetation, is coursing upward through roots and fibres, taking with it from the bosom of mother earth food for the growth and development of vegetable life. Rich soil and a free and abundant circulation of sap produces healthy vegetation, while poor soil and a deficiency of the life-giving fluid means dwarfed or stunted growth and decay.

At spring's awakening the blood from which all animal life draws its sustenance and which nourishes our bodies must be free of all impurities and in a normal, healthy condition, or evidences of it will surely crop out in the form of sores and boils, red itching eruptions, pimples, rashes and skin troubles of every description. Warm weather stirs the blood, and in the effort to throw off the accumulated poison is thrown into a feverish excitement and riotous state, and the skin is the chief sufferer. The humors and poisons with which it is filled are thrown off through the skin, and so long as the blood is burdened with impurities sores and boils, pimples and blotches, bumps and rashes will continue to come. Bad blood not only affects the skin but creates internal disorders. The Liver and Kidneys act less promptly, the stomach is upset and the appetite usually fails, and this condition of affairs is bad on the nervous system and brings on that debilitated, run-down, tired-out feeling common to this time of the year. To remove from the blood all impurities and poisons is necessary before there is a full and free circulation and healthy action in other parts of the system. If your blood is all right then you are prepared for spring's awakening and the coming of warm weather. As a perfect spring medicine nothing is superior to S. S. S., which is made from roots and herbs gathered fresh from fields and forests, and not a particle of any mineral substance of any kind enters into this great vegetable remedy; and S. S. S. is the only blood purifier known of which this can truthfully be said. S. S. S. for the blood is widely and favorably known; it has been used for nearly fifty years and is more popular to-day than ever. If your nervous system is run down and the appetite fails, or sores, boils, pimples, or eruptions of any kind begin to appear, it indicates the blood is not up to the proper standard and that it has become impure and lost its power to nourish the body. Rich, pure blood and good circulation assures perfect health and freedom from many annoying ailments peculiar to spring. You will find S. S. S. acts promptly and will put your system in the best possible condition at spring's awakening. If you have any blood trouble, write us about it and our physician will help you get rid of it. Book on blood and its diseases free.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC COMPANY, ATLANTA, GA.

HAS A GOLDEN OPINION OF S. S. S.

Salem, Ohio, August 4, 1903.

I have a golden opinion of S. S. S. Will have no other blood medicine in the house. I do not believe there is a remedy made that can compare with S. S. S. as a blood purifier, alterative and tonic. It purifies and enriches the blood and gives tone and strength to all the organs. In other words, it builds up the general health while driving out poisons and impurities. I am a great admirer of S. S. S. because I know it to be all you claim for it, and know, too, that it is superior to Sarsaparilla compounds and other things I have used. To sum up what I have said, S. S. S. is the prince of blood purifiers and I unhesitatingly give it my endorsement.

INCREASED STRENGTH AND ENERGY.

Wheeling, W. Va., May 27, 1903.

This spring I was greatly run down in health, and feeling that I needed a blood purifier and tonic, I began the use of S. S. S. and took some six bottles, with the result that it put my blood in good condition, gave me increased strength and energy, improved my appetite and digestion, and made me feel like a different man. As a blood purifier and tonic S. S. S. is all right. J. H. McGEE.

DEAF AND DUMB BUT DISAGREE

Suit For Divorce and Nine Children In Family.

A divorce case was instituted in district court yesterday afternoon, in which both parties are deaf and dumb. The plaintiff is Mrs. Victoria H. Angle and the defendant is Charles H. Angle. The papers were filed by A. T. Park, county superintendent of schools, who was recently admitted to the bar, this being his debut in district court.

A certificate filed with the complaint states that the sheriff of St. Louis county has been unable to locate Angle. They were married in Medford, Wis., in September, 1892.

Mrs. Angle charges cruel and inhuman treatment as the reason that she can no longer live with her husband. She alleges that when she left him in May, 1901, he attempted to force her to return. One of her charges is that while they were attending a church convention a dispute arose over some trivial matter and he seized her by the throat, choking, beating and bruising her.

Mrs. Angle asks for alimony and the custody of her nine children.

CANNOT GET HER EFFECTS

Timothy O'Connell Arrested on Complaint of Divorced Wife.

Alleging that Timothy O'Connell, of Pike Lake, from whom she secured a divorce during the March term of district court, will not permit her to take the personal effects agreed on by stipulation, Mrs. Sarah O'Connell has sworn out a warrant for his arrest.

Mrs. O'Connell claims that when she attempted to move her frame house and household effects, her former husband objected.

The divorce action was one that attracted some attention, for the reason of the strong charges of cruelty and ill-treatment made by Mrs. O'Connell. When the findings of the court were filed there was a stipulation made that the parties were to divide all the property into equal parts, as nearly as possible.

Mrs. O'Connell has been living, since the divorce was granted, at the home of a neighbor at Pike Lake. She claims that when she refused to heed his command that she leave the household goods alone, O'Connell began to smash the furniture and other articles.

BOTH ACQUITTED.

Charges Against Gomez and Kalbaza Not Proven.

Manila, May 11.—The trials of Dr. Dominador Gomez and Buenaventura Kalbaza have resulted in their acquittal.

Dominador Gomez, a former Spanish officer and ex-president of the Union Obrero, otherwise known as the Democratic Labor union, was arrested in September last upon the charge of rebellion and insurrection, for inciting Ladrone leaders, in the province of Luzon, to take up arms against the authority of the United States.

Buenaventura Kalbaza, president of the Nationalist party, was arrested at the same time as Gomez and held to answer on similar charges of rebellion and insurrection against the authority of the United States.

LIQUIDATE GRADUALLY

Old New York Dry Goods House Adopts a New Policy.

New York, May 11.—One of the largest dry goods jobbing houses in the country, Sweetser, Pembrook & Co., of this city, established in 1854, has adopted a policy of gradual liquidation.

After a meeting of the directors, just held, the announcement was made, and a statement issued, as follows:

"Owing to the death of President J. Howard Sweetser and the present business conditions, the officers and board of directors of the corporation have concluded to adopt a policy of gradual liquidation, without at present determining the question whether the company shall be ultimately wound up or shall continue in business.

"It is the belief of the officers and board of directors that assets are ample to pay all business obligations and leave a good surplus for a dividend for the stockholders holding preferred stock."

Ten bankers and manufacturers, representing one half of the firm's entire liabilities, will act as an advisory committee. The concern is capitalized at $1,500,000, divided equally into common and preferred shares.

The tendency recently developed on the part of manufacturers to eliminate the jobber or middleman and his profits is said to have been largely responsible for the plan of liquidation of the company's affairs. The firm had hundreds of employes and salesmen all over the country, although in recent years most of its business has been done in and about New York. It is said to have amounted to nearly $10,000,000 a year. All the common stock is said to be held by employes.

SPRING CLEANING.

Superintendent Haug Getting Poor Farm Cleared.

Spring cleaning is well under way at the poor farm by Superintendent M. Haug. The land to be seeded this year is being cleared and grubbed by a number of men, and the county buildings are being repaired to do service until the new county house is built next year.

Forty-three bodies of paupers who died last winter and whose remains were put in the vault are being interred.

There are now about fifty inmates of the poor house, most of whom are men. Only one woman made application during the past winter to be sent to the poor house.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

In an automobile accident seven miles west of Newton, Kas., Tuesday night, Judge M. Simpson of the district court, was killed. Miss Anna Lees, Mrs. M. H. Simpson and H. Leehman were injured. The machine got beyond control and dashed off a bridge, falling fifteen feet into a ditch.

Secretary Edward Jarnigan of the Potter Paper company, and his wife were found dead in their home, at Chicago Tuesday. Appearances indicated that both had swallowed poison and then turned on the gas.

The graduating exercises of Princeton theological seminary were held Tuesday and thirty-nine young ministers received their diplomas while a like degree of bachelor of divinity was conferred on eighteen men by President Patton, of the seminary.

Capt. Walter Allen, of St. Louis, connected with the World's Fair Jefferson guards, committed suicide late Tuesday by shooting himself through the heart in a room in the dormitory of the Washington university, now utilized by the exposition. He left a note stating that ill health had driven him to commit the act. His widow and two children survive him.

A WAGGISH ASSESSOR.

Persuades Woman That Boy Babies Are Taxed.

A certain East End woman has for several days been importuning her husband to make inquiries at the city assessor's office whether personal property owners have to pay a tax on boy babies. The husband, however, has been chary of interviewing the assessor on the subject until he learned the reason of the inquiry.

His wife gave the following explanation: "Well, you see the assessor came here the other morning while I was eating my breakfast. Remembering what you told me about showing him all over the house I offered to go around with him, but he said it was not necessary.

"I wanted to be real good to him so he would not assess us too high and asked him to sit down and have some breakfast, but it happened that he had breakfast before he started work.

"He sat down at the table and began writing and pretty soon asked if my baby was a girl. I assured him that she was and he told me that I was lucky, because they never let the boy babies escape, but tax them. I know he meant it for he looked real serious and never smiled when he talked about it.

"Now you just drop in and ask the city assessor if they tax boys here in Duluth. If they do I want to know why. I don't see why the boys should be any more valuable than the girls."

GILLESPIE TRIAL

For Murder of Twin Sister Is Proceeding In Indiana.

Family Feud Over Property Alleged Cause of Tragedy.

Rising Sun, Ind., May 11.—The trial of James Gillespie, charged with the murder of his twin sister, Elizabeth, is now proceeding here. In defense, Gillespie's lawyers make the novel defense that no twin, in criminal history, was ever known to kill a brother or sister.

Myron Barbour, his cousin, cashier of the First National bank of Rising Sun, is accused of aiding and abetting him in the commission of the crime.

Jointly indicted with them also as accessories are Mrs. Carrie Barbour, wife of Myron, and Mrs. Belle Seward, a widow—a sister of James and Elizabeth Gillespie.

The Gillespies have lived in Rising Sun eighty-five years. They are the best-known family in this part of the country. The eldest son for three generations has been a physician and borne the name of William. The father of James and Elizabeth died some years ago, leaving all his property to his widow. She is 79 years old, and it was believed that at her death the estate would be divided among the five children, Dr. William Gillespie, of Cincinnati; Robert, who is a farmer near Rising Sun; James, Elizabeth and Mrs. Seward. But a few months ago Mrs. Gillespie deeded all of her property to Elizabeth.

James, in anger, quitted his mother's house and has not entered it since. He crossed the street to the large frame double house and took up his residence with his sister, Mrs. Seward. In the other half of the house lived the Barbours.

James and Elizabeth were 38 years old. They have been noted all their lives for their violent tempers and for their dislike of each other. The tie of birth was nothing to them. There is no beautiful story of minds so sentitively attuned that each knew the other's thoughts, suffered the other's injuries and sorrows or glowed in the other's joys. They were never happy when together. The antipathy was violent, and it was even said that James' violence toward his twin sister went so far that on one occasion he threw hot water upon her, on another occasion he knocked her down.

He was ever morose, never had had any occupation, was fond of hunting and loved to be alone. Tall, rawboned, sombre, careless of others' opinions, and solitary. His single affection was for his sister, Belle, and how warm and deep that was no one knew; it was only in the remembrance that she was the one person for whom he would do acts of kindness that neighbors came to the conclusion that he loved her.

He took up the cudgels of his cousin's wife, Mrs. Barbour—who is also his brother William's sister-in-law—when Elizabeth accused her of improper conduct, but this attitude was dictated by hatred of Elizabeth and not love of Carrie.

Mrs. Barbor comes from Kokomo, Ind. She is a niece of Dr. Thad A. Reamy, a prominent physician of Cincinnati, and Reamy was her maiden name. Her father was a popular United Brethren minister. Fifteen years ago she was employed in C. A. Rullige's photograph bullery at Kokomo, and it was there Myron Barbour, who has lived all his life in Rising Sun, met her.

Elizabeth did not like Mrs. Barbour. She accused her of light conduct. There was a bitter family war. Myron defended his wife. William and his wife took her part. Robert joined the fray only to separate the combatants. Mrs. Gillespie, the elder, and Elizabeth were the other party.

In the town each side had partisans, with Elizabmeth's following a shade the stronger, for in spite of her violent temper, she had a winning personality and was popular with a large element. Her tastes were refined. She was the most intellectual of all the Gillespie women, and was a prominent member of the Woman's Literary society, the strongest club in the place.

On the evening of Dec. 8 she was putting finishing touches on the decorations of her parlor for a meeting of the Woman's Literary society. The shades were up and, holding a book in one hand, she stood near a window surveying the room.

Some one fired a shotgun outside the window. The charge of shot entered the back of her head. She fell without a cry, and her old mother found her a moment later face down on the floor unconscious and bleeding.

Neighbors ran to the screaming mother, raised the wounded Elizabeth and placed her on a couch. All night doctors worked to save her life, and the house was full of neighbors, many of them curious, all eager to be helpful and a chosen few devoting their energies to the old mother's comfort.

Myron Barbour, Carrie Barbour, Belle Seward and James Gillespie lived across the street. They say they all knew Elizabeth had been shot; every man, woman and child in Rising Sun knew that Elizabeth had been shot. Neither Myron, or Carrie, or James, or Belle crossed the street to the old lady's house that night.

MUSIC FOR THE INSANE

Its Effect on the Disordered Mind Are Most Salutary.

Chicago, May 11.—The value of music as an aid in the alleviation and cure of the insane has been pointed out by Dr. V. H. Podstata, superintendent of the Dunning institution, in an address before the Men's club of St. Peter's Episcopal church.

"The salutary effects of music on the disordered mind are many and profound," said Dr. Podstata. "The first effect of pleasing, harmonious sounds is a relaxation of special nervous tension. The harmonious sound wave reduces the horrible inhibition and the mental agony of the melancholy patient. It liberates the pent-up energy and diverts the association of ideas.

"In the maniac the constant flight of ideas and motor restlessness is moderated and often checked.

"In the purely deluded the attention is diverted so that at least temporary stay is achieved in the abnormal mental aberartion.

"The demented patient is stimulated and aroused to activity.

"In all cases the harmonious impressions cause a relaxation of circulation of blood. The congestion is relieved, also the anaemia, and, as a result, not only the brain, but all the organs of the body are enabled to return to the normal activity. As a further result, reconstruction may take place and the patient be given better chance for improvement."

NEW SCHEME BY COOPER

Wants Regiment of Soldiers In Minnesota Forest Reserve.

Washington, May 1.—Col. John Cooper, the Chicago man who wanted to lock up from settlement nearly the whole of Northern Minnesota and convert it into a game preserve for the benefit of wealthy sportsmen, has come to the front with another scheme which, it is said, he will present to the attention of President Roosevelt.

It is the plan of Col. Cooper to station an entire regiment of United States infantry in the Minnesota forest reserve at different points, the officers to act as fire wardens and protectors of the standing timber and the islands which have been reserved. They would also prevent trespass, preserve the reservation and assist in beautifying it by making roads and adding to the many charms of nature.

WIN BACK HEALTH

Dr. Houston Goes From Grand Marais to Minneapolis.

Ill Four Months as Result of Diptheria Epidemic.

Dr. C. A. Houston, who was the only doctor in Grand Marais when the diphtheria epidemic broke out last January, arrived in Duluth last Sunday on the Bon Ami, after a critical illness of four months' duration as a result of an attack of the dreaded disease, and is still so weak as to be unable to stand. He was taken to St. Mary's hospital and later removed to Minneapolis.

Although he is in such a condition as to be unable to take any solid food as nourishment, and is very low, his recovery is looked for. He is slowly improving in health, and it is thought that the change to Minneapolis, with the comforts and luxuries of a good hospital, so marked a contrast to his surroundings in the little wilderness village on the north shore, will work wonders in bringing the young doctor back to his normal self.

The trials of Dr. Houstan, who is only 28 years old, have been many during the last few months, but his own heroic qualities and those of his young wife, who has been at his side through them all, have enabled him to bear up under them. He says that upon his recovery he will return to Grand Marais and again assume his labors.

Mr. and Mrs. Houstan were married only last fall at Minneapolis, the home of the bride. Shortly after the marriage, full of enthusiasm and with great plans for the future, the two started for Grand Marais, which the doctor had chosen as a field of labor, the young wife leaving behind her home, friends, the luxuries to which she had become accustomed and all the pleasures of city life, so that she might be with her husband in his new surroundings.

All went well enough until along in January, when the first few cases of diphtheria developed in the north shore town. While attending one of the first cases of the disease, which was also one of the worst, the physician himself became afflicted with the disease. After his journey from Minneapolis to Grand Marais he had worked hard for weeks, and was in such a condition as to be readily affected by the disease germs.

He was critically ill when Dr. E. L. Cheney and a trained nurse arrived from Duluth to assist in caring for the patients. Dr. Houston was the only physician in the village and had to care for himself, with his wife's assistance, as best he could, until the arrival of the Duluth doctor. Although he recovered from the disease, the poison is still in his system. He will be taken to his wife's home at Minneapolis, and the care and attention he will receive there will, it is expected, soon make him sound and hearty again.

Cured His Mother of Rheumatism

"My mother has been a sufferer for many years with rheumatism," says W. H. Howard, of Husband, Pa. "At times she was unable to move at all, while at all times walking was painful. I presented her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried, in fact, she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." For sale by all druggists.

A fresh young face—like a rose in Spring—attracts everyone. Girls grow up like flowers, and if weeds do not choke their young life and beauty (by which we mean disease of the womanly organs), they blossom out into beautiful womanhood. The pains and drains of young womanhood often bring the pallid cheek, the sunken eyes, crow's feet, backache, and exhausted nerves, which tell of peevish temper, and irritable thoughts. Such symptoms are all swept away—like sunshine after shadow—with the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is Nature's tonic for the womanly system; made entirely from plants and roots, without the use of a particle of alcohol or narcotic, and designed for the single purpose of curing woman's ills. There is nothing that will produce wrinkles and bad complexion so surely as displacements of the organs essentially feminine. When pains and aches rack the womanly system at frequent intervals, take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It will cure those ailments and stop the drains which are such a drag on the vitality of womanhood.

Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and uniform cures, a record such as no other remedy for the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women ever attained, the proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb, which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

If you are at a loss to know what is the matter with you, write Dr. Pierce, who will answer you in strict confidence; he is a physician and surgeon who has had a thorough medical training and a large experience in treating the diseases of women.

Every woman, young or old, should know herself. To arrive at this knowledge secure a good doctor book, by addressing Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y. AN OUTRAGE AT HAMLINE Live Roosters, Hurled on Banquet Table, Ruined Guests' Gowns.

St. Paul, May 11.—Six rosters, thrown by vandals onto the banquet tables at the senior-sophomore reception, Hamline, Monday evening, destroyed hundreds of dollars' worth of exquisite gowns.

A dozen girls are mourning the loss of graduation gowns for which they had spent no small sums of money and long, weary hours of planning and fitting.

The faculty of the university is incensed.

"The students who did the trick ought to be hung," said Professor Drew, the registrar.

The Prior avenue police were notified and a detective spent yesterday among the students searching for the guilty parties.

The event was the last banquet of the year for the seniors, when the sophomores are entertained and given college pins.

It is the most elaborate event of the season, and all the young women wore their graduation gowns.

The tables were spread in the basement of the Methodist church.

Just after the chocolate had been served in the long list of courses, six great roosters were thrown onto the tables through as many different windows.

In their alarm the roosters upset every dish on the tables. The tumult was increased by the young women, who fought to save their gowns, and by the young men, who endeavored to catch the roosters.

The banqueters numbered fully 100 and the pandemonium resulted in an approach to hysteria for many of the feminine guests.

The white silk gowns, which were covered with thick chocolate, cannot be cleaned. Fully a dozen gowns were ruined.

Many of the girls cannot afford new gowns, so the incident will seriously mar their graduation.

The faculty is determined to prosecute the offenders.

MURDER IN MONTANA.

Said to Have Been Result of Revenge.

Butte Mont., May 11.—Investigation into the killing of William Axtell at Basin, a small mining camp north of this city, discloses the fact that he was not a victim of mountain bandits, as was at first reported, but was murdered by an assassin.

An examination of Axtell's saloon showed that no articles of value had been touched, $60 in cash being found on his body. It appears that Axtell was sleeping in a chair when he was awakened by the curses of his slayer, who shot him through the mouth as he attempted to gain his feet. Bleeding profusely, Axtell made a frantic effort to reach the door of his saloon, but, overcome by weakness, he fell through a showcase, where he was found dying among jagged bits of broken glass.

The motive for the killing is puzzling the officers, who have not the slightest clue to the murderers. Axtell was of a quarrelsome disposition, and having had several altercations during his career as a saloonkeeper, it is believed some one killed him in a spirit of revenge.

DIVORCE ORDER

Modified as Far as It Relates to Alimony.

Madison, Wis., May 11.—The Wisconsin supreme court yesterday modified a judgment of divorce granted Mrs. Bettie Williams against her husband, Patrick H. Williams, a dairyman of New Richmond, making the $1800 awarded her as alimony her share of the final division of his property instead of alimony.

The couple voluntarily lived apart five years before the commencement of the suit for divorce. They were married in 1877, and eight years ago Mrs. Williams went to Oregon for her health. Her husband was to sell his property at New Richmond and follow, but he did not and finally divorce proceedings were begun.

The court affirmed the judgment of the lower court in the case of Oldrich L. Schissler, the Milwaukee gambler, who is serving a twenty-year sentence for killing Fred W. Reul, a Watertown banker, with whom he found his wife one night. It also affirmed the judgment in the case of George Bowers, who was sent up for life for killing his aged father with a chair in Waukesha county.

Edward Devoy and James Loughlin, who are serving indeterminate sentences in the state reformatory for having committed a serious offense against Clara Kuhn, an 18-year-old girl at Elkhart Lake, July 4 last, were ordered released because the evidence showed that the girl did not protest properly.

SENSATION AT ALTAR.

Demented Woman Claims Groom as Her Husband.

Dubuque, Ia., May 11.—Standing at the altar railing of St. Mary's church, with the priest ready to pronounce the words of the marriage ceremony, the nuptials of Miss Mary Hartman and Frank J. Fry suffered a rude blow when Mrs. R. C. Ruscht, a middle-aged woman, rushed up the aisle, shouting, "Stop the marriage! Stop the marriage!" The church was full of guests and the woman's actions caused great excitement. The bridal party stood aghast and the priest, who was concluding the nuptial mass, trembled with emotion. The woman reached the altar railing and, grasping the groom, looked into his face and dramatically shouted: "He is my husband; this marriage must not be consummated."

The bride almost fainted, and with difficulty buried her embarrassment in the folds of her bridal veil. In a moment a number of men rushed from their seats and tore the excited woman away and removed her from the church. The priest then continued with the ceremony.

Mrs. Ruscht, it develops, is suffering from dementia, and labors under the hallucination that the groom is her former husband.

PERISHED IN BLIZZARD.

Samuel Anderson's Body Is Found In Polk County.

Crookston, Minn., May 11.—The body of Samuel Anderson was found in the bushes near a road a short distance from Ranum postoffice. Three weeks before Anderson started to walk from Crookston to Ranum, and it is sppposed he was overcome by fatigue and sat down to rest. He must have fallen asleep and a heavy blizzard came on. He never woke up, and when his body was found it was so badly decayed that it was barely possible to recognize him. He was about 25 years old.

TRAGEDY IN JAIL.

Tramps Started a Fire and Were Suffocated.

Excelsior, Minn., May 11.—Two men were suffocated by smoke in the village jail Monday night, and one of them, Ellsworth Balar, a negro, will probably die.

Eraly in the evening Village Marshal Powers arrested Balar and Eugene Benedict, white, for being drunk and disorderly, and locked them up. About 2 o'clock this morning the marshal returned to the jail and found that the negro had started a fire in the bedclothes. The jail was full of smoke, and before the officer cold drag out his prisoners both were unconscious and have been in a comatose state most of the time since.

Physicians were called and on examination declared that the colored man would probably die. The men are strangers here and apparently are tramps. They will be taken to the county hospital.

STATE TOO MUCH

And Collins and Nelson Keep President Hill's Replies Secret.

Dunn Will Not Send an Answer to Collins' Letter.

St. Paul, May 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judge L. W. Collins and State Librarian Nelson have received letters from President Hill, of the Great Northern, in answer to their communications, asking if he made the statements credited to him in a recent interview made by Former State Auditor Dunn. The answers were in the hands of both men yesterday. Both admitted their receipt today, but declined to discuss the contents.

At the Great Northern offices, Mr. Hill's private secretary said the answers had been sent, but refused to tell their contents.

"We think," was the answer, "that the replies, if they are to be made public, should come from Judge Collins and Mr. Nelson."

From a private and authoritative source, the information is received that the letters will never be made public, at least in their entirety. To Judge Collins was directed a reply admitting a contribution to the Republican party, but denying that it was for Judge Collins' direct candidacy any more than it was for the others. Other matters, however, were included that were outside the questions asked by Judge Collins, and it was this fact that caused Judge Collins to remark today that the letter was decidedly evasive.

As to State Librarian Nelson, the story is that his letter was the warmer of the two, and that Mr. Nelson got an affirmative reply to every question he put. Like the letter to Judge Collins, some inside information was also included.

Judge Collins' manager, James A. Martin, declined absolutely to discuss the letters.

State Librarian Nelson said he did not care to take the center of the stage in the present controversy.

"I received a reply from Mr. Hill," said Mr. Nelson, "but it was a trifle evasive. I don't care to make its contents public."

If Judge Collins is waiting for a reply to his letter to Mr. Dunn, he will not get one. Mr. Dunn gave it out today that he did not intend to send an answer.

THE HAYTIEN SITUATION

Does Not Give Any Alarm In United States At Present.

Washington, May 11.—Mr. Leger, the Haytien minister here, has cabled his president requesting to be fully advised as to the situation in that country. The minister has had no intimation of the impending trouble there, although he knew that his government was prosecuting a number of cases growing out of the Haytien national bank scandal. As a result of this prosecution it is said a number of German, English and Americans have been imprisoned. Whether they are still incarcerated or are out on bail is not known here. They are charged with issuing false bonds to the amount of $2,000.

At the German embassy no word has been received of the sailing of the German West Indian squadron for Hayti.

The navy department also is uninformed on the subject, but the officials are not concerning themselves, as the Detroit is at San Domingo City. The Newport, Bancroft and Scorpion, now at Pensacola, have been under orders for some time to report to Commander Dillingham, commanding the Detroit, but they have been delayed at the Florida port by minor repairs. They are expected to go under their present orders as soon as possible. Admiral Sigsbee has the Newark and Montgomery at Colon.

The North Atlantic squadron is at Guantanamo, where it will remain for several days before starting across the Atlantic on the European cruise. Thus, in the event of an uprising before the force leaves the Carribbean a vessel or two could be dispatched to Port Au Prince to lend additional protection to American interests.

BLENDING OF WHISKEY.

Some Trade Secert Exposed By Pure Food Law.

Routine reports of the proceedings of congress give no idea of the strife and turmoil engendered by those sections of the pending Hepburn-Dolliver pure food bill which seek to maintain the integrity of the highball and preserve the purity of the rickey, says the Washington correspondent of the New York Sun.

The average man of voting age in this country, and there are more than 21,000,000 of him, consumes some five gallons of distilled spirits annually, to say nothing of wines, beers, &c. The desire is to protect the average man, to legislate him into the straight and narrow path which leads to alcoholic purity. Hence the struggle between the actual distiller and the man who rectifies, blends or compounds.

The straight-goods whisky men contend that their bottled-in-bond bourbon or rye is the only genuine article and the one brand of goods that the drinker can quaff with impunity. The blenders insist that the only road to absolute immunity from all the ills of dissipation is through the use of a properly compounded bottle of all that is virtuous in whiskydom.

In the meantime the unenlightened average man, who knows nothing about the merits of the dispute, who meekly deposits the price and takes what the barkeep hands out, stands in bewilderment, for by the drinking of it he knows not the difference between rye and bourbon, straight and rectified. He can now take the facts as developed in the hearings before the committee in charge of the Hepburn-Dolliver bill, or as set forth on the side by experts from both camps, pay his money and take his choice.

Of course there are outlawed straight whisky and upright blends, good and wholesome rye and bourbon and dishonest compounds. For example, bourbon whisky direct from the still is without color and impregnated with poisonous oils and essences. The familiar golden hue comes from the charred inside of the oaken barrel in which the whisky is aged and purified.

Dishonest men have been known to take the rank new whisky, when only a few months old, reduce its fire by the addition of water, bring up its color by the admixture of drugs, and put it on the market as old liquor. Then, indeed, is it vile.

On the other hand your clever blender or rectifier, prone to deceive, takes neutral spirits, prune juice, burned sugar, water and bead oil and makes a to'erable cheap whisky, one that misleads both the eye and palate of the occasional drinker or satisfies the thirst of the drunkard. And it need not be especially deleterious, this mixture.

"Neutral spirts" is pure grain alcohol, made from wheat or corn, and distilled pretty much as whisky is distilled, except that it is highly concentrated, is subjected to a process which removes all impurities and leaves the spirits tasteless, colorless and odorless and about 195 proof, or susceptible of reduction by the addition of 100 per cent of water and still have the alcoholic strength of 6-year-old whisky.

While spurious rye or bourbon may thus be made out of neutral spirits, fruit juices etc., and the mixture be practically as pure as aged whisky, to the trained palate it is without that peculiar flavor and aroma which is to be found in the genuine goods properly aged.

The reputable and scientific blender insists that neutral spirts doesn't enter into the process which he employes, but that he seeks to and actually does produce a whisky more uniform in its flavor and purity, more attractive to the eye and more pleasing to the taste than any distinctly straight bourbon or rye to be found on the market, and that the honest blender's label is a passport to health and happiness.

He declares that neither rye nor bourbon in its natural state meets the requirements of the connoisseur, but that a judicious intermingling of both, utilizing certain brands and ages, results in a beverage that surpasses any brand known to the trade as strictly straight whisky.

Each scientific rectifier or blender has his secret process or formula, to divulge which, he asserts, would work his financial ruin. Hence his strenuous opposition to the measure which proposed that all blended goods sold should have pasted upon the bottle a label giving the ingredients thereof.

Straight whisky is known as either rye or bourbon. Bourbon whisky got its name originally from the county of that name in Kentucky, where a great deal of whisky was made in pioneer days, but the term is now applied generally to all Kentucky or corn whisky, most of the ryes coming from Maryland and Pennsylvania.

Pure bourbon whisky should contain 60 per cent of corn, 20 per cent of rye and 10 per cent of barley. Rye whisky is made of rye and barley malt.

A bushel of corn will make about four and a half gallons of whisky. Without the government tax, new whisky could be sold at a profit for 15 cents a gallon, but the government adds $1.10 a gallon to start off with. This, with the cost of storing the liquor until it is six or eight years old, the loss by evaporation, local taxes, etc., brings the selling price of matured spirits to from $2 to $4 a gallon.

Many devices and processes for aging whisky and hastening oxiddization, or the removal of fusel oil and other poisons by evaporation, have been tested, but no substitute has been found for the original method of putting new whisky in barrels, charred inside, and keeping the barrels under favorable conditions for six, eight or ten years, when the whisky attains the purity, bouquet and flavor peculiar to the different brands and so strikingly peculiar that old distillers can take samples of whisky from various localities and tell from which county, generally from which particular distillery, each individual sample comes. Whether this is due to the water, the grain or the proportions of the ingredients employed by the different houses, has never been satisfactorily explained; but that it can be done is absolutely true.

The war that has been waged between the straight goods men and the blenders in connection with the pure food bill is due to the efforts of the distillers to have a ban placed upon all whisky not bottled in bond, in effect to declare all other products impure.

The bottled-in bond process is not widely understood, and, as far as the average man who calls for his drink over a bar is concerned, cuts no great figure. Whisky bottled in bond is bottled at the distillery warehouse in the presence of an internal revenue officer who pastes over the cork and neck of each bottle a Government stamp which guarantees that it was not manipulated in its journey from the barrel to the bottle. Under the law whisky less than four years old cannot be bottled in bond.

THE WORLD'S COLDEST CITY.

The coldest city in the world is Yakutsk, Eastern Siberia, in the empire of the czar and the Russians. It is the great commercial emporium of East Siberia and the capital of the province of Yakutsk, which, in most of its area of 1,517,063 square miles is a bare desert, the soil of which is frozen to a great depth. Yakutsk consists of about 400 houses of European structure, standing apart. The intervening spaces are occupied by winter sports, or huts of the Northern namod, with earthen roofs, doors covered with hairy hides and windows of ice.

GEMS BY THE BUCKET.

An extroordinary rich find of precious stones has been made in Hope valley, Orange River Colony, South Africa. The gems include rubies, sapphires, beryls, emeralds, carbuncles, topazes, amethysts, turquoises and small diamonds. Thousands of dollars' worth were washed from a few loads of gravel, and there are millions of tons of similar soil in sight. At a meeting of the syndicate which owns the property a bucketful of the gems was shown as having come from two loads of earth.

JAPANESE USE OF WATER.

The Japanese themselves attribute their high average strength to a plain and frugal diet and the system of gymnastics called jiu-jiteu, which includes a knowledge of anatomy and of the external and internal uses of water, says the Kansas City Journal. Although during the period of their ascendency the Samurai kept the secret that their great physical superiority was due in a great measure to the internal and external use of water, the belief that if used liberally and intelligently water is an infallible weapon against disease is now generally held. By those who go in for jiu-jitsu an average of one gallon a day is drunk. It is noteworthy that rheumatism is almost unknown in Japan; it is probable that the absence of meat from the diet, combined with the use of plenty of water, accounts for the immunity.

THROUGH ICE

The Bon Ami Makes Her Way, Arriving Here Again.

Her Arrival at Washington Harbor Hailed With Delight.

The little freight and passenger steamer Bon Ami, for the second time this season, entered the Duluth harbor this morning, after a successful trip to Grand Marais and other north shore points. She succeeded in landing at Washington Harbor, on Isle Royale, with no difficulty at all. There was not enough ice to offer any resistance to speak of.

The Bon Ami left the local harbor again at 1 o'clock this afternoon, on her regular trip. She will be at Two Harbors tonight. If the ice crowds into the western end of the lake so that the Mabel Bradshaw is unable to leave the port tomorrow, as planned, the Bon Ami will probably go as far as Port Arthur this trip. Capt. J. Clow has been made master of the boat for the season.

Adam Webber, who has been one of the attendants at the big hotel on Isle Royale during the winter, was a passanger on the Bon Ami this morning, the only one from the island. He says that the arrival of the Bon Ami was hailed with great delight by the residents at Washington Harbor, who have been completely shut off from the world for several months. Mr. Webber stated this morning that the inhabitants of the island had wintered very comfortably, and that in spite of the late opening of navigation they did not lack for provisions.

The steamer Mabel Bradshaw, of the White Line Transportation company, is scheduled to leave Duluth tomorrow for Port Arthur, Isle Royale and other north shore points. It is expected that a number of fishermen will be on board when she starts, bound for Isle Royale, to commence their season's work. Other fishermen are planning to leave on the steamer America, which makes her first trip next Sunday.

The steamer Monarch, which left Sarnia for Duluth Monday, should be in Port Arthur today. She is due to arrive in Duluth Friday. Her cargo will consist principally of merchandise.

Navigation is now open all along the lakes. Word was received today that the steamer Ottawa, of the Canada Atlantic line, had passed through the locks at Sault Ste. Marie, bound for Fort William, where she will load with grain.

Today's heavy northeast wind is driving the ice field towards the western end of the lake, and this afternoon an ice field over half a mile in width lies along Minnesota Point. Beyond the edge of the field, however, the water along the north shore is clear as far as the eye can reach. The clear water measures from three to ten and fifteen miles across. The field blocking the entry is not yet thick enough to keep boats from passing through it. The Bon Ami succeeded in bucking a zig-zag course through it early this afternoon, although once or twice she was brought to a dead standstill. It is feared, however, that if the wind continues from the northeast the field will become more extensive and a menace to navigation at this point. Up to late this afternoon the floating ice was keeping well to the south shore of the lake.

TRIAL DRAGS ALONG SLOWLY

Counsel Reproved For Extended Examination In Tyner Case.

Washington, May 11.—Samuel A. Stevens, of the Interstate Savings and Investment company, of Cincinnatti, resumed the stand today in the trial of James N. Tyner and Harrison J. Barrett, on charges of conspiracy in connection with their duties as law officers of the postoffice department. Counsel for the defense put into the trial record a large amount of correspondence between the witness and the postoffice department in relation to the contract of the witness' company, which was compelled to go out of business because of a decision of the Ohio supreme court, declaring the company's plan to be a lottery. Judge Pritchard took attorneys for both sides to task for the extended character of the examination of witnesses. The prosecution attempted to bring out testimony to support a contention that the contract condemned by the Ohio supreme court had been previously approved by Gen. Tyner and Mr. Barrett. The defense would not admit this contention.

SELLS HIS RESTAURANT

J. J. Haley Transfers to Cook Bros.—Enters Bakery Business.

J. J. Haley, the Superior street restaurant keeper, has disposed of his business and the building occupied by him to Cook brothers, owners of Cook's European hotel, which adjoins the restaurant. The sale was completed yesterday afternoon, and the restaurant turned over to the new owners at 7 o'clock last evening.

Mr. Haley has occupied the building for only a few months past, but he has met with no small measure of success, and it is understood that a good sum was paid for the business.

Mr. Haley will devote his whole time to the Universal bakery, in which he has been interested since it was opened, and will take an active part in the management of it.

FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Appointment of Committees Is Made.

Mayor Cullum has appointed a committee of five citizens to assist the members of the local posts of the G. A. R. in preparing for the Memorial day services. THE USUAL THING

Bullish Government Report and Market Sells Lower.

Too Much Wheat to Sell and Buyers Are Scarce.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 11.—History repeats itself, even in the grain market. As is invariably the case, a bullish government report was followed by a declining market. There was not a man who believed that the report of yesterday afternoon was anything but bullish. The condition was higher than expected, but the loss of 15.4 per cent in acreage was far beyond what had been looked for, and made up for the improvement in condition. It is generally conceded that it means a crop of about 60,000,000 bus less than a year ago. Notwithstanding this, the market was slow and dragging and sagged off considerable at one time, though recovering somewhat later. Everyone seemed to have some wheat to sell, but buyers were not sufficient to take it. The cash situation continues unfavorable and the weather was good. Duluth exporters worked some wheat, about five loads of Manitoba and about the same amount of new crop Kansas wheat.

The Liverpool market closed ½c lower, Paris ¼@½c lower and Aanwerp unchanged.

In the Duluth market both May and July lost ¼c, in Chicago May was off ¼c and July ½-⅝c, in Minneapolis May was 1⅛c lower and July 1c lower, and in New York May lost ½c and July ⅝-¾c. In Duluth September was ¼c lower and in Minneapolis ⅝c lower.

Car receipts at Duluth were 12, against 6 last year, and at Minneapolis 50, against 55 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 62, against 61 a year ago. Chicago received 19 against 29 a year ago.

Primary receipts of wheat were 171,248 bus, last year 253,480 bus. Shipments 197,411 bus, last year 471,717 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 59,534 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¼d higher. In the Chicago market July corn closed ⅜-½c higher. July oats closed ⅝-¾c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 244,150 bus, last year 540,180 bus. Shipments 753,037 bus, last year 526,502 bus. Clearances were 4311 bus.

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market was quiet. July opened ½c lower at 92¾c, and worked back and forth between 92¾-¾c and 92⅜c up to 11 o'clock. After that it worked off to 91⅝c at 12:15 and closed at 92c, a loss from yesterday of ¼c. The May option closed with the same loss at 92¼c and September was also ¼c lower, closing at 81¼c.

Cash prices were unsettled. Though nominally at May price for No. 1 northern from 1c to 3c over is paid, according to sample.

Flax was dead and not a trade recorded during the morning. The July option closed very dower at $1.08⅜ and September was ½c off. May and October were unchanged.

Rye fell 1c and oats were unchanged.

Following are the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Fair Demand Caused Firm Feeling In Wheat.

Chicago, May 11.—Predictions of showers in the Northwest brought out a fair demand for wheat today and caused a firm feeling in the pit. In spite of the bullish character of the government crop report there was considerable wheat for sale at the start, and opening prices were barely steady, July being a shade higher to ⅜c lower at 85¾c to 86¼c. The demand improved, however, and the market became firmer, July advancing to 86¼c. Duluth, Minneapolis and Chicago reported receipts of 81 cars, against 98 cars last week and 90 cars a year ago.

The market was subjected to liberal realizing sales later in the day, resulting in a sharp decline, July selling off to 84⅞@85c. On the break shorts covered freely, and a rally followed. Final figures on July were off 1¼@⅝c, at 85¾@⅞c.

Sentiment in the corn pit inclined to the bear side, although prices showed little change from last night's cl sing quotations. Favorable weather and bearish crop reports were depressing influences. Extremely smaller receipts had much to do with supporting the market. July opened a shade to ⅛@¼c up at 48¾c to 48¾c, sold off to 48¼c, and then steadied at 48⅝@½c. Local receipts were 37 cars, with only one of contract grade.

The market was not influenced by the weakness in wheat, a firmer feeling developing as the session advanced. Buying by shorts was a feature. The market closed strong, with July up ¼c, at 84¾c.

Oats were easier as a result of fine growing weather. On account of firmness in the cash situation together with small receipts, offerings were only moderate. July opened ⅛@¼c lower at 33¾c, and eased off to 33¼@⅜c. Local receipts were 36 cars.

The feature in trading in provisions was the liquidation of July pork and a consequent decline in price. The loss was largely regained on covering by shorts. The opening was up 2½c at $11.40. A decline to $11.25 was followed by a rally to $11.32½. Lard and ribs showed little change. The former opened unchanged to 2½c lower at $6.50 to $6.52½. After touching $6.47½, the price steadied at $6.50. Ribs opened unchanged at $6.37½.

Close: Wheat—May, 91¼c; July, 85¾c; old, 86¾c; September, 80½@¾c; old, 81¼c. Corn—May, 47⅝c; July, 48¾c; September, 48¾@½c; December, 43⅞c. Oats—May, 41¾c; July, 33¾c; September, 31@¼c. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Minnesota Crop report: The weather was very fine and moderately warm in the first half of the week. Showers began in the fifth, and there was showery weather the rest of the week, accompanied by falling temperatures on the seventh and eighth. The day temperatures on the eighth were the lowest of the week, while the minimums on the ninth were not much above 32 degrees in northern portions. In the Red River valley the soil dried rapidly, and wheat seeding went on well till the fifth but there is more seeding done on the higher lands east of the valley than in the valley itself. In central and southern portions the soil is in splendid condition, though in parts of the Southeast it was etting too dry. In most places the recent rains were moderate, and there is nowhere any indication of excessive moisture except in the low lands which are still too wet to seed. South of the Red River valley all the wheat and oats are seeded and barley and flax seeding is well advanced. The early seeded wheat and oats are up, and in general they look to be in good condition. The warm showers of the fifth and sixth stimulated germination and started a rapid growth of vegetation with plum and other small fruits nearly ready to break into full bloom. A great deal of land is being prepared for corn in the South, and some have already planted; corn planting will be general the coming week. The early varieties of potatoes are about all planted, and some have begun planting the late crop. The grasses are growing rapidly, and cattle are being turned onto pasture. Some clover has been winter killed in the Southeast, but there are no reports about timothy.

Chicago Record-Herald: Whether the May government report will result in any public buying of wheat and in any advance in the price is uncertain, so very indifferent this season is the outside wheat speculation. But the report indicates 60,000,000 bus less winter wheat than was harvested last year, and about 60,000,000 bus less than was indicated by the April report. The May indication is left the same as the April, but the report shows 4,932,00 acres abandoned and makes the total area under cultivation 27,083,000 acres, compared with 32,000,000 acres originally seeded. The report is much more bullish than was expected. But the 60,000,000 bus shortage compared with last year is just about as Snow and Jones predicted in their private reports issued a few days ago. The condition, 76.5, on the basis of 16.5 bus as par, suggests a yield per acre of 12.6 bus, and, with an area of 27,083,000 acres, there is suggested a total winter wheat yield of 341,000,000 bus, compared with 400,000,000 bus last year at harvest.

People who understand the cash situation here say that there is some No. 1 northern wheat that does not show up in the public stocks, but that will come out on sufficient advance in prices. It is said No. 1 northern wheat in private houses belongs to Peavey, and that Bryant also has some No. 1 northern in his houses.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: The government report is bullish. It indicates a crop of 60,000,000 below last year. This may be modified somewhat by the improving tendency of the conditions since May 1, and an increase in the acreage of spring wheat. It still leaves us an exporting country and the question remains will Europe come up to our figures, or must we go wown to theirs? All conditions and advices on the corn crop are favorable. There is some bearish sentiment on this feature and some pressure from short selling. The whole cash situation is waiting on the settlement of the lake strike.

It is generally assumed that the acreage of oats will be something phenomenal and the weather and crop advices are almost wholly favorable. This is making some liquidation by best holders and some bearish local sentiment.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The buying which caused the rally was mainly covering by pit shorts. Local stocks of contract wheat are so small that the short interest is limited and kept in a nervous state thereby. The action of the market indicates how thoroughly the bullish government report had ben expected and discounted. It also had very little effect on foreign markets. The weather was favorable and crop advices are of a decidedly more hopeful character. The cash situation is as dull as ever. The bullish sentiment and manipulated tactics may obstruct and delay the process, but we still think we are approaching the time that American markets must get back to an export basis, and that this will be accomplished through a lower range of prices.

Corn—Trading is mainly of a local character and the buying is largely to cover shorts. There is nothing in the cash situation to change prices materially either way, as it is almost entirely dormant, pending the settlement of the lake strike. The weather is favorable for the crop, and the general estimate of the condition is that an early seeding and a large acreage are likely.

Oats—Inattenion houses started in to support the May option and there was sharp buying in September oats for local account, both of which seemed to be a play against a rather liberal short interest. No change in conditions of supply and demand. Receipts are small and the cash market tied up by the strike.

Provisions—It is the same dull, dragging market, with scattered liquidation and poor speculative support. Receipts are fair and the distributive demand, as shown by daily shipments, are in excess of last year. Packers are offering no support to prices, and the property is mainly in hands of scattered buyers.

Coe Commission Co.: Wheat—The government report issued yesterday afternoon indicates a winter wheat crop of approximately 350,600,000 bus, which is considered quite bullish by the trade. The question is, has prospective shortage in this year's crop been discounted by the higher prices? We think not, and advise buying July wheat and September wheat on all little recessions. Don't let a few days of favorable weather turn you from the bull side. Our market opened strong, but did not hold. The buyers for the last few days were anxious to take profits, resulting in a break of about a cent a bus up to this writing. Winnipeg had 141 cars against 306 cars last year. Cash business yesterday fairly good. The seaboard reported 128,000 bus wheat sold. Duluth reports 60,000 bus No. 2 hard sold to parties in Europe.

Corn opened strong and has ruled firm and higher all morning, losing part of the early advance in sympathy with the weakness in wheat. Cash demand is good. Receipts small. July corn around present prices looks like a safe purchase.

Oats—Same as corn. Opened strong and continued so throughout the forenoon. Receipts are light. Cash demand good. On recessions July oats will do to buy.

Provisions are again weak otday. There is too much pressure from packers; each little rally seems to bring out enough product to leave the market weaker than before. This will probably continue until packers get the prices of hogs down to where they want them.

B. E. Baker's Chicago grain letter: The early strength in wheat was on local bulling on reported rains in the Red River valley more than on the crop report. The latter aroused no enthusiasm through the country and brought no buying orders in from the outside in relation to last month and last year, may be construed as bullish. However, if it is taken in conjunction with present values, it is doubtful if any great amount of bull encouragement can be derived from it. At any rate it played little part in today's fluctuations. The customary break following these reports was realized towards midday. This experience has been repeated so often that it has come to be looked upon as inevitable by the professional. Cables showed no response and closed practically unchanged. The weather map showed perfect conditions throughout the winter wheat belt, with some rain in the Northwest. The forecast is for moderate precipitation through the Missouri and Mississippi valleys. On the break there was a report of 100,000 bus of No. 1 northern sold at from ¼c to ½c over May in store for Eastern shipment. In view of the light stocks we do not feel like advising the sale of the old July. At the same time the price is high. It will probably prove a profitable purchase for a turn on the sharp breaks. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 15 cars.

Corn—Corn was a small market, and a rather firm one on the whole. The bulls were helped by the very light local receipts and by the shipment yesterday of 580,000 bus. The lake situation has been relieved somewhat by the independent boats, principally lumber craft offering to load grain. The regular lines are still tied up. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 15 cars.

Oats were the strongest grain on the floor, maintaining their strength during the break in wheat. A number of large interests bought both the July and the September freely. Aside from the very light receipts and the strong cash market there was nothing noteworthy in the situation. There were very few oats offered in the sample market, and prices ruled from steady to ¼c a bus higher. Crop conditions are very favorable. We feel friendly to the May and to the July options, but think the September a good sale on the bulges. Estimated receipts tomorrow, 40 cars.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 11.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 1@6 points under liquidation and bear pressure following rather disanpointing cables, but there was a fair demand credited to a prominent Wall street operator, and the market after the opening showed a steady undertone, fluctuating irregularly within a few points of last night's finals, with trading moderately active. Weather accounts were generally favorable. Business dropped off somewhat toward the end of the first hour and the market ruled quiet but steady at about unchanged to 3 points lower.

Cotton spot closed, quiet; middling uplands, 13.75; middling gulf, 14.00; sales, 525 bales. Futures closed steady; May, 13.44; June, 13.52; July, 13.61; August, 13.33; September, 11.87; October, 11.37; November, 11.28; December, 11.26; January, 11.27

A NEW LOW RECORD

Made By Common Stock of United States Steel Corporation.

The Preferred Also Had a Decline—Closing Was Steady.

New York, May 11.—The common stock of the U. S. Steel corporation made a new low record today, selling at 9⅛ in the early afternoon. The previous low level was 9⅝ in the early part of the year.

New York, May 11.—Business was in a little larger volume than of late in stocks today, but without pronounced movement of prices. New York Central and Consolidated Gas suffered from a renewal of yesterday's selling and yielded ½ and ¾ respectively. Amalgamated Copper, on the other hand, was bid up ½. The government crop report was without any effect on the grain-carrying stocks.

Higher prices were made for the principal stocks after the opening, largely in sympathy with the rise in several specialties. Metropolitan Securities advanced 2½, corn products preferred 1¼ and Metropolitan Street Railway and Copper ⅝. New York Central and Consolidated Gas recovered to yesterday's final prices. Hocking Valley fell 2 points.

The market dropped back into a dull rut and prices were inclined to sag. United States Steel touched 9⅝ or within ⅛ of the low record price. Brooklyn Union Gas rose 2 and D. & H. 1. Bonds were steady at noon.

Standard stocks were little affected by the enormous gold exports and liquidation of United States Steel and kindred stocks. Western stocks ruled at about yesterday's closing and the coalers were firm. United States Steel sold down to 9⅛, the lowest price ever made. The preferred and Tennessee Coal yielded ⅞. Republic Steel preferred 1⅞ and Allis-Chalmers preferred 2. Consolidated Gas advanced 3⅛ and Brooklyn Union Gas 5. Adams Express sold down 1½ and Rutland preferred 4½.

Consolidated Gas reacted a point and recovered again, while Brooklyn Union Gas gained an additional point. New York Air Brake broke 3¾. Th gnral market displayed no feature after United States Steel became quiet and steady.

The record total reached by the gold engagements stiffened the call money rate and the whole market sold out. The movement was slow and unimportant, except for the United States Steel stocks, the common touching 9⅛ and the preferred losing 2 points. Consolidated Gas also lost its free and St. Louis & San Francisco 2nd pfd fell a point. Mexican Central ran off suddenly 1-- and as quickly rallied a point, and Amalgamated Copper rose 1½. The closing was steady.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is heavy and dragging. There is continued pressure on the Steel issues and some of the other industrials. The light stocks we do not feel like advising the sale of the old July. At the same time the price is high. It will probably prove a profitable purchase for a turn on the sharp breaks. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 15 cars.

C. G. Gates to B. E. Baker: Shortage in wheat crop, or the indicated decline in conditions is most pronounced in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Kansas, and while it is most bullish on grain, it should not to our mind be taken seriously so far as the stock market is concerned, because these states consume all of the grain, or practically so, that they raise, and the railroads throughout these states are not dependent on the movement of grain, unless it be the Atchison. This stock has a dividend coming off in a few days and will look cheap around 70. If the market should get a decline would, buy good stocks.

Ridgely to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The bond market shows distinct signs of improvement and this is encouraging as any improvement in the stock market at the present time would naturally be preceded by activity and strength in bonds. Investment money is certainly accumulating and if the public can be persuaded to bring it into Wall street the result will be some what higher prices. I expecte rather more activity within a few days.

Evans to Paine, Webber & Co.: Real liquidation started up yesterday in the last hour. It was not at all extensive but it was unmistakable. People long of stocks are getting more tired of carrying them even in this easy money market as they see day by day their chances of making money on that side of the market dwindle away. Probably there will be more of this liquidation but as long as the money market continues in its present condition it is apt to be slow and gradual. Thecrop report will probably have no particular influence on prices as the condition is better than expected, the percentage of abandoned area is considerably greater. I still favor selling on all rallies and believe lower prices must come.

Dow-Jones to Coe Commission Co.: John W. Gates says: "I am not a bear on this market by any means. I have done little on the market for several months. As to Louisville & Nashville, I hold a large amount of this stock and I expect to hold it. I have not sold a single share of Louisville & Nashville in a month."

S. T. Welch & Co.: The stock market opened fairly active, prices ranged about the same as yesterday's closing. London stocks were steady, about on a parity with ours. There is some apprehension that the Chicago-Twin City passenger rate may lead to more serious trouble. The market relapsed into dullness and gradually weakened, the Steel shares leading in the weakness. Sales to noon, 74,100 shares.

F. M. Dick to B. E. Baker: I had a talk with a director of the Steel company yesterday. He said he was very bullish on the stock and says the earnings will show much better than ever been expected.

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market was influenced by the continued selling of Steels. The decline in this stock caused selling for both long and short account in the rest of the market, and the list at one time was decidedly weak. Just before the close, however, the shorts began covering stocks put out earlier in the day and there was a small rally which left the general list, outside of Steels at only fractional changes for the day. There was an active demand for Amalgamated Copper just before the close which caused a sharp advance.

New York to W. H. Laidley & Co.: A good judge of operations in the loan department says today that the short interest in the stock market is gradually extending. Renewals are made almost every day and also demands from new quarters. Particularly is this the case with New York Central, United States Steel preferred and Pennsylvania. Attention is called to the fact today that the crop conditions along the line of the roads west of Mississippi river are better than elsewhere, particularly in northern half of section mentioned, in some buying of the grangers will occur on any decline under the circumstances, according to our information.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Steel preferred was the feature of the market, developing further weakness, which comparatively less influence on the rest of the market than heretofore but it caused some depression nevertheless. While Steel continues to decline there is nothing to do but wait. When good support comes in to rally Steel the whole market should be bought. Copper was slightly lower in London. Amalgamated showed better buying all day.

A SPIRITED FIGHT

Likely In Methodist Conference Over Charge of Heresy.

A Sub-Committee Appointed to Consider the Matter.

Los Angeles, May 11.—The present intentions are that the heresy charges which have been made against several individuals high in the councils of Methodism are destined to provoke a spirited conflict among the delegates to the Methodist general conference before a final settlement of the controversy is reached. The committee on education has appointed a sub-committee which will have consideration of this important matter. The question as to whether this sub-committee shall have power to call before it persons upon whose testimony will be decided the charges of heresy and papers bearing upon the subject evoked a vigorous contest in the main committee.

After much debate the sub-committee was finally voted the power of a board of inquiry, and will hear all the evidence bearing upon this subject. Memorials on these charges have been received from the Columbia river, Southern Illinois, and Swedish conference, asking for an examination into the orthodoxy of books in use in Methodist schools, and of the professors in several of the faculties.

All of these memorials and others of similar import were recommended to the sub-committee. Three prominent educators on the committee, who are standing together on the ground that theology in Methodist schools is safe and sound, are Chancellor J. R. Day, of Syracuse; President Charles J. Little, of Garrett Biblical institute, and Secretary W. F. McDowall, of the board of education. In addition to their opposition to the heresy charges, these men are also exerting a strong influence in blocking Bishop McCabe's plan to open the American university before the $5,000,000 endowment is secured. They represent the aggressive element in the educational department of the church, and as they win or lose the question of liberal or conservative policies in the church may largely be determined.

HABEAS CORPUS WRIT.

Daniel Costello Seeking Release From County Jail.

Daniel Costello, who was sent down from Eveleth for a sixty-day county jail term, March 8 last, seeks to regain his freedom through a writ of habeas corpus. On his petition the writ was issued by Judge Cant, this morning, against Sheriff Butchart, and is returnable tomorrow afternoon, when Costello will be given an opportunity of showing the court why he should no longer be kept in the county bastile.

In his petition Costello says that he was arrested in Eveleth early in March and given a hearing before Municipal Judge Vivian Prince on the charge of assault, the complaining witness being his wife, Elizabeth Costello. He entered a plea of guilty and was fined $50 with the alternative of a sixty-day jail sentence. Costello claims that he was put under bonds to keep the peace for six months, with two sureties at $250 each and in case of failure to provide the sureties was given the alternative of an additional six months in the county jail.

Through C. E. Adams, his attorney, Costello claims that Judge Prince went beyond his authority in the matter of sentencing to jail on failure to provide peace bonds. He also claims that his detention is illegal on the ground that the committment made by Judge Prince does not state the place where the offense took place and is, therefore, null and void under the state law.

GERMAN IS INQUISITIVE.

Wants To Know What Germany Is Doing About Submarines.

Berlin, May 11.—Upon the third reading of the naval budget in the reichstag today Baron Von Kardorff (Agrarian) asked Secretary of the Admiralty Von Tirpitz why the German naval authorities had done nothing in the direction of building submarine boats, while all the other navies were experimenting with them.

"The Russo-Japanese war," he said, "must warn us that our navy is far from what Germany must demand of its navy. Our navy must be made much stronger."

Von Kardorff further said that the British navy was growing dangerous to Germany. It was an urgent matter. He claimed Germany is able to build new vessels more rapidly than hitherto and new objects of taxation can be found.

Secretary Von Tirpitz answered that the naval authorities were following the submarine question with the closest attention and had made some slight experiments of its own.

Von Tirpitz added that the authorities were concentrating their attention upon carrying out the fleet law. Progress undoubtedly had been made in the submarine question, but the problem lies in the possibility of seeing and herein progress had been remarkably slow. Submarine boats in the North sea were capable of splendid achievements. The experiments would continue but even if they proved unsuccessful submarine boats would not produce a great revolution so long as the problem of seeing was not solved.

RUSSIANS IN DARK

As to What Is Happening at the Seat of War.

No News Received Confirmatory of the Many Wild Rumors.

St. Petersburg, May 11, 6:30 p. m.—No news has been received from the seat of war confirmatory of the many rumors of heavy fighting which are drifting in from abroad, mainly through Japanese sources. There were violent thunder storms over Siberia last night and the telegraph is working badly today. Whatever official information has reached the emperor has not been made public as his majesty left Tsarskoye Selo early this morning to attend the review and had not returned late this afternoon. The general staff admits it is without advices as to whether the railroad or telegraph to Port Arthur are still open. Upon several points, however, specific information is vouchsafed. The idea that the Russian fleet at Port Arthur is being destroyed to prevent its falling into the hands of the enemy is scouted at the admiralty, where the statements made by the Associated Press last night are reiterated.

"We are not going to repeat the mistake made at Sebastopol," said Vice Admiral Rojestvensky, commander of the Baltic fleet. "If the worst comes to the worst the squadron will put to sea, engage the enemy and inflict as much damage as possible before going to the bottom. But you can say that it is a little early yet to talk of such desperation."

The general staff is positive that there has been no fight at Mao Tien Ling pass, for the simple reason that the Russians do not occupy it. Only a few scouts were left there. According to the reports the Japanese forces at Feng Wang Cheng were divided in two advancing forces, one part moving forward to Liao Yang and the other marching toward Hai Cheng. Both Liao Yang and eNwchwang are six days' march from Feng Wang Cheng. Therefore they argue a fight to importance is impossible for at least two days. The general staff is without information regarding the reported death of Lieut.-Gen. Zassalitch, declaring that it is not credible.

The possibility of a small engagement at Wa Fung Tien is admitted, although no information has been received. But if an engagement has occurred there they insist it could not have been of importance, as the garrison is small.

The Russian force at Newchwang is withdrawing, but the place was still held, according to the last advices. When the evacuation is completed, in order to protect the foreign inhabitants against brigands, China will be invited probably to send regular troops to Newchwang.

There is reason to believe that the Russians intend to hold the stations and railroad between Port Arthur and Liao Yang, probably Kai Ping, and that the latter place will be put in a state to stand a siege, the idea being that if it can hold out for three months it will make the relief of Port Arthur much easier when Gen. Kuropatkin is ready to assume the offensive. Possibly the Newchwang garrison will be sent to Kai Ping.

THE FLEET AT PORT ARTHUR

An Accurate List of Ships Cannot Be Given.

St. Petersburg, May 11.—It is impossible to give an accurate list of the effective warships at Port Arthur, claimed to have been blown up, but some idea of the state of the fleet can be formed from the official report of Viceroy Alexieff to Emperor Nicholas concerning the the engagement of April 13, in which the Petropavlovsk was sunk and the Pobieda was seriously damaged.

In this report the viceroy said: "The whole effective squadron at Port Arthur sailed out."

He then enumerated as the units of the fleet the first-class battleships Peresviet, Pobieda, Poltava, Petropavlovsk and Sevastapol; the armed cruiser Bayan, the first-class protected cruisers Askold and Diana, the second-class protected cruiser Novik, two torpedo cruisers and five torpedo destroyers.

It will therefore be seen that on April 14, the day after the destruction of the Petropavlovsk, that the Russians at Port Arthur had available three battleships, an armored cruiser and three protected cruisers, whereas on Feb. 1 they had available at Port Arthur seven battleships, one armored cruiser, five protected cruisers and one torpedo transport. The number of torpedo boats or torpedo boat destroyers effective or disabled is not known.

RUSSIAN TROOPS LINGER.

Shan Kai Kwan, May 11.—The Russian troops are lingering in the vicinity of Newchwang, and some of them are returning to the city. The Russian artillery is ready for instant transportation.

The reports of fighting at Liao Yang have not been confirmed. There is a probability that it was merely a brush with brigands.

Hai Cheng is being reinforced with troops from Liao Yang.

It is reported here that the Japanese are creeping closely to Port Arthur.

It is believed that the first Japanese army corps is still at Feng Wang Cheng. Lieut.-Col. W. S. Schuyler, U. S. A., will go farward tomorrow to join the Russian forces.

TO DRAW JAPS FURTHER IN.

Paris, May 11.—A dispatch to the Temps from St. Petersburg says General Kuropatkin will not take the offensive until the end of July as it has been decided to draw the Japanese as far as possible into the interior of Manchuria.

ANOTHER LOAN BY JAPAN.

Tokio, May 11.—At a cabinet meeting yesterday it was decided to float another popular loan of $50,000,000, at 95 redeemable in five years, with interest at 5 per cent, payment to be in ten installments, commencing in June next. An imperial ordinance providing for the loan will be issued about May 20. Should the loan be over-subscribed an equal distribution will be made among the applicants, instead of giving preference to small subscribers as was done in the case of the last loan.

CZAR REVIEWS TROOPS.

St. Petersburg, May 11.—Emperor Nicholas, who was accompanied by the empress and several of the grand dukes and a brilliant staff, reviewed 50,000 troops on the Champ De Mars this morning. A great concourse viewed the brilliant spectacle. As each regiment marched past the emperor the soldiers shouted, "Good health, your majesty." A grand charge of Cossacks ended the review.

The imperial party was accorded a hearty reception by the people. Seats on balconies overlooking the review ground sold for $25. The money will be devoted to the Red Cross.

DANGER OF RIOTING.

Shanghai, May 11.—The United States cruiser New Orleans, Rear Admiral Yates Sterling on board, is making hurried preparations to leave here tomorrow for Che Foo. The reason for her departure has not been announced.

There is danger of rioting at Newchwang between the time of the Russian withdrawal and occupation of the town by the Japanese. The navy department at Washington has ordered Rear Admiral Cooper, commander-in-chief of the Asiatic fleet, to send a cruiser and a gunboat to Che Foo, the nearest port to Newchwang, to be ready for an emergency.

ANXIOUS ABOUT SAILORS.

Washington, May 11.—The Japanese government is apphensive as to the Japanese sailors who were reported missing or captured as a result of Admiral Togo's last attack on Port Arthur, in an attempt to close the harbor. There were forty of these men whom the torpedo boats could not pick up, and the Japanese government is anxious that any of them who were lucky enough to escape drowning and reach shore shall be properly taken care of by the Russians.

Minister Takahira today requested Secretary Hay, as the custodian of Japanese interests during the war, to apply to the Russian government for information on this point. Secretary Hay promptly cabled the request to Ambassador McCormick at St. Petersburg.

J. M. GIDDING & CO. SUPERIOR STREET AND FIRST AVENUE WEST, "THE STYLE STORE." J. M. GIDDING & CO.

Your choice of more than thirty styles in Tailored Suits $25.

Every one of them of which would bring from ten to fifteen dollars more at any other store in town—if they could show you the style at all. Every suit new and fresh from the most important makers in the land—in many different cloths—plain broadcloths, cheviots, Venetians, etamines and beautiful fancy mixtures—all trimmed in various ways; all with full, broad shoulders so much wanted by women of fashion just now. Some of the suits are silk lined throughout, some of the jackets only are silk lined. Again we say it—not one of these suits can be matched by any other store in this city at less than from ten to fifteen dollars more. All the season's best shades—all sizes, from the woman who wears a 32 bust up to a 44. $25.00 for a great choice.

Everybody knows that we excel in suits at $30.00, $35.00, $40.00 and upwards—so there's very little to tell on this score. In Tailored Suits, Dresses, Shirtwaist Suits, etc., we've a stock second to none in the entire Northwest.

YOU CAN GET SPLENDIDLY TAILORED SUITS TRIMMED IN GOOD TASTE AND OF EXCELLENT QUALITY CLOTH — guaranteed for wear and durability—at $12.50—that no store in town will sell even at a "sale" price for less than $15.00.

THE PRETTIEST KIND OF TAILORED SUITS AT $15.00, $16.50 AND $18.00—that no store in this city would think of selling at less than from five to ten dollars more.

Women's Covert Jackets and Rain Coats.

The most sensible of women's recent fashions was the beautifying of the Rain Coat—the abolition of the unhealthy mackintosh and the introduction of cravenette and otherwise waterproofed fabrics. The pores of the goods are not closed—the body can breathe through them, but water can't even soak through—they are so sensible that their recent name is rain or shine coats.

The demand for them has been so constant that makers of good and fashionable kinds have hardly been able to keep up with their orders—and we've hardly been able to get them here fast enough—

When our Mr. Gidding went East just recently he selected some entirely new models and had orders placed far enough ahead so that our supply would be steady.

These new models are here now — and we can say unhesitatingly that they are by far the handsomest styles that Duluth has seen—three particularly good models are—cape-less with pleats front and back.

One style with eqaulets over shoulders—two styles plain—these same materials in these style coats, earlier in the season would have brought five to ten dollars more—these are notable values—

$19.50 for $25.00 Rain Coats —Stylish Rain Coats of Priestly's cravenette cloth — with double capes and belt all round. Large buttons to match —Colors — tan, oxford, grey and olive tan—

$10.00 for $15.00 Rain Coats —Splendid Rain Coats of guaranteed waterproof worsted—with deep cape over shoulders and belt — tight fitting back, loose front.

$27.50 for $35.00 Rain Coats —A style that is pleasing to every woman that sees it—capeless—pleated at back and front—one line with novelty gun metal and gilt buttons—another line with self cloth buttons—a handsome, stylish coat —in tan, grey, olive tan and men's worsteds cravenetted.

We shall continue tomorrow the special values in shirtwaist suits of silk and brilliantine.

$13.50 FOR $18.00 SILK SHIRTWAIST SUITS

The season's newest shades of Foulard Silks, fagoting stitched —splendidly made and perfect fitting—

PROTECTS ITSELF

Iron Range Official's Explanation of Discrimination Charge.

Filed With Railroad Commissioners By Twin City Concern.

Charges of discrimination have been filed with the railway commission by the Loftus Hubbard Elevator company of St. Paul against the Duluth & Iron Range railroad. The complaint alleges that the railroad collected advance freight charges on shipments from St. Paul to points on the Iron Range railroad, that such advance collection is not customary and is a discrimination to the disadvantage of the complainant.

In its reply the railroad states that the matter originated in a shipment of hay by the elevator company to Ely, which was refused on arrival and was sold for $5 by the railroad and the money retained to apply on freight charges. The hearing will be held Monday.

An officer of the railroad company said this morning that he did not think the suit would amount to much. The company had considerable trouble with hay shipments, he said, and frequently would have a car refused at one place and hauled to another until the freight charges would amount to almost as much as the market value of a car of first-class hay.

"Sometimes the hay gets into bad condition before arrival at destination, if not tainted when it is started," said he, "and the consignee don't care to take it. Then the railroad has hay on its hands that it can do nothing with. It is not the custom to charge in advance invariably on hay but in many cases it is. There are certain firms that we would not require to pay advance charges on hay or any other kind of freight, but then there are others that we have to do it with.

"A railroad has the right to collect advance charges when and from whom it pleases, or it has the right to refuse goods if it pleases. You can not compel the railroad to haul anything any way it suits you. We have had hay up and down the line until the freight bill gets so large that it looks absurd. The agent at this or that station receives the car and gets orders to send it on somewhere else and does so. He is not responsible and does not know the conditions governing the shipment. In this case it is simply a question whether the railroad company has a right to protect itself in the collection of freight charges on goods that it hauls.

"Frequently the people that are causing the cars to move about have never seen the hay. They may be brokers here in town that get an order from some client for a car of hay. They get somebody else down in the country to send along the car. It comes and is not satisfactory and is refused. Then it is up to the railroad company to collect from the broker, the shipper or the consignee, which is frequently next to impossible."

GREAT DOCKS AND PIERS AT PORT DALNY BLOWN UP TO PREVENT JAPS LANDING

Millions of Dollars Worth of Property Destroyed By Russians.

Persistent Rumors of Fighting Are Coming From Port Arthur.

Japs Say Communicatton With City Has Not Been Re-Established.

St. Petersburg, May 12, 6:45 p. m.—Rumors are widely current here that fighting is in progress at Port Arthur, but there is no official news confirming the reports.

The Russians still hold Newchwang.

Tokio, May 12, 8 p. m.—Official inquiry shows that Viceroy Alexieff's report that railroad communication with Port Arthur has been restored since Monday is untrue.

St. Petersburg, May 12.—Viceroy Alexieff has telegraphed to the czar announcing that the Russians have blown up the docks and piers at Port Dalny, Liao Tung peninsula, presumably to render more difficult a Japanese landing at that point.

Port Dalny on Talien Wan bay, on the east coast of the Liao Tung peninsula, was intended by Russia to be the chief commercial emporium of its eastern dominions. An edict providing for its construction was issued by the Russian emperor, July 30, 1899, and Port Dalny, fully equipped with all modern improvements, docks, warehouses and railroad facilities, was opened to commerce in December, 1901.

Talien Wan bay is one of the finest deep water harbors on the Pacific. It is free from ice in winter time and ships drawing thirty feet of water can enter at low tide without difficulty and without the aid of pilots can sail or steam alongside of the immense docks and piers, where their cargoes can be loaded into railroad cars and run direct for 6000 miles into the city of St. Petersburg. Five large piers had been constructed, each supplied with numerous railroad tracks and immense warehouses and elevators, gas electric lights and water, and a large breakwater was being constructed so that ships could lie at the piers and load and unload regardless of weather. Docks for foreign vessels, steam and sail, extended between the piers and along the shore for two miles. There were two first-class dry docks, one intended for ordinary ocean steamers and the other designed to accommodate the largest vessels of war or commerce.

Over $6,000,000 had been expended on the harbor system before the end of 1902, and it was estimated that the cost of completing the works would be nearly $20,000,000 but this does not in any way represent the total cost of the erection of this great commercial port, which, with Port Arthur, distant about twenty miles, was leased by the Chinese government to Russia in 1898.

Nearly 25,000 men were employed daily on the work of constructing the port and town. The total population has been estimated at about 60,000, mostly Chinese, Japanese, Koreans and Russians.

FOUGHT ALL DAY.

The Battle at Anju Was a Fierce One.

Seoul, Korea, May 11.—(Delayed in transmission.)—Infantry reinforcements reached the beleaguered Japanese troops at Anju at 6:30 o'clock on the evening of May 10. The garrison had fought fiercely for twelve hours, the men reserving their fire until the enemy were at close range upon each attempt to storm the gate. The Cossacks then retired over the eastern hills toward Yong Pong, the provincial capital, leaving fifty killed and wounded on the field and one non-commissioned officer captured. The Japanese lost four killed and six wounded, besides one telegraph operator. The Japanese troops are now in pursuit of the enemy and an engagement is momentarily expected.

It is supposed that the Cossacks are part of the body which crossed the headwaters of the Yalu near Chang Seng and occupied Cheng Ju, not knowing of the disaster which had attended their arms on the Yalu, continuing to carry out their orders to harrass the enemy and cut off his communications, which would now be impossible with even a much larger force.

Tokio, May 12.—Later details of the Russian attack on Anju last Tuesday states that the fighting lasted all day. Japanese reinforcements arrived from Ping Yang at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The Russians retired Wednesday morning at the approach of further Japanese reinforcements from Kosen. The Japanese are pursuing the Rusians in the direction of Kai Chong.

The Japanese casualties at Anju were four killed and six wounded. The Russian casualties were about fifty.

A Russian prisoner said that the Cossack raiders number 500.

JAPS ARE CAUTIOUS.

Proceeding Slowly Towards Investment of Port Arthur.

St. Petersburg, May 12.—From the official advices received here, it is evident that the Japanese are proceeding very cautiously toward the investment

HILL HAS RECEIPTS FOR CONTRIBUTIONS

Can Easily Show What He Donated to Republican Campaign Fund.

Collins and Dunn Have Stopped Talking, For Present, at Least.

St. Paul, May 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Although Judge Loren W. Collins of St. Cloud refuses to give out the letter from James J. Hill, in reply to the judge's letter asking if the railroad magnate stated to Robert C. Dunn, of Princeton, that he had contributed from $30,000 to $40,000 to Judge Collins' campaign in 1894, it is learned from an authoritative source that Mr. Hill's reply is in substance, although in not so many words, as follows:

"Yes, I stated to Mr. Dunn that I had contributed large sums to the Republican campaign of 1894, when Judge Collins was a candidate for re-election as justice of the supreme court, and I have the receipts to prove my contributions."

Copies of Mr. Hill's letters to Judge Collins and to State Librarian E. A. Nelson are said to be in the possession of a close friend of Mr. Hill, and it was reported in St. Paul yesterday that this friend had revealed the substance of the letters. The friends of Mr. Dunn believe that, because Mr. Hill practically substantiates Mr. Dunn's statements, Judge Collins and Mr. Nelson have decided not to give out the letters.

State Librarian E. A. Nelson said yesterday regarding his letter to Mr. Hill and the reply:

"I asked Mr. Hill two questions—first, whether he authorized Mr. Dunn to state that I had solicited from the president of the Great Northern $25,000 for Judge Collins' campaign; second, whether there is the slightest truth in the statements as made by Mr. Dunn. Mr. Hill did not answer either of these questions, but further than this I do not wish to discuss the matter. I do not care to have Mr. Hill's letter to me published unless Judge Collins publishes his, and it is possible that the letters may never be made public."

The refusal of Mr. Dunn to reply to Judge Collins' letter, asking him if he made the statements attributed to him in the St. Paul papers is the subject of considerable discussion in the Twin Cities, and there is a difference of opinion as to what will be the effect of Mr. Dunn's action in this respect. The Collins men say that it is an admission on Mr. Dunn's part that he was mistaken when he made the charges, and that he prefers to let the matter drop. The Dunn men deny this emphatically. One of the leading Dunn workers said yesterday:

"Mr. Dunn has given Judge Collins to understand that he made the statements attributed to him in the Twin City papers. He has done so in repeated interviews, and he has offered to talk with the judge over the telephone or in a personal interview. The judge, therefore, knows that Mr. Dunn made the statements, and for this reason Mr. Dunn does not feel called upon to put the matter in black and white.

"Moreover, the Collins men have taken steps to substantiate Mr. Dunn's charges by communicating with Mr. Hill, and Mr. Dunn believes that they should find out about the matter directly from him. In addition to this, Mr. Dunn does not wish to throw himself open to a libel suit by writing a letter to Judge Collins, when the judge knows that he made the statements."

Friends of State Auditor S. G. Iverson say that there is no truth in the report that the state auditor has "fired" Charles N. Orr, a clerk in the office, who was appointed by Mr. Dunn, and who boards at Mr. Dunn's house at Hamline. Mr. Iverson's friends say that when he became state auditor the understanding between Mr. Dunn and Mr. Iverson was that Mr. Orr should remain in the office until he graduates from a law school, which he will do in June. They deny the report that Mr. Orr was appointed until 1907, and that the state auditor has asked for his resignation, to take effect June 1. Both Mr. Iverson and Mr. Orr preferred not to discuss the matter yesterday.

Aside from the foregoing developments an atmosphere of quiet prevails at the headquarters of both Judge Collins and Mr. Dunn. Both candidates have stopped talking. The friends of Mr. Dunn believe that he has talked too much, and although they admire his frankness and willingness to take the people of the state into his confidence, they fear that he has made some political blunders in repeating the statements of Mr. Hill, and in getting provoked over the report of Sam Johnson.

"We all cannot help admiring Bob," said a Republican yesterday, "for he is always willing to tell the people what he thinks. He is always willing to take the peopel into his confidence. He calls a spade a spade invariably. This is not always good politics, but it's Bob's way.

"This is shown by Bob's action in calling up the governor by telephone and telling him what he thought about the trick to get the report of the public examiner published. Dunn believed that the governor deserved a calling down, and in spite of the fact that Van Sant is the chief magistrate of the state of Minnesota, he called him down good and proper. It might have been an impolitic thing to do, but it is Bob's way, and we cannot help admiring him for it."

THIBETANS ASSUME THE OFFENSIVE

Gyang Tse, Thibet, May 10.—(Delayed in transmission.)—The Thibetans have taken the offensive against the British mission camp here. From a fort about six furlongs away they are steadily bombarding the camp with a half dozen guns carrying solid cannon balls of a pound weight.

Another large gathering of Thibetans is reported from the Rong valley, and, although the British communications in the rear are still open, the mission is practically besieged.

New York, May 12.—An irregular rifle fire on the British mission to Thibet was kept up from Jong all through Sunday, according to a Times dispatch from Gyang Tse. One mission follower was wounded in the hip and died a few hours later. Finally, mounted infantry went out and drove in the Thibetan horsemen, inflicting a small loss. The Thibetans were visible in large numbers in all parts of Jong but made for cover when the British opened a long range fire.

London, May 12.—Indian Secretary Brodrick informed the house of commons today that the government had decided that recent events in Thibet made it inevitable that the British mission must advance to L'Hasa, the capital, unless the Thibetans consented to negotiate at Gyang-Tse within a given date. The Chinese ambassador has been notified to this effect. At the same time, added Mr. Brodrick, the government does not intend to depart from its policy regarding Thibet, as previously announced. All the necessary measures will be taken to secure the lines of communication.

ANOTHER BATTLE IN ACRE DISPUTE

New York, May 12.—Reports have been received that another battle over the Acre dispute has been fought in the upper Purus valley, says a Herald dispatch from Rio Janiero, Brazil. Col. Arujo, who started from Chandless with 220 men, attacked the Peruvians at Santa Rosa. The fight lasted for twenty-four hours. Finally Col. Arujo had to withdraw after losing many killed and wounded. Col. Arujo says the battle was fought under favorable conditions.

It is announced that negotiations are continuing with favorable indications. Meanwhile the military and naval preparations continue. It is understood that the war vessels Deodoro, Fonseca, Tiradentes, Tambira, and Tamayo will go to Manaos.

WILL PUNISH MURDEROUS MOROS

Washington, May 12.—The war department has received from Gen. Wade, commanding the United States troops in the Philippines, the following cable report of the ambushing of a detachment of Company F, Sevententh infantry, in Mindanao, dated Manila today:

"While on a reconnaisance to locate Datto Ali, who had been sending in threatening messages and trying to stir up trouble, a detachment of Company F, Seventeenth infantry, consisting of thirty-nine enlisted men, was attacked by Moros near Lake Lignasan, Mindanao, on May 8. First Lieut. Harry A. Woodruff, Second Lieut. Joseph H. Hall and fifteen enlisted men were killed, and five enlisted men were wounded. The names of the killed and wounded will be reported by cable later. Gen. Wood has ordered troops to proceed and recover the bodies and arms of our killed and to punish the offenders. No further details have been received."

MASTERS AND PILOTS REJECT THE OFFER OF THE LAKE CARRIERS

Cleveland, May 12.—It was stated at the headquarters of the Masters' and Pilots' association here today that returns had been received from twenty-one out of a total of twenty-six harbors where votes have been taken on the wage proposition of the Lake Carriers, with the result that the offer has been rejected by an overwhelming majority.

District Captain Paul Howell of the Masters' and Pilots' association today sent a communication to President Livingstone of the Lake Carriers' association in this city in which he said the few members voting to accept it were in such a small minority that the masters and pilots hardly think it worth while to notice their vote at all.

President Livingstone upon receipt of this letter laid it before the executive committee of the Lake Carriers' association.

RUSSIA IS IRRITATED

By United States and Personal Friend of Czar Talks.

New York, May 12.—Among the arrivals on the Kaiser Wilhelm II yesterday was Prince Hespere Oukhtomsky, chief owner of the St. Petersburg Vledomostl, one of the leading newspapers of Russia and regarded as the semi-official organ of the czar. Prince Oukhtomsky comes here as the special representative of the czar on a special mission which he does not disclose. He goes to Washington, where he will meet Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, President Roosevelt and Secretary Hay. He then will make a tour of the country, stopping at Pittsburg, Chicago, St. Louis, Chicinnati and other leading cities and may before his return visit the Pacific coast.

The Prince said today that one of the reasons why Russia cancelled her exhibits at the St. Louis fair was the prevailing sentiment of the people of the United States and the attitude of our government at Washington in relation to the Russo-Japanese war.

Prince Oukhtomsky adds that the czar may have had other reasons for his course, but the prince does not care to mention them just now.

This statement, which, comes from a man of Prince Oukhtomsky's station, takes on the form of an official pronunciamento, is the first definite admission that Russia's withdrawal was due to her irritation at the United States. A rumor to this effect was indeed cabled to this country early in February when the withdrawal from the exposition was announced, but the report was officially denied both at the Russian embassy in Washington and at St. Petersburg.

"SUN WORSHIPER" GOES TO INSANE ASYLUM.

Chicago, May 12.—Crying incoherently that her name was Minnesota, and she was in the cathedral of St. Paul, Miss Emma Reusse, a member of the so-called "Sun worship" cult, here, was declared insane today. The young woman will be taken to the state hospital at Elgin. Mrs. John Tradup, of St. Paul, a half sister of the young woman, was the principal witness at the hearing. In her testimony Mrs. Tradup declared that the condition of her half sister was caused by weeks of excessive fasting. The witness said Mrs. Reusse had been in Chicago three years, and during that time had been a follower of a "Sun-worship" leader.

Minneapolis, May 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Second Vice President and General Manager Pennington of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste Marie railroad in an official circular announces that his road having acquired the Bismarck, Washburn & Great Falls railway, extending from Bismarck to Underwood, N. D., it will on and after May 15, be operated as a part of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste Marie railway.

VOLUMINOUS DOCUMENT.

Seventeen Thousand Pages In Patrick's Appeal.

New York, May 12.—Recorder Goff has signed the settlement of the case on appeal of Lawyer Albert T. Patrick who was convicted before him March 27, 1902, of the murder of William Marsh Rice. It is the most voluminous document of the kind ever presented to the court of appeals, consisting of 17,000 printed pages, including the testimony, exhibits and records of the surrogates' court. The court ruled that the case must be argued within forty days. Ex-Senator Hill will represent Patrick.

MEMBERS OF THE COAL COMBINE MUST PAY FINE.

Chicago, May 12.—The appellate court today affirmed the sentence fining seventeen members of the Northern Illinois Soft Coal association $500 for participation in an illegal combination. The purpose of the combination was to fix the price at which coal should be sold.

DELEGATES FROM INDIANA ARE INSTRUCTED TO VOTE FOR JUDGE PARKER AT ST. LOUIS

Followers of Hearst Were Defeated From the Start.

The Delegates Also Instructed to Vote as a Unit.

Directed to Choose Taggart Member of National Committee.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 12.—The first session of the Indiana Democratic convention was called to order today by State Chairman O'Brien. The platform will be adopted and a state ticket nominated at a second session to be held here July 20.

The contest today was for control of the delegation to the national convention. National Committeeman Taggart the members of the state committee and nearly all of the old party leaders have been for weeks open advocates of the nomination of Judge Parker, of New York, while the followers of W. R. Hearst have been outspoken in their choice. In the preliminary county and district organizations the Parker following has carried a majority of the counties and all the districts, but the Twelfth. Of the 1547 delegates to the convention the Parker people have been claiming from 1060 to 1100, conceding the others to Hearst.

At the district caucuses held last night to select the twenty-six district delegates, Hearst carried but one district, the Twelfth, electing his two delegates. Parker followers carried the others. The followers of Hearst have been taking affidavits in several districts and collecting evidence which they say will be presented at the national convention to prove their claims that the were not given fair treatment, and their delegates were the real choice of the district. Contests from the Second, Sixth, Tenth and Thirteenth districts will be carried to St. Louis. At the caucuses last night rump Hearst meetings were held and a second set of delegates selected.

The hall was crowded to the doors when the convention opened. State Chairman O'Brien called the convention to order and the majority report of the convention on permanent organization was read by C. C. Matson, of Greencastle. A minority report was read by John H. Alken, of the Twelfth district.

The chair announced that the first question to be settled would be organization of the convention and no recommendations for delegates-at-large would be read until the convention was organized.

An effort was made by the Hearst following, through Senator Ulrey of Fort Wayne, to appeal from the chair, but the chair announced there would be no appeal or point of order allowed until the convention was organized. There was great confusion, but the chair refused to recognize any one, and Mr. Alken moved the adoption of the minority report.

The call of counties was ordered. This brought out the first test of strength. The vote resulted: For adopting the minority report, 471 1 3; against 1094 2-3.

When the vote was announced Chairman O'Brien at once declared Mr. Smith elected. Mr. Smith addressed the convention as follows:

"It is but natural, and, therefore reasonable that there should be honest difference of opinion as to the merits of candidates and methods of procedure, but all such differences should be, and I trust will be, adjusted without leaving either sting or regret behind. In your deliberations you will remember always that the welfare of your party is paramount to personal ambition, and when there is a conflict of interests the individual must yield for the party's good; for, however earnest the conflict of this day, the battle will end with the announcement of the choice of the majority of this convention.

"Democrats believe in absolute acquiescence in the decision of the majority. They regard it as a vital principle of the republic from which there is no appeal but to force. But we also believe that there can be no occasion for any appeal from the action of a Democratic convention. Fair treatment and equal rights will not admit of an appeal. Here as delegates you stand upon equal ground, and under the rules of this body you have a voice in its proceedings, and whatever result is reached all are bound thereby, for it will speak the voice of the majority of the Democratic party of Indiana, and from that decision no loyal Democrat will appeal.

"Adhering to the doctrine of Jefferson, the Democratic party stands for the preservation of the general government in its whole constitutional vigor as the sheet anchor of our peace at home and safety abroad. This is the chief principle upon which the republic rests. The Republican president disregards treaties, statutes and constitution, and exercises arbitrary power with as little concern as the czar of Russia. The evil consequences of such misrule are far reaching. The example is dangerous.

"The records show that the legislative and executive departments at Washington are honeycombed with corruption. One United States senator has just been convicted of bribery, and another one escaped the penitentiary because he pleaded that he committed the crime charged while drawing his salary, but before he had taken the oath of a senator. Scores of members of the house have been accused of corruption by one of their own party. The postoffice department is known to be rotten to the core, and the fraudulent disposition of the public lands appeals to decency and honor for investigation.

"The expenditures under the Roosevelt administration are so enormous that they chill the imagination. In addition the records of the public service will show that there has been more official dishonesty and a greater number of defalcations under the Roosevelt administration than under any other administration since Washington's time. The official depravity of the administration is only kept under cover by the refusal of congress to investigate it.

"The demand is for reform in the public service, and the people have no patience

MRS. POWELL IS SENTENCED TO LIFE IMPRISONMENT FOR THE MURDER OF ESTELLE ALBIN

MRS. MARY A. POWELL.

Dover, Del., May 12.—Counsel for Mrs. Mary A. Powell, who was convicted of murder in the second degree for killing Estelle Albin, today withdrew their motion for a new trial, and Mrs. Powell was sentenced to imprisonment for life.

ELEVATOR B AT FORT WILLIAM TOTALLY DESTROYED BY FIRE

Ft. William, Ont., May 12.—Fire today destroyed Elevator B, owned by the Canadian Pacific railway and valued at $250,000. There were about 300,000 bushels of wheat in the elevator at the time and the grain together with the structure is a total loss. The loss of this elevator will seriously cripple business from this place. Elevator B had a capacity of 1,250,000 bushels and was built in 1888.

The announcement of the burning of the elevator at Fort William was of much interest on the Duluth Board of Trade and occasioned considerable alarm until the later dispatches gave the true state of affairs. One Duluth firm, the Ames-Brooks company, handles a good deal of Canadian wheat, selling it abroad, and have considerable wheat at that point awaiting shipment. The company during the morning received advices that not to exceed 250,000 bushels of grain was stored in the house and none of the grain belongs to it. It was stated that the worst feature of the fire was that it cuts off the power from a number of other houses, leaving practically only one house from which loading can now be done.

MUCH TROUBLE IN GETTING JURY

Rising Sun, Ind., May 12.—The contention over the selection of jurors in the trial of James Gillespie and his sister, Mrs. Belle Seward, and Mr. and Mrs. Myron Barbour, for the murder of Elizabeth Gillespie, continued today. It was found that many of those whose names were on the special venire of thirty issued last night had disappeared. It is thought that many were advised that their names had been drawn, and that they left during the night. The release of Oscar Jones yesterday, after the jury had been sworn the previous day, has reopened the challenging. Today August Greve and W. J. Powell were released on peremptory challenges by the defense, while others who were being examined were excused. With nine left in the jury box, the state still had ten challenges and the defense eight. James Gillespie has been having trouble with newspaper men and visitors and attendants and was given special attention by the court today.

BEYERS BETRAYS CONFEDERATES

New York, May 12.—Rudolph Beyers, a former policeman now serving a six months' sentence in the penitentiary for taking money from police candidates, has made a statement, according to the World, in which he gives the names of the influential persons through whom positions were secured in the police and fire departments by the use of money. Beyers, it is said, corroborated in detail a statement made to the district attorney by E. A. Sonner, who is serving a short sentence on charges similar to those against the ex-policeman. A vigorous investigation is being made and arrests are expected in the near future. One of the men influential in the police department is said to have been formerly a high official, while another is still in office.

TOO MANY SUITORS.

Girl Could Not Choose and Is Insane.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 12.—The problem of deciding between two suiuters for her hand has unbalanced the mind of Miss Freda Solvsberg, aged 26. Miss Solvsberg came from Sweden two years ago, and in that country had been courted by a young man who recently came to Sioux City, but before his arrval she had formed a fond friendship with another.

She told the county commissioners yesterday that she called on one of the young men, and that this should not be done by a young woman. She says God will never forgive her for doing it. She will be sent to the asylum at Cherokee.

MOST VALUABLE CARGO EVER LEAVING NEW YORK.

New York, May 12.—The French line steamer La Lorraine sailed for Havre today with $9,300,000 in gold bars and specie, the most valuable shipment of gold which has ever gone out of this port. Considering the value of the ship herself, at $4,000,000, her general cargo at $1,000,000, and adding these to the sum represented by the gold, La Lorraine as she sailed today is the most valuable ship which has ever put out from New York.

"PE-RU-NA SAVED MY LIFE,"

Writes Mrs. W. McRoberts.

"I Do All My Housework and Take Care of My Baby and I Feel So Good."

A YOUNG MOTHER'S LETTER

Mrs. W. McRoberts, writes to Dr. Hartman from Delano, Miss., the following:

Delano, Miss.

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio:

Dear Sir: "I feel perfectly well of catarrh. I did as you directed me to and took Peruna and Manalin. The third of March I gave birth to a ten pound baby girl and we are both well and happy. I am very thankful to you and Peruna saved my life. I recommend it to everyone and can't praise it enough.

"I send you my own and my baby's picture. She is so sweet and good,—she is a Peruna baby. I have such good health now. I do all my housework and take care of my baby and feel so good.

"There are three or four of my neighbors using Peruna now since it did me so much good. They were just run down, and they think it is fine. It is so good to give strength."—Mrs. W. McRoberts.

We have thousands of testimonials from mothers concerning the benefit of Peruna to their babies.

MRS. L. M. GRIFFITH, Arco, Idaho, writes: "I am thirty years old and never had any children; but since beginning your medicine I gave birth to a 10-pound baby girl. I am stronger than I have been since I was quite young. God bless you and your medicine forever."

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

SAD STORY TOLD

Of Two Wisconsin Sisters Separated For Many Years.

Brother Is Henry Jacobs, Now Living In Superior.

Colorado Springs, Colo., May 12.—Parted by marriage and after twenty-four years' separation united by death is the strange tale of two Wisconsin sisters revealed by the filing of a washerwoman's will here in the El Paso county court.

Living in apparent poverty and washing clothes for a living, Mrs. Hannah Daniels was taken to St. Francis' hospital several weeks ago as a charity patient. She died at that institution on April 29. It has just developed that before dying Mrs. Daniels sent for a neighbor, Mrs. Mary Craven, who had nursed her during illness in her humble home, and who also takes in washing for a living, and informed her that she wanted to present her with everything she possessed.

The dying woman then turned over to her astonished friend not just a few family trinkets and a legacy of debts, but a bank book on the First National bank of this city, showing $500 to her credit, and the keys to a safety deposit box in which she informed her there were title deeds to four lots in Denver and over $2000 in money, which she had saved from her earnings from washings in the past fifteen years. Next she whispered in the excited woman's ear a few words that led to the discovery of about $600 in nickels, dimes, quarters and half-dollars in a tin pail hidden in a barrel of flour.

But Mrs. Craven, with visions of a life of more enjoyment before her than her wildest imaginings had hitherto conjured up, smashed her air castles by an honest act prompted by her fine conscience. Learning that Mrs. Daniels' sister, Mrs. Lena Rasmussan, was alive, she wired for her to come here. When she arrived, Mrs. Daniels made another disposition of her property, whereby the sister gets the money.

Mrs. Rasmussan had not seen her sister for twenty-four years, and had not heard from her for the last ten years. Twenty-four years ago when Mrs. Daniels, then Hannah Jacobs, left her home in Oconto county, Wisconsin, she visited her sister and brother, Henry Jacobs, who now lives at Superior, Wis. Mrs. Daniels went to Chicago and then to California. Later she came to Colorado and made Denver her home. The sister and brother in the East corresponded with her until she went to Denver. There they lost trace of her, and for the past ten years they did not know whether she was alive or dead, until Mrs. Craven, in looking through some old letters of the sick woman, found Mrs. Rasmussan's address, and telegraphed her to come to Colorado Springs.

Mrs. Rasmussan states that she wrote as many as twenty letters to her in Denver, but all were returned to her after going to the dead letter office in Washington. It is supposed that Mrs. Daniels was married about that time and the fact that the letters were sent to Miss Hannah Jacobs accounts for her failure to receive them.

Mrs. Rasmussan has left for her home, not waiting for the probating of the will, and her interests will be handled by attorneys here. She is the sole beneficiary. Mrs. Craven, who has waived all claim to the money, will receive the Denver real estate.

Nothing is known of Mrs. Daniels' husband. It is believed he died a short time after the marriage.

CONVENTION AT HANCOCK

By Republicans—Democratic Sentiment Largely Favors Parker.

Hancock, Mich., May 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—The republicans of the county held an enthusiastic convention, Tuesday afternoon. Chairman R. H. Shields of the county committee called the meeting to order and John Duncan was chosen chairman, and W. F. Miller, secretary of the convention. Delegates were elected to the state, congressional and senatorial conventions. Resolutions were passed endorsing the Roosevelt administration and Roosevelt's candidacy for president; also the re-election of Senator Charles Smith to the State Senate and the re-election of Congressman H. O. Young.

Thomas Walters was recommended as delegate at large. The proceedings were interspersed with songs by Homer Warren and Mr. Briggs. At the close the convention arose in a body and sang "America."

The Democratic situation is somewhat in doubt. At Calumet it is the impression that the majority are against Hearst and for Parker. At Hancock the more conservative and most prominent Democrats are for Parker, while about an equal number are for Hearst. In Houghton the Democratss with very few exceptions are for Parker. Edward Ryan, a prominent Democrat from Calumet, says that all are in favor of John Power as a delegate-at-large. Mr. Power is perhaps the best known Democrat in upper Michigan.

TOO MUCH REFUSE

Health Officer Will Stop Dumping on Lower Fifth Avenue.

Will Ask Council to Consider the Matter With Him.

The health authorities will take immediate action against the citizens who are using the vacant property on lower Fifth avenue for a dumping ground.

"This property has been used as a dumping ground for three years past," said Health Commissioner Murray this morning. "I find in looking over the records of the office that there have been numerous complaints filed concerning it and since I have been in office the electric light company has made complaint that the refuse gets into its intake pipe and clogs it up.

"It is a very unsightly and unsanitary condition. Every person who has occasion to use the dock either to take the ferry or the steamers running up the river has to pass within smelling distance of the place.

"I do not care to take the responsibility of disposing of the matter myself, and shall ask the council to take the matter up with me next Monday night. It would do little good simply to order the people who are using the spot for a dumping ground to stop. Some action must be taken to remedy the nuisance which is already there.

"It is the worst condition of affairs I have found since I have been in the city's employ. To remove the refuse that has been dumped there would involve a heavy expense and if steps are to be taken to compel the people who created the nuisance to abate it, I would prefer that the council share the responsibilities with me.

"Our extra force for the spring clean-up is now all organized. The city is divided into eleven districts and if the weather is fine tomorrow it will be set to work. It is going to be one of the quickest spring cleanings the city has ever seen. During the time the extra force of men is at work, every cellar in the city will be inspected at least twice in order to make sure that no unsanitary conditions exist. At the first visit the inspector will determine what is necessary to be done and a second inspection will be made to see whether the orders have been carried out.

"Every effort will also be made to see that the back-yards are put in a sanitary condition, and the health department will work together with the board of public works in cleaning up the alleys throughout the city. If we have fine weather the work will be in full swing by the end of the week."

MAYOR WILL TAKE REST

He has not been in good health for several months past, and he was advised by his physician to take a holiday from business and a complete rest. He will spend a couple of weeks at the mineral springs in the hope that they will be of some benefit to him.

During his absence President Haven of the council will sign any necessary documents under the provisons of the city charter, and his private secretary, Alfred McCallum, will transact the regular business of the office.

Drinking Not So Heavy.

A lonely "vag" and a solitary "jag" comprised the sum total of the daily grist of prisoners in the municipal court this morning.

"Everybody seems to have quit drinking this spring," said Judge Windom as he sized up the two prisoners. "The number of police court cases this spring is unusually small."

The "jag" received a sentence of $10 and costs and the "vag" pleaded not guilty and his hearing was set for this afternoon.

SHE WANTS DAMAGES

Because S. A. Eckstein, Formerly of Oshkosh, Married a Widow.

Miss H. A. Johnson Claims He Promised to Wed Her.

Chicago, Ill., May 12.—"Darling," "dearest," and "we'll have to postpone the date again," are claimed to be vital portions of letters which will be introduced as testimony in the $25,000 breach of promise suit begun yesterday by Miss Henrietta A. Johnson against Samuel Eckstein, formerly of Oshkosh, Wis., a wealthy tailor with offices until recently in the Commercial National Bank building.

When seen Mr. Eckstein said he was no longer in business, though he was at these offices. He declined to make any statement, but previously he had made denial of the charges to a representative of a local news bureau. He further declined to say whether he had engaged counsel. The only positive statement he made was that he would fight the charges in court.

Miss Johnson charges that she first knew of the breach of promise when her sister, Emma Johnson, saw Mr. Eckstein and his wife, who was formerly Mrs. Catherine Delno, of Lockport, N. Y., at the Union station, and afterward at the St. Charles hotel, in New Orleans. Through diligent inquiry Miss Emma Johnson learned the status of affairs, and wired her sister in Chicago, who had been living at her home for some time.

Miss Henrietta Johnson, the plaintiff, is a comely woman of 30 years, who had been the belle of a small Indiana town before coming to Chicago. She charges that after a year's acquaintance Mr. Eckstein engaged himself to marry her three years ago, and while he never tendered her a ring or other jewels with which to seal his troth, on several occasions he made her presents of valuable clothing. In addition, she claims it was a matter of common knowledge to their friends that they were engaged, and that she has in her possession more than forty love letters, which will be produced in court, containing statements which show positively the relations between them, and also requesting that the date of the wedding be postponed.

Miss Johnson claims her health has been impaired by the shock of finding her affianced wedded to another and the damage to her affections, in addition, constitute a loss equivalent to $25,000 in cash.

Mr. Eckstein is a tall, elegantly dressed man of 45, who wears a drooping moustache and eyeglasses and converses with a broad English accent. He came originally from Oshkosh, Wis., where members of his family are wealthy social leaders in the community. For years he has represented his own institution throughout the northwest and he is well known through Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan as well as Illinois.

"I have never been engaged to marry Miss Johnson," he said.

Mr. Eckstein married Mrs. Delno four months ago. He had been a guest at the Stratford hotel and Auditorium Anex for years until the last of last month, and his residence with his wife since then has not been generally known.

"Mr. Eckstein appeared in my office with his wife," said Attorney A. M. Schwarz, 115 Dearborn street, "but Mrs. Eckstein did all the talking. She endeavored to direct my movements in the case, and to suggest what I should do. Mr. Eckstein, who as a clothing salesman is known as a fluent and convincing talker throughout the northwest, failed to say much, if anything. The suit will go to trial and I believe we have ample evidence to show the engagement and damages sustained by the young woman."

ALIENATION OF AFFECTION

Guardian of Mrs. Otto R. Lonsdorf Demands $250,000 Damages

Milwaukee, Wis., May 12.—Judgment in the sum of $250,000 damages for the alleged alenation of her husband's affections is demanded from Mrs. Margaret Lonstorf and her children by Mrs. Emma Lonstorf, wife of Otto R. Lonstorf, through her guardian, John Randall, she now being an inmate of the Milwaukee county insane asylum.

Mrs. Lonstorf, who is a daughter of William Sturm, for twenty years a janitor in the Sixth ward school, was married to Otto R. Lonstorf, who is made a party to the suit, July 16, 1895, at Negaunee, Mich., in the presence of a sister of the groom and her husband, but against the consent and wishes of Mrs. Margaret Lonstorf and her other children. For some time after the marriage the young couple resided with Mr. and Mrs. Sturm, who, it is said, contributed to their support for two years, when the husband lost his employment, it is alleged, through alleged machinations of members of his family.

A system of persecution was begun, it is alleged, to induce a separation, and large sums of money were given to the husband to keep him out of the state and beyond the jurisdiction of civil and criminal courts.

Despite the fact that the mother of her husband is said to be many times a millionaire, and that the children at her death will receive in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 each, the younger Mrs. Lonstorf finds herself unable to pay the $5 weekly demand for board, and the $40 annually for clothing in the asylum and has become a public charge.

In the meantime Otto R. Lonstorf has commenced action for divorce, the first in Michigan being dropped, and there is now pending in the state of Wisconsin, and the complaint alleges that false statements were made for the purpose of deceiving the judge, he not being apprised of the fact that his wife is the inmate of an asylum.

The defendants against whom the suit are brought are Mrs. Margaret Lonstorf, Otto R. Lonstorf, the husband; George J. Ida C. Hoffman, the divorced wife of Bernard Hoffman; Matilda, Henrietta, Camille, Edwina and Viola Lonstorf.

PORTAGE LAKE Y. M. C. A. DINES

Annual Banquet of Contributors and Members Is Held.

Hancock, Mich., May 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Portage Lake Y. M. C. A. here has just finished one of the most successful season's work in the history of the association. At the annual contributors' and members' banquet Tuesday evening 100 covers were laid and a number of representative contributors and members were present. The association hall was beautifully decorated with the national colors and flags, and the platform, on which the Twin City Mandolin club was seated while giving a selected program, was set with potted plants.

R. H. Shields showed himself a happy toastmaster. He first called upon the treasurer of the association, Otto Borresen, for a report, which showed the total receipts to be $5404.94 and total disbursements $6199.38. The debt due a year ago was $10,000, and is now, less unpaid subscriptions, approximately $2200. It is felt by the treasurer that another year of successful effort will put the association free from debt and will also give the building better equipment.

Mayor Coughlin of Hancock responded to the toast, "Our Twin Cities," and spoke of the advance the cities had made in the line of street pavements, schools, hospitals, business and the Y. M. C. A., which helps men to be strong. Hon. W. J. Galbraith spoke on "The Y. M. C. A. and Good Citizenship." The unique subject, "Pity 'tis, 'Tis Not True," was assigned to George A. Royce, of Houghton, who enumerated several important things which he said "pity 'tis they're not true." Superintendent Kratz of the Calumet schools spoke of "The Young Man of Tomorrow," and characterized him as more alert, with greater power of the intiative and more manly and ingenuous in religion than the young man of today. George C. Bently felt at home with the subject, "Portage Lake Y. M. C. A.—Past, Present and Future."

Toastmaster Shields called on Secretary Steele, Mr. Moss, of Houghton, and Rev. Menard for impromptu toasts. The Misses Shields and Russell Shields gave a trio.

On the north wall of the hall was an exhibit of the work of the class in mechanical drawing, which was a credit to the instructor as well as the students.

Resolutions of sympathy were voted E. L. Wright, who is severely ill at a hospital in Detroit. Mr. Wright has been one of the most faithful supporters of the Y. M. C. A. and is missed by all its members and officers.

GENTLEMAN BURGLAR

Tells Victim Where Stolen Property Was Hidden.

Plainfield, N. J., May 12.—Although a convict in state prison, in Trenton, serving a term for wholesale plundering of residences in this vicinity, gentleman burglar Weler informed one of his victims, John J. Maier, where his stolen property was hidden, and the latter has recovered it. Mr. Maier had little hope of getting it back, but decided to try a letter on Weler to see what it would do. He was agreeably surprised to get a courteous answer, well written, locating the property.

Weler played the gentleman at a hotel here for some time, robbing fine residences and paying court to confiding young women to whom he made presents of jewelry. Jealousy on the part of one, while he paid court to another, prompted her to report him and aid the police in trapping him.

HE WANTS ALIMONY

From Aged Woman Suing Him For Divorce.

Zanesville, Ohio, May 12.—In the common pleas court the divorce case of Mrs. Alexander Gaunder was heard by Judge Kennedy, who took the case under advisement. Mrs. Gaunder is 70 years old and her husband is 73. She alleges cruelty. Mr. Gaunder held a position at the Ohio penitentiary for several years prior to last September. He filed a counter plea for alimony, his wife being the owner of two large farms.

WOMEN MUST TESTIFY.

Sensation to Be Developed In Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 12.—When Dr. Albert Appel, who is under indictment for performing a criminal operation and who is called by Coroner Dugan one of the chiefs of the malpractice ring, is called for trial the coroner will produce eighty-five women as witnesses against him. All these women have been patients of Appel.

Among these women are many who are in Philadelphia's best society and others are wives of prominent men. Since it has leaked out that the coroner has their names in his possession he has been besieged by attorneys and men who are in the front ranks of the city's life.

Shortly after Dr. Appel was arrested a search was made for his office. Then the book of names of patients was discovered. Subpoenaes will be issued for all the women and in many cases for their husbands as well. It is said at the coroner's office that when the case is placed on trial Philadelphia will be treated to a sensation never before touched in its history.

The detectives who have been running out the hints contained in this malpractitioner's dairy have unearthed, it is alleged, a most startling state of affairs. All Dr. Appel's patients were well to do. They had to be to meet his prices.

ELGIN WOMAN SAVED

From Prosecution By Old Father's Sacrifice.

Elgin, Ill., May 12.—By the self-sacrifice of her aged father and the philanthropy of an Elgin capitalist, Miss Elizabeth J. Lunn, treasurer of the Elgin Women's club, has been saved from criminal prosecution for her shortage of $3600 in the building fund of the organization.

At a meeting of the club the demand of one faction for prosecution was met by the offer of Mr. Lunn to surrender all his property, valued at $1700 above incumbrances, and of G. P. Lord to contribute $1000 to the building fund in settlement of the treasurer's defalcation. These propositions were accepted and the incident was closed.

The settlement leaves Mr. Lunn, who is 84 year old, without means, and the daughters will be compelled to work for a livelihood. Miss Mattie closed her notion store and went to work at the Elgin watch factory. The closing of her business developed reports which add more humiliation to the stricken family. Local business men and wealthy residents, it is claimed, have been victimized by Miss Lunn, who has given her notes in payment for loans of from $50 to $100. By her action she has abandoned her business to creditors. It is conservatively estimated that her debts will aggregate $5000, in small borrowings.

CAPTURED ONE

Weisenbach, Companion of Dietz, In Hands of Officers.

Controversy Arises Over Sending Guns to the Sheriff.

St. Paul, May 12.—A special to the Dispatch from Chippewa Falls, Wis., says: A report reached here today that Valentine Weisenbach, who is aiding John R. Dietz in keeping the officers posse at bay in Sawyer county, was captured. The report says that the two men were smoked out of a shack which they had been holding and that while the men were making their way back to Dietz's home, Weisenbach was wounded. Weisenbach is said to have told the officers that Dietz has plenty of ammunition in his house and aided by his wife and children who are expert shots, will hold the officers off for some time.

Milwaukee, May 12.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Hayward, Wis., says: Judge Parish telephoned Capt. Mowatt of Company D, W. N. G., at Ashland to send twenty rifles and ammunition to Sheriff Peterson, of Sawyer county, for the purpose of equipping deputies who are hunting for Dietz. Capt. Mowatt demurred, claiming that he was unauthorized to do so unless by order of the governor.

Judge Parish thereupon threatened to commit Capt. Mowatt and send the sheriff over for the guns if the order was not obeyed. Capt. Mowatt wired the adjutant general about the matter, but received no answer and in the meantime the guns had been put on the train, which left for Hayward. The adjutant general wired Capt Mowatt to send no guns or ammunition, except by order of the governor of Wisconsin, further stating that Sheriff Peterson should have made his requisition direct upon the governor. Capt. Mowatt at once wired the express office at Hayward to return the guns and ammunition subject to the governor's orders.

PERSONAL INJURIES.

Damage Suits Still Before the Court.

The trial of two personal injury cases still occupy the attention of jurles in district court. In Judge Ensign's room the personal injury case of Radley against Nolan Bros. & Laird, will reach the jury either late this afternoon or else to morrow morning.

In Judge Dibell's room testimony is being introduced for Mrs. Sarah Banks in the personal injury suit brought against her by Mrs. Belle McKenzie.

Three jury cases have been dismissed without coming to trial. The personal injury case of Frederick Teall, a local attorney against Boyle Bros., who operate a Superior street saloon and restaurant, was dismissed on motion of Boyle Bros.' attorney, there being no prosecution.

The other cases dismissed were Ole Knudsen against the Interstate Iron company and the city of Ely, respondent, against Elizabeth Conan, appellant.

RUNS INTO THE MILLIONS

Appraisal of Estate of the Late Henry W. Oliver.

Work on the appraisement of the estate of the late Henry W. Oliver, former head of the Oliver Iron Mining company, who died in Pittsburg some weeks ago, shows the following valuation of his holding in companies well known in Duluth:

Oliver Iron and Steel Co.....	$5,448,500
Calumet & Arizona Mining Co.....	1,187,820
Calumet & Pittsburg Co.....	213,740
Lake Superior & Pittsburg Development Co..	30,000
Pittsburg & Duluth Development Co..	46,500
New York Shipbuilding Co. ..	137,500
Pennsylvania & Lake Erie Dock Co....	12,100
Great Lakes Coal Co.....	61,875
Great Lakes Towing Co., preferred..	9,675
Great Lakes Towing Co., common.....	375
Interest in Chemung iron ore leases..	4,000,000
Notes of Chemung Iron Co....	760,000

Mr. Oliver's holdings in the Oliver & Snyder Steel company are not shown in the appraisement, nor is the real estate, which alone is supposed to have been worth $10,000,000. The value of the appraisement so far as it has been made known is $16,000,000, while Mr. Oliver's real wealth is said to have been closer to $25,000,000.

Means More Conductors.

Since the introduction of the Duluth limited on the Omaha road, the runs of the conductors have been lengthened so as to require three of them instead of two on this end of the line. The three are E. B. Ryan, C. W. Bowden and Fred Parker, and they run to Elroy instead of Altoona.

The limited comes in here head first now instead of backwards, as formerly, which makes a great betterment in the appearance of the train on its arrival. It used to be that the train was turned around at Superior, but now this change is made in Duluth after the passengers are landed.

METHODISTS MAY REMOVE

The Ban On Dancing, Card Playing and Theaters.

Los Angeles, May 12.—A question of importance which has come prominently to the fore in the Methodist general conference proceedings during the past twelve hours is that involving a change in discipline to the extent of entirely removing the church ban on the pleasures of dancing, card playing and theater-going. It seems not unlikely that the conference will vote to remove the present rigid restriction regarding the indulgence of these recreations.

THE STORY OF FATHER JOHN'S

An Interesting History of Fifty Years.

In 1858, Rev. Father John O'Brien, a noble man, came to Lowell, Mass., to do the Master's work in St. Patrick's Parish. In 1854, Father John, as he was fondly known to his people, was attacked with a serious cold which, developing into a stubborn cough and affliction of the lungs, caused the greatest alarm for the health of the beloved clergyman.

Medical skill seemed unable to stay the progress of the disease. Finally, an Eminent Specialist was consulted, who gave Father John a prescription to cure the cold and remove the lung trouble, as well as to build up and strengthen the body. The Clergyman took the prescription to the old drug store of Carleton & Hovey, Lowell, Mass., the firm by whom Father John's Medicine is prepared. The cough soon disappeared and his people rejoiced when he declared that he had been made as well and streng as ever.

Father John recommended the medicine to his parishioners and friends, and thousands were made well and strong by taking it. In getting this prescription they always called for "Father John's Medicine," and so it was named by the people, and advertised—all with the approval and sanction of Reverend Father O'Brien, because he knew of its merit and desired that all who were ailing might benefit by its power to cure.

This old-fashioned wholesome remedy is unequalled as a body builder and tonic. It restores health and strength to all run down systems. Its gentle laxative effect strengthens the stomach and corrects the digestion. It drives out all impurities. It is a food medicine and contains only pure nourishment. It is not a patent medicine, and it is free from opium, morphine, or poisonous drugs in any form, which are found in the majority of patent preparations.

While it is not a "cough syrup" or "balsam," nothing equals this prescription for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, consumption, and all throat and lung troubles. It has a most soothing and healing effect, and at the same time builds up the body and makes strength.

We have permission to refer to the Sisters Superior at the following Homes and Hospitals where Father John's Medicine is in use: Sisters of Charity, St. John's Hospital, Lowell, Mass.; Notre Dame de Lourdes Hospital, Manchester, N. H.; Sisters of Mercy, St. Patrick's Orphanage, Manchester, N. H., and many others, the names of which we shall be pleased to furnish upon application. When you ask your druggist for Father John's Medicine, remember that the $1 bottles contain three times the quantity of the 50-cent size.

MOVEMENT OF ORE

Continues to Be the Subject of Much Speculation.

Ore Carrying Lines Not Anxious to Open Navigation.

Just how the ore situation is going to unfold itself this season is still causing considerable speculation among the ore interests. Some of the independents, owing to the unsettled situation and the uncertainty as to what is coming next, are not as anxious to make contracts as some might think, and expect to produce simply enough ore to sustain their minimum and let it go at that.

This is due to the low price of the product in the present open market, but conservative producers appear to think that there is no good reason for cutting prices below the present figures, $3.50. Those who were anxious to see the pool sustained at the recent meetings were anxious for $3.80 to be the ruling price of ore, but since the pool is out of existence a number of contracts have been made on the basis of $3.50.

The ore stocks along the lower lakes are said to be enough to run the manufacturers all summer. One mining man who recently made a trip east says that he did not meet a man in the business while away but who had enough ore on hand to run him until August 1, under the present circumstances.

There is a surplus down there left over from past seasons when more was carried down than was needed to run the mills, especially last year, when the strike of steel workers kept the mills quiet a good deal of the time.

There is a well defined feeling in certain circles that the steamship companies are not so very anxious to start their boats running as the present strike, or hitch, between the vesselmen and the masters would indicate. If, as is said, there is no great anxiety to take contracts for ore at the present prices, the shipments so far as the independents are concerned, will be light, although the steel corporation will no doubt continue to mine and ship just as it pleases, as it can largely govern its own actions without regard to the open market.

A conservative estimate of the amount of ore to be shipped makes an estimate of in the neighborhood of 16,000,000 tons. This is the estimate which was based on expectation of navigation opening about April 20, and is largely inclusive of contracts made for delivery.

It is estimated that from the first of May to the close of a normal navigation season, there is carrying capacity on the various lines which haul ore, to transport 40,000,000 tons, and with such a capacity and the expectation of shipments of less than half that, it can readily be determined by any one who wishes to ponder on the subject as to whether the ore carrying lines are anxious to open navigation.

While the captains and some of the others on the boats are paid by the season, the cost of running boats from a general standpoint is by no means one that will sand the captains' pay, for instance, as a basis.

Some of the members of the crew are paid by the month and not by the season, and the fuel used, the oil and the food and many other items of costs are only to be reckoned for the time the boats are run and not by the season. It is admitted, on the other hand, if there are no labor troubles down below and there is any decided activity in the steel market, there will be a chance to sell ore this season, and probably at better prices than are now holding in the market. It is said that there are plenty of people willing to build an duse steel if they can get it at a reasonable price.

If the navigation season is held off until the last minute, however, and there is a sudden demand for ore to make steel products, there is a fear that freight rates may be raised, which will leave the ore producers bringing forth their staple at as little profit as ever, possibly. Altogether, the status of the market, together with all the other conditions which have a bearing, is puzzling even the ore men. But they do believe that with the present season dull, if it should remain so, there will be a good demand for the product next year and good prices.

It is not the impression among the independents that the ore is likely to be cut in price by the Steel corporation, but that the corporation merely desires to be free to mine as much ore as it likes as long as it does not go into the open market and sell. The corporation started the pool, or at least, was always the most powerful factor in its support, being stronger than all the other members combined, so far as production is concerned, and when it found the others trying to control the situation by trying to make it buy ore, it resented the proposition and would not agree to it.

In this connection an interesting group of mining men met this morning in the Spalding. There were President T. F. Cole, of the Oliver Iron Mining company; Price McKinney, of Cleveland, of the Corrigan-McKinney firm, and Amos Shephard, superintendent of the Corrigan-McKinney mines at Hibbing. Mr. McKinney came in this morning and went up the range this afternoon.

RAN DOWN THE HILL.

Horses Create a Stir on Lake Avenue.

A team of frightened horses, belonging to D. O'Leary, the East Superior street grocers, dashed down Lake avenue shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon and ran up on the sidewalk on the south side of Superior street, in front of the store of the Duluth Music company.

The street was crowded at the time, and a number of high school scholars were standing on the corner waiting for a car. They scattered when the horses were seen coming down the avenue, and no one was injured.

The team ran into one of the iron poles of the Duluth Street Railway company and the wagon was thrown against a delivery wagon belonging to the Zenith Dye works.

Beyond the breaking of a few straps no damage was done.

FOR ROBBING HIS FRIEND

Patrick Egan on Trial For Stealing Ten Dollar Bill.

Trial of criminal cases began in district court, before Judge Cant, this morning.

The first called was that of the state against Patrick Egan, who was indicted for grand larceny in the second degree. Egan is charged with holding up and robbing a former friend, in Tom Madden's saloon, on the Bowery, the afternoon of April 14 last.

Bert Bailey, who claims to have been robbed, says that while he was standing in the saloon with a friend, both having come up from Nickerson, Minn., Egan and a friend of his by the name of Wahl, came in and they all went near the bar. Bailey alleges that while they were standing there and talking, Egan put his hand in his, Bailey's left hip pocket and pulled out a pocket book containing a $10 bill, some brass checks and a ticket to Scanlon.

Egan is claimed to have juggled the pocket book in his hands for a minute and then passed it to Wahl.

Bailey testified this morning that when the pocket book was first taken he thought it was in jest, but when he demanded it Egan declared that he did not have it and offered to be searched.

Wahl, it is claimed, made an exit immediately by a rear door and Egan then went out on Superior street, followed by Bailey, who kept asking for the return of his property. Bailey says that when he went for a policeman Egan and Wahl disappeared.

Andrew Hanson, a Bowery saloon keeper, testified that Wahl came into his saloon and had a $10 bill changed during the late afternoon of April 14.

Officer Patrick Tulley testified that Bailey came to him with the story of his loss and described Egan and Wahl, mentioning Egan's name, but he was unable to find either of the two men that day. Mr. Tully said he had previously ordered both Egan and Wahl out of town.

Peter Paquette, Bailey's companion, corroborated the story of the robbery in every respect.

The case wil be finished this afternoon and submited to the jury. Egan is defended by N. H. Wilson.

After Egan's trial is completed, Wahl will be tried on the charge of receiving stolen property.

TELLS ABOUT RETAINERS

Received By Barrett & Nelms as Postoffice Counsel.

Washington, May 12.—The Tyner-Barrett trial opened today with A. B. Snow, a postoffice inspector, on the stand. Mr. Snow identified a signed statement which he obtained from Harrison J. Barrett, showing the amount of retainers received by Barrett & Nelms, as counsel for bond investment companies between January 1 and March 1, 1901, and by Mr. Barrett subsequently to teh latter date. The total was $10,541, received from twenty-two different companies.

Assistant District Attorney Taggart read to the jury three letters written by General Tyner, recommending Mr. Barrett to President Hayes of the Southern Pacific railroad, President Stevens of the Chesapeake & Ohio and Vice-President and General Manager Greene of the Baltimore & Ohio. E. S. Hoss, an attorney for the Tontine Loan and Security company of St. Louis in December, 1900, testified that his company engaged Mr. Barrett as an attorney and that the employment ceased in February, 1902. In examination it was brought out that the employment of Mr. Barrett ceased in February, 1903, instead of 1902. A recess for luncheon was taken.

SOME ODD TALES

Assessors Can Relate Funny Incidents That Befall Them.

Ordered Away as Canvassers and Have Various Experiences.

"The missus says she don't want any."

Such was the reply given by a domestic who had but recently arrived in this country from Sweden, to one of the deputy assessors, when he asked to be shown through an East End residence to estimate the value of the personal property. The girl sized the assessor up for a canvasser, and she doubtless answered according to instructions.

The city hall officials are adding to their fund of good stories these days from the many tales brought in by the deputies.

"Talk about the census man," said one of the deputies this afternoon. "The census man isn't in it with a deputy assessor as a collector of funny incidents. The tricks that some people will play to escape being assessed for a few extra dollars' worth of personal property would surprise you.

"Then we are constantly being taken for book agents or canvassers, and requested to make ourselves scarce. I have had women threaten to call the police to put me out, until I explained my mission, and then she looked as if she would like to shoot me instead.

"A funny incident happened yesterday, which was nearly as good as the reply of the girl who said the missis didn't want any.

"The girl came to the door, and I asked if the lady of the house were at home?

"'Ya,' she replied.

"'May I see her?' I asked.

"'Na.'

"'Why not?' I asked.

"'She bane in the bath tub,' replied the girl.

"I assessed that house for the same amount it was last year and called it square. If that lady wonders why the assessor didn't visit her house she may understand if you write this story up."

The work has now been in progress for nearly two weeks and is about half completed. By the end of the month the greater part of it will be finished, and the reports be made ready for the board of review, which will meet in June to consider any objections to the work of the assessors.

WILD CAT IS WISE.

But Must Submit to Man's Superior Woodcraft.

Talk of the intelligence and tact that wild animals manifest in stalking prey," said A. W. Stevens, of McKean county, Pa., to the New York Sun, "I never heard or read of a more striking instance of it than one that came under the observation of Leroy Lyman, a noted woodsman of Northern Pennsylvania.

"After a fall of snow he was going into the woods to set a trap, when he came to tracks in the snow, in an old wood road, which he recognized as those of a wild cat. The trail kept along in the road for some distance, when it turned off at a sharp angle and entered the woods.

"The woods were devoid of underbrush thereabouts. In fact, with the exception of a few hemlock trees scattered about there was open space for some distance between the road and the timber line beyond.

"The tracks led straight as a chalk line in the direction of one of the big hemlocks. Lyman followed it, and was surprised to find that it ended at the tree with the impression of one of the wild cat's feet in the snow, a foot or so off the trail, near the tree trunk.

"The wild cat had not climbed the tree. There was no other growth into or upon which it could have leaped. What had become of it was a mystery.

"After studying the situation a while, Lyman believed that in that single footprint apart from the trail, at the tree trunk, he saw the solution of the puzzle. When he examined the trail closely, he was sure of it, for he discovered that track bore the marks of two of the wild cat's feet. The animal had returned to the road by taking its trail back—and that without turning its tracks. Then Lyman knew that the wild cat was on the scent of game, and to secure it had been obliged to resort to careful tactics.

"Following the trail back to the road, he found that the wild cat had continued along it for about twenty yards, to a spot where the ground at the side of the road was two feet or so above the road's level, and there is had turned and climbed back into the woods, behind another hemlock tree. Beyond this tree and in line with it, a distance of a few yards, was another hemlock, and about the same distance apart, straight in line, were two more. A rod or so beyond the last tree in the line lay a big log, against which the snow drifted to the top.

"The wild cat's trail led from the first tree of the row of hemlocks to the second, around which it followed, close to the trunk, and so on to the second, third and fourth. From the fourth, as the trail indubiably showed in the snow, the wild cat had crept low to the bottom of the drift against the log, and then along it and around to one end. There the scattered snow told the unmistakable story of a leap from that point of vantage, gained by tactics startlingly human in the calculation and udgment with which they were executed.

"The snow on the opposite side of the log was torn up and scattered about and covered with deer hair and blood. It is rare for a wild cat to attack prey as big as deer, but this one was evidently made desperate by hunger. A mound of snow a few feet away showed that the wild cat had won in the attack, for under it Lyman knew the beast had buried such of the deer as was left after it had satisfied its hunger for the time.

"When he uncovered the mound he found the remains of a doe. The ground was bare on the lee side of the log, and there the deer had been lying when surprised and overcome.

"To the woodsman it was plain that the wild cat had scented the deer from the road, and laid plans for its capture. Stealing in as far as the hemlock tree to which its trail first led, the animal had kept the trunk of the tree between it and possible discovery by its intended prey. Getting to the tree, and still careful not to expose its body, the wild cat had found it necessary to reconnoiter to discover the position and location of its game, so as to decide on the safest tactics to adopt in getting within capturing distance of it.

"To do this the wild cat had peered around the tree trunk, during which inspection it had put one paw out in the snow to steady itself, making the separate track near the tree. This stealthy glance had evidently satisfied the wild cat that further advance in that direction was out of the question, for beyond the hemlock there was no protection against discovery. So the wily animal had backed cautiously over its trail to and along the road, backing in order that it might keep its eyes in the direction of the spot where it had located its prey, thus to detect any suspicious movement it might make, and note the result.

"His plan was to seek the row of hemlock trees that offered it such strategic advantage. This it did, and with the successful issue that Lyman discovered.

"But with all its cunning the cat was no match for the wiles of the trapper who had read the story of its wisdom in those tracks in the snow. Lyman replaced the snow on the mutilated remains of the deer, and set a trap as he knew how, knowing that when the wild cat hungered again it would return to the feast.

"It returned that very night, and next morning Lyman found it in the trap, but although thus hopelessly a prisoner it was gnawing at the deer's carcass. He stopped its feast with a bullet."

MOTION AT ST. LOUIS.

Animation That Will Pervade the Fair Grounds.

Electricity building is made interesting by operative exhibits. So also is machinery hall, where everything is in motion, says the Brooklyn Eagle. In the forestry, fish and game building are aquariums and avaries filled with fish game and birds and where a demonstration of salmon fishing may be seen. In the educational building an effort is made to get away from dead exhibits by showing schools for the deaf and dumb and the blind in operation.

But what is the use of trying to catalogue the exhibits by buildings when a book of 200 pages is required to enumerate the awards in one department alone? Much as all the many strange and curious things that are to be found everywhere in such perfectly incomprehensible profusion may interest the multitudes, the great overpowering attraction of the exposition is, after all, its life and color and motion and sound. Of sweet sounds there will be no end, for, aside from the great organ in festival hall, the largest in the world, upon which famous organists from every land will play daily, the chorus of 2000 the orchestra of 100 and the famous soloists who will help the organists entertain the multitude there will be music, music everywhere outdoors. The famous Garde Republique band from France, the British Grenadier band, the German Imperial band, the Mexican Artillery band, the Royal Italian band, a Japanese band of twenty-five pieces, a Filipino band of eighty pieces, a Hawaiian band, Sousa's and Innes' bands, the Banda Rossa, Well's St. Louis band, and a lot more will not only discourse sweet music, but they will aid in giving life and color to the crowds with their showy uniforms.

Speaking of uniforms, they will be so numerous, so gorgeous, so omnipresent that fortunate, indeed, will be the ordinary citizen in plain clothes who succeeds in securing any attention from his best girl. There will be a distinct military flavor to the crowd always. Every state will have a regiment of its National Guard at the fair. West Point will send a detachment of cadets, every military school will be strongly represented, there will be Mexican rurales, Filipino scouts, British grenadiers and the Papal Guards in their elaborate uniforms.

Aquatic features are also provided with the same prodigal hand. On the grand basin and the mile and a quarter of lagoons will ply thirty power launches, genuine gondolas, with singing gondoliers, imported from Venice, craft of various nations, South Sea Island and Patagonian canoes and grass canoes from Colombia. There will be swimming contests by South Sea Islanders and demonstrations of life saving by the United States life saving service, and of pearl diving by South Sea Islanders.

But, perhaps, enough has been said to give some sort of idea that the Louisiana Purchase exposition is in truth the largest and most comprehensive World's Fair ever held. To further prolong the list of attractions would be wearisome. The problem for all will not be what to see, but what not to see.

LOCAL MEN VOTE

Masters and Pilots Pass on the Carriers' Proposition.

Preserve Secrecy as to Result—Look For Adjustment.

Members of the local branch of the Masters and Pilots' association, Harbor No. 44, are of the opinion that the difference existing between the association and the Lake Carriers' association, will soon be adjusted.

The local organization held a meeting last night and voted on the proposition submitted by the carriers regarding this year's terms of employment. Although members were instructed at the meeting to preserve great secrecy as to how the vote stood, acting under orders from Cleveland, it is thought very probable that it was voted to reject the proposition.

The meeting was not very largely attended. Of the 106 members of the local branch, only about thirty were present. This is largely due to the fact that many of the members do not reside here. The Duluth association has one of the smallest memberships on the lakes. Buffalo has the largest, with about 500 members enrolled. Cleveland is second with 400, then comes Detroit, Chicago, and Port Huron.

A local member stated this morning that the impression prevailing that the carriers' association desired the same scale of wages this year as last was a mistaken one.

"There was no scale of wages last year," he said. "Most of the carriers paid their men whatever they could get them for. We don't want the same conditions to prevail this season. The Pittsburgh company had what might be called a regular scale, but the Gilchrist Transportation company, owning the second largest number of boats on the lakes, as well as a number of smaller concerns, had no regular scale. Gilchrists paid some of their men as low as $900 for the season's work.

"It is the big fellows that are objecting to our proposition. The smaller companies appear to be of the opinion that our demands are reasonable, and there is every indication to believe that our demands would be granted, only for a few of the big concerns, like the Gilchrist, holding back.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Saturday afternoon and evening, Al H. Wilson in "A Prince of Tatters."

"CHARITY BALL."

"Charity Ball" at the Lyceum this week, with Florence Stone and the big stock company, has proven the most successful engagement thus far. The Biograph continues in popularity. Tonight and tomorrow night new pictures will be given. The bombardment of Port Arthur is a most realistic picture, being over 5000 feet in length.

Tonight and tomorrow night will be Miss Stone's last engagement in this city until May 30. The company leave Saturday for the Metropolitan theater, St. Paul, where a two-weeks' engagement will be played.

"ROBERT McCAIR."

Yesterday afternoon and evening two excellent performances of "Robert McCair" were given at the Metropolitan theater to crowded houses. At the matinee especially the audience was enthusiastic as the beautiful gowns worn by Miss Kennedy and Miss Evans were of a cut and style to bring forth the admiration of the women present. Tonight one of Hal Reid's successes, "The Knobs of Tennessee," will be produced, and the company is well qualified to give a finished portrayal of this beautiful drama. Special scenery is to be used and the vaudeville features are to be quite up to the high standard already given by this company.

AL H. WILSON.

Al H. Wilson and a strong supporting company will be the attraction at the Lyceum next Saturday, matinee and night, in "A Prince of Tatters," a tale of old New York, written by Sidney R. Ellis, a strong romantic drama, in four acts, each of which bristles with qualities that combine to make a great and lasting success.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.

Don't Be Penny-Wise and Pound Poor—Follow the Advice of a Prominent Physician.

George M. Moore, M. D., in the American Health Journal says: "The one laxative which has merit is Rea Bros.' Cascarin, made from roots, herbs, barks, plants and berries, nature's true remedies, and has given universal satisfaction. It would be an excellent investment for any one to keep this remedy near at hand. The digestive organs often need a laxative tonic to aid them in their work, which every one makes doubly hard through carelessness. Rea Bros.' Cascarin cleanses the bowels thoroughly, strengthens the stomach, stimulates the liver and increases the flow of bile. This results in more of the food being digested and purer blood being produced. Pure blood will overcome any disease. It tones up the nerves, makes the complexion clear and healthy. No one can afford to be without a bottle of Cascarin, for it only costs 50 cents a bottle. Your money will be refunded if it is not entirely satisfactory. At all leading druggists.

POSSIBLE TO BE RESTORED

Terms Under Which Deserters Can Return to the Army.

By terms of a general order recently promulgated by the war department, and received by the recruiting officer here, deserters from the United States army, under certain conditions, can be restored to service without trial. Provision is also made for the release of general prisoners having persons dependent on them for support, and an increase is made in the good time allowance of the general prisoners serving sentences from one to three years.

Under the new order the commanding officials of companies in the regular army are directed to inquire diligently into each case of desertion, and if they have good reason to believe that it was the hasty act of youth and inexperience, they are to recommend the restoration of the offender to duty without trial.

This is regarded as an important step in the army regulations, when it is remembered that few offenses are regarded more severely, even in time of pace, than desertion. In time of actual war desertion in the face of an enemy is punishable by death.

The new provision, it is said, has been made to apply especially to new recruits, who are liable to chafe at army discipline and desert before becoming used to it.

While the general orders also provide that general prisoners serving sentences may be released by the department commander on proving the dependency on them for support of other persons, releases are likely to be granted only in cases where it is shown that the dependent person or persons are incapable of supporting themselves.

According to the general order the good time allowance is five days for each twenty-five days served. This ratio remains the same for sentences from three months to one year, but in sentences of from one year to three years the good time allowance is ten days for each twenty days served, just half the sentence.

It is expected that the new regulations will result in a flood of applications for clemency at military posts or prisons all over the country. In many cases the relatives of soldiers who are being punished are likely to make the applications for clemency.

The United States army recruiting office in this city, which has sent out as many newly enlisted soldiers in the past year as any other office in the country, has been singularly fortunate in its selection of soldiers, there being very few, if any, records of desertion against young men sent from this point.

Last fall a deserter was arrested in this city and sent to St. Paul, but he did not enlist at the local recruiting station.

HELEN GOULD

Dislikes Camera Fiends and Is Closely Guardrd.

St. Louis, May 12.—During her stay in St. Louis, Miss Helen Gould has been almost as closely guarded as the czar of Russia. It is not that Miss Gould is afraid of bombs, but because she wants to avoid the snapshot fiend and persons with schemes that need financing.

Miss Gould, who is here to attend the meetings of the board of lady managers, goes to and from the world's fair in a closed automobile. She is never alone when she rides or walks. She sees few callers at her hotel and dines in a private dining room with traveling companions. In her strolls she is accompanied by an escort who is employed to protect her from interference.

Miss Gould enjoys life, nevertheless, and she likes to do some snap shooting herself. She has photographed some interesting points about the world's fair grounds.

SUPERIOR ELKS

Will Formally Dedicate Their Handsome New Quarters.

Duluth Elks to Take Part In the Celebration.

The Elks at the head of the lakes are looking forward with a great deal of anticipation to a celebration which will take place in Elkdom in Superior tomorrow evening.

The occasion will be the dedication of the new Elks' hall and the formal opening of the new club rooms of the order in that city.

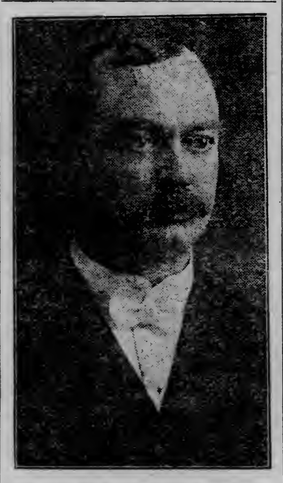
The Superior Elks have for a long time past been working hard toward the end of having a thoroughly modern hall and some fine club rooms for their social features, and the entertainment tomorrow night will mark the consummation of their plans.

The hall and the club rooms occupy a floor in the Hammond block, on Tower avenue, between Winter street and the Omaha railway tracks. The suite of rooms taken are those for many years used by the Superior Commercial club.

The Superior Elks have spared no trouble or expense in fitting up their new quarters, and they intend to give their visiting brethren a splendid time.

Visiting members of the order will be present from all over Wisconsin and the Northwest, and the Duluth lodge will turn out as a body to help celebrate the occasion.

The Duluth Elks have been notified to take the 7:30 o'clock Northern Pacific train tomorrow evening for Superior, but many of them will probably go over earlier in the day to be present at the initiatory ceremonies which take place in the afternoon. The Elks will have a large class of applicants to be initiated.



W. CHARLES LANGABEER,
Exalted Ruler of Superior Elks.

The dedication ceremonies will be followed by a stag social for the members of the order, at which a number of good things will be perpetrated.

The program is as follows: Business session from 3 to 6 o'clock; recess from 6 to 8 o'clock; dedication ceremonies from 8 to 8:30 o'clock; social session from 8:30 to 11 o'clock.

The dedication ceremony will be in charge of H. A. Lathrop, of Marshfield, district deputy grand exalted ruler for the state of Wisconsin.

MEMORIAL DAY.

One Sunday School Preparing For Patriotic Exercises.

As early as three months ago plans were outlined by the Sunday school of the First Swedish Baptist church to have patriotic exercises on Memorial day, and invite the scholars of the school to write compositions on "Why do we Celebrate Memorial Day?" The best compositions to receive prizes. A committee on arrangement was appointed and its work has progressed very favorably. The idea of such an early preparation was to give the scholars ample time to write the articles and have them ready for the judges to pass upon so that the prizes could be given out on Memorial day. The exercises will take place in the evening of Memorial day at the church on nineteenth avenue west and First street. Speakers for the occasion have been secured and songs and music will be arranged. It is expected that the occasion will be of keen interest, especially because the writing contest among the scholars of the Sunday school.

PIONEER OF MINNESOTA.

St. Andrew D. Balcombe Passes Away at Omaha.

Winona, Minn., May 12.—A dispatch has been received here from Omaha announcing the death in that city at the age of 74 years of St. Andrew D. Balcombe. The deceased was a conspicuous figure in the early political history of Winona county and the state of Minnesota. Born in New York, he came, with his father, to Winona in 1854. In connection with the late Cornelius F. Buck, he was largely intrumental in organizing the Republican party in Southern Minnesota. In 1856 he was elected to the territorial council from the Ninth district, then comprising the counties of Winona, Olmsted and Wabasha. He was returned to the same office in 1857, and the same year also represented the district in the convention held to form a state constitution.

On July 13 of that year the delegates, 108 in number, met, but a disagreement arising in the organization, the Republican members organized one body and the Democratic members organized separately. Of the former organization Mr. Balcombe was chosen president, and the late Gen. Sibley of the other. Each of these bodies, claiming to be the legal convention, proceeded with the work of forming an instrument to be submitted to the people. After a time an understanding was affected between them, and, by means of committees of conference, the same constitution was framed and adopted by both bodies, and on the eleventh of October following it was ratified by the people. Mr. Balcombe represented the Eleventh district in the first legislature, and subsequently was appointed agent for the Winnebago Indians in this state, and, when they were removed to Nebraska, he accompanied them there. Shortly thereafter he established his home in Omaha, where he resided up to his death. He was for ten years publisher of the Omaha Daily Republican, and held a number of important appointive offices.

A REINDEER EXPEDITION

Hedley Redmeyer About to Make Another Alaskan Trip.

Hedley Redmeyer, of Tofte, this county, has accepted an offer from the United States government to go to Alaska on another reindeer expedition, and he is arranging his business affairs here with the intention of leaving the latter part of June, says the Grand Marais Herald. After visiting with his parents near Seattle a couple of weeks, accompanied by two Finlanders who have had former experience and their families, he will go to Bethel Mission, on the Suskowin river, where the government has a corral of Siberian reindeer to be taken to the interior. From there they will take a herd of 300 head across country 1300 miles to Copper Center, on the Copper river. Mr. Redmeyer will have charge of the expedition. They will start from Bethel in November.

The raising of reindeer in Alaska, which was introduced by the government as an experiment in 1892, has proven a great success. Beginning with a herd of 70 then, there are now over 7000 head distributed among the various missions throughout the territory. The work is carried on under the supervision of Dr. Sheldon Jackson, United States general agent of education in Alaska.

The purpose is to provide means of subsistence for the natives of that country to take the place of fishing and other natural sources of food supply, which are rapidly depleting, leaving the people more or less destitute.

Eskimos and Indians are taken into these missions and given a three years' course of training in the raising and handling of reindeer. They are then given possession of a certain number under a five-year contract to care for them and return the same number to the government at the end of that time, reserving the increase as their compensation.

The reindeer is a domestic animal and is adadpted to the climatic conditions of that region. They are used for food purposes and as beasts of burden.

Mr. Redmeyer had charge of a similar expedition in 1898, when he took a herd from Haines' Mission in southeastern Alaska to Circle City; and his story of that trip is an interesting one.

When the government decided on the present expedition Mr. Redmeyer was thought of as the right man to place in charge of it, and Dr. Jackson corresponded with him, offering him such flattering inducements that he could not very well decline.

He expects to be gone at least a year and has sold a half interest in his business at Tofte to W. S. Moore, who will run it during his absence.

Philadelphia Man Recovers Part of His Skull.

Dover, Del., May 12.—"Although impious, I would like to keep myself together as much as possible. I don't like the idea of being in Philadelphia and part of my head staying in Dover."

Thus Edward Damp requested the court to return to him a piece of his skull which had been removed by trephining in consequence of injuries received in a fight. A piece of his skull figured as evidence during the trial of his assailant.

Damp got it back.

CHICAGO DRUG STORES

Profit By Closing of Saloons at Midnight.

Chicago, May 12.—Lieut. McCarthy, of the Lakeview police station, says that the most insistent complaints of disorder in his district come from husbands who say that their wives have found a new and easy way to get drunk.

Since the enforcement of the 1 o'clock closing law for saloons, more than 500 apothecary shops have decided to keep open all night, and it is charged that the drug stores since that date have became centers of inebriety.

In Evanston, Lakeview, in Hyde Park, and in every center of morality the growth of drunkenness since the 1 o'clock closing law has been on the increase.

All that is necessary is to send a child to a neighboring drug store an hour after midnight and have the child say: "Mamma or papa is sick and I want whisky." No prescription is asked; none is needed. There is no question of the purpose for which the liquor is obtained.

According to the retail liquor dealers of Chicago, the question of restricted sales and of minimizing popular drunkenness is made ridiculous by the freedom permitted to the drug stores of Chicago.

ALLEN MAY RETIRE

Owing to President's Interference With Patents.

Washington, May 12.—There is a possibility that Frederick I. Allen, commissioner of patents, will retire because of interference with his official duties by President Roosevelt. The president is dissatisfied with the methods pursued by Mr. Allen and some of his subordinates, and Mr. Allen resents being overruled by the president.

The trouble arose over the application of Thomas A. Edison, the inventor, for a patent on a device to be used in connection with high storage battery. The president ordered a rehearing on a complaint by Edison, which Allen had refused.

Chariton, Iowa, May 12.—A fire of incendiary origin damaged all the buildings on two sides of the public square today, the total loss being about $25,000. Two men, who were caught stealing goods from one of the burned stores are held on suspicion of being the fire bugs.

The fire broke out in an empty store building near the city hall. It spread in both directions rapidly but was extinguished at 3:30 a. m.

NORDICA REFUSES

To Sing a Song By "Bathhouse John."

New York, May 12.—Alderman John D. Coughlin, of Chicago, has been spurned by Mme. Nordica. He tried to tempt her with an offer of $500 to sing his song, "Dear Midnight of Love," but the song bird was not to be so easily charmed, and refused "Bathhouse John's" gold.

John S. Duss, the millionaire bandmaster from Economy, Pa., is to give a series of concerts at Madison Square Garden, with Mme. Nordica as a solo singer. Duss is of a kind with the Chicago alderman, unconventional and with his own ideas about music. His manager hit on the idea of having Nordica sing Alderman Coughlin's song, and when the suggestion was laid before the Chicago composer, he answered with this telegram:

"Papers say Nordica sings opening night Duss concert selections from Wagner. Why not use one song from live American composer? Will give $500 to have Nordica sing my great song, 'Dear Midnight of Love,' also to have a souvenir edition of song with Mme. Nordica's picture on the title page to present to audience. Wire me.

"JOHN J. COUGHLIN."

This proposition was laid before Mme. Nordica at her apartment.

"Let me see the song," said the great singer.

The gaudy-covered piece of music, with a large picture of the Chicago statesman-musician adorning the cover, was passed over. Nordica hummed the song softly to herself, and then almost screamed: "I sing this! Well, I'd rather be executed," and she swept out of the room, leaving "Bathhouse John's" spokesman crushed. But Duss has not given up hope.

JOB WITH NO SALARY.

Purchasing Agent Provided But No Salary Named.

Washington, May 12.—Comptroller J. J. McCardy, of the postoffice department, has blighted the expectations of several applicants for a very desirable and lucrative position. At the last session of congress a provision was inserted in the postoffice appropriation bill for the consolidation of all purchasing of supplies under one bureau and in the hands of one man, to be known as general purchasing agent for the postoffice department.

This change was made at the suggestion of Postmaster General Payne, and is in line with many reforms that are under way in the big department.

There were several applications filed at once, and yesterday Gen. Payne gave it out that he was ready to name a man. Auditor McCardy stepped up stairs to the office of Mr. Payne, and after a few moments conference it was announced that there would be na appointement of a purchasing agent.

This caused consternation, and all inquirers were referred to McCardy.

"Well," said the auditor, "there is really nothing to make a sensation about. Congress did provide for the appointment when it created the position, but, unfortunately, no mention is made of the salary which the purchasing agent shall receive, and no provision or appropriation made for paying him."

IN WOMAN'S SPHERE

Social, Musical and Art Circles.

"Speaking about street car manners," says a man, who might just as well be called the man, posing, typical of all men, "have you noticed the way women get off the cars? And why," he asked, in a more combative tone, "do they do it?"

"I don't know what you're talking about, but I'll say on general principles," said the girl, "that she does it because it's the proper thing to do, and she does it the proper way at the proper time. Of course, if you could be a bit specific, I might think of more reasonable reasons.

"Well, I know you can't think of any reasons when you hear the complaint. What I complain of is her insupportable, unbearable habit of waiting till the car stops and the gates open and the conductor calls 'Fourth avenue' before she leisurely begins to make her way from the first seat forward. She gets left a lot of times, but not as often as she deserves it. Then when she gets to the door there's another scene. She begins at the poor conductor. If he would attend to his business and see when passengers are next thing to the gate, and be dutious enough, let alone courteous enough, to let people off instead of being so inconsiderate. 'It's perfectly horrid, anyway.' That's the clincher. All the company and the company's lawyers may try to advance answering argument, but in vain.

"With these new large cars running so easily, there is no excuse for a woman not being at the gate, or near the door at least, ready to step off when it stops. Think of the time it would save and the aid it would be to a more efficient service. Is it thoughtlessness, or what, that makes her invariably do it?"

"Well," said the girl, "you've struck the one thing in women's street car department for which there is no reply. Yes, the habit is one that makes everybody in the car nearly boil with indignation. There's apparently no excuse. One can walk to the door with these smooth running cars as easily as one can stand, but still many of the women wait till the car comes to a full stop before moving. With the small cars there was some excuse, for the danger of sitting unceremoniously in a good-looking stranger's lap is a thing not to be lightly considered, but that possibility is all removed with the big cars.

"Here's another thing I have noticed. The business women are usually at the door ready to get off when the car stops. It's mostly the women who have not yet come to a realization that sixty minutes make an hour, whether they are conservative or two or three minutes intervene between each of the sixty that wait and waste our time."

This question of being ready to step off the car when it stops is being much talked about, and among the other reforms that the women of Duluth may institute, with profit, is this one. The time saved and the increased efficiency of the service would be a benefit to many. This is a question of the individual thinking of the many, and in this as in sending in market orders early on Saturday morning, each individual must think and act to secure the desired change.

Fancies and Follies.

Time was when seven-eighths of a yard of lace sufficed for a veil. The latest command from veil land is that seven yards will be required for the new veil, which is strictly up-to-date. The fashion requires the yards and yards of chiffon to hang loosely around the hat, and then to perform the duties of a scarf for the neck and finally to end in long stole ends, which flutter becomingly in the breeze. It can be tied in a big square bow under the chin or in a rosette bow at the back of the neck. As to material, the object seems to be to disguise the face of the wearer. Sheer nets with dainty spots that so much enhanced the beauty of the face beneath, are quite a thing of the past, although some brave girls still cling to them. Heavy flower and fruit patterns, straggle over the cheeks and, it must be admitted, protect it effectually from the east wind. These thick veils also keep the hair tidy, and no doubt owe much of their popularity to this fact. It is necessary to search for some excuse other than their beauty.

Hard to Get.

Almost any price could be obtained for an up-to-date photograph of Miss Helen Gould, or of John D. Rockefeller, says the Chicago Chronicle. It is next to impossible to secure an interview from either of them. It is declared that Mr. Rockefeller has not been interviewed, photographed or snapshotted in the last five years. A number of rather weird sketches of the king of all the magnates have been published, but most of them are caricatures. Nearly all the pictures labeled "John D. Rockefeller" were taken years ago, many of them being 25 years old. A dealer in pictures of celebrities said the other day that he would pay $300 for a good photo taken within the last year.

THE EVENING STORY.

The Embezzler and The Billiard Shark

By William H. Osborne.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Old Peterkins, the president of the Monroe National bank, had always been an easy mark. Most people had known it all along. Now he had come to the point where he felt that it was up to him to admit the fact himself. The easiness came into play when he selected new men as runners for the bank. Monroe was not a small place, and it was difficult to look up the record of a man who applied for appointment, but most people would have taken a bit more pains than Peterkins. He depended too much on the looks of the applicants. The cashier, a hard-mouthed chap, had at times recommended new men, and they had turned out well. But ten years ago Birdseye, who had started as runner and whose honest looks had impressed Peterkins, Birdseye, after having worked up to a fair position made off with a considerable amount of cash. Littlefield, who was another of the old man's selections, had petered out a few years later by a systematic doctoring of the books, and had gone to state's prison for it.

And now, here was young Twitchell. Young Twitchell had been wild as a boy; had been sent to a military academy by his people; had been wild there, though they never knew it; had come home and had started out on a career of wilderness all over again. His people, believing that all he wanted was a little steadying, sent him down to the old man, the president, without acquainting that easy gentleman with all the facts.

Young Twitchell had been in the bank a year. Most of his acquaintances knew he was fast in a foolish way. Twitchell himself was merely trying to perfect himself in a few worldly accomplishments. One of these was billiards; but he practiced many others that were not half so respectable. Old Peterkins never knew that there was anything the matter with him. He thought he was all right.

And now Peterkins had sent Twitchell to New York to get $10,000 in currency. Twitchell had gone and had not returned. He had skipped.

Fortunately for Old Peterkins no one knew that Twitchell had been sent. But, nevertheless, when Twitchell did not turn up, the tellers winked to each other and informed each other that another of Peterkins' "babies" had gone wrong. But if they had known about the $10,000 it would have made it all the worse. Peterkin's determined that no one should ever know about that.

He sent for Colehammer, of the secret service. Colehammer was a New York man.

"If he's nifty," said Colehammer to Peterkins, "he'll stay right there in New York—finding a man there is like hunting for a needle in a haystack. But if he gets boozy or cuts a swarth I can get him. I'll do as you say and as soon as I hear anything I'll let you know."

Young Twitchell, a gentleman wholly devoid of moral consciousness, had staid in New York. He was pretty young, and pretty bad, and very foolish, but he was bound to have the time of his life. He hadn't got very far along in the spending line when one night he found himself inside a billiard room in the heart of the tenderloin. His face was a bit flushed. He thought he'd try a game. He tried one with one of the onlookers and the onlooker had skinned him to death in no time. Twitchell concluded that they knew more about billiads in New York than they did in Monroe. For some time he stood and watched. Finally a couple of men strolled in and started a game that drew a cowd. One of the players, an honest-looking, little, wiry fellow, won the first game hands down. Some money passed. It was only half a dollar. The loser grisled with defiance.

"Here," he said, "tell you what you'll do with me. I'll play for $25. I was only playing with you that time."

The winner, the wiry little man, snorted. "Done," he cried. He looked hastily around upon the faces about him.

"Say, young fellow," he said to Twitchell, "I'm strapped." He whispered it. "But, by George, here's a chance for you to make some money. I can beat that geezer. You saw me do it. You put up $25 and we'll divide the profits. See?"

Young Twitchell saw. But he didn't see what the rest of the crowd saw—to-wit, that the game was to get him to put up the $25 and then to let the other fellow win. He didn't understand that part of it. All that he did understand was that here was a chance to display his love of sport in the sight of some half dozen of the sports of the metropolis.

He felt in his vest pocket and took out a few bills. There was not enough there. In his trousers pocket, pushed way down for safety, he had a roll of something less than $10,000—a few hundred less. He was not averse to flashing that roll, even though it might be a bit unsafe—it did him good to let the others know that he was a man of money.

The honest-looking, wiry little man was in front of him. Twitchell pulled out his roll. He was just about to peel off a couple of bills or so when something happened. He found himself suddenly on his back. His roll had been seized by the wiry little man and the same man had dashed him to ground and was speeding out of the doorway into Sixth avenue. Twitchell was active. Dazed but for an instant, he leaped to his feet and followed. He cried aloud in the street. "Stop, thief—stop thief," was the burden of his song. He gained on the little man. The little man had run past three policemen. To each of these Twitchell had cried that they must arrest him. They smiled and wagged their heads. Twitchel ground his teeth. Was it possible that the thieves and thugs of the tenderloin were hand in glove with the police in this shameless, open way? It seemed so.

Block after block the chase continued. Twitchell was the foremost in the crowd of running men. Ahead was the thief. Finally, after they had gone a considerable distance, an officer stopped the little man and held him. Twitchell and the rest, who were exhausted, stopped running and came up on a walk.

And then suddenly Twitchell remembered himself. What was he going to do about it? The little man evidently divined that there was something unusual about Twitchell, for he laughed in Twitchell's face.

"What're you goin' to do, kid," he asked. "What have you got against me? Eh?" What did Twitchell have against him? Nothing save that the thief had stolen money that Twitchell had embezzled. That was all. The officer jerked his prisoner.

"Come on," said the officer, "we'll settle it at the station house."

"No, no, no," cried Twitchell. "I—I'm wrong. This is not the man at all. There's been some great mistake. No, no."

The officer swore, and let the prisoner go. The prisoner went and like a flash. He never stopped going until he reached a ferry house, and then he never stopped going until he was well settled in the smoker of a suburban train. Then he counted the cash and sighed a sigh of satisfaction. As for Twitchell, he had his choice between living on nothing in New York or going back to Monroe to face disgrace and subsequent arrest. He was between the horns of a dilemma.

Old Peterkins, the president of the Monroe bank, sat that evening in his spacious home, facing the possibility of another sleepless night. That $10,000 worried him to death.

Suddenly the bell rang. The servant opened the door and a man stepped in, and without waiting, pushed his way into the sanctum of Old Peterkins.

"Mr. Peterkins," exclaimed the man, waving something in his hand, "here's your cash, all but a hundred or two. There it is."

Peterkins eyes shone. "How did you do it?" he inquired.

The man laughed. "Stole it," he answered, "larceny from the person, accompanied with violence. Highway robbery." He laughed again. "It was dead easy," he went on, "as easy as anything I ever tried." This man was the wiry little fellow who had robbed Young Twitchell. But then he was also Colehammer, of New York.

In due time Twitchell sneaked back into Monroe. He expected arrest. There was none. The bank ignored him and he sank, as many like him had already done, into innocuous desuetude. There let him stay. Only Peterkins was the only man who knew all the facts, and that was something—to Old Peterkins.

with the claim that the Republican party can reform itself.

"We favor the speedy completion of the Panama canal. The Republican party is incapable of completing this great enterprise without subjecting the country to humiliation and shame. We therefore demand not only the completion of the canal but insist that the work shall proceed under the direction of an honest and economical administration.

"The Democratic party is opposed to all schemes of taxation that bear unequally upon individuals or interests, or that tend to increase the profits of one class at the expense of another. We are opposed to special privileges in governmental affairs.

"Combinations of capital (trusts) are the direct and legitimate offspring of a protective tariff system. They violate the spirit of our laws, become inimical to public welfare and peace, and should be regulated, controlled or prohibited by laws ample to protect the public interests.

"It is the purpose of the Democratic party to deal only with the bad trusts. It is not our policy to disturb legitimate enterprise, for we know, and the country understands, that the evil tendencies of these extraordinary combinations of wealth can be prevented without injury to capital or embarrassment to labor.

"The beneficiaries of protective tariffs and unlawful trusts are today in partnership with the Republican administration at Washington, and the country cannot expect relief from such fellowship. For years the country has appealed to Washington for relief from the trusts, and during all this time the Republican administration has been promising to do something to remove this burden from the people. But trusts have accumulated in number and importance, and the cost of living has increased and the price of labor correspondingly decreased. And now for the first time in the history of this country a war is being waged between capital and labor the dangerous consequences of which cannot be foretold.

"It is political imbecility to expect a change of conditions through Republican administration. When relief comes to the people from the wrongs of the trusts, it will come through the power and force of the Democratic party."

The following resolutions were passed:

"Whereas, the state convention for the nomination of the state ticket and adoption of a platform is called to meet on the 20th day of June next, therefore be it

"Resolved, that all questions relating to platform properly belong to that convention and are hereby referred thereto.

"Recognizing the fitness, ability and party loyalty of Alton B. Parker, of New York, to be selected as the standard-bearer of the Democratic party in the United States, the Democrats of Indiana hereby resolve that the delegates selected by this convention to the national convention at St. Louis are instructed to cast the vote of this state as a unit for that distinguished jurist, Alton B. Parker.

"Resolved, that the delegates from this state to the Democratic national convention vote as a unit on all matters coming before the convention in such manner as the majority of such delegates may determine.

"Resolved, that the delegates from this state be and are hereby directed to choose Thomas Taggart as member of the Democratic national committee for the state of Indiana, and that this convention commends him to the favorable consideration of said committee as a gentleman in every way qualified to serve the party efficiently in the capacity of its chairman."

Delegates For Governor La Follette Contributed By Monroe County.

Now Claimed to Have Enough Votes to Nominate.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 12.—The Free Press says: Republican primaries were held in only one county, Monroe, yesterday, and it was carried overwhelmingly for La Follette.

They added fifteen votes to the La Follette column, but they did more than that—they showed what the real sentiment in the party was and they showed what the people think of the attempt of the stalwart organization to buy up one or two delegates in close counties. They did not mean to have any of that business in Monroe and they turned out to the caucuses as the Republican voters in other counties will today and tomorrow turn out, and of all the towns in the county, the stalwart combination carried only two.

In the country districts, when the returns came in, it was found that there were 101 delegates elected for La Follette and only nine for corporation domination of the party and state.

With the delegates to be elected today La Follette will have more than enough votes to insure his renomination. Many of these votes will be contested, but from the information in the possession of the Free Press there is not the slightest doubt that conclusive proof will be presented to the state central committee, which is the committee on credentials of the state convention, that a majority of La Follette delegates were elected in Dodge and Oconto counties.

There can be no question about Ashland, where a majority of the delegates is on record, and if proof of bribery is shown in Pepin and the Second Eau Claire district, these also will be counted for the governor. There is no doubt that in both these districts a majority of the La Follette delegates was elected. The stalwart combine is not, by any rule of honesty or fairness, entitled to them, but these cases must be left to the state central committee to decide.

But allowing these two districts to the stalwart combine for the present, La Follette today has 510 delegates, who will surely be seated, and he needs only 23 more of the 125 still to be elected this week. That he will get many more than that everyone knows.

WEST DULUTH

The mass meeting held last night in the rooms of the West Duluth Commercial club for the purpose of discussing plans for the holding of a Fourth of July celebration in West Duluth this year, was largely attended by representative citizens and business men. The greatest of interest was manifested in the move, and it was agreed that no effort should be spared to make the affair a grand success.

L. S. Neuman acted as chairman of the meeting. After the passing of a resolution favoring the proposed celebration, a permanent organization was effected and officers elected as follows: L. S. Neuman, president; Frank H. Wade, vice president; W. B. Getchell, secretary, and Alexander Hendrickson, treasurer.

Upon motion of Alderman William Chesney it was agreed that an executive committee of ten or more be named by the president to take general charge of the arrangements. The men who are to act on the committee will be appointed between now and next Monday evening, when another meeting will be held in the club rooms.

The detailed program for the day has not yet been arranged, but the general plans include a grand parade in the morning, in which the naval reserve, the National Guard, G. A. R., civic societies and others will be asked to participate.

Committees on finance, decorations, music, sports, fireworks, parade, program and other features will be appointed at the meeting next Monday night.

OLD MAN TURNED OUT.

Family Too Large—Wants to Go to Poorhouse.

Because his daughter-in-law, with eight children and a husband to care for, objected to his presence in the house, Julius LaLonde, 76 years of age, was turned out of his son's home yesterday and told to seek shelter elsewhere. He was compelled to go to A. P. Cook, superintendent of the poor, for aid, and asked that he might be sent to the poor house. He pleaded with Mr. Cook not to have his son arrested for non-support. The superintendent told the man to return to the son's home.

"He must take care of you, and I'll make him do it," said Mr. Cook. "If he doesn't treat you right, I'll take further steps to make him do so. He has no right to turn you out."

LaLonde said that he had made his home with his son for a year past, but that yesterday morning he was ordered out of the house by his daughter-in-law, who threw his clothes out of the door after him.

One of LaLonde Jr.'s sons is married and others of the family are said to be old enough to work and assist in supporting the household.

CHARGES NON-SUPPORT.

On complaint of Mrs. Jacob Haubner, 5606 Grand avenue, her husband, for several weeks past employed at Cloquet, was arrested yesterday on a warrant charging him with non-support. He will have a hearing Saturday morning. He is now out on $50 bail.

The wife claims that she has received no money from her husband since Christmas. Haubner says the whole trouble is due to the fact that Mrs. Haubner refused to leave Duluth and live with him at Cloquet, where he is working as a blacksmith. He says that he was unable to get work in Duluth and was compelled by force of circumstances to accept a position at Cloquet, although his wife did not want him to leave the city.

PARK IS PRETTY.

Fairmount park, located near Sixty-first avenue west, is a very pretty spot just now, and the natural beauty of the place is attracting many visitors. A large volume of water is now pouring down the creek running through the park and over the falls. Visitors to this attractive spot express their appreciation of the act of the park board last year in constructing suitable paths up to and past the falls. These paths are now in good condition, and add considerably to the attractiveness of the park.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

William and James Smith arrived in the city from Cross River yesterday.

Ernest Brotherton returned from the iron range this morning.

P. McGraw is having three dwelling houses erected on his lots at the corner of Fifty-seventh avenue west and Cody street.

Edward Warner of Scanlon is transacting business in West Duluth today.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyons, Mrs. Frank Thompson and six friends formed a party which drove in from Cloquet a distance of eighteen miles yesterday.

The alumni of the Irving school will hold a business meeting at the school building tonight. Plans for the annual banquet will be discussed.

Mr. and Mrs. P. O'Donnell of Hibbing, are guests at the home of Mrs. O'Donnell's mother, Mrs. Thomas Wright, 126 Sixty-third avenue west.

James Crockett of Eau Claire, Wis., is visiting at the home of his sister, Mrs. C. A. Carlson, on Fifty-seventh avenue west.

For wall paper, go to Nygren's.

R. A. Hayden, a young West Duluth boy, has developed into a professional actor, of no mean ability. Hayden is now appearing with the Florence Stone company, at the Lyceum, in "The Charity Ball." He takes the part of the hungry little newsboy, and does his turn in a manner which delights the audience.

The West Duluth Democratic club will hold a regular meeting this evening in its hall on Grand avenue. There will probably be a debate on some subject of political interest, and plans for the proposed debate between the Democratic and West Duluth Republican clubs will be discussed.

Paints and oils at Nygren's.

The St. Louis mill started in this morning on the season's cut, with a force of nearly 200 men employed. This is the last of the West Duluth mills to commence operations this season. All four West Duluth mills are now running a day shift.

White Pine Lung Balsam will cure that cough. At Nygren's.

L. L. O. A., No. 31, will give an old fashioned dance May 16, in Carlson's hall. Tickets 25 cents. Good time; good music. Lots of fun.

James Moore, who recently established a first-class blacksmith shop a few doors east of the postoffice, on Ramsay street, is meeting with a liberal patronage. His business, already a prosperous one, is steadily growing.

Patterson, undertaker. 'Phone 3070.

For rent, No. 4827 West Fifth street; all conveniences. W. B. Getchell.

THE PROPER ATTITUDE.

The attitude that should be assumed by Minnesota Democrats with reference to the presidential nomination was well stated in The Herald yesterday by Hon. L. A. Rosing, the party's candidate two years ago for governor of this state. Mr. Rosing discusses the question from the standpoint of one who is not a partisan, as far as any special aspirant for the nomination is concerned. He is more anxious for the success of the Democratic party in the coming campaign than that any particular man shall be chosen to head the ticket. A thorough union of the party is necessary in order to defeat the Republican ticket, and as Mr. Rosing well says, it is time for Democrats to stop attaching prefixes or affixes to the name Democracy and go to the national convention as plain, ordinary Democrats, ready to confer together in the framing of a Democratic platform and the nomination of a Democratic candidate.

This result cannot be reached by binding the delegates from this state by hard and fast instructions for any candidate. With an uninstructed delegation, Minnesota would be able to wield much greater influence in the national convention than if its representatives were bound by instructions for any one candidate.

FEMINIZING MANKIND.

The question whether American school boys are becoming "feminized" to their detriment has been much discussed since the Mosely educational commission from England made its report.

Opinions, of course, run from one extreme to the other, some siding with the commission, others taking the opposite ground, but the general sentiment seems to be that the American boy has not been "feminized" sufficient to hurt him any and that if he was more refined and less pugnacious it would be better for him.

There is something in human nature that admires pugnacity. Peaceably disposed as a man may be himself, he takes an interest in the fights of others and detests the coward who runs away from a battle. Punish his own progeny for fighting as much as he will, he finds little pleasure in seeing his son run away from trouble. He would rather see him whipped in a struggle than to escape fighting by giving in without an effort. That this spirit is a relic of savagery does not alter the fact, but that it is a desirable human attribute is very doubtful. The spirit of resistance is creditable, but it should find expression in some more civlized methods.

Professor George A. Coe of the Northwestern university, speaking in praise of the strong fist, says:

"There are many advantages to the child resulting from his quarrelling and his fighting with other children to a limited extent. It gives him self-reliance and other essential characteristics of much benefit to him in the battle of life."

It would be interesting to know what the professor considers "a limited extent." The advantages that a child gains in quarrelling and fighting may be of benefit to himself in after life, but it is doubtful if it is of any beneit to advancement of civilization. It is too near to the false doctrine that "might makes right." If association with women teachers will have a tendency to remove his pugnacious spirit from the masculine mind, then humanity will be all the better from having associated with women teachers.

A child may be taught to be courageous to the point of daring and still be improved in his character by being taught to refrain from giving unnecessary pain or offense. If tenderness of sensibility is feminine rather than masculine, is not all civilization becoming feminine? But as long as there are many women who take a pride in boasting of their part in educating mankind to delight in warfare there is little fear of too much feminization.

PREFERENCE TO MARRIED MEN.

If it be true as reported that the United States postoffice department has decided to show preference hereafter to mail clerks who are married, it is an evidence that the postoffice authorities possess much better judgment than the Chicago bank which would forbid its clerks to marry on less than $1000 per year.

Because a man is married he should not be given preference over a single man of greater worth and merit but, other things being equal, the married man should be given the preference. Furthermore, the banker who is wise will not only fail to forbid his employes to marry, but will encourage them to do so, because thereby they become better men, more responsible and trustworthy as a rule. That the postoffice authorities have learned this is evident and it is probable that this is at the bottom of their order giving preference to married men and not the fear of race suicide.

No man really lives or develops the best that is in him until he is not only married, but has raised a family. That is man's true destiny. That is what he was put on this earth for. All else is but a side issue. And when we try to show that any man is too poor to marry, thereby we admit that society has conspired to deprive that man of one of his natural rights, and the most important of all.

One of the greatest sins in this country today is that committed by the landlord who enforces the rule that tenants shall have "no children." Thereby he is not only doing an injury to society, but he is injuring his own financial prospects, for the greater the number of people the more his real estate is worth. In the better days to come landlords will not only invite children, but will build tenements with the especial purpose of making their tender young lives healthy and happy. To what better purpose could any man devote his life? "For inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these ye have done it unto me."

WHERE THERE'S A WILL.

The unsightliness of many of the vacant lots in Duluth is a matter of frequent comment. People with more laziness than civic pride in their make-up, who have lived in houses adjoining these vacant grounds have filled them with tin cans, barrels, boxes and all sorts of rubbish. While this matter has been much talked of for years but little has been accomplished in the way of reform.

Where there is a will there is always a way. An example was recently furnished by the Women's club of Port Angeles, Wash. The ladies observed many unsightly features about town, including stumps in the streets. They resolved to eradicate them, and they not only resolved but they accomplished. This is the way they did it:

Under the auspices of the club, the entire town turned out and celebrated "Stump day." The mayor issued a proclamation indorsing the movement and requesting all citizens to lay aside their ordinary business and tender their services to the ladies. "The plan became popular," says an exchange, "and on the appointed day most of the business houses were closed, and nearly every man in the town was on hand, either personally of represented by a substitute. Teams and tools were generously contributed. The club women served dinner at out-door spots convenient to the workers. The results of the day's labor were several blocks of cleared and practically graded streets, where hideous stumps and winding wagon trails had previously appeared."

The Port Angeles ladies also took the school grounds in hand and got the men to cut a much-needed street through on one side of the building. A portion of the playgrounds was filled in and graded to conform to the general plan, and drainage ditches were constructed.

Fortunately Duluth has progressed beyond the stump period, but there are some things more unsightly and more dangerous than stumps. There are alleys and vacant lots in this town littered with all sorts of rubbish and disease-breeding filth that are never cleaned from year's end to year's end. If the citizens would only develop the will, like those Pacific coast ladies, a way could be found.

In this connection it is but justice to say that the health board is unjustly blamed for the unsanitary and unsightly condition of alleys and vacant lots at the present time, and The Herald must plead guilty to having been too severe a few days ago in a criticism of the board's inaction in regard to the West Duluth alleys. It is true that these alleys are in a shockingly dirty condition, but Dr. Murray, the health commissioner, is making every possible effort to effect a change. He is handicapped by lack of sufficient funds to properly clean up the city and the late season has also hindered him, as the piles of dirt still contain large quantities of ice. The lack of sewers in that section of the city has also made the conditions worse than in other sections, while the residents themselves are not blameless. The Herald is assured that the health officials will descend upon the West Duluth alleys en masse within a few days, and all cause for complaint will be speedily removed.

THE FIELD SURVEY.

The New York World, discussing the successful issue of the suit to compel the coal-carrying roads to disclose their contracts, in a commendable spirit of fairness, says: "For initiating and pressing to a successful conclusion this suit, W. R. Hearst is entitled to public credit." This is interesting as denoting, at least, that the publisher of the senior yellow entertains no petty spirit of spite against his successful competitor, the publisher of the junior yellow.

The present "boom of Cannon" is not accompanied by "shouts of joy" on his part.

Any system of government that savors of the real Christian spirit of mutual helpfulness appears to have a hard row to hoe in this country.

The voting machine will never become popular with election judges and other officers who enjoy putting in double time counting votes.

It is really too bad that people who were so anxious to associate with negroes that they brought them in chains from Africa are so averse to associating with them now that they refuse to ride with them in the same cars, eat with them at the same table or permit their children to attend the same schools.

The residents of Michigan who voted for Fremont for president in 1856 are going to hold a state convention at Jackson on May 18. It is the purpose to formulate a declaration of principles along the lines of those adopted at the time the Republican party was born. It will sound strangely out of tune with present-day policies of the party.

In the hope of Republican success, of course, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat says that Joseph Folk will be unable to reform the Democratic party of Missouri. But it may be the truth for all that.

In his address to the employes of the New Haven road, during which he advised them to join the railroad orders, President Mellen made use of the following language in criticism of labor unions: "There are many workingmen who can earn more than they do, whose employers would gladly pay them more, but that they have become classified, and an advance to them means an advance also to their inefficient associates of a similar class, making it often too formidable a matter for consideration. Therefore, when I say unions do much good I mean they help the lame, the halt and the weary, at the expense of the really competent." Considered in the proper light this is not a very serious indictment. In fact it is a compliment. To help a fellow mortal at one's own expense is really the fundamental principle of Christianity. It is in this essential that the labor unions radically differ from the predatory trusts.

An effort is being made to show that W. J. Bryan favored Judge Parker for his running mate in 1900. He denies it. However, it cuts no figure now whether he did or not. Judge Parker might be an altogether different proposition at this time. As well say that the present supporters of Parker ought to be well satisfied with the nomination of Bryan.

Actors, like poets, are born, not made. But a college education ought to improve either and no doubt does.

From present indications it might be worth while for the Democratic party of Minnesota to nominate some good man for governor.

HOTEL GOSSIP

A passenger who came down on the Bon Ami from Grand Marais gives a rather amusing explanation of why some of the pigeons which were expected to bring messages from the vessel to this city did not bear tidings as expected.

The owner of the birds, H. F. Flynn, placed six of them on the vessel and with them the little metal boxes which are attached to the birds' legs and contain the message that may be sent.

Whoever released the birds permitted some of them to be submitted to an experiment of tying the message in their tail feathers, ostensibly to rid them of the burden of carrying the metal pouch. Whether the messages fell out or were blown out during the flight of the birds is not known, but this accounts for the fact that some of them had no messages when they got here.

It is evident that the person who wanted to do away with the metal boxes believes in going back to first principles, for people interested in the cultivation of carrying by pigeons studied a long while before they arrived at the conclusion that the metal pouch is the neatest, least burdensome and surest method of transporting information through the agency of the winged messengers.

"Any mail for me?"

This is the clerk's bete noir, alias his pet aversion. If there is anything a hotel clerk does not like to be asked it is this question. Ice water, clean towels or a Manhattan cocktail are not so bad, as they are not asked for with the painful frequency that the mail is inquired about.

Usually the mail is put into the boxes of those who have rooms and it is the fellows on the European plan that give the most suffering to the clerks in this particular. The European plan does not commit a man to anything. He can come and sign his name, and the clerk asks:

"Do you want a room?"

"No, I'll stop European plan."

It uses the hotel inkl up and takes one space on the register but does not obligate the arrival to pay any money. Then he asks for his mail. There is none or there is little, as the case may be, and if there is any the clerk forks it over to the asker.

Then the Eudopean arrival may disappear and never be heard of again, or may soon reappear and get a room. But the majority of those stoping via this method merely want to be on the register for reasons of their own. They may want it as evidence for their employer or to let their friends know they are in town, or to be able to get their mail through the hotel office. Some of them get a little food in the cafe or go out to some more modest beanery to seek subsistence.

Occasionally the mail means something more than usually important to the inquirer, however. An instance in point occurred the other morning at one of the large hotels. The man who asked the man behind the desk was told there was mail and was handed three letters.

He laughed in glee.

"Check in this one all right," he said. "Just asked one of the other clerks a few minutes ago and she said there was none. Guess the mail must have just come in. Here's a dollar you can have right now."

As he said this he shoved a silver dollar to the clerk. He had borrowed it.

"I couldn't even get a shave this morning because that check had not come and I just borrowed this dollar from a friend I met up on Superior street to get shaved and buy breakfast. Thought at the last minute I would see if the mail bringing my check had come. And it has. If I hadn't gotten it I would have begun to believe the house had lost all faith in your Uncle Jerry.

"I've been stuck on the road once in a while through foolishness but this time I want to tell you that it is not your uncle's fault.

"No poker games. No sirree. No beer and whisky sessions or anything of that sort. I was down the road a piece and got a wire from the house that I misunderstood. Thought I was to get my check at another place than Duluth, and when I got there the cupboard was bare and I had to make tracks for Duluth as the last resort."

"Check had been waiting for me at the other place until the very day I went for it, when the hotel man, who knows me pretty well, had sent it on here, as he had to go away that morning and did not want to leave the thing for his clerk to attend to. He thought I was not coming there this trip and always sends anything that lays over five days up to the Zenith City. But all's well that ends with the right amount of currency in your jeans, provided it's honest."

A HAPPY MAN.

Omaha World-Herald: There was something fine in the proud remark of the 95-year-old juror who was drawn on the jury in Judge Day's court the other day when he was excused on account of age. Mr. Leehy said: "I have three boys, though, and if you want them, judge, I'll give you any of them for a juror, and they'll make good ones."

Tottering along toward the century mark is an old man. He responds to the call of duty, even though the old court house steps are hard to climb and the day is warm, and if he cannot sit throughout the day, passing judgment on the criminals that may be arraigned, he can furnish a substitute worthy of any task assigned—yes, three of them—for whom he can vouch.

How different is this instance from that other figure near the end of life's road, tottering under the burden which he must carry alone so far as this earth is concerned. His friends are gone, his neighbors pity but do not touch his heart with healing sympathy. In all the world there is no more solitary human being than this childless, friendless, helpless man. And so it is refreshing and inspiring to know of this Omaha father who proudly points to the three sons who are the props of noble age. We can well understand the thought to which he gave utterance when he offered to furnish a substitute on the jury bench.

THE WEATHER.

United States Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth. Synopsis of weather conditions for the twenty-four hours ending at 7 a. m. (Central time), May 12.—The Dakota storm has moved to Minnesota and has lost strength, but it has caused high winds and more or less rain throughout the Northwest during the past twenty-four hours, followed by cooler temperatures this morning in the Middle West and Northwest. Another depression is developing in the extreme Southwest. The barometer is high in Eastern states and Alberta. In the lake region the winds are fresh and brisk southwesterly, except fresh easterly on Superior.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Two Harbors News: A citizen of Hibbing was convicted of poisoning cows that annoyed him, with paris green, and was fined $100 and costs. He put in no evidence in defense, because of the expressed animosity of his fellow-citizens, but will appeal to the district court. A man pestered with cows is at all times justified in forgetting that the owners rather than the tormentors are at blame, and proceeding to drastic measures, although the poison that provides the pestiferous potato bug eviction from the scene of its activity is hardly the stuff one would naturally select to transfer the bovine of some family into the great unknown.

Wadena Pioneer Journal: When the people elect to public office an agent of the corporations, they not only sacrifice the interests of the people today, but they mortgage the rights of your sons and daughters.

Thief River Falls Press: A number of papers and politicians are agitating a movement in favor of making all county officers limited by law to two terms, as the reasons for not doing so in sparsely settled counties are now disappearing. Heretofore in some of the counties it was difficult to get good material for state's attorney and other offices, where special training was necessary, but with the filling up of the state there are plenty of attorneys to fill the offices, in return, and the two-term principle is what the people approve.

St. Peter Free Press: The system of electing our railroad and warehouse commissioner seems to have outlived its usefulness. When the present law of electing these officials by popular vote was put on the statute book it was expected that it would result in efficient service for the common good, but experience has clearly demonstrated that it is sometimes easier to manipulate popular nominations than appointments.

Long Prairie Democrat: We don't know how other Democrats feel, but it is very pleasing to us to note that William J. Bryan is still on the firing line and means to stay there fighting for good, honest Democratic principles. The "reorganizers" don't scare him a little bit, and if the real Democrats wish to see a good, lively party organization this year and an aggressive fight against the common enemy, the Republican party, they had better listen to us sound advice.

Midway News: Stealing, apparently, when indulged in as a distinct industry, and followed up with persistence and energy, is not at all objectionable, if not commendable, the only difference of opinion being on the matter of settlements. It is this one point that the Midway News has all along contended against, and it seems to be as much to protect this industry as to defeat R. C. Dunn that the daily press at this time seeks to tangle up the controversy.

Border Budget: Although he has received enough praise and flattery to turn the head of any ordinary mortal, Congressman Bede has never forgotten his constituents, even in the most remote portions of his district, and has given them good service for value received. Even after the session was ended he tarried in Washington long enough to file a protest with the president against Secretary Hitchcock's ruling against allotments of the Indian reservations. Such services as he has given his constituents do not court opposition, and it is needless to state that he will have none at the next election.

Ely Miner: The Duluth Evening Herald in a recent editorial gave its views on the question of Sunday baseball. The Herald gave some sound, logical sense, and the various papers throughout the state have commented thereon. Our opinion is, the ball ground, the lake, woods or other outdoor, health-giving sport is far preferable than the visitation of saloons on the Sabbath. Those recreations carried on in a decent manner, so that the peace and quiet of a community is not disturbed. Sunday participation in baseball, fishing, boating or other wholesome sport ought not to be interfered with.

Aitkin Independent: There is no doubt about it any longer that Aitkin county Democrats are for Hearst, and they will send a delegation to Duluth with instructions to select delegates favorable to him.

Keeping Military Secrets.

Detroit Tribune: The Japanese way:

Correspondents, to Gen. Fukushima: "What's the war news?"

Gen. Fukushima, to the correspondents: "The war news? Some strength of the Japanese army landed on the Liao Tung peninsula, May 5."

Correspondents, to Gen. Fukushima: "What forces, and where—east, west, north or south?"

Gen. Fukushima, to the correspondents: "Out of the skies, from heaven."

The American way:

Inquisitive person, to Gen. Washington: "When, where and in what force shall you attack?"

Gen Washington, to inquisitive person: "Can you keep a secret?"

Inquisitive person to Gen. Washington: "Certainly, general, certainly."

Gen. Washington, to inquisitive person: "So can I."

JUST JOSHES.

Chicago Daily News: He—I understand Softleigh has been assigned a very difficult role in your amateur theatricals. She—Yes, poor fellow! They gave him a thinking part.

Chicago Record-Herald: "One half the world doesn't know how the other half lives, you know."

"Well," she answered, "it's the ignorant half's own fault. Everybody has a chance to go around and find out when the 'for rent' signs are put up."

Life: A charitable young lady, visiting a sick woman, inquired with a view to further relief, as to her family. She asked: "Is your husband kind to you?"

Oh, yes, Miss," was the instant response, "he's kind—very kind. Indeed, you might say he's more like a friend than a husband."

New York Times: Columbus had just landed when his sailors observed him weeping. "Tell us," they implored, "what is the matter?"

"I have made an awful mistake," he groaned. "I should have come over in the Mayflower!"

Realizing that henceforth he must be a nobody, he finished his task with a heavy heart.

Puck: "Here's an invitation to Mabel and Robert's silver divorce."

"Dear, dear! Can it be ten years since they parted."

Princeton Tiger: M. Critique—Yes, indeed, my house is simply full of Titians.

Mrs. Nouveariche—Good gracious, ain't there no way of killing 'em?

Chicago Daily News: Teacher—So I've caught you chewing gum, have I?

Sammy—No, mum; I wasn't chewin'; I was jest keepin' it there instead of in my pocket. It's so sticky.

"I'd rather be wed in the spring," she said,
"When the June with its roses is nigh
Or else in the summer, amid the blooms
And the glowing of radiant life
But not in the winter so bleak and cold,
Nor yet in the fading fall!"
'Twas thus she sang a few years ago,
But now she'd be willing to wed, you know
Well—any old time at all."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Every generous woman is always willing to grant a man a small allowance out of his own earnings.

Give a woman fine feathers to wear in this world and she'll trust to luck for the wings to wear in the next.

It's absolute proof to a woman that she is a good mother to her children when their uncles and aunts tell her she is spoiling them.

Whether a girl is fat or not depends on whether she is describing herself or somebody else.

It makes a woman quiver with joy to think that if she were a duchess she could be haughty even to the cook.

It takes a pretty hot lie to blister a woman's tongue if she is bragging about the smart things her children say.

It's queer how much more afraid a woman is that her dress may trail in the dust when she has on low shoes and gay stockings than when she has on regulation boots.

Odd Relationship.

Washington Times: "Down in my state," said Representative Meyer of Louisiana, "we have our share of people who are devoid of common decency and respect for the feelings and comfort of others. Not long ago an Irishman boarded a train at New Orleans, and every seat in the coach was filled save one, and this one was taken up by a young fellow and his dog. He made no effort to provide room for the poorly dressed Irishman, who stood leaning against the seat. However, the young fellow did cast several sneering looks at the elderly man, as much as to say, you ought to get in the stock car.

"'That's a foine lookin' dog,' remarked the Irishman, as he made an attempt to be friendly with the 'whole seat' fellow.

"'Yes, it's a fine dog,' snapped the youngster.

"'An' may I be after askin' what breed is the dog?'

"'Yes. It is a cross between a skunk and an Irishman.'

"'Twin, by the holy smoke, the baste is related to both of us.'"

The Next Wind Storm.

Pittsburg Dispatch: It makes one stop and think to look back at the progress of ten years and see one corporation, possessing the majority of the Mesaba deposits, value those possessions at from six hundred million to seven hundred million dollars. It is almost beyond comprehension, and the question naturally arises what the next decade will bring forth in the way of new ore discoveries. The rapid growth in the consumption of pig iron and innumerable estimates that the supply will last only fifty or sixty years, and the fact that one corporation possesses the bulk of the known deposits, convince one that sharp competition of the future will result in explorations that will uncover some new El Dorado. That one range to the northwest of Duluth has made many fortunes, some of them of almost unlimited extent, and the wonder is in what quarter of the globe will the next body of riches be found to make even larger fortunes for the energetic captains of the Pittsburg district. That windstorm of ten years ago will undoubtedly be repeated in some other equally sensational form, and Pittsburgers hope that they will be given the first opportunity to sample it.

And Then He Thought.

Brooklyn Eagle: When he proposed marriage she asked for time to think it over.

"This is so unexpected," she said.

He gave her the necessary time, and she finally decided that he fulfilled all the requirements of the situation. Then they reached a point where they could discuss matters calmly.

"Of course," he said jokingly, "it wasn't really unexpected at all."

"Oh, yes, it was," she replied.

"Absurd!" he exclaimed. "A girl always says that. She knows what's coming and when it's coming, because she is just naturally an expert in such matters."

"I thought I was, but you fooled me," she insisted.

"And it was a complete surprise?"

"It was."

"I don't understand it," he commented.

"Well," she explained ingenuously, "you had overlooked so many splendid chances that I gave you for proposal that I had begun to think nothing ever would give you nerve enough to speak out, so it was really unexpected."

"Oh!" he said, and that was all. There didn't seem to be anything else to say.

ARBITRATE MATTER

Longshoremen and Lumber Carriers Decide Upon That Action.

Two and Half Cents an Hour Still In Dispute.

Arbitration has been decided on to determine what wages the Lumber Carriers' association shall pay the longshoremen, the conferences at the Spalding coming to an end yesterday. The carriers held out for 50 cents and the laborers demanded 52½.

As they were unable to get nearer together than this difference of 2½ cents, it was determined that a board of arbitration of three members be named to fix the ultimate wage, it being agreed that in the meantime the longshoremen will go to work at 50 cents per hour whenever their services are needed. If the arbitrators decide that they shall be paid 52½ cents, whatever is due them on this basis from the time they shall have gone to work will be paid them at the time of decision.

Duluth will be the meeting place of the board. It is believed that the longshoremen will select B. J. Keefe, their international president, and the lumber carriers Edward Hines, chairman of their executive committee, who presided at the conferences here. These two will select a third arbitrator.

SATURDAY AT COURT HOUSE

Register's Office to Close at Noon, Others at Four.

Arrangements are nearly completed among the county officers relative to their Saturday office hours during the coming season.

Beginning next Saturday, the register of deeds office will be closed at 1 o'clock sharp. The other county offices will be kept open, most of them until at least 4 o'clock, for the time being.

It was at first proposed to have all the offices closed at 1 o'clock, but there are many people in the outlying districts who, it is claimed, come to the city Saturday's to do their trading and to transact such business as they may have at the court house, and these would be considerably put out if the offices were closed.

Experience has shown that the register of deeds office has practically no business after the noon hour on Saturdays during the summer, and this will be closed.

In the other offices arraagements will be made to give the employes a half holiday by alternate weeks, a portion of them remaining one Saturday afternoon to look after the business of the office and the others remaining the Saturday afternoon of the next week.

Personal Beauty

has been much written of, constantly thought of—but hitherto never really taught!

The magazines of America and Europe have published endless chapters on the subject, containing something of interest, little of scientific truth, and less of practical value to the individual.

The newspapers with their extravagant parade of omniscience have done far more to mar than make for personal comeliness.

There are but two ways for a woman to be beautiful; she must be born to it, or acquire it—and the most famous beauties of the world had no more given them by Nature than have ninety-nine women out of a hundred who fail in becoming beautiful because they do not know how to make themselves so!

Beyond all question the most notable series of papers on Personal Beauty which have ever appeared in a magazine are those by Dr. Grace Peckham Murray, now appearing in The Delineator under the title of "The Fountain of Youth."

The subject this month is "The Neck and Arms," profusely illustrated with photographs from life.

No woman young or old can fail to read this series with intense interest and personal profit.

ARE HEAVY WEIGHTS

Crew Going to Madison Breaks Record For Weight.

Heaviest Ever Representing Duluth at Any Regatta.

The eight that will represent the Duluth Boat club at the regatta in Madison, will be the heaviest crew that was ever sent out of Duluth.

The average weight of the members will be about 180 pounds. This will be several pounds heavier than the average of the crews that used to represent Duluth at the races on Lake Minnetonka. H. M. Peyton is the heaviest man in the eight. When he commenced training this spring he weighed about 225 pounds, but he has taken about twenty pounds, but he has taken off about twenty pounds and now tips the scale at about 205 pounds. His brother, B. M. Peyton, comes a close second. He weighed about 210 pounds when he commenced training, but has taken off eight or ten pounds and is now down to 202.

Gibson, the stroke, is the third on the list and weighs 196 pounds. Then comes a big drop, Fuck, the fourth man, weighing only a little over 175, while Calhoun and L'Estrange weigh about 168 pounds each. McPhail carries 162 pounds and Whyte is the lightest man on the crew, weighing only 155.

All of the men have taken off from five to twenty pounds since they commenced training and are now down to their proper weights. There is not likely to be much change in their condition between now and the date of the regatta and the crew sent to Madison will average about 180 pounds.

The crews sent to Lake Minnetonka averaged from five to ten pounds lighter than the present crew. Six of the eight members of this year's crew rowed at Lake Minnetonka and all of them have incerased considerably in weight since that time.

An average of 180 pounds will compare aforably with the college crews seen at Madison. The latter may average a little more than that, but there will not be much difference. With a large number of candidates to choose from the college coaches generally select heavy crews and the Duluth men may be a few pounds lighter than their opponents.

The new shell has not yet arrived, although it is expected daily. Word has been received by Capt. Mahoney that the shell has been shipped and it should be here inside of a few days.

The cold, windy weather of the past few days has interfered with the outdoor work. The harbor has been too rough to launch the shells and the men have contented themselves with a little gymnasium work.

Reports from Madison state that while the Wisconsin crew started several green men, they are rounding into shape under the coaching of O'Dea and will be formidable opponents by the time the regatta arrives.

Sherman, Tex., May 12.—A jury yesterday gave Louis James, the actor, a judgment for $10,000 against the Oriental Hotel association of Dallas, Texas, for libel. It is alleged the hotel people had sent a telegram to James and wife requesting them to return pillow slips said to be missing from the hotel. GAMBLING PREVAILS.

Superior Aldermen Attack City's Moral Condition.

At a meeting of the city council in Superior, last evening, Alderman Shafer and Bessaw made statements that they had visited several plaes in the city where gambling was in progress openly, in spite of the assertion of the mayor and chief of police that there was no gambling places permitted in Superior.

Alderman Shafer declared Superior to be the worst city of its size, morally, in the country. Girls, he claimed, hardly out of school are allowed to frequent wine rooms where they are given intoxicating drinks and dragged down to infamy.

Both aldermen said they had no troble getting into the places where gambling was in progress and at one place were invited to take a hand in a poker game.

The discussion of the moral condition of Superior was brought to an abrupt close by the motion of Alderman Thorne that the council adjourn.

Democratic Delegates to Indiana Convention Have Warm Time.

Hearst Delegates Hold Meetings After Parker Men Finish.

Indianapolis, May 12.—The delegates to the Democratic convention of Indiana held caucuses last night and selected delegates to the national convention. Admission to the caucuses was by ticket distributed by the district chairman. As a result of this policy of the state organization the Hearst people have started a movement to bolt the convention. Rump caucuses were held last night in the Second and Tenth districts immediately following the regular caucuses and it was reported late last night that the Hearst delegates from other districts had taken like action and will present to the convention a full slate of delegation and convention officers. The scenes attending some of the conventions were exceedingly serious. Inflamed with the bitterness of intense partisanship, men fought, raved and cursed like mad men. This was especially true at the Tenth district caucus and at the Second. The Hearst delegates who did not have tickets attempted to force their way into the halls, where the meetings were held. In a few instances they were successful. A sufficient number of Hearst people gained admission to both the Tenth and Second district coucuses to start and maintain a pandemonium as soon as the Parker people opened proceedings. Regular and orderly transaction of the business at hand was utterly out of the question. Parker men were put as chairmen and then the Parker slates of delegates and convention officers were read. No one heard the names read and the votes taken were pretenses of parliamentary procedure. Appearances indicated that the Parker people were in the majority and on that showing the district organization declared the Parker slates elected and so reported to state headquarters. The Hearst people then took posession and held their rump caucuses. They were able to proceed with their program after the Parker people left the hall.

LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEERS.

Brotherhood Holds Biennial Meeting at Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, May 12.—The sixth biennial meeting of the International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers assembled in this city yesterday, with between 600 and 700 delegates in attendance at Turner hall. At the same time the lady's auxiliary of the order assembled in Blanchard hall.

The convention of the engineers was called to order by Grand Chief Engineer W. S. Stone, who delivered a brief address, reciting the splendid work which the association had been able to accomplish and what it hoped to perform at the present meeting.

The work of greatest importance before the present convention is the selection of a grand chief engineer to fill the place made vacant by the death of P. M. Arthur, last July. The present chief, W. S. Stone, who was chosen to fill out Mr. Arthur's unexpired term, will be a candidate to succeed himself.

THE FIRST MEETING

Duluth and Superior Northern League Teams at It.

Will Give First Line on Merits of Two Teams.

The fans were to have an opportunity to get in line on the relative strength of the Duluth and Superior teams this afternoon, for the White Sox were billed to bump up against Don Cameron's "Colts."

Superior has been holding spring practice at La Crosse and has been defeating the La Crosse team with pleasing regularity. The team returned this morning from the Wisconsin city and is ready for the game this afternoon.

Up to the present time the White Sox have not been called upon to show what they could do, having won all of the games played with comparative ease. Superior, however, should make them exert themselves at least, and a big delegation of Superior rooters is coming over to see fair play.

The grounds are in good condition for the first time this season and unless rain interferes some fast work should result.

"Buck" Noldin was to be in the box for Duluth. The Duluth manager claims that Noldin is going to prove one of the best twirlers in the league this year. The big southpaw is in excellent condition and is shooting them over like canon balls.

Hughes, the new catcher, will probably be in the box, as the fans are anxious to see him work out. From what little was seen of his work Tuesday, he looked like a winner.

The Superior men are no less confident of victory. Manager Cameron has a team that looks good on paper, and it has shown up well in practice. Either Kilroy or Morrison was to do the pitching.

The game was due to be called at 3:30. The line-up will be as follows:

Duluth—		Superior—
O'Leary-Hughes	catchers	Rogers
Nolden	pitchers	Kilroy-Morrison
Zink	first base	Cameron
Martin (Capt.)	second base	O'Dea
Ball	short stop	Egan
Quillan	third base	Kayes
Randall	outfield	Foster
Wilkes	outfield	Chandler
Corrigan	outfield	Hoole

A SUIT FOR DAMAGES

For Hazing His Son Is Brought By New York Man.

The Boy, Half Naked, Ran the Gauntlet In Snow.

New York, May 12.—The Press says that serious consequences may follow the so-called "moral hazing" to which Arthur W. Bedell and William Schroeder, freshmen in St. Stephen's college, Annandale-on-the-Hudson, were subjected last February. Having failed to receive the public apology which he demanded, the father of Archer Bedell has instructed his lawyer to bring suit for damages against the trustees. He threatens to go further than this and bring action in the criminal courts against all those who took part or aided and abetted in the hazing of his son.

The college is one of the best known training schools for clergymen in the Protestant Episcopal church in this state. Bishop Potter is president of the board of trustees, and as such will be one of the defendants in the civil proceeding.

Young Bedell had the usual experience of newly entered students last October, but he took the hazing goodnaturedly and made no protest. He pursued his studies without further incident until one Saturday night in February, when his bedroom was invaded by a party of students, and he was ordered to get out of bed.

He was compelled to obey, and then, without being permitted to dress, he was hurried across the snow covered campus on the library in Hoffman hall, where he and William Schroeder were forced to run a gauntlet and were beaten with clubs and shovels in the hands of a double line of students. Schroeder was laid up for a week. Bedell was not injured so severely but his nerves were unstrung.

The report of the hazing greatly angered Bedell's father. He asserted that the students who took part in it had violated a solemn pledge made to the Rev. Dr. Cole, former warden of the college. He had entered his son as a student because of the existence of this pledge, and he made the point that the breaking of it violated the contract with him, and laid the trustees open to a suit for damages.

Complaint was made to the Rev. Dr. George R. Silliman, secretary of the board of trustees, and a demand for a public apology before the faculty was presented.

Dr. Silliman in reply said that the discipline of the college remained with the warden, Dr. Harris, and Dr. Harris thought the hearing was justified because the two students had thrown the nine pins down the stairway in the early hours of the morning, a prank which, the father of young Bedell says, is a frequent occurrence among the students.

Obtaining no redress, Mr. Bedell, in a caustic letter to the secretary of the trustees, announced that unless the apology was made by Saturday he would bring civil and criminal actions against the college and students concerned in the assault. In his letter he said to Dr. Silliman:

"It was no ordinary case of hazing. Even if it were, college ethics are nothing to me. Such silly and antiquated ideas are being repudiated by the higher institutions of learning.

"Our anxiety is not so much for Archer's college career, as you seem to assume, as for the effect that the outcome of this will have upon his character. He has always been brought up to honor the church and to respect the clergy. How can he do so when he sees candidates for the ministry boasting of becoming intoxicated, openly breaking a pledge which they signed without reserve to hold good as long as they remained at St. Stephen's, and committing a criminal offense, from the punishment of which they seem to think they are shielded because it was committed within the college limits, and all this without one word of rebuke from the college authorities?"

WILL NOT DEFEND TITLE.

Chicago, May 12.—Mrs. Bernard S. Horne, who as Miss Anthony, won the titles of national and western championships of golf last year, will not defend her title in the western championship at Glenview this year. Mrs. Horne, who is visiting her parents at Evanston, has made this declaration but says it is her intention to play in the national championship this fall on the links of the Marion cricket club at Philadelphia.

WHERE PILLS REIGN.

Complicated Machinery Which Fairly Rains Pills.

At St. Helens, Lancashire, England, there is a factory containing intricate machinery which turns out 7,200,000 pills every eight working hours. These pills cure constipation, and the people know it. The name is Beecham's.

There never has been a signed testimonial published, as the proprietor believes Beecham's Pills should make headway on their own merits. The advertising is confined to moderate statements of what the pills actually do.

They cure Bilious and Nervous Disorders, Stomach Troubles, Female Ailments and hundreds of minor complaints, which are the result of constipation. They have the largest sale of any patent medicine in the world.

Beecham's Pills are a true tonic, a harmless stimulant from which there is no reaction, a painless, effectual laxative, and a specific for the cure of fifty per cent of all diseases. They probably come as near being an elixir of long life as anything created by human hands.

The virtue of Beecham's Pills does not result from any lucky combination of standard remedies, but rather from some beneficent, occult power, inherent in itself.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Government Men to Superintend the Dipping of Cattle.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Bismarck—Drs. W. J. Bracken, W. J. Butler and George E. Bond, of the government bureau of animal industry, are here to supervise the dipping of cattle for scab, which is prevailing on the ranges. Dr. Bond will supervise the work on the Indian reservation, where there are 41,000 head of cattle to be dipped. The others will work at Wishek, Napoleon, Britton and other points in this vicinity.

Governor White and Adjutant Miller have issued an order calling the state encampment of National Guard for the Rock Island reserve in Ramsey county on June 21 to June 28.

Word has been received of the death of E. L. Whitford, son-in-law of Governor N. G. Ordway, at his home in New Hampshire. He was formerly a prominent North Dakotan and lived for some time in St. Paul.

A report from Emmons county says that Editor D. R. Streeter won a legislative nomination by one vote. The judicial delegates from the county are instructed for Judge Winchester.

Fargo—The land department at Washington has telegraphed Col. Lounsberry to resume his work as special agent in this state. The colonel has been under suspicion for three months pending the investigation of the charges against him, which were pronounced "flimsy."

Ashley—The Republican caucus resulted in a victory for C. C. Hammond, secretary of the railroad commissioners. He will work in the interests of Congressman Marshall and Senator McCumber.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Yankton—Mrs. Margaret E. Edmunds, wife of ex-Governor Newton Edmunds, died Wednesday after an illness of more than two years. She was born in Troy, N. Y., and was 76. She came to Yankton in 1861 to join her husband, then governor of the territory. She had been married about fifty-six years and leaves three children—Charles P., William H. and Mrs. E. E. Washabaugh.

Terry—R. S. Stevens, ex-sheriff of Butte county, died suddenly. He was formerly in business in Deadwood.

Sioux Falls—Information has been received here of the suicide at Alamogordo, N. M., of C. G. Hartley, for a period of about ten years a resident of Sioux Falls and a well-known member of the local bar. Before taking up his residence in Sioux Falls, Hartley was a resident of Miller, S. D.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Delta County Farmer Loses Property By Forest Fire.

Cornell—Isaac Schram, who recently engaged in the poultry business and established a poultry farm near Cornell, Delta county, suffered a loss by fire last week. Three large barns and several smaller buildings were destroyed and it required hard wark to keep the flames from the farm house. The blaze was due to a forest fire started by a nearby farmer to clear his land. Mr. Schram was a mile from his home at the time. He will try to recover damages from the farmer whose carelessness resulted in the loss. The property was not insured.

Manistique—The plant, real estate and other property of the Federal Leather company at Manistique, have been sold to W. E. Wheeler, of Portville, N. Y., president of the Chicago Lumbering company, of Manistique, Mr. Wheeler acting for the company, for $63,800. The plant had been in operation about two years, but got into financial straits last fall and went into bankruptcy, and no leather has been turned out since Nov. 1. Since the concern was declared bankrupt, affairs have been in the hands of Trustee in Bankruptcy Bushong, of Gladstone. The plant is expected to resume operations in a short time.

Escanaba—Some forty applications for the position of superintendent of the public schools of the city of Escanaba, now filled by Professor Jolliffe, who has resigned, have been received by the school board. Many of these are from instructors in lower Michian who will be seen personally by two representatives of the Escanaba board who have left for Ann Arbor for that purpose. The other applications are from educators in the upper peninsula and Wisconsin and will receive consideration, along with the others, when the board members return home. For the position of principal of the high school, which position was made vacant by the death of Miss Anna M. Chandler, some thirty applications have been received.

Simmons—A Finnish woodsman in the employ of the Simmons Lumber company at Simmons, Mich., left camp one day about five weeks ago and started for Corinne. When he got to Bovee he went into a saloon, drank some liquor and soon afterwards died. An inquest was held by Justice Healy of Gould City and the jury impanelled found that death had occurred from natural causes. The superintendent of the Simmons Lumber company, S. G. McClellan, was not satisfied with the verdict, however, and sent for the sheriff and the prosecuting attorney of the county to conduct further investigation. The body was exhumed and the stomach removed and sent to Ann Arbor for the purpose of ascertaining whether it contains poison. If such is found, the prosecuting attorney will take further action. Mr. McClellan and others claim that two or three men have died in a similar way in that neighborhood, and are anxious that the present case be thoroughly sifted.

HITT BOOM GROWS.

Regarded as Most Available For Vice Presidency.

Washington, May 12.—The suggestion by Leslie M. Shaw, secretary of the treasury, that Representative Hitt of Illinois would make an ideal candidate for the vice presidential nomination, is well received in Washington. Mr. Hitt occupies an enviable position in the house and is equally as popular in the senate. No man now mentioned for President Roosevelt's running mate is so favorably regarded, with the possible exception of Senator Fairbanks.

Mr. Hitt's long service in congress, his geniality, social attainments and marked ability in dealing with matters of legislation, especially foreign affairs, his friends claim, make him particularly available for this honor. Some of Mr. Hitt's closest political friends say they have no doubt he would accept the nomination.

Springfield, Ill., May 12.—The name of Congressman Hitt for vice president has been much discussed here. It is being urged that if the place is to be given to Illinois he is the best man for it, and his nomination would remove whatever doubt any one might feel as to the result in this state next fall.

Mr. Hitt's friends here make the point that the long legislative training of Mr. Hitt, his acquaintance with governmental affairs, his singular mental and social graces, all unite to fit him for the duties of the office, while there is no question of his securing the united support of the Illinois delegation for the nomination in the national convention.

It only remains for Mr. Hitt to say he would accept the place to insure instructions for him at the state convention.

STRANGE MIRAGE

Caused the Captain to Take His Bearings.

Baltimore, Md., May 12.—Capt. Isaac Jones, of the Johnston lien steamer, Rowanmore, now in port, was mystified by the appearance of a mirage as he approached the coast bound from Liverpool to Baltimore.

The captain had just taken a stellar observation, and found he was in latitude 37 degrees 28 minutes north and longitude 75 degrees west, when Hog Island light was seen, although it was thirty-six miles distant from the ship and twice as far as the light is supposed to be visible at sea. The course was continued and the light on Cape Charles flashed in view, forty-three miles away. Later on Cape Henry light was observed forty miles away. In each instance the captain thought he was out of his course, but immediate observations and the chronometer proved that the commander of the ship was being mystified by an unusual phenomena.

It is believed that a fog, being swept off shore, causer the mirage. That it was a mirage was evident from the fact that the vessel steamed three and a half hours before Hog Island was abeam and five and three-quarter hours before the vessel was stopped at Cape Henry for the pilot.

"BEAUTY BOOK" BALKED.

World's Fair City Schemers Planned $40,000 Idea.

St. Louis, May 12.—Several hundred women of beauty, wealth and social prominence throughout the country readily responded to what was believed to be an invitation from the board of lady managers of the World's fair to send on photographs of themselves for exhibition in the Woman's building. The photographs remain boxed as they were when received, but a polite note has been sent to each woman who forwarded her picture, requesting a subscription of $100 "to commemorate the remarkably successful exhibition" by reprducing the picture in a "Beaty Book.'

To render the sceme attractive to the socialaly ambitious, it is set forth in the note that presentation copies will be delivered personally to Mrs. Roosevelt, Queen Alexandra, Mme. Loubet, Queen Margharita, the gaiserin, the czarina and the queen mother of Spain by a committee of ladies to be chosen.

Members of the board of lady managers deny that they had authorized the promotion of the book scheme. The solicitation of subscriptions seems to be a work undertaken for personal benefit, and the promoters trade upon the use of the name of the board lady managers without claiming directly to have authority from it for the solicitation of subscriptions. The promoters expected to realize $40,000 on an edition of 500 copies.

WEDDING FEAST

Was Held, Though the Bride Had Disappeared.

Detroit, Mich., May 12.—In spite of the fact that Mary Drabak, a Delray servant girl, who was to have married Frank Clesckowski, Monday, disappeared a few hours before the wedding, the bridegroom went ahead with the program.

His friends and the girl's friends, who had been invited to attend, were present at Kozlel's hall, Monday night, and with the jilted bridegroom as host, enjoyed themselves until a late hour. Of course, the wedding was not held.

The fun, however, became so boisterous that Officer Lines and a night patrolman entered the place and threatened a raid unless order was restored. The would-be bridegroom was as gay as any of the guests and the affair was almost as much of a "success" as if the bride had been present.

Mary Drabak is still missing. Monday afternoon, after the priest had been engaged and the hacks rented, the girl started for Detroit, saying that she was going to buy flowers for the wedding. After the girl failed to return in a reasonable length of time, the groom went out to look for her, but without success. He was game, however, and announced that he would carry out the festivities without the bride. The bridegroom, who has spent over $1200 in furniture and in fixing up a house, still hopes that his sweetheart will return.

LOWDEN OR YATES?

Illinois Contest Narrows Down to These Two Apparently.

Lorimer Holds Balance of Power For Deneen's Defeat.

Springfield, Ill., May 12.—The contest for the Illinois governorship is narrowing down to Lowden and Yates with William Lorimer holding the balance of power.

Lorimer has been turned down in Cook County and, short of his power. He turns up in Springfield, like a wedge in a hickory log and he is the man everybody is watching.

His hatred of Deneen is intense. He picked Deneen up when he was a poor, friendless lawyer and made him what he is today. Deneen, at the dictation of the Chicago papers, put Lorimer out of business, so far as Cook County is concerned, but the crafty Lorimer has about a hundred delegates well in hand and, with this strength, he could probably renominate Richard Yates.

Rankin and smarting under the lashings of the Chicago newspapers the dethroned political King is ready to give Deneen a farewell shot.

Now this phase of the situation did not hit Springfield until today. When Hamlin's friends realized what William Lorimer might or might not do, they individually and collectively "threw a fit." The Cullom party, quick to see every point in a political game, caught on with all speed. And this has been a day of great trouble and tribulation in the capital city.

The situation is virtually one of life or death to Cullom. He knows that Yates will wipe him off the political map if renominated. He knows, too, that Hamlin, like Cesar, is an ambitious man, and that Hamlin would not be governor more than six weeks until he would be setting up pins for Senator Cullom in the United States senate.

He knows that Deneen is colder than a cake of ice, and he need expect no help from him. He knows Lorimer would fling the necessary votes to pull Richard through, rather than Deneen should get the plum, and Senator Cullom and his intimate friends are giving the situation much thought.

Warner is a sort of a 500 to 1 shot in this game. He has been playing about, hoping that, in the event of a stamp de, the nomination would be handed to him. But none of the candidates has a kind word for Warner. Hamlin has taken the Warner congressional district away from him and the chances are that Shelbarger of Macon, or Charles Eckert of Douglas, will be nominated for his seat in congress, thus sending Congressman Warner to the political boneyard. If an attempt be made to shelve all candidates except Warner, in the anti-Yates outfit, with a view of pitting Warner against Yates, Warner will get a frightful trimming and Yates will be renominated. If it ever comes to a straight out and out battle as between Yates and Deneen, watch out for William Lorimer and his Cook County friends.

Cullom knows this as well as any living man. He has been through many a hard political battle in his day, but none so tough as the one which confronts him now. If he wins with a friendly candidate, he and his adherents will be in power in Illinois for many years. If he loses, there will be trouble all the way from Cairo to Waukegan, and it will begin with the adjournment of this convention.

So the situation turns largely on what such men as Cullom, Cannon, Hopkins, Fuller, Rodenburg, Smith, Graeff and Howard M. Snapp will do. Cannon may not exert his influence at all.

He may not feel like lending an open hand in the fight, but a wish or an expression from Cannon, who is speaker of the national house now and sure to be re-elected, if the house be Republican, is as good as a command to all of the Republican congressmen.

A determined effort has been made to bring Graeff into this fight, but up to this time he has not been heard from. George W. Prince is "out in the brush" some place.

If the regnant powers in Republican politics in Illinois wish to maintain themselves as against Yates, they must unite and unite quickly, or Richard will capture the prize.

What would be more natural than that Lorimer should go over to Yates as against Deneen? Remember the Peoria convention and the fight between Haney and Carter and the scene where Lorimer, tugging a big picture of Yates, tore in on the floor and stampeded the convention to the Jacksonville man.

Yet the Carter people were not one-tenth as wicked toward Lorimer as the Deneen crowd has been. The Chicago papers, which have for the last eighteen months been blistering Yates, and saying, if renominated, he would be beaten at the polls, have also been lambasting the life out of Lorimer.

They have gloated over his defeat locally and in every way heaped insult upon him. What would be more in the order of things than that he would give them Yates once more if he could?

Two of the big Chicago papers that helped "do up" Lorimer are locally classed among the mugwumps, and have supported Republican tickets when they felt like it. Lorimer may be relied on to do anything and everything he can to get even with the papers that have humiliated and abused him.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

A south-bound train on the Illinois Central railroad was wrecked one mile north of Middleburg, Tenn., Wednesday night. The engine was turned over and Engineer William Hadaway, of Water Valley, Miss., was killed.

Aurelio Herera, of Bakersfield, Cal., Wednesday night received the decision over Louis Long, of Oakland, after twenty rounds of fierce fighting. The Mexican went after Long viciously throughout the fighting, sending him to the floor for the count of nine in the sixth round. The sounding of the gong saved Long from a knockout.

Sim Davis shot Mrs. Nan Chapel three times and then killed himself at Steubenville, Ohio. The couple have been living as man and wife. A brother of Davis is under indictment for the murder of Calvin Owens.

E. J. Lien will succeed W. A. Allen, deceased, as assistant state librarian on the appointment of E. A. Nelson, the librarian. Lien is a resident of St. Vincent, Kittson county, and has taken a law course, though he has never practiced.

Hugo Kelly, of Chicago, and Jack (Twin) Sullivan, of Boston, fought a fast and furious ten-round draw before the Auditorium Athletic club of Indianapolis, Wednesday night. Kelly had the best of the fight at different periods, but Sullivan outclassed hib in the slugging.

Rev. Charles Stewart, secretary of the African Methodist Episcopal conference, has announced that the conference had passed a law prohibiting members of the church from attending theaters, from dancing, from card playing and strongly condemning whisky drinking and "can rushing" among church members.

Minister Leger, of Hayti, has communicated the following statement to the Associated Press: "According to a telegram just received from the president of the republic there is no trouble in Hayti, there is not even any fear of an uprising; the country is perfectly quiet."

Miss Marion Walton Gorham, of Marshall, Mich., is dead and the physician's report ascribes the cause to shock from overjoy. Miss Gorham, who was attending a private school at Buffalo, received an unexpected visit from her mother. She started toward her with an exclamation of joy and collapsed after taking a few steps. She was dead in a few seconds.

Duluth vs. Superior at Duluth.
Game called at 3:30.
TOMORROW

GETS TWO HUNDRED.

Small Verdict Returned For Mrs. Catherine Hurley.

Mrs. Catherine Hurley, of Superior, who sued the Duluth Street Railway company for $10,200 damages, for injuries claimed to have been received in being jerked off a street car at the corner of Garfield avenue and Michigan street, last spring, was awarded a verdict of $200 in district court, yesterday afternoon. The jury deliberated about three hours.

In his charge Judge Cant told the jurymen that they should be guided by their recollection of the evidence in the case, giving due weight to the probability or improbability of the statements of witnesses. He pointed out that the law requires the company to provide for the safety of its passengers and that if it were found that it had not done so in this case a verdict should be returned for Mrs. Hurley.

On the other hand the court said that if the jury was satisfied that contributory negligence was shown by Mrs. Hurley, a verdict should be returned for the company.

TAKE CHARGE OF BODY.

Murdo McCaskill, a Man of Good Connections.

The remains of Murdo McCaskill, who died yesterday morning at the Red Cross hospital, will not be interred at the county poor farm, friends of the family, which resides in Scotland, having come forward to take charge of the body and bury it elsewhere than in the Potter's field. The funeral arrangements will be in charge of Clan Stewart.

Since his death it has been learned that McCaskill is the son of the late Rev. Murdoch McCaskill, a former eminent free church minister in Scotland. The son was given every advantage of a good education in Europe and graduated from the London Art school. He began dissipating and came to America to begin life anew, but his habits were too strong for him. For the past four years friends have done everything in their power to reform him, but in vain, and McCaskill shattered in health, finally died at the county hospital.

NEVER TOO LATE

To Get Married, Is Opinion of William Ritch, Aged 78.

So He "Up and Wed" His Stepmother-in-Law.

Greenwich, Conn., May 12.—Your Uncle William Ritch, more than three score and ten, who has just married his stepmother-in-law, looking back over that particular part of his career, says he sees much to be thankful for, and little—very little—to regret.

"It's all nonsense to be twitting me about getting married," he said. "I bank on the old saying that a man's as young as he feels and a woman's as young as she looks. Now I feel first rate, and I know blamed well that Jessie looks purty fair. So what's the odds. Now, I hate notoriety, and I can't see, for the life of me, what the gineral public cares about my getting married. All sorts of things have been said about it. Some persons started the report that I had married my grandmother. The truth of the matter is that my wife is no blood kin to any of us. I'll tell you how it happened."

Mr. Ritch had been taking his siesta on a lounge after luncheon. His bride was not yet in the dining room. He stroked his patriarchial beard and looked pensive for a moment. About him all was comfort, luxury, for William Ritch, retired from business with a cool million many years ago, after winning fortune selling the prosaic rocks of Connecticut to contractors who were building up Greater New York.

"Yes, I'll tell you how the thing happened," he repeated, rubbing his eyes and looking serious. "You see, I have a winter home at Crescent City, Fla. I have been going there for thirty years. Now, last fall, when I started to go down there, I found myself up against it. My wife had died about two years ago. She was Miss Emma Green, daughter of my friend, Louis Green. Her father had married again and died. His widow was living with a daughter of her's at Cos Cob.

"When I started to go to Florida for the winter I found myself in this position: I had a young girl, 17 years old, living in the house with me. It didn't look exactly right to me to take her to Florida—just we two—so I said to her, 'I wonder if Jessie wouldn't go to Florida with us as a chaperon?'

"She and I went out one day in the carriage to see Mrs. Green and ask her if she would go to Florida. Now, I have allus said that I thought the two best women for wives on earth wuz Mrs. Green and the wife of my brother Tom.

"To make a long story short, Jessie—that's Mrs. Green that wuz, now my wife—went with us to Florida. Down there, with things a-warmin' up like summer time, the orange blossoms a-growin' right along, and all that sort of thing, we just up and said we'd get married, and blamed if we didn't.

"It's true enough she wuz the stepmother of my last wife. It's true enough I had been married twice before, and that I have three grown children, but it's not true that I'm 90 years old. I'm only 78 the first of next June. But what difference does that make? I have done nothing I'm ashamed of, and I don't see why a man can't get married if he wants to, so long as he feels purty fair and thinks he's a-doin' the best fur all parties concerned. Besides, my wife is seven years younger than my last wife, who wuz her stepdaughter."

ICE CREAM SODA HIS RUIN

Bank Clerk's Salary Not In Keeping With His Thirst.

Chicago, May 12.—To the bubbling, seductive ice cream soda and a continual demand for theater tickets for two, A. Martin Eckland, defaulting bookkeeper of the First National bank, of Englewood, lays his fall.

Eckland did not drink and he did not gamble, but in his bill of expense for the last year he claims to have spent $460 for soda water and other soft and cooling drinks.

"Theater tickets for two—$102 during 1903."

That is another item which Eckland claims ate up much of the $802 which he confesses to embezzling from the bank. Of the "two" Eckland admits to being one, but who the other is is a mystery. The young bookkeeper who entered the bank as messenger boy five years ago, and has steadily risen, told his fellow-employes that he was planning a June elopement, and it is supposed that the young lady he was contracting with for the elopement figured in the purchase of soda water and theater tickets. The young man evidently wished to shine in society, for he admits having purchased six suits of clothes and several overcoats since November. He lived at 1138 West Sixty-first street. He received a salary of $60 a month from the bank and says he has spent $1300 in the last year.

Eckland was held to the federal grand jury in $5000 bonds. He was unable to furnish bail.

ACCIDENTAL KILLING.

Coroner's Verdict on the Death of Young Wentz.

Bristol, Tenn., May 12—"He came to his death by the accidental discharge of his own pistol" is the verdict of the coroner's jury, which for nearly two days has been investigating the circumstances and conditions surrounding the death of Edward L. Wentz, the young millionaire, whose body was discovered decaying and unburied on a spur of Black Mountain, last Sunday. The verdict came as a surprise in every quarter, as the great majority of the people who have heard the evidence and viewed the body as it lay on the mountain believe the cause to have been suicide, while there are many others who say there is crime so deep and cuning as to make the affair more mysterious than on any. Regardless of the jury's verdict of accidental killing, it is certain that detectives will remain in this section in connection with the case. There is little doubt that the Wentz family believe there was crime in the death. D. B. Wentz expressed himself as of opinion that there had been an encounter before his brother was killed.

VIOLATES QUARANTINE.

Blair Lowe, Diphtheria Patient, Leaves Hospital.

Blair Lowe paid $12 in the municipal court yesterday for violating the quarantine regulations.

Lowe was taken to St. Mary's hospital about ten days ago with a bad case of diphtheria. He was placed in the contagion ward, from which he escaped Saturday evening, and came down town. Later in the evening he went to Superior and made seevral calls on friends there.

News of his escape was sent to the health department and the Superior police placed him under arrest. He was brought to Duluth and arraigned before Judge Windom in the municipal court. He pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and costs.

PRODUCTION OF PIG IRON

For the Month of April Was Very Heavy.

New York, May 12.—April had a month of heavy production of pig iron and that more particularly on the part of the steel companies, says the Iron Age. The output of coke and anthracite pig iron was 1,553,706 tons in April, as compared with 1,447,065 tons in March, 921,231 tons in January and 846,695 tons in December. The steel companies are responsible for the greater part of this increase, the product having risen from 592,996 tons in January to 974,006 tons in April, leaving for the outside merchant furnaces 579,700 tons in April. Southern furnaces show practically no change, and the eastern stocks have accumulated a little. Consumption, therefore, is going along on an exceedingly satisfactory scale.

The iron industry will face with equanimity any stoppage of ore shipments as the result of a strike or a lockout of the lake vesselmen. There are now in stock at the blast furnaces which consume lake ore over 6,000,000 tons of ore, of which a little more than one-quarter is non-Bessemer, the balance being Bessemer.

The volume of new business which is coming to pig iron makers has been decidedly light of late and the markets are showing a weakening tendency.

In nearly all lines of finished iron and steel the current demand is light and buyers are acting very conservatively.

FICKLE IN LOVE

Many Betrothals Are Broken By Officers In the Army.

War Department Considering Plan to Curb This Propensity.

Washington, May 12.—The question of regulating love affairs of army officers is becoming a serious one for the war department. So many cases of officers having fallen in love and then retreating when about to be hauled before the parson have been brought to the attention of the department that it has been suggested that the officers be warned not to engage themselves before they have fully considered what marriage may mean to them. Not long ago an officer on duty in the Philippines became infatuated with the only young American woman within a hundred miles of his post. He promised to marry her, but when he got back to San Francisco, and there found an old sweetheart, the young woman who had cured his "nostalgia" in the Philippines was immediately forgotten. War department officials say that fickleness among army officers seems to have become quite common; and, while some cases may be excusable, they are not inclined to look over as many affairs of the heart as are charged to Lieut. Col. William F. Pitcher of the Twenty-eighth infantry, who is just now being investigated because of his having broken an engagement with Miss Caroline Harold. It is said that Col. Pitcher has a record of four or five love victories, and that in each case he "changed his mind" at a critical moment. The papers in Col. Pitcher's case have been referred to the judge advocate general for such action as may be warranted. The officer admits having been attracted by Miss Harold, and says that he failed to marry her because he changed his mind. The officers are of the opinion that Col. Pitcher should not be so hard to please, and unless he offers a more satisfactory explanation formal charges, possibly, will be prepared for him to answer.

The charges against Capt. J. P. Walker, United States army, retired, of having improperly conducted himself at the West Point military academy, have been sent to Col. E. A. Garlington, inspector general of the department of the East, for investigation. Gen. Chaffee, chief of staff, approved the recommendation of the judge advocate general that there be an investigation of Capt. Walker's conduct, with a view to his courtmartial if warranted by the facts, and he then had the papers sent direct to Gen. Burton, the inspector general, for transmission to Col. Garlington. Col. Garlington will go to West Point and interrogate the secretary of the graduates' association, in whose office Capt. Walker is said to have made advances to the young lady stenographer. After taking the statements of persons at West Point having knowledge of the affair, he will make a report to the war department for the action of the secretary of war. Capt. Walker was at the war department, seeking an interview with Secretary Taft, and was very much disappointed at his failure to gain an audience.

ROMANCE IN A DECISION

By Kansas Supreme Court In a Land Title Case.

Kansas City, May 12.—A decision was rendered by the Kansas supreme court at Topeka last week which forever settles the old controversy over the title to thirty-one acres of land in the heart of Argentine, valued at over $500,000. The case is entitled C. M. Campbell against the Kansas Town company and 250 other property owners, and it grew out of a dispute of the ownership of lands formerly owned by the Indians, but later transferred to the town company. The case first heard the decision of Judge Holt, in the common pleas court in Kansas City, Kan., a year ago, that the town company and the people who have purchased the ground from them which is involved in the controversy are the rightful owners of the land.

The decision of the court settles a controversy that has been going on in the courts since 1895.

In 1864 Nancy Whitefeather, an Indian woman, owned the land, and sold it to a man named Jeffries, who afterward transferred it to Mrs. Elizabeth Brenns. At that time the deed had not been approved by the secretary of the interior. Later Mrs. Brenns transferred the ground to Mrs. John H. Shearin. About this time Nancy Whitefeather, the original owner, died. Mrs. Shearin then went to the heirs of the Indian woman, and through them secured the approval of the title by the secretary of the interior.

In 1895 R. R. Dunbar, an attorney of Argentine, conceived the idea that the land still belonged to the Indians. He declared that the people who had bought the ground and had occupied it were not entitled to the land. The lawyer went to the Indian territory and secured deeds of the tract from other heirs of Nancy Whitefeather. He then went to Washington and made representations that secured the approval of the secrtary of the interior to these deeds. He next filed suits of ejectment against all persons occupying the land in question, in the circuit court of the United States and in the common pleas court of Kansas City, Kan. This action created a sensation in Argentine, and many people who had purchased business and residence property began to fear that they would lose their property and be compelled to move. However, the courts, as fast as the suits were disposed of, decided in favor of the Kansas Town company and the ejectment suits were set aside. The appeal to the supreme court involving the 31-acre tract was the supreme struggle of the champions of the Indian claims to eject the present property owners, and the decision finally settles the long-drawn-out controversy in favor of the latter. L. P. Bird and H. G. Pope, attorneys of this city, represented the plaintiffs, and T. J. White, of Kansas City, Kan., represented the defendants in the action.

The land involved includes Mulvane's addition and embraces the business section of that part of the city and much valuable residence property.

BANKERS' UNION LACKS HARMONY

Trouble at the Annual Meeting of Fraternal Order.

Omaha, Neb., May 12.—The annual meeting of the supreme council of the Bankers' Union of the World, developed into a stormy session, during which the police were called to restore order and the sheriff served an injunction on Dr. E. C. Spinney, restraining him from transacting any business. After the reading of the report of President Spinney, Supreme Banker Swartz secured the floor, taking occasion to denounce Spinney and his method of conducting the business of the order. His denunciation brought a number of delegates to their feet, who declared that Swartz was out of order. Dr. Spinney, who presided, called upon the police to eject Swartz, but the latter sat down and avoided trouble. At this juncture, and just as Chairman Spinney caled for nominations for president, Sheriff Power appeared and served an injunction on Spinney and a number of his asosciates, who were restrained from taking further action in the election of officers and from the voting of proxies. Dr. Spinney at once appointed Ezra Howard chairman and himself retired to a seat with the delegates. Howard continued the session, proceeding at once with the election. It resulted:

President, E. C. Spinney, Omaha; A. W. Field, Lincoln, vice president; E. H. Drake, Lucerne, Minn., supreme secretary; Ezra Howard, Edgar, Neb., supreme banker; D. Fensch, Omaha, supreme physician; Miss M. Murdock, Omaha, supreme correspondent; Dr. A. M. Laird, Kansas City, supreme sentinel; A. Saville, Glen Carbon, Ill., supreme guard.

Attorneys have been retained by the Swartz faction, who declare they will fight the matter out in the courts. The injunction against Spinney will come up for hearing today.

FOR GOOD ROADS

Great International Convention to Be Held at St. Louis.

Brief History of the Movement Leading Up to It.

St. Louis, May 12.—Invitations have recently been sent out by mail and through the press requesting public-spirited citizens in all parts of the country to attend a "National and International Good Roads Convention, to be held in St. Louis, May 16 to 21, 1904." These invitations are signed by President W. H. Moore and Secretary R. W. Richardson of the National Good Roads association; by President Francis of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition company, Governor Dockery of Missouri, Mayor Wells of St. Louis and twenty-five other men prominent in industrial and commercial enterprises.

If the present plans and hopes of its promoters are realized this convention will be one of the greatest ever held in this country for the promotion of this necessary industrial development. The secretary of state at ashington has transmitted to the governments of foreign countries invitations to send delegates, and it is expected that a number of foreign nations will be represented. The management of the exposition has designated May 19 as "Good Roads Day." It is announced that "object lessons exemplifying all phases of road construction and the operation of road machinery will be witnessed daily within the exposition grounds."

Among those who will be present and deliver addresses are Senator A. C. Latimer of South Carolina, Congressman W. P. Brownlow of Tennessee, the leading champions of the national aid plan. Theese gentlemen will present the merits of the bills which provide that the government shall co-operate with the states in improving the roads. A greta array of other speakers, engineers and expert road builders will deliver addresses on various phases af the road question.

The good roads movement of today began to assume national proportions about twelve years ago. A number of good roads enthusiasts, among whom Col. Albert A. Pope, Isaac B. Potter and Gen. Ray Stone were prominent, had been trying for a number of years to arouse general interest in road improvement, but with small success. They were so much discouraged that, when it was proposed to hold a convention in connection with the opening of the Columbian exposition in 1892, they hesitated. Nevertheless, it was finally decided to make the attempt. To the surprise and gratification of its promoters the convention turned out to be a decided success and attracted the attention of the whole country.

One of the principal aims of the good roads people who met in Chicago was to secure the establishment of some kind of a government road office or bureau at Washington. A committee was appointed to lay the matter before congress; a pamphlet of nearly 100 pages was prepared, and hearings were secured before the committees of congress. The outcome was the establishment in the department of agriculture of the office of public road inquiries, with an appropriation of $12,000. Its work was to be educational in character and Gen. Stone was made the first director of the office.

The first important work of the office of public road inquiries was the collection of information. Road statistics were collected. Methods of road building were studied. Conditions under which roads had to be built in different parts of the country were investigated. The available materials for road building were ascertained. Then all this information was published in small pamphlets for free distribution to the people. About fifty different publications of this kind have been issued and several hundred thousand copies have been distributed.

More recently the educational work of the general government has taken the form of object lessons. Short pieces of road have been constructed on scientific principles to illustrate the best methods of road building, and the use of available local materials. It should be stated, however, that these roads have not been built at the expense of the government. It has merely furnished plans and expert supervision. Such work is only undertaken on receipt of a request from some educational institution, or some voluntary organiaztion of enterprising citizens, or the public officials of some local community which is willing to bear the expense of furnishing the materials and labor needed.

Object lesson work of this kind has been done in twenty states and so great has been the demand for such work that not nearly all the requests can be complied with. This object lesson work has, in nearly every case, proven of great value. The people have not only been shown how to build good roads as cheaply as possible, but they have been given a taste of the pleasure and benefit of using such roads. In nearly every community where such a road has been built, it has stimulated the building of many miles of similar roads. The popular interest in this work of the government has been so great that congress has five times increased its appropriations for the office of public road inquiries. During the coming year $50,000 will be available to pay for the government's educational and experimental work along this line.

One interesting feature of this educational work is the holding of conventions in connection with the building of object lesson roads. While the work is in progress, a convention is called and the people come from far and near to witness the work of road building and listen to instructive addresses. Such a convention seldom adjourns without forming a permanent organization. Mainly in this way good roads associations have been formed in all sections, and by them the work of education and agitation has been carried on.

At a great national convention for consideration of the road improvement question, held in Chicago in November, 1900, the National Good Roads association was organized, and it has since grown until, with its affiliated state, district and local organizations, it is, without doubt, the greatest organization of the kind in existence. But it is not the only national organization of this kind. The American Roadmakers, of which Hon. James H. Macdonald, of Connecticut, is president, is organized in nearly every section of the United States, and its recent annual convention at Hartford, Conn., was attended by several hundred delegates.

In 1901 an international congress of persons interested in road improvement was held at Buffalo, in connection with the Pan-American exposition. All sections of the United States and several foreign countries were represented.

It would be impossible in this brief review of the good roads movement to even mention the many important conventions which have been held since the great Chicago meeting in 1892. But no history of the movement would be complete without some account of the national convention held at St. Louis two years ago at the time the Louisiana Purchase exposition was dedicated. In the number of leading public men who attended and participated, this gathering far exceeded any of its predecessors. Addresses were delivered by President Roosevelt, Hon. A. C. Latier, Col. William J. Bryan, Gen. Miles, and by several congressmen and governors of states as well as many other men of national prominence.

The most significant feature of the St. Louis meeting was he launching of the national aid plan. Col. W. P. Brownlow of Tennessee, had given this plan prominence before the country by introducing a bill in the fifty-seventh congress providing that the government should co-operate with the states in the improvement of the roads, and pay one-half of the expense. From the first this proposition attracted much favorable attention especially among the rural population. But the idea was fairly launched on its national career by the convention at St. Louis. It was in fact the principal theme of discussion and the sentiment for it was well nigh unanimous.

The St. Louis convention created a committee representing all sections of the country to go to Washington, lay its demands before congress, and argue in favor of the nation's help in the work of improving the roads. Last January the committees on agriculture in both the senate and the house granted public hearings to this committee; and the senate has since issued a report of the hearing for distribution to the people. On the whole it must be said that the advocates of national aid made out a strong case and the report contains a large amount of valuable information.

The senate committee has since decided by a vote of six to one to make a favorable report on the Latimer bill with some amendments, and this report will go before the senate for action at the next session.

That public sentiment is generally favorable to the national aid proposition is shown by the fact that it has been endorsed by the legislatures of six states, by the National Grange, the Trans-Mississippi Commercial congress, the American Mining congress, and by state and local conventions and organizations of many kinds in all parts of the country.

No history of this movement would be complete without some reference to the state aid plan. In fact the greatest actual accomplishment of the movement is that it has secured the adoption of this plan in ten states. The essential features of this plan are the creation of a state highway commission, and the co-operation of the state with the counties and towns in the work of road improvement, each bearing a fixed part of the expense, though, no two states have adopted exactly the same plan. All the north-eastern states from Maine to Pennsylvania and Maryland have adopted state aid, and the results secured are so satisfactory that the popularity of the plan increases every year.

In New Jersey the state pays one-third of the cost of road improvement and the legislature now appropriates $250,000 annually. In Connecticut the state pays two-thirds of the expense and the annual appropriations are $225,000. Massachusetts spends nearly half a million a year, the state paying three-fourths of the cost. In New York the state pays one-half the cost and the last legislature made an appropriation of $600,000 for this purpose. Pennsylvania's last legislature appropriated $6,500,000 as a state fund to be expended during six years, the state paying two-thirds of the cost of the roads built. All the other states in this part of the country have adopted this plan in some form. In these states the sentiment for national aid is strong, it being argued that the only ideally perfect and just system of co-operation in road building is one in which the federal government enters as an active factor.

The good roads movement has been steadily gaining in force for a dozen years, and during the past two years it has gained at a greatly accelerated rate. It is now becoming a sort of popular crusade. The aim of its friends and promoters is to make an end of the unscientific piece-meal methods of road work now in vogue in nearly all parts of the country, and to substitute therefor, scientific methods, intelligent supervision, and co-operation of nation, state, and local community in a united and coordinate effort for the improvement of the roads throughout the whole country. This is a high aim, and the undertaking is a stupendous one. But who will say that it is too great for the American people to accomplish?

INDIAN WIFE

Of Houston to Lie In National Cemetery.

Muscogee, I. T., May 12.—By organized effort on the part of many prominent Cherokee Indians, permission has been secured from the war department to remove the body of the Cherokee wife of Gen. Sam Houston from its resting place at Wilson's Rock and reinter it in the national cemetery at Fort Gibson.

The romance of this marriage is a connecting link between the old and new home of the Cherokees. In 1828 Tahlonia Rogers, a relative of the present chief, W. C. Rogers, was accounted the most beautiful woman of her tribe, and it is said that Gen. Sam Houston loved her, but married another, on account of political ambition. After he was elected governor of Tennessee he quit the state house one day without notice or explanation, severed his social and political relations, and came to Indian territory, where he was married to the Indian girl he had loved in Tennessee.

For many years he lived among the Indians and was adopted by the tribe. His life was a wild one, and many stories are told of his career, but the Indians loved him, and he commanded their respect. Later he went to Texas, where he won renown as a soldier.

His Cherokee wife survived him a number of years, and was buried in an obscure Indian graveyard near Fort Smith. The location of her grave was long in doubt, but J. S. Holden, a newspaper man of Indian territory, finally located it beyond doubt and started the agitation of removal to the national cemetery at Fort Gibson through sentimental motives.

SIR JAMES ACQUITTED.

Horseman Sieviers Loses His Suit For Libel.

London, May 12.—A sensational libel suit brought by the well known race horse owner, R. S. Clevier against Sir James Duke, also well known on the turf, was concluded yesterday with a verdict for Sir James. Sievier charged the latter with calling him a thief, card sharper and murderer and that Sievier caused his famous mare Seepter to be pulled in the derby. Sir James pleaded privilege, as the statements were made within the Raleigh club, but he endeavored to show that Sievier's character was such he could not be libeled. The jury decided that Sir James had not committed any libel and mulcted Sievier in the costs of the suit. Sievier, who was remarkably cool throughout the case, broke down towards the end of his counsel's speech and sobbed bitterly.

CALLS FOR $10,000,000.

Third Demand on Banks For Government Funds.

Washington, May 12.—Before leaving for Iowa yesterday, Secretary Shaw ordered a third call on the depository banks, directing them to transfer to the treasury on or before May 25, approximately, $10,000,000. This call is for 10 per cent of the authorized balances of the depository banks as they stood before the two previous calls. With a few exceptions the call is made on all banks whose authorized balance before the previous calls was $150,000 or more. Banks having active accounts, whose balances have been reduced by previous calls to a point as low as the convenience of the treasury in transacting public business wil permit, are exempt from the operation of yesterday's call.

FOLK HAS WON

Machine Downed and His Nomination For Governor Assured.

Republicans Promise Votes and His Election Seems Certain.

St. Louis, Mo., May 12.—Joseph W. Folk, the "boodle" prosecutor, has won his fight for the Democratic nomination for governor in Missouri. Although opposed by the entire state machine, which has controlled all elections in Missouri for many years, Mr. Folk has overcome all opposition and done it fairly. His campaign for governor, just as was his career as circuit attorney for St. Louis, has been based on his attitude of antagonism to "boodling" and "boodlers."

In Saline county last week, where the politicians, hoping to defeat him, had framed a pledge to be required of every candidate going on their primary tickets, they asked Mr. Folk to sign his name to a promise to support the Democratic nominees from governor down. Mr. Folk smilingly penned his name, then added: "It must be distinctly understood that I will vote against any Democratic nominee whom I know to be a boodler."

Mr. Folk has fought Governor Dockery, United States Senator Stone, Secretary of State Cook, State Auditor Allen, Police Commissioner Hawes, Mayor Reed, Judge Cant, "Ed." Butler and a whole list of minor politicians, and has beaten all of them.

He has 285 uncontested delegates to the state nominating convention, having carried ten out of eleven counties, choosing their delegates. Three hundred and fifty-six delegates are necessary to nominate.

Harry B. Hawes has 111 delegates, all in St. Louis. Failing to carry a single county, he has withdrawn from the contest. Mayor Reed has only forty-one delegates. The fight, to all intents and purposes, is finished.

By direct appeals to the people, by strenuous advocacy of a mighty principle, and an entirely novel issue, the young "boodler" prosecutor has wiped out the machine and will be nominated for governor of Missouri. That he will be elected is probable. Prominent Republicans assert that 40,000 of their party will vote for Folk.

GREAT DOCKS AND PIERS AT PORT DALNY BLOWN UP.

of Port Arthur. While an interruption of the telegraph and railroad may again occur at any time, communication with the fortress was still open last night. Advices received by the general staff show that the invaders, who landed at Pitsewo are marching slowly on Kin-Chou, which is an advanced position defending the Russian Gibraltar; detaching only a small force to cut the line at Polandien, thus giving rise to the reports that they had effected a landing at Port Adams. The Russians have occupied Sisthao bay, on the east side of the Liao Tung peninsula, opposite Kin-Chou, showing that they have no intention of withdrawing further south. On the contrary indications point to a stubborn resistance.

The presence at Port Arthur of Gen. Fock, revealed in the official dispatches, may signify that the garrison of the fortress is much stronger than the Russians desired the enemy to believe. Fock commands the Fourth Siberian rifle division of 10,000 men. If the whole division is on the Liao Tung peninsula, Gen. Stoessel has at least 30,000 men at his disposal, which would render the investment of Port Arthur extremely difficult unless the Japanese bring up three times that number of troops.

There is talk of cutting off the water supply of Port Arthur, but this is declared to be impossible, as condensed sea water is the chief source of the supply, the well only being used by the Chinese.

PRIEST TELLS STORY

Of Battle In Which He Led the Troops.

Liao Yang, May 12.—Among the wounded from the battle of the Yalu, who arrived here yesterday, was Father Stephen Tcherbackoffsky, the priest who led the charge of the Eleventh regiment at the battle of Kiu Lien Cheng.

Father Stephen said to the Associated Press: "On the morning of May 1 I arose at 3 o'clock, knowing that there would be a terrible battle, and I was determined to do my duty and show an example by my death. At 4 o'clock I prayed, then laid down my Bible and stood with the company.

"As the company moved forward to the charge, I blessed the soldiers and went in front of the flag with my cross in my hand, standing by the side of my assistant, Joseph Perch. Bullets were flying all around us.

"I never felt my first wound. The second bullet struck my shoulder and I fell, losing consciousness. When I opened my eyes I found my assistant bending over me with a smile on his face. Seeing that I was alive he clutched my hand and then took me off the field of battle. If ever there was a hero, Joseph Perch is one."

The other wounded arriving seem to be in good condition and are exciting the admiration of the foreign attaches. Many of them have asked Gen. Kuropatkin to return them to the front.

There was an extraordinary incident on the arrival of the second detachment. Two of the wounded implored the surgeon to recommend that they be immediately sent back to the front. When the surgeon refused they escaped from the hospital and endeavored to rejoin their regiment.

A train is leaving here carrying 175 of the wounded from Kiu Lien Cheng to Mukden.

A Japanese guardsman who was wounded in the stomach and was taken prisoner, April 30, when the Russians drove his comrades from their position, says that typhus is rampant among the Japanese troops. He praises the kindness of the Russians to him and denies the report that in order to avoid being taken prisoners the Japanese dashed their heads against the ground. He said behind Gen. Kuroki are other troops, the number of which he does not know.

According to artillery officers, the movement of the enemy's heavy guns will be extremely difficult on account of the condition of the roads.

A panic occurred on the last train out of Port Arthur imediately after the landing of the Japanese at Pitsewo. The Japanese fired upon the train at midday and the ladies and civilians stretched themselves upon the floor. A small detachment of Cossacks beside railroad returned the Japanese fire and drove the enemy back. They then retired.

CZAR IS ANXIOUS

To Go to the Scene of War at Once.

St. Petersburg, May 12.—Emperor Nicholas is arranging to go to Kharkoff May 23 to bid farewell to the Tenth army corps upon its departure for the far East. The Associated Press learns from the highest source that the emperor is exceedingly anxious to go to the front. To his intimates recently he has spoken much on the subject, but he realizes that conditions of state demand his presence at home. Nevertheless it is now not considered impossible that he will follow the example of all the Romanoff dynasty during the last century and undergo his baptism of fire. To fight with the army is one of the traditions of his house. Alexander I entered Paris with the allies after the battle of Waterloo, Nicholas I died in a common soldier's hovel in the Crimea and Alexander II, with the heir apparent, was at the front during the Turkish war. Perhaps an additional reason why Emperor Nicholas desires to meet the enemy is that he carries on his body the mark of a wound inflicted by a fanatical Japanese policeman when he was attacked in a theater at Otsu during his visit in Japan in 1891, only being saved from death by the noble action of his cousin, Prince George of Greece. Should he finally conclude to go the emperor would not assume active command of the troops, but would have an imperial headquarters, taking with him all the members of his military cabinet. Being on the spot, the emperor would more easily advise Gen. Kuropatkin in the event of any question of great military moment, which he might submit to his majesty. But, of course, the chief advantage would be the stimulus which the personal presence of the sovereign would have on the officers and men.

EXPLOSIONS EXPLAINED.

New York, May 12.—An explanation of the explosions at Port Arthur which led to reports that the Russians were destroying their warships in that harbor, is furnished in a World dispatch from St. Petersburg. It is to the effect that the garrison at Port Arthur is endeavoring to clear the harbor entrance of the stone laden ships sent in by Japanese. In order to remove the obstructions divers are said to have been sent down who placed charges of dynamite in position and succeeded in blowing away enough of the cement and rock cargoes to admit the passage of torpedo boats through the channel.

ANOTHER NAVAL DISASTER.

New York, May 12.—Through the posting by the general staff of a list containing twenty names of officers and men killed on board the torpedo transport Amur, April 25, a naval disaster not before reported has just become public, says a World dispatch from St. Petersburg.

According to the correspondent the Amur (which was a sister ship of the ill-fated torpedo transport Yenesei), was laying mines in the Port Arthur roadstead when she struck one and sank.

SUPPLIES FOR NEWCHWANG.

London, May 12.—Lloyds' agent at Newchwang telegraphs by way of Che Foo, under date of May 12, as follows: "Produce is arriving in great quantities from up the river. A fair amount of Manchester goods have arrived but more would come if a British warship were here, which would promote trade. Newchwang is in perfect order. I do not anticipate any trouble or fighting in this vicinity. Great credit is due to Gen. Kondradovitch, in command of the Russian troops, and Civil Administrator Etzel."

TAFT HAS A SORE NOSE.

New York, May 12.—An operation has been performed on Secretary of War Taft for the removal of a growth resulting from tonsilitis, says a Times dispatch from Washington, D. C. The knife was used on the secretary's nose, and the pain was acute, resulting in violent inflammation. His temperature last night was 104, but he is resting comfortably and has every prospect of a speedy recovery.

MOTHER DRAGGED SON,

Who Deserted From Navy, to Recruiting Station.

Evansville, Ind., May 12.—Several months ago the fifteen-year-old son of Mrs. Amelia Decker, of this city, enlisted in the United States navy as an apprentice and was sent to the navy yard at League Island, near Philadelphia. While there he became homesick and deserted, coming to this city Sunday.

His mother begged him to give himself up, but when he refused she started with him for the recruiting station in this city. She pulled the lad along the street with force, but when she reached the door of the recruiting station the boy made a lunge and escaped from his mother.

She was very much put out by her son escaping, and has asked the police to help her look for him, saying she does not want to have a son to disgrace her by unfaithfulness to his country.

"Of All Sad Words of Tongue or Pen, The Saddest Are These, 'It Might Have Been.'"

The Great Truth so Beautifully Told in the Following Poem—One of the Rarest Literary Gems in the English Language; But Familiar to Every School Child.

A VALUABLE LESSON TO BE LEARNED BY ALL—YOU HAVE READ IT; READ IT AGAIN.

Maud Muller.

MAUD MULLER, on a summer's day,
Raked the meadow sweet with hay.
Beneath her torn hat glowed the wealth
Of simple beauty and rustic health.
Singing, she wrought, and her merry glee
The mock-bird echoed from his tree.
But when she glanced to the far-off town,
White from its hill-slope looking down,
The sweet song died, and a vague unrest
And a nameless longing filled her breast—
A wish, that she hardly dare to own,
For something better than she had known.
The Judge rode slowly down the lane,
Smoothing his horse's chestnut mane.
He drew his bridle in the shade
Of the apple-trees to greet the maid,
And asked a draught from the spring that flowed
Through the meadow across the road.
She stooped where the cool spring bubbled up,
And filled for him her small tin cup,
And blushed as she gave it, looking down
On her feet so bare and her tattered gown.
"Thanks!" said the Judge, "a sweeter draught
From a fairer hand was never quaffed."
He spoke of the grass and flowers and trees,
Of the singing birds and the humming bees;
Then talked of the haying, and wondered whether
The cloud in the west would bring foul weather.
And Maud forgot her brier-torn gown,
And her graceful ankles bare and brown,
And listened, while a pleased surprise
Looked from her long-lashed hazel eyes.
At last, like one who for delay
Seeks a vain excuse, he rode away.
Maud Muller looked and sighed: "Ah me!
That I the Judge's bride might be!
He would dress me up in silks so fine,
And praise and toast me at his wine.
My father should wear a broadcloth coat;
My brother should sail a painted boat;
I'd dress my mother so grand and gay,
And the baby should have a new toy each day.
And I'd feed the hungry and clothe the poor
And all should bless me who left our door."

The Judge looked back as he climbed the hill,
And saw Maud Muller standing still.
"A form more fair, a face more sweet,
Ne'er hath it been my lot to meet;
"And her modest answer and graceful air
Show her wise and good as she is fair.
Would she were mine, and I to-day,
Like her, a harvester of hay:
"No doubtful balance of rights and wrongs,
Nor weary lawyers with endless tongues,
But low of cattle and song of birds,
And health and quiet and loving words."

MAUD MULLER.

But he thought of his sisters, proud and cold,
And his mother, vain of her rank and gold.
So closing his heart, the Judge rode on,
And Maud was left in the field alone.

But the lawyers smiled that afternoon,
When he hummed in Court an old love tune:
And the young girl mused beside the well
Till the rain on the unraked clover fell.
He wedded a wife of richest dower,
Who lived for fashion, as he for power.
Yet oft, in his marble hearth's bright glow,
He watched a picture come and go;
And sweet Maud Muller's hazel eyes
Looked out in their innocent surprise.
Oft, when the wine in his glass was red,
He longed for the wayside well instead;
And closed his eyes on his garnished rooms
To dream of meadows and clover-blooms.
And the proud man sighed with a secret pain,
"Ah that I was free again!
"Free, as when I rode that day,
"Where the barefoot maiden raked her hay."
She wedded a man unlearned and poor,
And many children played round her door.
But care and sorrow, and childbirth pain,
Left their traces on heart and brain.
And oft, when the summer sun shone hot
On the new-mown hay in the meadow lot,
And she heard the little spring brook fall
Over the roadside, through the wall,
In the shade of the apple-tree again
She saw a rider draw his rein.
And, gazing down with timid grace,
She felt his pleased eyes read her face.
Sometimes her narrow kitchen walls
Stretched away into stately halls;
The weary wheel to a spinnet turned,
The tallow candle an astral burned,
And for him who sat by the chimney lug,
Dozing and grumbling o'er pipe and mug,
A manly form at her side she saw,
And joy was duty and love was law.
Then she took up her burden of life again,
Saying only, "It might have been."
Alas! for maiden, alas! for Judge,
For rich repiner and household drudge!
God pity them both! and pity us all,
Who vainly the dreams of youth recall.
For of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these: "It might have been."
Ah, well! for us all some sweet hope lies
Deeply buried from human eyes;
And, in the hereafter, angels may
Roll the stone from its grave away!

WHITTIER.

There are so many of us, alas, who have said: "It might have been." Sad words sure enough, but many times sadder are they when they refer to things once desired, now lost and vainly wished for, that could have been possessed, if proper care and attention on our own parts, had been exercised at the right time, but which now are out of reach forever through our own neglect to take advantage of some past opportunity.

The lesson we should learn from this beautiful poem is, that we should not wait till the time comes when we must, perforce, remark, "It might have been"; that we should not pass by heedlessly the opportunities to possess and secure to ourselves life's greatest blessings, but avail ourselves of every occasion to enjoy the rewards of vigilance, attention and endeavor.

In Heaven's exhaustless catalogue of mercies to mankind, good health must ever occupy the foremost place.

It is the greatest of life's blessings because it is the underlying foundation on which all other sources of happiness depend. It is the support of all things that make life worth living. On it depend accumulation of riches and their enjoyment, power, fame, achievement, mental attainment and everything else that really constitute the principal objects of life. How foolish are we then to take any chances; to pass by any opportunities that, taken advantage of, would secure to us perfect health and long life, when it is within our easy reach; for it is within our reach in the form of the greatest restorative of this or any other age.

WHEAT IS LOWER

Buying Power Lacking and a Good Advance Is Lost.

Unfavorable Weather Reports From Northwest —Flax Changes Little.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 12.—In the early part of the day the market was stronger and a fairly good advance was made, but it turned weaker and closed with a sharp loss. The trading was fairly active but the right kind of support was lacking. Weather reports from the Northwest are more disquieting and several places reported heavy rains that will set seeding back for a number of days. Snow was also reported in a number of sections of North Dakota. In general, however, the sentiment seems to be that the price discounts a great deal of loss and the reports of damage while rather on the sensational order, ttil to stimulate buying. Receipts continue very small and cash wheat seems hard to get, especially in the Northwest, although the cash situation is not what would be called good. Duluth exporters sold a little new crop of winter wheat today to go abroad and a few loads of Manitoba wheat were also sold.

The Liverpool market closed ½d lower and London ⅛@⅜d lower.

The Duluth market closed with a loss of 1c on May, and ¾c on July. Minneapolis was a shade lower on May and ⅝@⅞c on July. Chicago was unchanged on May, and ⅝c lower on July, and New York was ⅛c lower on May, and ½@⅝c on July. In Duluth September closed ⅞c lower, and in Minneapolis ⅝@⅞c lower.

Car receipts at Duluth were 23 against 12 a year ago and at Minneapolis 33 against 160 a year ago, making a total for the Northwest of 56 against 172 a year ago. Chicago received 14 against 35 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 134,200 bus, last year 315,900 bus. Shipments 198,100 bus, last year 260,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 69,649 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¼d higher. In the Chicago market July corn closed ¼@½c higher. July oats closed ⅜c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 249,200 bus, last year 344,130 bus. Shipments 367,900 bus, last year 275,100 bus. Clearances were 4170 bus.

Trading in wheat was fairly active in the Duluth market. July opened unchanged at 92c, sold at 92¼c at 9:42, at 92⅝c at 9:49 and advanced to 92⅞c at 10:22. From that point it wore away steadily until it touched 91¼c at which price it closed. This was a loss of ⅝c from yesterday. The May option closed ⅛c lower at the same price as May. September dropped ¾c to 86⅛c.

Cash offerings are light. Prices are based upon the character of the wheat, and range from May price to 2c over for No. 1 northern.

Flax was dull and in the early part of the day was firmer, July selling up ⅜c to $1.09½. It then fell back and closed unchanged at $1.08⅜. May lost ¼c, September ⅛c and October ⅜c.

Oats had a lively bulge closing 1½c higher. There is a good demand for oats on track and bids are strong.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—In store, No. 1 hard, 93c; No. 1 northern, 91¼c; No. 2 northern, 89c. To arrive, No. 1 hard, 91¼c; No. 1 northern, 93¾c; No. 2 northern, 89⅝c. Macaroni, No. 1, 87c; No. 2, 85c; May, 91¼c; July, 91¼c; September, 86¼c. Flax, on track, $1.07¼; to arrive, $1.07¼; May, $1.07¼; July, $1.08¾; September, $1.09¼; October, $1.03½. Oats, to arrive, 43c. Rye, on track, 67c; to arrive, 67c.

Cars inspected: Wheat, 23; last year, 12; oats, 1; barley, 1; flax, 8; last year, 7.

Receipts: Wheat, 15,346; barley, 1414; flax, 7849.

Shipments: Wheat, 9668; barley, 2; rye 5945.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Firm Due to Covering By Shorts.

Chicago, May 12.—Covering by shorts today due to rains in the Northwest created a firm tone in wheat in the face of easier cables. July opened unchanged to ⅛c higher at 85¾@85⅞c. On light offerings the price advanced to 85¾@⅞c. A sudden decline to 85¼c was followed by a rally to 85⅜@⅝c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 709 cars, against 119 cars last week and 147 cars a year ago.

The market lacked any outside support and there was only a small demand from local operators. As a result of this condition a weak tone developed later in the day, July selling down to 84½@⅝c. The market was influenced to some extent by bearish crop advices. Weakness continued until the close, final figures on July being down ⅝c at 84¾@⅞c.

In spite of the weakness in wheat the market held firm the entire day, July closing with a gain of 1⅛@1¼c at 48¾@49c.

An active commission house demand with only light offerings held the corn market firm. Small receipts were the main bull influence. July opened unchanged to a shade higher at 45¾c to 46⅛c, sold up to 49¾c and then settled at 49c. Local receipts were 74 cars, with 2 of contract grade.

Under the influence of a strong cash situation speculative trading in oats was fairly active and the market ruled firm. July opened unchanged to ⅛c higher at 38⅞@39c, advanced to 39¼c, but eased off again to 39c. Local receipts were 62 cars.

Provisions were firm on a moderate demand from shorts. There was some selling by outsiders, but offerings were readily taken. A strong hog market was a help in supporting prices. July pork opened 2½c higher at $11.30 and sold up to $11.37½. Lard was up 2½c at $6.50. After selling at $6.47½, the price rallied to $6.52½. Ribs opened a shade higher, at $6.40, sold at $6.37½@6.40, and then advanced to $6.42½.

Close: Wheat—May, 91½c; July, 84¾@⅞c; old, 86c; September, 79⅝c; old, 86⅞c. Corn—May, 47⅝c; July, 48¾@49c; September, 48⅜@½c; December, 44c. Oats—May, 41⅝c; July, 39c; September, 31c. Pork—May, $11.10; July, $11.25; September, $11.47½. Lard—May, $6.32½; July, $6.45; September, $6.57½@6.60. Ribs—May, $6.20; July, $6.37½; September, $6.52½. Rye—May, 72c; July, 65c; August, 65c. Flax—Cash northwestern, $1.09½; southwestern, $1.01½; May, $1.01½; July, $1.02. Timothy—May, $3. Clover—May, $10.75. Barley—Cash, 33@57c. Cash wheat—No. 2 red, nothing doing; 3 red, nothing doing; 2 hard, 91@93c; 5 hard, 89@92c; 1 northern, 94@96c; 2 northern, 90@96c; 3 spring, 85@95c. Corn—No. 2, 50@51c; 3, 49½@50½c. GRAIN GOSSIP.

South Dakota crop report: The weather during the week was, on the whole, favorable for field work and the growth of all vegetation, and very favorable for the healthy germination and growth of wheat, oats and barley. Showers were fairly general on the 5th or 6th, and in some localities generous in amount, and the temperature conditions were favorable until Sunday night, when it was cool.

The seeding of wheat and oats is very near completion, and barley and spelt sowing was very favorably advanced.

The early sown grain is generally up and in healthy condition and attaining good stand, and the later sown is germinating evenly. Winter rye and what winter wheat was sown are in thrifty condition.

Plowing and the preparation of ground for corn and forage crops were favorably advanced, though in some localities retarted by generous showers.

Corn planting is becoming fairly general in the southern counties and is beginning in some localities in the middle counties.

Potato planting and gardening made very good progress.

Altogether, the soil is in good condition, though in some Missouri valley and middle-eastern localities more rain would be beneficial, especially for grass.

Chicago Record-Herald: A new development in the lake situation is that vessels are offering to take some of the grain to Georgian bay and guaranteeing to get their boats out. Some hareters of this sort of craft have been made. Of course the total is not large, but it is a relief for the trade to be able to do some business occasionally by way of an independent boat even if the total is small.

"The wheat price is too high to promise much for the buyer," says C. H. Spencer, of St. Louis, "and that is why the outsider is not coming to the help of the local bulls. With the July around 85c the ordinary speculator sees there is not much possible for him on the bull side, and a long possible decline. So he is cautious and keeps out. If the wheat prices were 10c lower or if there was a good chance for a comfortable rally as for a comfortable break, the market would be making some response to such crop reports as we have had and the outsider would be helping things along."

A telegram from George O. Lockhart at Larimore, N. D., says: "Heavy rain here all day. Seeding with most favorable conditions is delayed a week. Not over 2 per cent of seeding done so far. The railroad officials report hard snow storm from Rugby west to Minot."

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Wheat was fairly active. Weather throughout the West favorable. Crop weather is probable. The tone of the market is heavy and good support seems lacking. Advices from the winter wheat crop are much more favorable. Even from sections of the Ohio valley, where the reports have been worst, the improvement is marked and fields that were to have been plowed up will remain in wheat. With small stocks and the small movement, a nervous market is quite likely but we still hold to the view that the tendency of the market will be lower and that prices must ultimately get into line with the export demand.

Corn—It seems to have a strong tone. There is not much activity but the market is without selling pressure. There is considerable local bearish sentiment but every time they put out lines they are obliged to cover. The movement is small from firsthands and prices at interior markets are relatively higher than Chicago. Planting is progressing rapidly and under favorable conditions. This may in time bring freer offerings of corn from farmers' hands.

Oats—The general tone of the market is not weak. There is a good shipping prospect although it is handicapped by the lack of lake movement and the cash houses are feeling strong on prices.

Provisions—There was some firmness early but it met with rather free selling by some of the packing interests and the improvement was lost. Receipts are running about the same as last year and packing for the last week was a trifle in excess of last year. The market is still without speculative support.

R. E. Baker's Chicago Grain Letter: Wheat—There was no strength or snap to the wheat today, and operations were confined to the local crowd, the public being apathetic. There was a show of strength for a brief period early in the session on a little covering by shorts, and on the relative strength shown by the Northwestern markets. This latter was taken to reflect scattered showers in the spring wheat belt. The Price Current had a bearish tone and the Northwestern miller reports the flour trade dull in every particular. The weather was favorable over the winter wheat belt. The forecast is for cloudy conditions but no rain is expected in the Northwest. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 20 cars.

Corn—The market was rather unexpectedly strong, being for the most part independent of the course of wheat. A number of the larger floor traders and some of the provision people covered short lines of July which gave the market its early strength. The cash market ruled steady, ½c higher. Country purchases through Nebraska were very much larger than has been usual. The Price Current reports good progress and a large acreage. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 40 cars.

Oats—The oat market was dull, but firm, the May option showing the best relative strength. The volume of trade was small compared with that of yesterday. The lake situation gave the bulls some encouragement as did the light receipts, and the strength in the sample market. The demand is fair, 61,000 bushels of standard were loaded from store, and certificates for 85,000 were cancelled yesterday. The Price Current report was a favorable one. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 100 cars.

Coe Commission company: Wheat—Rain, more or less general, all over the Northwest; snow and rain in some parts of North Dakota gave us a firm opening in wheat with a fair demand early. The market ruled strong. Offerings, however, were too liberal for the market to absorb, resulting in lower prices. At this writing the market has declined about a cent a bushel from the high price this morning. The action of the market for the past two days seems to be another case of breaking the market on a bullish government report. Winnipeg has 84 cars against 306 last year.

Corn and oats opened about the same as yesterday's close and have ruled strong all morning. The opening prices are the low prices up to this writing, not being affected by the weakness in wheat. Buy corn and oats act very strong, and there is good buying in both these cereals. Looks as if the July oats were being picked up by strong parties. Think there is a good turn to be made on the long side of July oats. Stand we advise their purchase on all setbacks.

Provisions—Although active and fairly firm in the early market, are again weak and lower. Receipts of hogs, 20,000. Hog market opened weak at yesterday's lowest price. Packers pick up the product on the weak spots, and it looks as if they thought provisions were low enough. However, the market does not act very healthy yet, as the little advances seem to be only temporary and are followed by increased weakness.

Cincinnati Price Current: Winter wheat growth is showing improving tendency, but abnormal loss in Ohio valley by early injuries continues to be reflected. Oats growing favorably. Good progress in plowing and corn planting. Unusually large acreage likely.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

Selling of United States Steel Preferred In Large Blocks.

General Break In the Afternoon But the Closing Steady.

New York, May 12.—St. Paul and Amalgamated Copper were the only stocks to show gains in the opening deals today. Prices generally were a small fraction lower without regard to the gains in the London market before the opening here. A sale of 4,000 shares of U. S. Steel preferred made the opening price ⅜ lower than last night and it fell subsequently ⅝ on the sale of large blocks. The common stock opened at 9⅝, breaking yesterday's low record.

Selling of U. S. Steel preferred was in large blocks down to 52½ where it met support and rallied a trifle. The common stock was neglected. Sympathetic weakness developed in some of the other metal stocks, Pressed Steel car losing 1½ and Car preferred, Republic Steel preferred and General Electric about a point. A rise of 1½ in Consolidated Gas was turned into a fractional loss on the announcement of the veto of the Remsen gas bill. The market otherwise was inclined to drop outside of Amalgamated Copper which gained a good fraction.

Losses in the railroad stocks were increased, followed by a slight recovery. Atchison fell a full point. Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Pressed Steel preferred 2¼. Of the specialties U. S. Express fell 2 and Keokuk & DesMoines, 4¼. Adams Express and Chicago & Eastern Illinois certificates rose 2½ and Anaconda 2. Just before noon U. S. Steel sold at 9. Bonds were irregular at noon.

A few of the western stocks sold slightly lower and the market became steadier on the rise in Consolidated Gas. This stock eclipsed its early high price touching 205. Small rallies in other stocks were succeeded by intense dullness, the tape at one time showing only two transactions in eight minutes.

Wide fluctuations in Consolidated Gas helped to stifle speculative interest in the market and there was little trading in the usual leaders. Consolidated Gas after reaching 207 fell back a point and rose anew to 207¼. Wisconsin Central preferred and Westinghouse yielded one and New York, Chicago & St. Louis first preferred 3½.

Free offerings of stocks from all directions came upon the market resulting in a general break of prices of 1 to 1⅝ for leading railroad stocks. In the Steel group United States Steel preferred, Tennessee Coal and Iron, Pressed Steel and Sloss-Sheffield Steel lost 1⅜ to 2. Pump preferred dropped 2. Fort Worth & Denver City stamped sold 12¼ points lower than on the preceding sale. Consolidated Gas yielded with the market, but rose again to 210 and then reacted sharply. New York Central and Metropolitan Street Railway were notably firm, rising about a point over last night. Covering by room shorts made the closing quieter and steady.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Prices continue to drag. It is a heavy market with indications of increased liquidation. Pressure on Steel preferred continues. The feeling is rather confident that the dividend will be cut. The action of the market leaves little doubt of it. The continued exports of gold and the inability to measure its extent, together with the decrease in the volume of business of every character throughout the country is undermining confidence to some extent. Traders are bearish and while they have low money and a rather cheap basis for stocks against them, still there seems nothing in sight to bring about a bull market in the immediate future more than a rally, caused by the covering of short selling.

Ridgely to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Persons who feel that they must be in the market, may sell Atchison short every point up and buy St. Paul every point down. I expect to see Atchison and St. Paul cross within a year or so. Whoever we talk to says "everyone else is bearish, but I have not been able to run across those bears myself. On the contrary, most people seem to be expecting rallies.

Lapsley & Co. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The bank statement will unquestionally show heavy loss of reserve. Morgan sends $3,000,000 gold Saturday, and more will follow. The wonder is that the stock market don't decline under such apparent adverse conditions.

Wolf to B. E. Baker: Understand that Heinze is expected to arrive in New York today and that some deal between him and the copper people here is in progress.

Dick to Paine, Webber & Co.: I understand the recent selling of Steel preferred has been by one of the former insiders who was very bulish on the property 40 points higher. While we believe the next dividend will be reduced, the stock is arriving at a point where it looks attractive.

S. T. Welch & Co.: There was an irregular opening in the stock market this morning with considerable selling pressure; right after the opening the market gradually sold off. Up to this writing most of the active issues have lost about a point and the market acts a little heavy. The bears received new encouragement, the large gold exports, $9,000,000 having gone this week and more engagements are probable. The United States treasury has also called upon the depositories for another 10 per cent of public deposits. While business has fallen off some compared with a year ago, we do not believe there is any serious cause for worry. We are in for another year of high prices for farm produce which insures good business for another year. Advise buying the good railroad shares on all weak spots, like the market this morning.

Evans to Paine, Webber & Co.: Liquidation continued again yesterday. It was in a moderate volume except in Steels but it looks as if the market might decline faster than it has before. Another call on the depository banks by the secretary of treasury will cause uneasiness. Reports from all over the country continue to show that business is falling off in a very marked way and it looks as if it would continue so for some time. Under the circumstances it seems almost impossible that stocks should advance and I look for lower prices. I favor selling on all rallies. There is quite impressive buying in Amalgamated Copper which came from Boston and was coupled with the usual rumors of settlement between Amalgamated interests and Heinze.

T. A. McIntyre & Co. to Paine, Webber & Co.: General market sentiment on stocks continues depressing this morning, and the outlook is for a continued narrow, irregular and unsettled market. We do not expect to see any material selling or extensive weakness develop in the general market, however, for commission houses are carrying very little stock, and the short interest is sufficiently large, together with the support which will naturally be forthcoming from various pools as well as the large market interest to hold the market from breaking to any extent.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Continued weakness in Steel preferred depressed the entire markt and prices sagged all along the line. The action of the market indicates that Steel may go still lower, and as we said yesterday, we would wait until this stock is given some substantial support before buying again. Amalgamated Copper was one of the strongest stocks on the list. There are a great many people who are coming to believe that important developments are pending in Amalgamated and the coppers. We think these stocks are in an excellent way to go up in the next speculative movement. We would rather buy coppers than anything else.

Boston to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Amalgamated has been the feature today and advanced to 49 on trading in 3500 shares up to noon. This strength did not cause any activity in the rest of the coppers, however, there was a firm tone, but very little doing. Gree now selling ex-dividend, is weaker. We think it a good purchase on any weak spots. We look for a dull uninteresting market to continue until some material change in either direction, although it looks as if the price of the metal may be lower on general curtailment in business.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 12.—The cotton market opened easy at a decline of 3@13 points under liquidation by yesterday's late buyers and a renewal of local bear pressure encouraged by disappointing cables. Whether accounts were generally favorable aside from a continued lack of moisture in some eastern section, but the new crop positions showed relative steadiness at the opening and immediately following cht call on light coverings. Trading was moderately active at first but afterwards became quieter and the market ruled fairly steady within a few points of the opening figures on continued support from a leading Wall street operator.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 10 points lower; middling uplands, 13.65; middling gulf, 13.90; sales, 14.00. Futures closed barely steady; May, 13.26; June, 13.36; July, 13.45; August, 13.16; September, 11.78; October, 11.31; November, 11.22; December, 11.21; January, 11.21.

WILL BE BURIED SUNDAY.

Bodies Now In Vault to Be Interred.

Sunday afternoon, next, at 2 o'clock, the Grand Army posts of the city will join in paying the last respects to and the burial of the bodies of three old soldiers who fought during the civil war, and the body of a sailor who enlisted in the service in the Philippines, from Duluth. Their bodies are now in the vault.

The old soldiers who will be buried are Franklin Stimson, L. O. Huntley and Silas E. Phillips. The sailor to be buried is George Gray, whose parents reside here.

The ceremony wil be conducted at Park Hill cemetery, and the burials will be made at Soldiers' Rest, with military honors, including a bugler and a firing squad.

The remains of Captain Peter J. Hagenson, who died in this city a few weeks ago, will be buried at Soldiers' Rest, also, Sunday afternoon.

TRAIN WRECKED.

Richmond, Va., May 12.—Passenger train No. 39, over the Southern railway, southbound, which left Charlottesville at 10:45 last night, was wrecked at midnight at Rockfesh Trestle. The engine and six coaches left the track, and the two Pullmans weer left hanging over the trestle. Passengers and crew escaped unhurt, but two negro tramps were killed.

THE ELECTRIC SIGN,

BY

Charles Austin Bates.

Copyrighted 1904, by The Retailer & Advertiser Corporation, New York City.

If you let your imagination carry you back ten years, five, or two, to the semi-darkness of our principal streets, you will realize what a change the electric sign has brought.

The electric sign is a thing of life, it is vivid with energy, it typifies enterprise and prosperity. During the busiest part of each year every business has from one to six after sundown hours. Now, it is a fact patent to the most casual observer that the busiest stores during these hours are the lightest stores—stores light inside and outside—the stores with the "Sign of Life" over the doors.

This phenomenon is too generally credited to mere coincidence. There is a great big principle involved.

Trade follows the light.

Light streets and light stores catch the crowd. Nobody wants to live, or shop, or eat, or play pool in a dungeon.

Turn on the light!

When the light shines on the outer walls he who runs may read, in letters of fire, the name you want burned into the enduring tablets of his memory.

The heart of the argument in favor of electric signs is the fact that they pay their users. The percentage of profit varies. Some businesses have traced twenty-five per cent increase directly to the installation of the "Sign of Life."

The electric sign does draw trade. You must get casual attention definitely focused on your own business or it is of no value to you.

Take two stores, side by side, one with a brilliant sign, one without—which do you remember?

Not very long ago a big hotel opened in New York, not a hundred miles from the corner of Seventh avenue and Thirty-eighth street. A good many wise folks thought it was a mistake. They had an idea that a high-class hotel could not prosper west of Broadway.

But very soon one of the most conspicuous things in the heart of New York was a great big electric sign on the roof of this hotel. The letters are six and ten feet high, and there are four hundred and sixteen lamps in the sign. This big, brilliant sign makes the hotel practically "among those present" on Broadway. The results have demonstrated that the sign pulls the crowd and pays for itself a good many thousand times.

There is no theory about it. It is a positive fact that an electric sign does bring trade.

It's a quality of human nature that makes people prefer to walk down a light street rather than a dark one. The brilliant lighted store throws the dim one into even deeper eclipse.

An electric sign is a sign of life, sign of enterprise, sign of progress and prosperity.

It is the illuminating and radiant smile on the face of your business.

It works while you sleep and burns your name deep in the memory tablets of all who pass.

The cost—oh! very little. It's astonishing what a big blaze a little money will make if you burn it electrically.

When you see an electric sign over a door, you know instantly that the owner of that place is wide awake and ready for business.

You know he is interested in his business—that, as he has the newest and brightest thing in signs, he is pretty sure to keep his stock right up to the minute.

The sign is an invitation for you to come in—and you know that the man who asks so forcibly for trade will treat it right when it comes in.

Small signs, made of two or four candle-power lamps, may take the place of other lights in a show window and say something to the passerby.

The possibilities in this direction are limitless. The wording of the sign may be frequently changed at a small expense, and you can have a talking window as well as a light one.

Miniature lamps may be used in window decoration, either to throw light on some particular object—the lamp itself being partially or wholly concealed—or they may be used with colored bulbs as part of the decorative scheme.

Lights may be used as small signs through the store to bring particular departments into vivid prominence.

Concealed lights may illuminate the interior of show cases, bringing out all the beauties of the goods within.

Well displayed is half sold.

When the sun goes down the black and gold sign disappears. Nobody can tell whether it's your store or Grigsby's. The average man doesn't carry a searchlight. With an electric sign you can keep your business in evidence five hours longer each day.

Thousands of people are out after dark every night. If your store is dark, you are out of existence so far as they are concerned.

But your rent goes on after 5 o'clock same as before.

There may be many differences of opinion about the value of electric signs, but the preponderance of evidence from successful men is greatly in their favor.

Don't put up an electric sign because it's pretty—but because it pays.

It will help your business.

It will help much more than it costs.

IS STRONGLY OPPOSED TO IT

Attorney Expresses Himself as to Present Court House Site.

"I shall be in favor of impeaching the county commissioner from the district in which I live," declared one of Duluth's most prominent attorneys this morning, "if he insists on voting to build the new courthouse on the site of the old one.

"I believe the wishes of the taxpayers in this county should be regarded by the county commissioners in this matter of the site and the present county board will make a sad mistake if it goes ahead and arbitrarily selects the old site without giving the people an opportunity of expressing their wishes for a site nearer the business portion of the city.

"It this county board goes ahead and seeks to secure the rest of the block in which the county buildings now stand, I am sure the taxpayers of this county will rise up in their wrath and there will be some thing doing this coming summer time.

"What if we do lose the old courthouse site if we build in another location. That will be all right. I do not believe we should let the mere question of the acquisition or the loss of the present courthouse site stand in our way when we want a new courthouse more conveniently located.

"The courthouse and the county jail have no business in the residence district of this city anyway. It would be just as proper to take them out to West Duluth or locate them at the end of he Woodland car line.

"The county buildings should certainly be built nearer the business center of the city and the depots, as are the rest of the public buildings."

A strong sentiment is growing in favor of a combined county courthouse and city hall.

There are a great many business and professional men here in Duluth, particularly the lawyers, who claim that the city hall and the courthouse ought by good rights to be built close together and the joint action of the city and county to build one structure that will conain the offices of both is being urged as the proper suggestion.

Salt Lake City, Utah, is claimed to have a model building in this respect and it is being mentioned as an example.

SUPERIOR NOT ON HAND.

This Forces Calling Off the Ball Game.

The non-arrival of some of the members of the Superior baseball team from La Crosse forced Manager Van Praagh to call off the game scheduled for this afternoon. Some of the players arrived this morning and the other members of the team are expected this afternoon. They failed to show up, however, and a telegram received shortly before 2 o'clock stated that they would not arrive until this evening.

The game which was scheduled for this afternoon will be played tomorrow, the line-up of the two teams being the same as was announced for this afternoon.

LANDS TO OPEN

Land Office Gets List of Those to Be Offered.

Less Than One-Fifth Are In the Duluth District.

The local land office officials today received a schedule of all Indian reservation lands in the Duluth, Cass Lake and Crookston districts which are to be opened to settlement June 15.

In all there will be 248,731.10 acres opened to settlement and entry. Of this amount only 49,517.16 acres are in the Duluth district, divided up among the several reservations as follows: Pigeon River, 10,079.27 acres; Bois Fort, 38,692.06 acres, and Red Lake, 145.83 acres.

In the Crookston district 128,045.38 acres will be thrown open, all of which are in the Red Lake reservation. In the Cass Lake district 71,168.56 acres will be opened to entry as follows: Bois Fort reservation, 92.92 acres; Deer Creek, 5732.14 acres; White Oak Point, Winnibigoshish and Chippewa of the Mississippi reservations, 65,343.50 acres.

These lands will be subject to disposal of actual settlers only, under provisions of the homestead law, except that the provisions of section 2301 of the revised statutes are not applicable, as proof of occupancy for five years is required before the title can be perfected. Each settler is required to pay for the land settled upon the sum of $1.25 for each acre, such payment to be made in five equal annual installmnets.

The agricultural lands now to be opened are not affected by the provisions of the act of May 17, 1900, as some suppose, which provides, in brief, that all settlers under the homestead laws upon the agricultural public lands, which have already been opened to settlement, acquired prior to the passage of this act by treaty or agreement from the various Indian tribes "shall be entitled to a patent for the lands so entered upon the payment to the local land officers of the usual and customary fees, and no other or further charge of any kind whatsoever shall be required from such settler to entitle him to a patent for the land covered by his entry," for the reason that they were not "opened to settlement" prior to the passage of said act.

THOSE WHO HAVE DIED

St. Paul, May 12.—A special to the Dispatch from New Richmond, Wis., says: Ward S. Williams, first mayor of this city and a prominent business man, died today of paralysis aged 63 years. He was born in Maine and lived for a number of years in California, where he was a member of the legislature under Governor Stanford's administration.

Cincinnati, May 12.—Mrs. Elizabeth Harrison Easton, a sister of the late President Benjamin Harrison and a granddaughter of President William Henry Harrison, died today at the old family residence at North Bend, a suburb of Cincinnati.

THOMAS LOWRY HERE.

Brief Visit To Duluth Accompanied By Easterners.

Thomas Lowry, president of the Twin City Rapid Transit company, and heavily interested in the Duluth-Superior Traction company, came in this morning from Minneapolis with P. H. Ecker and D. E. Ward, of New York, and the three, accompanied by Luther Mendenhall, a Duluth stockholder in the local lines, made a trip over some of the lines in the car St. Louis.

While Mr. Lowry's visit was not altogether unexpected it is claimed that it had no significance of an unusual nature. The two New Yorkers who are with him are said to be capitalists to whom he was showing the traction lines in Minnesota in which he is interested.

They departed at 1:55 p. m. for the Twin Cities.

DELEGATE UNSEATED

Negro Clergyman Said to Have Violated Seventh Commandment.

Chicago, May 12.—The African Methodist general conference has voted not to increase the salaries of the general officers. It is expected that the election of general officers will take place today. After a stormy scene, Rev. John H. Dickerson, one of the most prominent delegates atetnding the convention, was unseated. It was charged that he had violated the seventh commandment, and thht he must suffer the consequences by giving up his seat as delegate from Jacksonville, Fla. Rev. J. W. Dukes, of Ocala, Fla., was given the delegateship. Rev. Dickerson is not only prominent in church circles, but stands as one of the leaders of the colored race. He is grand master of the grand lodge of Florida, and is wealthy. J. A. Quarterman, another Florida delegate, was also unseated and Rev. T. J. Marks sustituted in his place.

Goes To Cloquet.

W. W. Broughton, general freight agent of the Great Northern, was here from St. Paul this morning and with General Agent C. D. Thompson, of the local office, went to Cloquet.

Their visit at Cloquet is supposed to be with regard to lumber shipments. Owing to the delay in getting vessels started in the lumber carrying trade for the season, there is a great deal more material from the sawmills in this district being sent out by rail.

THE WHOLE OF DALNY

Said to Have Been Destroyed By the Russians.

More Firing Has Been Heard South of Newchwang.

St. Petersburg, May 12, 4:30 p. m.—Later telegrams received here indicate that the whole of Port Dalney has been destroyed by the Russians.

Shan Hai Kwan, May 12, 8 p. m.—Firing is reported to have been heard today south of Newchwang.

St. Petersburg, May 12.—The admiralty absolutely denies the statement, published in the United States today, that the Russian mine transport Amur was blown up and sunk while laying submarine mines, April 25, in the roadstead of Port Arthur.

Maj. Gen. Pflung telegraphing from Mukden under today's date describes the reports that Newchwang has been evacuated and that the troops guarding the railroad are to be withdrawn and to be replaced by Chinese as being devoid of foundation.

Grand Duke Cyril's whole nervous system and his heart are somewhat seriously affected as the result of his experiences at the time of the blowing up of the battleship Petropavlovsk off Port Arthur April 13. The official report of his medical attendants says that the grand duke will require the closest attention and most careful treatment. His cure, the doctors say, will be a difficult and tedious process.

JAPS DENY CHARGE.

London, May 12.—The Japanese legation here this afternoon gave out an official telegram from the foreign office at Tokio, regarding the Russian charge that the Japanese, May 6, fired on a train from Port Arthur flying the Red Cross flag.

It says the train did not carry any special marks until after the Russian soldiers had fired on the Japanese and the latter had responded. When the train stopped the Red Cross flag was hoisted and the Japanese immediately stopped firing and proceeded to examine it, whereupon the train went on at full speed and escaped.

The Japanese foreign offices telegram also said that while there is no reason to apprehend that China intends breaking her neutrality the Japanese government has found it advisable to warn the Chinese government to observe stict neutrality.

THE BODY RAYS.

M. Charpentier's discovery that the nerve centers and muscles of the human body give off a special kind of radiation has already been discussed in last week's issue, says the Scientific American. A few additional details have been sent to us by our Paris correspondent, which go to supplement what has thus far been published. Whatever may be the ultimate bearing of the discovery, the facts alone are of value, and further progress in investigating these phenomena will be watched with interest. The experimenter present san account of his first work at a recent meeting of the Academie des Science.

While repeating in his laboratory some of M. Blondlot's experiments on the production and effects of the N-rays, M. Charpentier had occasion to observe a series of new phenomena which seemed to have considerable importance from a physiological standpoint. One of the most convenient methods of observing the N-rays is to receive them in the dark upon a phosphorescent substance of small luminosity, and the rays show themselves by increasing the light given off by the body. Fluorescent substances answer very well for the test screens, and one of the best methods is to use a platino-cyanide of barium screen whose luminous intensity is regulated by a radlum salt covered with black paper and placed at a variable distance. The rays from the radium thus excite the screen and make it more or less brilliant. Such a screen then serves to reveal the presence of the N-rays by increasing in brightness when the latter are allowed to fall upon it.

The phosphorescent or fluorescent screen it found to increase in brightness when it is brought near the human body. The effect is strongest in the neighborhood of the muscles and nerves. Contracting the muscles heightens the effect. In the case of nerves or nerve centers, the phenomenon is shown more clearly as the degree of working of the nerve or center increases. In this way the presence of a surface nerve can be recognized and the path of the nerve can even be followed by exploring it with the test body. These effects are not only observed on contract with the skin, but can be perceived at a distance. The action takes place through substances which are transparent for the N-rays (aluminum, paper or glass), and it is stopped by screens which are opaque for the rays, such as lead or wet paper. The effect effect is not due to an increase of temperature in the neighborhood of the skin, as it keeps up when several sheets of aluminum or paper are interposed (separated by layers of air), and thus screen off the heat.

The rays given off by the body are reflected and refracted like the N-rays, and M. Charpentier was able to produce foco which were indicated by the maximum brightness, by means of glass lenses. The index of refraction of the rays seems to be near that of the N-rays.

It may be thought that the body only receives and stores up the rays during the day, like the bodies which M. Blondlot exposed to the sun. But after remaining for nine hours in complete darkness the phenomena showed themselves as usual.

The remarkable fact seems to be demonstrated that the human body gives off the N-rays. It is the tissues of the organism whose activity is the strongest which emit the rays in the greatest degree. These phenomena seem to be of capital importance in studying nervous action especially, as the nerves ro brain are now found to exert an action on the exterior which remained unknown up to the present.

One striking experiment as to the effect of the muscles is that the area of the heart can be defined by exploring the region with a small test screen. As this organ is in great muscular activity, its effect is considerable. When the small luminous screen is moved about the surface of the body in the region of the heart, the outline of this organ and its surface are manifesthed by the variations in brightness. Similar experiments are now being carried on with the brain and the rest of the nervous system, and the results are awaited with interest.

VOTED IT DOWN

Duluth Masters and Pilots Against Acceptance of Proposition.

Mabel Bradshaw Delayed In Leaving—Other Marine News.

Although those who attended the meeting of the local branch of the Masters and Pilots' association last night were instructed to keep secret what action was taken regarding the Lake Carriers' proposition looking to a settlement of the controversy existing between the associations, it was learned today from an authentic source that the local organization voted not to accept the terms offered by the carriers.

A prominent Duluth vesselman said today that the mates were largely responsible for the fact that the controversy was not settled before this. With them it is said to be largely a matter of wages, more so than with the other members of the association. The objection of the Masters' and Pilots' association as a whole, as far as wages are concerned, is directly mainly against the Gilchrist company, who, it is alleged, pay their men at whatever scale they can get them for. But this matter, says the vesselman in question, can be settled by the men themselves, without tying up 75 per cent of the tonnage of the great lakes. The matter could be settled one way or the other by all members of the association absolutely refusing to work on any of the Gilchrist boats until their demands were acceded to, thus letting the other vessel owners, whose scale is satisfactory to the masters and pilots, keep their boats in operation.

The fixed scale demanded by the men will work both ways. While in some cases it will lower them. An instance of this is talked of in Duluth. A man who last year received $2000 for his season's work will this season receive only $1400 for the same work, if the wage scale demanded by the association goes into effect. This is said to be only one of several instances.

VESSELMEN SURPRISED.

Thought That the Proposition Would Be Accepted.

Cleveland, May 12.—President Livingstone of the Lake Carriers' association refused to discuss the result of the vote taken by the masters and pilots, although he admited that personally he was both surprised and disappointed. He added that a majority of the members of the executive committee of the masters and pilots had according to his understanding agreed to recommend that the proposition of the Lake Carriers be accepted. In view of the result, he said, the recommendation was not made or else it had been very generally disregarded. The Lake Carriers' committee met with the seamen and cooks today and a satisfactory agreement was entered into with them covering the season. Agreements have now been made between the Lake Carriers and all classes of employes except the masters and pilots.

BRADSHAW DELAYED.

So Much Freight That She Is Late.

The freight and passenger steamer Mabel Bradshaw, of the White Line Transportation company, was unable to take on all her cargo and leave the harbor this morning as scheduled. She will leave late this afternoon, however, bound for Isle Royale, Port Arthur and intermediate north short points. A broken ice field extends for a mile or more out from the harbor entrance, but the captain of the boat anticipates little difficulty in getting hrough it.

According to a recent decision of congress all goods leaving Duluth for Minnesota points, going by way of Port Arthur, as a considerable portion do, must be corded and sealed. Heretofore this was unnecessary. The cording a nd sealing will mean much more work for the force employed in the local customs office, and when navigation is fairly open will take one man nearly his whole time. It may be found necessary to add to the office force now employed.

The first cargo to be corded and sealed at this port was that of the Mabel Bradshaw this morning. A good part of the cargo will go to Port Arthur and then back into Minnesota.

First Storm Warning.

H. W. Richardson, local weather forecaster, received the first storm warning of the season yesterday afternoon from Observer Cox, at Chicago, which stated that the storm center was moving slowly towards Upper Michigan and apparently gaining strength. The message directed that a northeast storm signal be hoisted.

The storm did not touch the western end of the lake, but passed to the east of here. The wind has continued to blow from the northeast during the day, driving the ice towards the head of the lake, but Mr. Richardson stated this afternoon that he expected the wind to change to the northwest tonight. It is very apt to blow strongly from this direction, and in case it does the ice field will again be driven towards the south shore.

Yesterday clear water extended as far as the eye could reach along the north shore, but today the same water is covered with floating ice. Clear water is visible for a considerable distance down the lake a couple of miles out from shore, however. A good deal of floating ice has been driven through the canal into the harbor.

Reed Not Out.

Owing to the winds yesterday the steamer Reed was not taken from the dry dock, as it was not thought advisable to try to pull her out through the narrow passageway between boats which was made for the purpose. Later in the evening the wind became so strong that it moved the boats out of position and closed the passage entirely.

While it was expected to load the A. B. Wolvin with coal ere this, the work has not been done, but it was thought loading might be begun today. The boat is not ready for a voyage yet, and probably will not be for a week or so, although the loading is not expected to wait on the completion of unfinished details.

ENGLISH ANCEDOTES

In Which Foxes, Ducks, Goats and Dogs Figure.

Somerset house has many uses, one of which is storing in its great vaults the enormous mass of original wills which have to be deposited there, and which have been accumulating for centuries, says the London correspondent of the Detroit Tribune. Just lately an exploration has been made among this mass of literature, and some very amusing specimens of wills have been brought to light, and, one might say, of will-makers. Rhyming wills of a certain Mr. Powell and a Mrs. Jackson are very amusing, but they have been long anticipated by the well-known rhyming will of John of Gaunt:

I, John of Gaunt,
Do give and grant
Unto Roger Burgoyne,
And the heir of his loin,
All Sutton and Potton,
Until the worlds rotten.

There seems to be in the vast collection only one instance of a will in shorthand. It is that of Rev. Hugh Worthington, of Islington, and on being transcribed it reads: "June 18th, 1813.—I, Hugh Worthington, give and bequeath to my dear Eliza Price, who is my adopted daughter, all that I do, or may, possess in real and personal, to be at her sole and entire disposal; and I do appoint William Kanr, Esq., of London Wall, my respected friend, with the same Eliza Price, to execute this, my last will and testament.—Hugh Worthington." In a memorandum inclosed in a box, and addressed to his wife, the reverend testator says: "I do know you will perfect yourself in shorthand for my sake." One wonders how the wife would approve of the will when she had deciphered it.

One will in the great registry is preserved in cotton wool in a bag. If the document itself were touched, it would crumble into fragments. It is the will of a rich baker, and somehow or other it got into a big oven, where it remained for months. The original is never disturbed now, a copy being kept for reference.

The queerest will on record is that of a prominent citizen in the United States. The trustees were directed to pay the widow every year her own weight in gold! The weighing took place more or less in public, and needless to say it was an interesting ceremony, particularly to the lady herself. By this curious will the widow was always pretty sure of about 100 pounds of the precious metal, which, at four sovereigns an ounce, works out quite a handsome income. We understand that she did not diet herself so as to increase her weight; she merely charged a fee to the public who wished to be present, thereby obtaining a satisfactory extra.

The porters and cleaners on duty at Waterloo station one Sunday morning lately were surprised by the appearance of a fine dog-fox which was running about the place, evidently half tamed, apparently escaped from captivity. After a short chase the animal was caught, but not before it had severely bitten the hand of its captor. It was identified by a cabman as the property of a cabmaster of Peckham. Having obtained a dog chain, the captor of the fox, accompanied by three other men, led the animal to Peckham, about four miles off, where they were handsomely rewarded by the owner. The party attracted considerable attention as they went along the road, as there was some difficulty in getting the lost animal to go along.

It appeared that the fox had been in the possession of its owner for some years, and was a great pet with the cabmen and horsekeepers in his employment. It was generally kept on a chain in the cab yard, but was frequently allowed to run loose. Some time ago it contracted a great friendship with a duck, which the driver of a party of beanfeasters had brought into the yard from the country. Immediately on the duck being shown to the fox, the latter, instead of desiring to eat the bird, began to lick it and fondle it. The two oddly assorted companions shared the same kennel and the same meals, the latter consisting principally of cat's meat, which the duck seemed particularly to relish. The duck returned the affection of the fox, and would follow it about the yard, to the great amusement of all comers. This strange friendship was signalized by a "fox and duck" supper party, shortly after which the unfortunate duck disappeared, to the great apparent grief of the fox.

The first battalion of the Royal Welsh Fusileers, since its return from South Africa, has been stationed at the Whittington Barracks, near Windsor. Soon after reaching England the regimental goat died, and the king presented the regiment with one from the royal paddocks at Windsor. A number of citizens subscribed for a handsome silver shield and chain for the goat, bearing the crest of the regiment and the arms of Lichfield, where the last goat had died. To receive the shield the battalion yesterday—St. David's Day—marched into Lichfield from Whittington Barracks in review order, wearing leeks, the Welsh emblem, very conspicuously, and were massed in the square. The mayor and corporation attended in state, and the shield was placed on the neck of the goat by the mayoress. The commanding officer, in acknowledging the gift, said that up to 1814 the regiment had always provided its own goat as best it could, but in that year Queen Victoria had directed that two of the finest goats belonging to a flock in Windsor Park, the gift of the shah of Persia, should be given to the regiment, one for each battalion. The goat has always been the greatest of pets among the soldiers, and since that time it has been not only cherished by them as an emblem of the mountainous country to which they all, either by birth or adoption, belonged, and of whose martial and ancient traditions they were proud to be the representatives, but it had been regarded as a special mark of favor from the reigning monarch. The king has not only continued the same mark of favor as his mother did, but has further honored the regiment by appointing the prince of Wales to be colonel-in-chief of the Royal Welsh Fusileers. an appointment which is, of course, particularly appropriate.

Sales by auction are particularly rife just now, unfortunately brought about, as a rule by the failure of the owners of the goods sold. A very interesting one has just been held, as it is at intervals by the largest auctioneering firm in London. The goods offered consisted of miscellaneous articles which had been lying for some time at the "Returned Letter" office, and sent for sale by order of the duke of Norfolk, the postmaster-general. The articles submitted comprised Bibles, prayer books and hymn books, dress suits, some hundreds of shirts, blouses, and all kinds of ladies' and gentlemen's underclothing, literature, from penny novelettes to abstruse scientific and historical works, patent medicines, cricket bats, pipes, and hundreds of boxes of cigars and cigarettes, purses, hats, caps, bonnets, packets of sweets, opera glasses and telescopes, boots and shoes, walking sticks, umbrellas, brass fittings, tools, iron-mongery, bicycle tires, bicycles, razors and, in fact, thousands of articles of every kind. One can only wonder at the carelessness and indifference of those who lose.

Charley, the Windsor Great Western Station collecting dog, who was such a successful beggar, has just died of dissease to which dogs do not often fall victims. He was a white terrier, formerly employed in collecting for the widow and orphans' fund, and was much petted by the officials. He died suddenly and on his remains being examined, six pennies, eleven halfpence and several stones were found in his stomach. He had been in the habit of running after the money thrown him, and had accidentally swallowed the coins.

Rope-Skipping Little Girls.

Detroit News: "The rope-skipping little girl is with us again," said a Detroit doctor today. "I wonder when parents will learn to put an end to this practice? It jars the spine, the brain, the stomach. It injures the nerves, sometimes causing convulsions and death.

"Only a few days ago a little girl in Bayonne, N. J., died of heart failure caused by rope-skipping. Better spank liberally than be compelled to visit the undertaker."

Theatrical managers and poker players are not the only people to whom a "full house" is important. It is important to the man who keeps boarders or lodgers FOR PROFIT. Again, the moral: Use The Herald want columns.

If your difficulty is not too unusual a one a Herald Want Ad will probably solve it for you.

Got to raise some money by next month? Thinking of selling that lot? THIS MONTH is the right time to advertise it. That's what's meant by "taking time by the forelock."

Do you imagine that there is a stenographer in this city looking for work, who does not read, carefully, every day, The Herald "Help Wanted" ads? When you advertise you reach THEM ALL.

There are a lot of people who will NOT read your want ad. BUT—there are a lot of them who WILL.

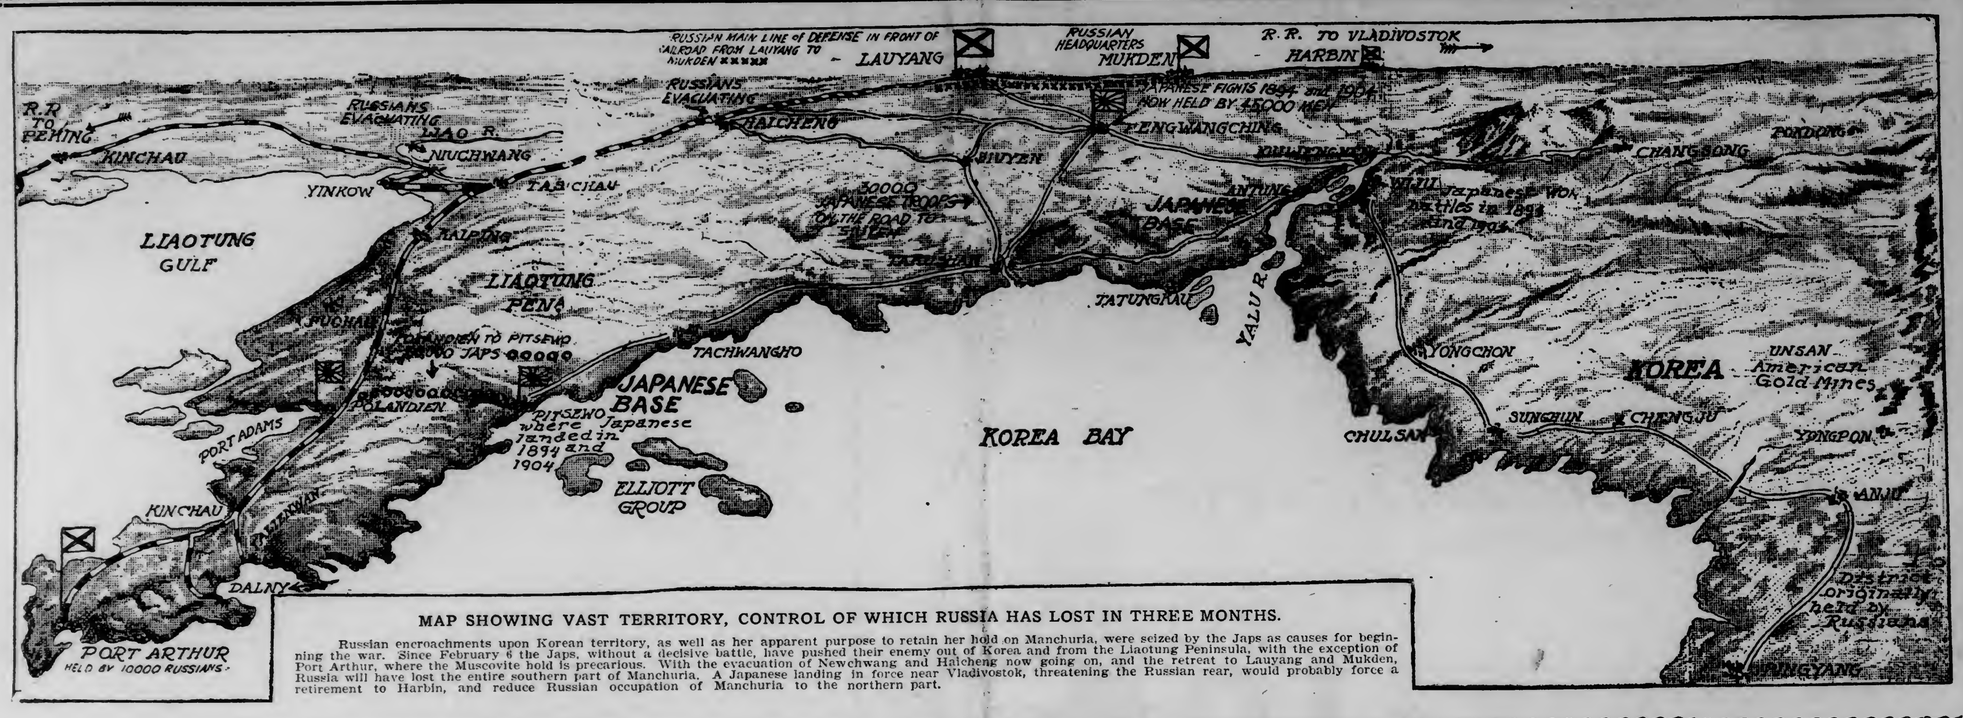
IN THE FIRST THREE MONTHS OF WAR RUSSIA HAS LOST PRINCIPAL PART OF TERRITORY FOR WHICH SHE IS FIGHTING.



MAP SHOWING VAST TERRITORY, CONTROL OF WHICH RUSSIA HAS LOST IN THREE MONTHS.

Russian encroachments upon Korean territory, as well as her apparent purpose to retain her hold on Manchuria, were seized by the Japs as causes for beginning the war. Since February 6 the Japs, without a decisive battle, have pushed their enemy out of Koren and from the Liaotung Peninsula, with the exception of Port Arthur, where the Muscovite hold is precarious. With the evacuation of Newchwang and Haicheng now going on, and the retreat to Lauyang and Mukden, Russia will have lost the entire southern part of Manchuria. A Japanese landing in force near Vladivostok, threatening the Russian rear, would probably force a retirement to Harbin, and reduce Russian occupation of Manchuria to the northern part.

JAPANESE TORPEDO BOAT IS SUNK BY STRIKING MINE IN KERR BAY, NEAR PORT DALNY

Engaged In Removing Mines When She Struck One.

Japs Claim It First Warship Lost In War.

Rumors of Fight Near Wa Fung Tien Denied.

Tokio, May 13.—The Japanese torpedo boat No. 48 was destroyed while removing mines from Kerr bay, north of Talien Wan (Port Dalny) yesterday. Seven men were killed and seven were wounded. This is the first warship Japan has lost in the war.

Newchwang, May 13.—The Russians deny the report circulated in London that a fight has occurred near Wa Fung Tien, in which the Russians were defeated with great loss. No confirmation of the rumor is obtainable from other sources.

A dispatch from London May 11 said the Daily Chronicle correspondent at Shan Hai Kwan, under date of May 10, reported that the second Japanese army, marching in three divisions in order to co-operate with Gen. Kuroki, had defeated the Russians near Wa Fung Tien with great loss.

The Chronicle's correspondent noted that there are two Wa Fung Tiens, one on the railroad north of Port Arthur, twenty miles from Pitsewo, and the other forty miles west of Kai Ping, on the road to Feng Wang Cheng.

PACKED LIKE SARDINES

Were Seventy Thousand Men on Japanese Transports.

Seoul, Monday, May 9., (via Shanghai, May 13.)—The second Japanese army, numbering 70,000 men, left Chinampo on eighty-three transports, May 4. The soldiers were crowded on board the vessels in the closest manner, one ship having 3800 men on board. So closely were they packed between decks that exercise was impossible and very little air was obtainable, but in spite of these discomforts there was no grumbling.

Every precaution was taken to prevent news of the departure of the army from leaking out. The residents of Chinampo were strictly disciplined and no one was allowed to enter or leave the town. Three Americans, however, succeeded in escaping from Chinampo on board a junk. Twelve days later they reached Chemulpo.

The Japanese will probably compel the emperor of Korea to resume his residence at the Kauvei palace, from which he fled after the fire of April 14.

HERO WELL REWARDED.

Chester, Pa., May 13.—Ernest A. Roeber, a butcher in Colwyn, a suburb of Chester, has received a check for $25,000 from the estate of Mrs. Martha Dobbs, who was a wealthy resident of Pittsburg. Roeber saved her life in a runaway accident, fifteen years ago. Roeber recently received, in addition to the bequest, a draft for $10,600 from Mrs. Dobbs' daughter, Mrs. Klingermier, of Pittsburg.

NEW YORK BROKER JUMPS OVERBOARD

He Was a Passenger on Steamer From Cleveland to Buffalo.

Buaffalo, N. Y., May 13.—A man believed to have been a New York broker, named Snell, jumped from a Cleveland & Buffalo steamer when the vessel was about three hours out from Cleveland, last evening. A traveling man who refused to give his name, tells the following story of the suicide:

"I was sitting in the buffet having a drink about 10 o'clock, when a short, heavy, red-faced man entered and sat down at the table. We got into conversation and he told me his name was Snell. He said among other things that he was financially involved to the extent of $165,000 and that he was going to kill himself because of his trouble. He threatened three times to take his life and I talked to him and urged him not to do anything rash.

"I believed the man intended to kill himself, however, so when we left the buffet I called the attention of a couple of deck hands to him. A minute or two later I heard one of them cry out that he had gone overboard. The captain at once ordered a lifeboat lowered and the steamer was brought to a stop as quickly as possible.'

Capt. McAlpine said he turned the steamer around when he heard the cry of "Man overboard," and retraced his course.

Snell took no birth on the boat. He went up to Cleveland on the same vessel from Buffalo Wednesday night. The night patrol saw him around at all hours on that trip, so it is believed he had no berth on that trip.

In the buffet Snell made the statement that he had not taken a stateroom or berth because he never intended to reach Buffalo. He told the traveling man with whom he talked that his financial troubles came through dealings in cotton.

"The New York papers had a long story about my trouble a few days ago," said Snell. "I went up against it hard and the hard luck has broken my nerve. I am going to kill myself."

The body of the drowned man was not recovered.

New York, May 13.—Nothing is known here of an alleged shortage in his accounts by any man named Snell, nor is there any broker in the city of that name.

THIBETANS BOMBARD BRITISH POST WITH GREAT ACCURACY

Natives Have Excellent Fortifications at Jong, From Which Elevation They Pour a Plunging Fire Upon the British Troops Below.

New York, May 13.—British troops made a reconnaisance in force on Wednesday, says a dispatch from the Times correspondent at Gyang Tse, Thibet. The larger part of the expeditionary force, which has been halted before Jong for some days, was taken by Col. Brander to flank the hills behind and to the east of Thibetan's stronghold. The Jong monastery, on the mountain side, was visited because it had harbored the enemy's horsemen two days ago, but was found to be inhabited by aged monks from Gompa, and, therefore, left unharmed.

No opposition was offered by the Thibetans until the column had nearly reached the post, when a hot fire opened from Jong. The fire continued for nearly an hour and excellent practice was made. The elevation of Jong enabled the Thibetans to pour a plunging fire, and adds greatly to the range of their weapons, which have been fairly accurate and effective since the Thibetans got the range of the mission post.

The bombardment was renewed late Thursday afternoon and kept up until dark.

Earlier in the day a village, about 1500 yards to the east, from which our chief defenses could be enfiladed, was occupied and partially destroyed by the Thirty-second Pioneers, but the British force was insufficient to hold both places.

Thibetans are reported to be advancing lines on the plain under the protection of fog.

Reinforcements of small parties have been seen from time to time concentrating by the Shigatse and L'Hasa roads upon Gyang Tse, and the new fortifications at Jong, which are extraordinary, both in extent and excellence of construction, are being carried on night and day.

Capt. Parr's servants, captured in a recent sortie by the Thibetans, were put to death with barbarity, being slowly cut to pieces.

FIREMAN BADLY INJURED.

Pittsburg, May 13.—Fire was discovered early today in a Liberty street building. The blaze was gotten under control with a loss of $75,000, partly insured. One fireman was badly injured by falling glass.

AN INSOLVENT BROKER.

Chicago, May 13.—Charles T. Petterson, broker, with offices at 120 Randolph street, has filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy. He scheduled liabilities aggregating $275,434, and $55,104 assets.

EXTERMINATE ARMENIANS

Turkish Troops Burn Villages Throughout Sassoun District.

Methods of Armenian Massacres Have Been Repeated.

Paris, May 13.—An official dispatch to the foreign office from Constantinople confirms the reports that Turkish troops have burned villages throughout the Sassoun district of Armenia, killing the inhabitants. The French ambassador, M. Constans, has joined with the Russian and British ambassadors in sending consuls to Erseroum, in the hope of limiting the destruction and bloodshed.

However, the official advices, although brief, indicate that the work of exterminating the Armenians occupying the mountainous district of Sassoun is practically accomplished. The Turkish methods appear to have been much the same as those adopted during the Armenian massacres. The official reports do not give exact details as to the number of towns burned and people killed, but they show that the action of the Turks has been sweeping. The French authorities were advised some time ago that Turkey was taking advantage of Russia's pre-occupation in the far East and intended to adopt a decisive course towards the rebellious Armenians.

The information then showed that the Turks would begin the work of suppresison about April 15. In order to prevent this, the powers made an energetic protest. This delayed Turkey's action, which, however, has been executed with the same severity as at first contemplated.

THE ROSEBUD INDIAN LAND

Washington, May 13.—The president today issued a proclamation for the entry of ceded lands of the Rosebud Indian reservation in South Dakota beginning on Aug. 8 next. The lands will be selected by lot and a drawing will be established for that purpose. There are almost 400,000 acres of the ceded lands and some of it is very fertile. Much interest has been manifested on the part of the would-be settlers, and Commissioner Richards of the general land office, said that he had received no less than a thousand letters of inquiry concerning the opening. For the purpose of greater convenience to entrymen, the land office at Chamberlain will be temporarily removed to Bonesteel, which is only four miles from the reservation. The entries at Bonesteel will continue from Aug. 8 to Sept. 10 and afterwards will be continued at Chamberlain.

BOY'S "FAKE"

New York, May 13.—Policeman Bridy was leaning against an elevated railway pillar at Christopher and Greenwich streets yesterday afternoon, when a blue eyed, fair haired boy ran up and seized his hand. There were tears in the boy's eyes and he sobbed as the policeman patted his head.

"O, Mister Policeman, take me to my mamma," cried the boy. "My sister got an awful hurt. She fell out of one of those car windows. So did I."

The boy pointed to a passing elevated train overhead and told a story of how his sister fell out of a window and was carried to a hospital. Five policemen hurried out to investigate.

Elbert Willington Skinner, father of the lad, walked into the station a few minutes later.

"Lying again," said Skinner, when the sergeant rehearsed the story. "Not a bit of truth in it."

The boy and his sister had run away from school. The girl had got home and told how the boy had walked her "way down town" and left her.

Skinner told how in Chicago five months ago the boy told the police his sister had been drowned and kept them in a pickle until Skinner explained.

JUDGE COLLINS AND NELSON MAKE PUBLIC THE LETTERS RECEIVED FROM JAMES J. HILL

SMITH STORY ABSURD, SAYS JOEL HEATWOLE

Never Suggested a Combination That Would Mean Political Oblivion.

St. Paul, May 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—Joel P. Heatwole, of Northfield, positively refuses to be interviewed on the further developments in the story of the alleged Dunn-Heatwole-Smith combination to the effect that Mr. Heatwole's overtures to C. A. Smith, of Minneapolis, were made through Charles H. Pierce, postmaster at Northfield, and a member of Mr. Heatwole's former congressional committee, and W. H. Springer, Mr. Pierce's brother-in-law and in the employ of the C. A. Smith Timber company. Mr. Heatwole yesterday said that he had stated his position on this question once for all time and he referred The Herald correspondent to his recent editorial in the Northfield News, of which the following are extracts:

"Mr. Heatwole regarded the story as a sort of a weird campaign lie conceived in the brain of a common ward heeler and given publicity for the purpase of covering some piece of political chicanery.

"Mr. Heatwole feels justified in using the columns of his paper, the Northfield News, to say plainly and freely that if Mr. Smith has said that either Mr. Heatwole or any representative authorized by him has ever suggested any political combination he—Mr. Smith—has said what he knew to be absolutely false, and if he realizes the sanctity of an oath he is challenged to make the statement in that form.

"The story is absurd and ridiculous on its face. Suppose for the sake of argument that Mr. Heatwole desires to succeed either Senator Clapp or Senator Nelson would he not, in seeking to make a political combination to bring about this end, choose a man whose character and influence would give him political strength and advantage? Would it be good politics or even ordinary common sense to attempt to make a combination with a man whose record in timber trespass and timber stealing cases is such that it would not only mean serious political embarrassment to that man, but political suicide and oblivion to those that were closely associated with him?"

Mr. Heatwole took this means to deny the story circulated in the Twin Cities yesterday that Mr. Pierce, who is considered close to Mr.

St. Louis, May 13.—The seating capacity of the Coliseum for the Democratic national convention has been fixed at 10,480, which includes delegates, alternates, representatives of the press, invited guests, officials of the convention and the general public, who will be admitted by ticket.

The preliminary arrangements for the organization of the convention are in the hands of W. A. DeFord, of Kansas, who has established headquarters at Hotel Jefferson, representing the subcommittees of the national committee.

Provision will be made for 302 working newspaper men, who will be seated in "Correspondents" sections 1 and 2. Seats are provided for 350 additional newspaper men who will occupy "press" sections 1 and 2.

COAL ROAD OFFICIALS MUST APPEAR

New York, May 13.—Orders have been signed by Judge Lacombe in the United States court, directing officials of the coal carrying railroads named in the recent decision of the United States supreme court to appear before the interstate commerce commission, May 24, and answer questions propounded by counsel for William R. Hearst. They also are directed under the court's order to produce books and contracts bearing on the alleged combination to control rates and output.

Judge Lacombe's order was at once served on the defendants through attorneys, who were present in their behalf.

THOMAS A. EDISON

Says Patent Office Methods Are Loose.

New York, May 13.—Thomas A. Edison, the inventor, severely criticised the United States patent office today, declaring that much of the examination of applications for patents is done by men who are incompetent, and that loose methods prevail which make it possible for a person filing an application for a patent to bamboozle examiners into letting him have his papers back for the purpose of making additions.

Edison said he had suffered frequently at the hands of incompetent examiners. He said:

"They take a couple of young men out of a bottle department or a collar button department and set them at work examining an application for a patent on a system of wireless telegraphy or some similar thing."

These remarks by Edison are apropos to a story that President Roosevelt had compelled the patent office to grant a hearing on a charge made by Edison that an applicant for a patent on an improvement on an electric storage battery had been allowed to withdraw the application and embody in it some features which Edison says belong to his new storage battery.

Hill Not Solicited By Collins For Any Contribution.

Says Nelson Did Suggest Donation of $20,000 or $25,000.

Hill Replied That He Would Not Furnish Any Money.

St. Paul, May 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—Messrs. Collins and Nelson today gave out the letters of J. J. Hill, written in response to certain questions asked in letters written by the gentlemen to Mr. Hill, concerning the latter's contribution to Judge Collins' campaign fund, when he was a candidate for re-election to the supreme bench in 1894.

Prefacing his contribution to the present campaign literature and Mr. Hill's letter, Judge Collins says:

"During my residence of fifty years in Minnesota, never before have I been called upon to publicly resent an attack upon my personal character. I cannot allow the recent attack of Mr. Dunn to go unnoticed. He has a right to his own views upon public questions, and he may choose his political associates, but he has no right to defame others who differ with him and his friends upon these questions. I judge him from his own language and acts."

Continuing, Judge Colinls refers to the charge made by Mr. Dunn in his Minneapolis speech and says: "Knowing the utter falsity of this charge, and believing that Mr. Hill would refuse to father it, I wrote to him, asking the following questions:

"'First—Did you contribute any sum whatsoever to my campaign fund when I was a candidate against the Hon. John Willis, or have you ever contributed to that fund in any other campaign? If so, when, where, how much and to whom was the money paid?

"'Second—Did I ever solicit or receive from you, or from anyone connected with you in business or otherwise, any money whatsoever for campaign purposes? If so, when, where, how much, and to whom was the money paid?'

"Omitting the address, Mr. Hill's reply was as follows:

"'Dear Sir: Your letter of even date was duly received. As the same is rather ambiguous, I would like to hear from you further as to how far you wish me to go into details in connection with the matter referred to herein. Yours very truly,

"'JAMES J. HILL.'"

"I did not regard my letter as ambiguous, but, waiving the point, I immediately replied as follows:

"'Hon. James J. Hill, City.—Dear Sir:—Referring to the letters which have recently passed between us, let me say that Mr. Dunn explicitly charged in his speech, if correctly reported, that I solicited and received from you between $30,000 and $40,000 in the campaign of 1894. But one construction can be placed on this language and but one meaning can be attributed to it, which is that at the time mentioned, I solicited from you and that you furnished to me for my own private and individual use in that campaign the large sum of money mentioned. It

THE STATE OF TRADE

Shown By Reports to the International Mercantile Agency.

New York, May 13.—Special dispatches to the International Mercantile agency indicate that general trade is picking up throughout the West and South. Eastern business has also been stimulated, except in the New England states, where depression incident to the rather general putting down of prices has injured business somewhat.

Winter wheat in the Southwest has been helped by more favorable weather. Too much rain in the Southwest has retarded the planting of spring wheat, and conditions east of the Mississippi reflect serious damage in the Ohio valley district, where only half the average yield is looked for. Loss of acreage shown in the government report is neither surprising nor unusual. It may still be reclaimed if the weather continues good. St. Paul district reports a larger shipping wheat acreage than usual.

Outlook in the iron industry is still modified by the attitude of the railroads, which will not buy under present conditions. One Western system is said to have held back an order for 10,000 cars until after election. Seasonable hardware is, however, in active demand. The situation is much complicated by the disruption of the ore pool and the generally unsatisfactory tone of the market.

FIRE AT PORTLAND, ORE.

Portland, Ore., May 13.—An explosion of sawdust in the furnace of the Day Lumber company's mill started a fire which destroyed that mill and also those of the Multnomah trunk and box factory and the Ira F. Powers Manufacturing company today. The loss will probably exceed $250,000.

APPEAL WITHDRAWN.

Railroads Accept Order of the State Commission.

St. Paul, May 13.—The distributing rates on merchandise from Moorhead, Crookston, Fergus Falls, St. Cloud and Brainerd, which were ordered in by the railroad and warehouse commission by its order of Oct. 17, 1900, will soon go into effect.

The Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies have withdrawn their appeal from the order of the commission, and now propose to put into effect the rates specified in the order, under which the basis of merchandise rates from these points was made the same as the rates from Minneapolis for an equal distance, that is, the same rate per mile from said points as from Minneapolis.

The commissioners' order was complied with by the companies and rates put into effect on Nov. 10, 1900, but on Jan. 18, 1902, notice was received by the commission that said rates would be canceled on Jan. 25, 1902, which was done by the companies, thus depriving these towns of the advantage of distributing rates equal to those enjoyed by the Twin Cities.

The commission notified the companies to restore the rates within ten days, which was not complied with, resulting in their order to that effect of March 13, 1902, from which the companies appealed to the district court of Ramsey county. In his recent decision Judge Kelly affirmed the order of the comission. An appeal was then taken to the state supreme court.

This appeal is now withdrawn, and a stipulation was entered into late last night between the attorneys for the railway companies and Gen. H. W. Childs, associate counsel for the commission, whereby the rates specified in the original order of the commission will be put into effect at an early date.

There are good business chances open for the right men. Do you want to be in on the ground floor? Why spend your time in running about, looking for a position when The Herald's Want Columns will do the work for you?

DOMESTIC TRADE

Movements For the First Quarter of the Current Year.

The Late Opening of Navigation Had a Retarding Effect.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU

Washington, May 13.—(Special to The Herald.)—Domestic trade movements for the first quarter of the current year, as reported to the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics, make favorable comparison with preceding years on the subject of live stock receipts at Western markets and lumber movements in the South and on the Pacific coast. In all branches of trade dependent on river and lake navigation there was a much lighter movement than in 1903, owing to the later opening of the season of navigation.

Live stock receipts at five markets, to the end of March, amounted to 8,844,713 head, compared with 7,603,901 head in 1903 and 8,031,008 head in 1902. The strength of the feeder movement, including those shipped and driven to the country, at Kansas City and St. Joseph combined, was materially greater than in either 1902 or 1903. Among special movements the sheep trade at Omaha has made exceptional progress in contrast with former seasons. Shipments of horses at St. Louis reflect the extraordinary incerase of demand, attributed mainly to the expansion of farming area which naturally results from continued high prices of such products as grain and cotton.

Receipts of wheat at eight primary markets for the crop years to the end of March totaled 196,490,127 bushels thus far this year, in contrast with 213,378,934 bushels last year and 197,513,925 bushels for the preceding year. Totals reported from eleven primary markets give receipts of grain of all kinds as 160,028,097 bushels for the first quarter of 1904. Last year the corresponding total was 159,037,712 bushels.

Lateness in the opening of through navigation on the lakes is responsible for the lighter tonnage for the first three months of this year. The total freight receipts were 502,017 net tons, compared with 810,968 tons in 1903 and 614,818 tons in 1902. The month of March closed without any indications of early opening by way of either the Straits of Mackinaw or the Sault Ste. Marie canals. Navigation between Sandusky and Kelly's Island, in Lake Erie, was conducted during practically the whole of March, and some of the lake packet lines began operation along Lake Erie shores before the close of the month. Besides lateness of season, the absence of a definite understanding between vessel owners and seamen on the lakes has defred preparations for the opening of navigation.

At the Atlantic, gulf and Pacific seaboard nine primary seaports of the United States give the quarter's receipts of grain as 65,412,298 bushels, including flour reduced to bushels. A year ago the corresponding total was 97,009,681 bushels, o ra decrease of 31,597,383 bushels, equaling 32.6 per cent. At gulf ports receipts fell off during March, attributable in part to the continued demand of Northwestern milling interests. A comparison of receipts in bushels for the first quarter at Atlantic and gulf ports is given in the following table for two years:

Port.	First quarter, 1903. Bushels.	First quarter, 1902. Bushels.
Portland, Me	3,789,200	1,608,205
Boston, Mass	9,19,908	7,254,051
New York, N. Y....	27,214,349	19,988,540
Philadelphia, Pa...	10,940,230	8,164,794
Baltimore, Md... ..	15,795,149	10,332,696
New Orleans, La ..	14,987,994	6,555,644
Galveston, Tex.. ..	*5,748,011	*4,412,035
Total..	87,774,850	58,316,015

*Shipments.

Trans-Atlantic cattle shipments for the quarter amounted to 225,034 head, of which Boston shipped 75,133 head, New York 54,387 head, Baltimore 43,120 head, Portland 26,506 head, Philadelphia 14,888 head, Newport News 10,151 head and Norfolk 849 head.

Coastwise commerce of Atlantic and gulf ports reports a coal tonnage shipped from piers at five tidewater points during March amounting to 2,375,671 tons, of which 1,040,048 tons were anthracite and 1,335,623 tons bituminous. For the quarter, shipments were 6,527,425 tons, of which 3,241,952 tons were anthracite and 3,285,473 tons bituminous.

Shipping movements are still considerably smaller than in 1903. Arrivals at Boston for three months this year were 1517 vessels of 1,605,380 gross tons registry. A year ago 1942 arrivals were reported of 1,761,911 gross tons registry. At New York, in coastwise trade only, 1798 vessels were reported in 1903, against 1246 in 1904, for the same period. At Philadelphia, in 1903, coasting trade arrivals were 1091 vessels, against 875 in 1904. For three months ending with March 155 vessels, including domestic and foreign arrived at aGlveston with a registry of 379,602 tons.

Petroleum shipments, mostly in the coastwise trade, at Port Arthur, Sabine Pass and Galveston, Tex., for March amounted to 895,786 barrels, comprising 36 cargoes, of which 27 were shipped from Port Arthur, 7 from Sabine Pass, and 2 from Galveston.

In southern territory receipts of cotton for seven months of the current seasoi reached 9,205,653 bales, of which 6,709,202 bales entered into port receipts, 866,220 bales into net overland shipments, and 1,395,000 bales for southern mill takings, with 235,230 bales of left-over stocks at interior towns. Exports for the seven months were 5,235,541 bales, compared with last season's exports of 5,886,824 bales and with 5,572,084 bales exported in the preceding year. The current season's exports are therefore the lowest in three years.

Receipts of naval stores at eleven primary markets in southern territory amounted to 2,020,925 barrels of rosin for the commercial year ending April 1, 1904. Last season's receipts were 2,184,818 barrels and 2,212,413 barrels in the preceding season. Spirits of turpentine arriving at the same markets totaled 535,951 casgs this season, compared with 571,096 casks last season and 596,492 casks in the preceding season. Two months' shipments of yellow pine from Southern States, as reported by over 20 mills, contributed 29,213 caroloads of freight to railway traffic. From Virginia and the Carolinas, rail and water shipments of lumber for eleven months ending with February amounted to 338,528,272 feet of which 186,132,734 feet were shipped by rail and 152,395,538 feet by water.

Shipments of oranges and lemons from southern California November 1, to March 30, 1904, amounted to 13,565 cars in the curent season, compared with 10,206 cars last season and 10,541 cars in the preceding season. The average wekly shipments were, respectively, 617 cars, 464 cars, and 479 cars. Efforts on the part of shippers to reduce rates to the East have resulted in a six per cent reduction in refroigerator charges on citrus fruits.

Among commercial movements on rivers and canals, the river movement at Cairo, Ill., on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, is reported for the first time, giving arrivals and clearances at and through Cairo. For three months ending with March a total of 1445 vessels arrived and cleared at this point, with a registry of 1,071,269 tons. The total through movement of vessels included 1350 arrivals of 1,032,733 tons, while the local movement with Cairo as destination included 95 arrivals of 38,536 tons registry. Arrivals during March were as large as the combined arrivals of January and February.

Three months' shipments of anthracite coal, 1904, amounted to 12,835,547 tons, in contrast with 16,247,008 tons in 1903 and 12,098,158 tons in 1902. Shipments of 1901 were 14,271,347 tons.

For the first thirteen weeks of the current year Connellsville coke shipments were 115,254 cars. Last year's shipments for the corresponding period were 134,549 cars, and 138,350 cars were reported in 1902.

The withdrawal of flour from domestic trade into the export trade, for three months, was substantially the same this year as last year, but grain exports were less than half the quantity shipped out of the country for the first three months of 1903, when a total of 60,000,000 bushels were exported.

Duluth vs. Hibbing at Duluth.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

George W. Lederer, the theatrical manager, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy Thursday. He states his known liabilities as $170,975 with assets of $100. He specifies 234 creditors, and that the amount of the claims of a large number is unknown to him.

The restaurant belonging to John Ziegle, on North Broadway, Rochester, Minn., was destroyed by fire Thursday and the head waiter, Emma Domdyl, lost her life. She made her escape once but went back into the building to get some clothing and was overcome by a mass of flames, as she tried to get out again. Her parents reside in Winona.

Guy Andrews, son of Eben Andrews, chancellor of the university of Nebraska, has been committed to the state asylum for the insane for treatment on complaint of his father, who testified before the board of insanity that his son had periods of mental irresponsibility.

Six skeletons were unearthed in the western part of Neenah, Wis., by workmen, who were digging in a sand pit. The skeletons are believed to be the remains of persons who were murdered at a road house which was located there in the early days of Wisconsin. Many disappearances from the roadhouse were reported, but no arrests were ever made.

The Armour soap works at Thirty-first place and Benson street, Chicago, was destroyed by fire Thursday night, causing a loss of $200,000. A number of frame buildings in the neighborhood were damaged. Several persons were hurt in a panic following a report that a tank containing 5,000,000 feet of gas was about to explode.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND.

IT GIVES ALMOST INSTANT EFFECT.

DENVER, Col.—"After a long season with the 'Silver Slipper' Company, I went to Galesburg to visit my brother and rest up for the coming season. A professional who is compelled to go through a hard season without any rest is totally run down before the season is over. This was my case exactly. My nerves were all unstrung and I was very much in need of a good nerve tonic. A friend suggested that I give Paine's Celery Compound a trial, and I did. The improvement was wonderful. When I received my call for rehearsals I left for New York feeling like another person. I cannot say too much for Paine's Celery Compound. It did me a world of good."—Miss Winifred Gerard.

"Braced—Invigorated—Cured"—this is the tone of thousands of letters sent in by men and women of every calling and every station in life; grateful for the almost instant strength and health they get from Paine's Celery Compound. EGAN IS GUILTY.

Jury Finds That He Robbed His Friend.

It took the jury but a short time yesterday afternoon to find Patrick Egan guilty of robbing Bert Bailey of his purse containing $10 and a railway ticket. The charge was grand larceny in the second degree.

Egan insisted that he did not steal his friend's property. When cross-examined by County Attorney McClintock, Egan admitted that he was once convicted for larceny, at Minneapolis, that he has been several times arrested for drunkenness and has been ordered out of town by the local police.

Wahl, Egan's companion, who is claimed to have received the purse and contents after Egan took it from Bailey, is being tried today on the charge of receiving stolen property.

Joseph Schutte, who was indicted for assault in the second degree, was permitted yesterday to withdraw his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty to simple assault. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $100, in default of which he will be confined in the county jail at hard labor until the fine is paid, but for a period not exceeding ninety days.

Schutte, it is alleged, was seen to slash Frank Kuzma with a knife while they were drinking in a saloon in Eveleth, March 13 last.

Sleeping Car Service To the World's Fair.

Commencing June 1st. the Minneapolis & St. Louis will inaugurate another through sleeping car between the Twin Cities and St. Louis, which is evidence of the increasing popularity of the through St. Louis service established by that line a little more than a year ago. The new car will be of Pullman's best, and will leave St. Paul on train No. 2, 9:00 a. m. daily, except Sunday; Minneapolis 9:35 a. m., arriving St. Louis Union depot 7:15 a. m. following morning.

As with the through sleeping car now running on No. 6, "The North Star Limited," the above service will be very popular and convenient for World's Fair visitors. The train will arrive at World's Fair station (opposite main entrance to grounds) at 7:00 a. m., thus obviating the necessity and inconvenience of passengers of going into the union depot and return, as well as the saving of at least two hours' time.

Prospective visitors to the exposition should not fail to consult agents or address A. B. Cutts, G. P. & T. A., Minneapolis, Minn., for further information as to our low rates, car service, etc. Also ask for "Guide to the World's Fair."

ORDER CAUSES MUCH INTEREST

Report That Pittsburg Company Directs Masters to Report.

No Orders Received Here —Steamer Arrives From Chicago.

Dispatchs coming through the Associated Press state that the six Detroit masters and fifteen Detroit mates, who last year sailed in steamers of the Pittsburg Steamship company yesterday received announcements of their appointments, together with orders to report to General Manager Howard Coulby at Cleveland today.

Under instructions from District Capt. Paul Howell, of the Masters' and Pilots' association, who is at Cleveland, they refused to go to Cleveland until the present labor troubles have been settled.

At the offices of the Pittsburg Steamship company, in the Wolvin building here, ignorance of the matter was professed, and the local officials stated they had no knowledge of it having been the intention to send out such orders, nor any knowledge of them being sent out, save what information was conveyed in the message. It was believed if the masters and mates here were summoned it would be done directly by mail or telegraph from the general manager's office to the men, individualy, and not through the local offices.

As to just what this summons on the part of General Manager Coulby means, no official here was willing to commit himself, but there are some well-informed people who think that it is merely a feeler put out by the company to test the feeling of its men, and that it is really immaterial to the company whether the boats are run now or thirty days hence, so far as need of operation is concerned. It is well known that the word to have the men report for work would mean refusal, if they intended to stick to the union under the existing circumstances, although the dispatch does not say explicitly that they were ordered to report for work, although it is assumed that such was the intended purport of the notices.

It is said that so far as the Pittsburg Steamship company is concerned that it has not, as an individual company, any contention with its men, as they are paid, in many instances, as high or higher wages than the union is demanding to have put into general effect, and are well satisfied with their treatment at the company's hands. But owing to their being in the organization they have to wait until it is placated as a body.

"Some of the men working for the Pittsburg Steamship company are paid exceedingly well," said a friend of that company this morning, "and I do not believe a more friendly feeling exists toward any one company by its employes than that between the masters of the Pittsburg company and their employers. The boats of that company are kept in exceptional condition and are generally unusually good boats to start with. The men's quarters are the best, generally, that are to be found anywhere, and they are well fed.

"They are not only well paid, and better, in many instances, than the general run of the masters, but they are sure of their pay as fast as it is due. There are some companies that have the reputation of being hard with their men, but I do not think if you look into the matter carefully, that you will find any complaint against the Pittsburg people on that score, as the only regulations that the company have are for the enforcement of the necessary discipline to keep business handled in a proper manner. There might be some slight complaints among the men here and there, but no general complaint, I am sure.

"It might be a question with the Pittsburg Steamship company to determine whether there are not some men in the union who are unwilling to risk their own positions and their standing with the company to uphold the contention of other men who are not so well treated. It is natural that all the men in the union who are getting less pay than some of their fellow members should wish to be paid as much, but whether the feeling is unanimous in the organization that all should be paid alike is a matter open to question.

"It may be that the company, after getting the refusal from its men to report for duty on notice of their appointment, will make some attempt to get its vessels out, as it has a perfect right to do. While it is a fact that all the licensed masters who hold the privilege granted by the government are members of the union, it may be that there are some men who have had the experience the government requires, and the ability, who are now entitled, by right of their qualifications, to licenses. Maybe licenses could be procured for them, if masters should all refuse to go to work.

"On the other hand, these notices may be merely as a test, as it is certain that a large number of the vessel owners of the same class as the Pittsburg company, who make a specialty of carrying ore, are in no hurry to have their boats start. It is well known that there is plenty of ore down below, more than there has ever been left over from one season of navigation to another, and the companies would not lose anything by waiting awhile, if they do not succeed in breaking the union or getting men from outside the union to run the boats.

"Maybe the independent companies are anxious to get started, but it would not look like it. With a short season, they can get better freight rates and make up in that way what they lose in length of the season. It is frequently the case with some companies that they wait until the season is well advanced before getting their captains. In the meantime the others have picked their men, and have paid the best prices to get them. Then those who have been waiting can man their vessels for less money, and a matter of anywhere from $500 to $600 a season in a vessel is worth some consideration.

"As it is, it puts the government in the position of protecting a union, at least in effect, for all the masters have to have licenses, and all of them, apparently, belong to the union, and the union is holding out for a certain scale of wages. Unless the companies are merely playing policy by pretending to be interested in the situation, instead of being really willing to wait an indefinite period, it looks to me as if something might be determined on this subject to change matters.

"As far as the ore is concerned, the mills could be run on ore taken all rail anyway. Sometimes ore is shipped all rail the whole year from the Michigan ranges, especially to the Milwaukee and Chicago plants."

One man who has studied the situation says that if navigation starts by the first of June, the season of 1904 will be just 78 per cent of the duration of navigation last season, based on the closing day of insurance this year.

One dispatch from Cleveland says that all the men who have been fitting up the boats, except the licensed engineers, were paid off yesterday and discharged. In Duluth it is said that no one save the engineers have been at work fitting out the boats at this port.

ARRIVES FROM CHICAGO.

Steamer Mary H. Boyce Comes Up For Lumber.

The steamer Mary H. Boyce, light for lumber from Chicago, which entered the local harbor at 5 a'clock yesterday afternoon, is the first vessel this season to arrive at Duluth from a lower lake port. Little ice was encountered along the way, and the trip from Chicago took little more than the usual time.

The steamers Huronic and Osceola are due to reach Duluth today. The Osceola left Chicago for Duluth Tuesday and the Huronic cleared Sarnia for the head of the lakes last Monday. Up to early this afternoon no lake boats had arrived. H. W. Richardson, using his powerful telescope from the hilltop weather station, reported that the smoke of a steamer was visible about thirty miles down the lake. From the fact that the boat stood well out from the shore, out of the usual track of the north shore boats, Mr. Richardson was of the opinion that the smoke came from a big steamer, probably one of those due today, and not from the Bon Ami, which is expected to return from a trip to north shore points today. Whatever the boat is, it will not reach Duluth before late this afternoon. The vessel is thought to be the Osceola, of the Lake Michigan and Lake Superior Transportation company.

The steamer Mabel Bradshaw, of the White Line Transportation company, cleared for north shore points about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, in charge of Captain Edward Smith. She had 170 passengers on board, and all the freight she could carry. Little trouble was encountered in clearing the ice field.

The tugs Tempest and Pacific cleared yesterday for Ashland, where they will engaged in towing. The Tempest was in charge of Captain Walter S. Lloyd, and Captain Henry F. Brown had charge of the Pacific.

Today's northwest wind is driving the ice towards the south shore again. The field is so rotten and honeycombed that even the small boats can pass through it with little difficulty. It is now said that nothing but a heavy and long continued northeast wind can completely block the local harbor, for the ice field now across the entrance will have to be made several times its present thickness before it can materially interfere with the progress of the lake boats.

H. A. Blume, of the Peerless laundry, has had his delivery boat, the Fanchon, rebuilt at considerable expense. Her smokestack was taken off and every part of her newly worked over until she is practically a new craft, saving her boilers and engines, which were in good condition.

She will not wait for navigation, but will start out tomorrow to do her regular work. The Standard Oil company's marine agency here will not wait for navigation to get well advanced, but will start making its deliveries by the Fanchon when she begins to plow through the ice cakes tomorrow.

DROPPING IN PRICE

Southern Fruits and Vegetables Getting to Reasonable Basis.

Berry Season Will Soon Be on In Earnest.

A general reduction on the prices of the different Southern fruits and vegetables is reported this week.

The Arkansas strawberries are now plentiful, and the Louisiana crop is exhausted. The price has dropped to $2.75 to $3 per dozen quart boxes. Next week the Missouri berries will be on the market and another drop in prices is expected.

The trade in strawberries is commencing to assume large proportions as the price continues to fall. The demand for the berries is brisk and within a week or ten days the rush season in the berry trade will commence.

Southern vegetables also continue to fall in price. Asparagus is now selling at 75 cents per dozen bunches and it is commencing to be a luxury which can be afforded by the average citizen. The best cucumbers have dropped from $1.75 to $1.85 per dozen to 75 cents. Pie plant is selling for $1.25 per box in place of $2, which was the ruling price last week. Lettuce, green onions, cabbages and tomatoes are all lower in price and as the price falls the demand for them steadily increases.

Potatoes are the only vegetables that have not fallen in price. The new potatoes from the South are not being received in large enough quantities as yet to affect the market, and the price ranges from $2.75 to $3 per bushel. What is left of last year's crop is selling at $1.20 and $1.25 per bushel. The price is firm at this figure and it may go higher before the new crop is really on the market.

Butter is much firmer in price this week. The packing stock has gone up to 12½ cents, a rise of 1½ cents from last week. The fancy dairies have also taken a jump to 18 and 19 cents in place of 17 and 18 cents last week, and the creamery is somewhat firmer.

Eggs are a little lower than last week, selling at 10½ cents in place of 17 cents.

There is no change in the poultry prices this week. The demand for poultry is light and the shipments are small.

A general improvement in trade conditions is reported by the majority of the dealers. After five or six weeks of exceptional dullness, business is commencing to liven up. The approach of the strawberry season marks the beginning of the summer activity in the commission business, and the dealers are commencing to prepare for the regular summer rush.

METROPOLITAN—Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week "Why Girls Leave Home."
LYCEUM—Tuesday and Wednesday, Otis Skinner in "The Harvester."

"THE KNOBS OF TENNESSEE."

"The Knobs of Tennessee," a stirring story of the life of moonshiners in the mountains of that state was played at the Metropolitan last night to a crowded house. The story is full of good situations and contains one of the most intense scenes in the portrayal of human desperation, when the mother of one of the convicted moonshiners shoots her son to prevent his being hung by his remorseless captors. Miss Evans plays this part and does it creditably. Lewis Stone also does splendid work as the young mountaineer, B. J. F. Banister finds a role suited to his ability as the elder Preston. The fourth act is impressive. Harry Russel, Mr. Banister and Mr. Stone have the scene to themselves, and the dramatic appeal of the old moonshiner to the president for clemency for the mother is an extremely fine bit of acting. The specialties were excellent. "The Knobs of Tennessee" will be repated tonight.

FLORENCE STONE.

The Florence Stone company will close its run of "The Charity Ball" at the Lyceum this evening and will not be seen again until May 30, as it goes to St. Paul for a run of two weeks at the Metropolitan theater in that city.

"A PRINCE OF TATTERS."

Tomorrow afternon and evening Al H. Wilson will appear at the Lyceum in "A Prince of Tatters." The company supporting Mr. Wilson includes many names well and favorably known, among whom are Fanny Bloodgood, Florence Stover, Jane Ferrell, May Burt, Ross O'Neal, James Bevins, C. A. McMullen and little Bessie Burt.

Mr. Wilson will sing six new and catchy songs during the action of the play, the names of them being "My Old Pipe," "The Jolly Rover," "Schnitzelbank," "The Winding of the Yarn," "Memory" and "Whispering Breeze."

"WHY GIRLS LEAVE HOME."

The patrons of the Metropolitan will be given a treat the first three days of next week, when the drama, "Why Girls Leave Home," will be preesnted. The play delineates the adventures of a young girl who leaves her home despite her parents' wishes and falls into the clutches of the tempter, who attempts to ruin her by getting her to take a drink in a cafe, where a number of low characters aid him in his purpose. A series of thrilling scenes follow. The cafe scene is very beautiful, the glittering lights, the pictures and the decorations forming a dazzling effect. The play will be produced here by Vance and Sullivan.

BODY MAY BE KINGSLEY'S

Relatives of Missing Millionaire to Seek Positive Identification.

New York, May 13.—The body of the man found in the branches of a tree halfway down the side of Hook mountain, just above Nyack-on-the-Hudson, is believed to be that of Henry Baxter Kingsley, of Rutland, Vt., who disappeared mysteriously November 14 last, while on a visit to his cousin, Hugh H. Baxter at New Rochelle.

If the body proves to be that of Kingsley, his relatives are confident that he was murdered for the money and jewelry that he always carried. Mr. Baxter, who is a millionaire clubman and a famous athlete, did not learn of the resemblance of the dead man until the body of the man had been buried. Mr. Baxter said to a reporter:

"The description of the dead man given me by the coroner tallies very closely with that of my cousin. It is not my cousin I will make public on Saturday an offer of a reward of $10,000 for any information that will lead to the discovery of Mr. Kingsley if he be alive or for information that will lead to the conviction of his murderers if he has, as I fear, been murdered."

The disappearance of Kingsley on Nov. 14 was a peculiar mystery, and since then thousands of dollars have been spent by his relatives in an effort to get some definite information about him. On Nov. 11 he left New Rochelle to come to this city, preparatory to taking a train for his home.

His cousin, Mr. Baxter, and a party of friends came with him from New Rochelle. They parted at the Grand Central depot, Mr. Baxter and his party taking a train for New Haven to see the Yale-Princeton football game.

None of his relatives saw Kingsley after that, but detectives traced him. He visited several stores in Broadway. At Brotano's he had ordered some books to be sent to his Rutland home, but where he lived during his stay in the city was never discovered.

Nov. 14 he seemed to have dropped completely out of sight, although the most elaborate detective system was employed by his family to trace him, and a reward of $500 was offered for any information concerning him or for the recovery of his body.

Kingsley carried a silver penknife with a pencil in one end, also a black leather pocketbook of the kind found on the body. There was a scapular about the neck of the dead body. As to this, a friend said:

"Mr. Kingsley was a Protestant, but he had some peculiar beliefs, and at times wore charms. At one time he wore a locket with a cross on it about his neck. It is not improbable that he should wear a scapular. He always carried three or four expensive scarfpins with him in a box and was in the habit of changing the one he wore in his scarf several times in a day. He also wore several expensive rings."

The bushes on the top of the mountain above the tree in which the body was found are broken as if there had been a struggle. It is the opinion of the Nyack authorities that the man was lured to the spot, murdered and his body thrown over the cliff.

RELIGOIUS THOUGHT.

The Tendency Is to Part With Dogmatic Creeds.

Since Sabatier's work foreshadowing the decline of religious authority was noticed in the Sun, a movement has been on foot in Canada tending in the direction which it was then suggested that religious progress would be likely to take, writes Professor Goldwin Smith to the New York Sun. It had its origin in Toronto, but its most congenial scene appears to be our Canadian Northwest, where everything is new, a population entirely immigrant is loose from old ties, religious as well as secular, and the futility of dogmatic division is most apparent; where, moreover, the expense of maintaining three churches for one congregation must be specially felt. It is proposed, and the proposal seems strongly supported, to unite the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational churches. The union is not to be one merely of pulpits and good works, but organic. As between the Methodists and Congregationalists, there would be little to sacrifice on either side in the way of doctrine; there would be more between the Presbyterians and the other two classes, unless the Presbyterians have radically modified the Westminster confession. The Congregationalists would have to sacrifice their theory of church government. Fusion of organizations, with their vested interests, might be most difficult of all. A fear has suggested itself that the result, instead of being an advance in liberalism, might be a consolidation of dogma on a large scale. But this seems unlikely. Sectarian bulwarks having once given way, the result probably would be an approach to a church of ethical, spiritual and social brotherhood on Christian lines such as the Protestant churches are apparently tending to be.

I naturally receive proofs of the impatience with which thorough-going materialists, elated by the grand discovery of evolution, regard those who hesitate to embrace at once the full materialist creed and say with its chief living expositor that the three great obstacles to our well being are the belief in God, Free Will, and a Future Life. For my part, I have unfeignedly professed my loyalty to science. I heartily accept evolution, only pausing to see whether a discovery so recent as well as momentous has yet found its final level. I only ask that certain phenomena of human nature, its liberty of choice in action, its moral aspirations, its power of idealization, its finer affections, its sense of spiritual beauty, its conception of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, all in fact that constitutes what we have regarded as spiritual life, should receive fair consideration, and that we should be told whether these phenomena can be explained by evolution or by any process of material development. I hesitate also to admit the assumption that the evidence of our five senses, even with all our scientific aids, is a complete account of the universe, so as to shut out any indication that there may be in our nature of something beyond. Truth, welcome or unwelcome, we must embrace. In embracing it is our only salvation. But it is too much to say that proof of the materialist theory would be welcome. The theory means annihilation after a life as transitory as that of an insect; less jo-cund, it is to be feared, than that of an insect in the case of a very large proportion of our race. Positivism seeks to console us with an attractive formulary setting forth the co-operation of successive generations in the furtherance of human progress. What interest can any generation have in a progress of which it will not personally partake or even be conscious? Besides, in what is the progress to end? Science says, in a physical catastrophe.

Not less heartily do I accept the judgments of criticism on the authenticity of the Gospel narratives and the mythical element which they unquestionably contain. With the supernatural and miraculous, with what has hitherto been called revelation, we must evidently part. But the character which has formed the Christian ideal still remains. It is not only picture in the Gospels, but reflected in the genuine writings of Paul. There remains also the doctrine to which Paul was a convert and which was preached with signal success by him. There remains the effect of that doctrine on the history of the civilized world. Loaded and sullied though Christianity has been by alliances with secular powers, by papal ururpation, dogmatic bigotry and sectarian strife, what influence can be traced in the progress of humanity at all comparable to that of the belief in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. There is surely nothing superstitious or reactionary in the recognition of experience embodied in the great facts of history.

FRENCH LANGUAGE IN LOUISIANA.

Congressman Broussard, of Louisiana, never spoke any English until he came to Georgetown university at the age of 15, and even now he probably uses his mother tongue—French—with the greater fluency, says the Washington Post.

"It is a curious thing," said Mr. Broussard, "how the French language has remained the dominant tongue in my home country. Brought there by Acadians of Nova Scotia in the eighteenth century, it prevails today, and I believe always will. Curiously enough, you will find plenty of men in my district with such unmistakable English names as Jones and Hayes who can't read, speak or write a word of English. Still funnier is the talk of the black people. Their negro-French would be unintelligible in Paris, and yet it is the softest, sweetest, most musical speech I ever heard from human lips. It knows no grammar, but it is the very essence of cophony and melody."

FLYING MACHINES.

Their Great Value In Warfare.

FROM time immemorial the notion of flying through the air has offered a most fascinating field for the imagination of men. Many thousands of dollars have been spent in fruitless experiments, new problems appearing promptly as soon as one is solved. Had practical air-ships been in existence at the time of the Spanish war, the location of Cervera's fleet would have been an easy matter, and the present conflict between Japan and Russia could be materially influenced by the facilities which aerial navigation would offer in spying out the strength and location of fortresses and defenses. Many costly experiments have been made, with models and full-sized machines, but success has thus far eluded all efforts. There are many problems to be overcome, the force of gravity, the strong atmospheric currents, the question of steering and control, and these must be solved one at a time. A few years ago it was thought that if a motor could be constructed which would give a full horsepower to a certain carefully estimated limit of weight, that the rest would be easy, but engines have been built well within this limit, and new difficulties have promptly arisen, notably the construction of a light frame strong enough to stand the strain of these powerful engines. Balloons are not practical as they offer too great a surface to the wind for the engines to overcome successfully. It is quite likely that if the mechanical problem were solved that flying would not be possible for mankind, owing to the peculiar conditions met with which affect human beings when they leave the earth's surface, the higher levels of the atmosphere being very cold, as well as of a lower pressure. One of the peculiar effects of altitude is to cause the blood to become thicker, there being more of the little corpuscles in a drop of blood than at the earth's level. One of the first signs of weakness in the body is that the blood becomes thin, giving the patient the peculiar pallor which sick persons have who are suffering from chronic disease. In some anaemic conditions, notably in young girls, the blood not only becomes thin and weak, but the individual cells lose their shape and become degenerated, appearing uneven and irregular instead of round. These changes are all readily recognized by the microscope in the hands of the skillful physician, and this is but one of the duties of the corps of skilled chemists and microscopists at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., of which Dr. R. V. Pierce is the founder and director. Medical men now-a-days admit that nearly all the constitutional diseases and many acute conditions are caused directly by impure blood. As a specific tonic for the blood and liver there is no medicine ever made superior to Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Being a pure vegetable preparation, made up of nature's purest medicinal herbs, it strikes at once at the root of the trouble, assisting the blood to throw off the poisons that pollute and corrupt it, mildly stimulating the liver to better work and promptly relieving the distressing symptoms. It does not give a feeling of false security as do so many remedies which are composed for the most part of alcohol, which dries up the blood. Neither does it contain opium, morphine, cocaine or any narcotic. For nearly forty years this medicine has been on the market, and no greater proofs of its efficacy and popularity could be found than its increasing sale, year after year. It has seen the rise and fall of many other popular remedies, but to-day stands supreme in a proud position won by merit alone. In order to make the benefits of his remedies to humanity as great and widespread as possible, Dr. Pierce offers free consultation and advice on medical subjects to all his patients. Sufferers can write him freely, in the confident assurance that all communications will be given careful attention and be regarded as sacredly confidential.

As an example of the good results thus obtained, note the following letter:

"In the year 1899, I had an attack of indigestion and got so bad that my home doctor said he could not do me any good," writes Mr. G. Trent, of Gordonville, Texas. "I wrote to you and you advised me to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, so I bought six bottles, and when I commenced using it I was so weak could hardly walk about the house. By the time I had used one bottle my stomach and bowels commenced to heal. There were strips of the lining of my stomach or bowels (I don't know which) as large as a man's two fingers passed and I had a great deal of misery in my stomach and bowels, and also in the rectum especially. I could not eat anything without having much distress afterward, but by the time I had taken eight bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' I was sound and well, and could eat anything I pleased without suffering in the least. Could also do as much work in a day as I ever could. I have not suffered from the trouble since, and it was four years ago that I was so sick. You may publish this letter if you wish, for I have stated the plain truth."

Many invalids have turned to Dr. Pierce in the despondency of despair, and have later shown by their grateful letters how timely and reliable his advice has been. Moreover, Dr. Pierce has compiled the experience of thirty years' active practice in his famous book, the "Common Sense Medical Adviser," which is a complete medical treatise on modern medicine, and should be in every home. It has saved countless doctor bills and much suffering, and will be sent free on receipt of thirty-one one-cent stamps to cover mailing only, or twenty-one stamps for the paper-covered book.

IS WILLING TO RUN

Hitt of Illinois Ready to Be Roosevelt's Running Mate.

Will Not Seek or Avoid Vice Presidential Nomination.

Chicago, May 13.—Walter Wellman says in a Washington special to the Record-Herald: Representative Hitt, of Illinois is a receptive candidate for the vice presidency, and it is believed here that if the Illinois Republican convention gives him its indorsements he will stand an excellent chance of getting the nomination. Mr. Hitt's attitude toward the suggestion of his name for vice president is marked by his usual dignity and good sense. He says he is "neither running for the honor nor running away from it." It is well understood among Mr. Hitt's friends here that he is quite willing to be nominated. He is not a candidate in the sense that he will ask anyone to support him, but the honor would be quite acceptable if it were to come unsought. There is no doubt he would be particularly pleased if the Illinois Republican convention were to take steps to present him to the party at large as its choice for that office. Illinois Republicans here say the state could not do better than to bring forward this veteran, accomplished, popular and dignified representative.

Mr. Hitt was one of the few prominent visitors to shake hands with the president today, and when he went away attempts were made to ascertain his views as to the suggestion by Secretary Shaw of his nomination for vice president. As the head of the foreign affairs committee of the house and being a diplomat, Mr. Hitt refrained from saying much that would indicate what he felt, but he said enough to let it be understood that he would do as all Republicans are doing, "stand pat." His intimations were that the honor was one that Speaker Cannon could afford to push away from him because of the great power of the position he now holds. But this was not so of other men, Mr. Hitt observed.

Favorable comment upon this dignified attitude of Mr. Hitt's is heard here. He is neither unduly coy nor overambitious. He does not affect to be too big a man to run for vice president, nor does he assume that anyone may have the honor for the asking. One can well understand why Speaker Cannon does not want the vice presidency. For him the place would not be a promotion, but quite the contrary. One can understand the feelings of Senator Fairbanks, who is in doubt whether he wants the vice presidency or not, and probably will be well content no matter how it turns out. But Mr. Hitt is neither a speaker nor a senator. He could well afford to go on the national ticket. And if he is nominated and elected he will make an admirable vice president. He is temperamentally adapted to the post of presiding officer of the senate, and that is more than can be said about Mr. Cannon. If "Uncle Joe" is drafted for the vice presidency he will be like a fish out of water all the time he is in the presiding officer's chair. The senate and he are oil and water, and there will be a deuce of a time if an effort be made to mix them.

Representative Marsh, of Illinois, who called on President Roosevelt today, said at the White House that Mr. Hitt was so popular in Illinois the suggestion of his name for vice president would be received enthusiastically in that state. This is the prevalent opinion.

It is not a secret that the Republican leaders are anxious to do everything they can to strengthen the party in Illinois. If the Republican convention should make a mistake in its nomination of a candidate for governor and turn the party over to the Yates-Lorimer machine combination, President Roosevelt's friends realize that the national ticket may need every vote it can get next November. This feeling was in part responsible for the talk of Speaker Cannon for vice president. It is not impossible that Mr. Cannon may yet be drafted. If the Springfield convention makes a blunder and jeopardizes the state, the administration may feel that it is necessary to turn to "Uncle Joe" at Chicago. President Roosevelt has promised not to use any influence to secure the nomination of Mr. Cannon, but of course he would not presume, and does not presume, to control the convention, and if the convention wants Cannon and thinks he is needed to strengthen the party in Illinois, he will be chosen and will have to accept.

There is a strong feeling among prominent Republicans that Mr. Cannon would be a good man on the national ticket. They look on him as about the last of the Lincoln type of American statesmen. They say pictures of "Uncle Joe," with waistcoat hanging open and that familiar cigar turned up at an angle of forty degrees from his tightly-closed lips and his good-humored, shrewd mouth, would be worth 10,000 votes in Illinois alone.

But the fact remains that, while Mr. Cannon would make a good candidate, he would be a misfit as vice president. Mr. Hitt, on the other hand, is almost as popular a man as the speaker, and has the additional merit that he is the material of which a good vice president and presiding officer of the senate could be made.

There are more pushing but no abler men in the house of representatives than Mr. Hitt. He has been in congress more than twenty-one years, has been busy all that time and has never made a mistake. For years he has been at the head of the important committee on foreign affairs and has had to do with much of the biggest and most delicate legislation of his era. He is a man at home in any company—democratic and genial of manner, a friend of all young men and known to and liked by presidents, cabinet ministers, ambassadors and men of the world's affairs. He is learned and polished, and out at his home in Mount Morris is known as a most excellent farmer and campaigner among the farmers. He is as fine a type of the American public man as one could want to know.

Mr. Hitt is a veteran of congress. He has been in the house since December, 1882. He has never been defeated. There are only three men in the lower branch who have served a longer time than he. It would be safe to say there is no other who has a greater number of friends. It is true Mr. Hitt is 70 years old, but he carries his age so lightly, is so youthful of mien and vigor that his age would not bar him from eligibility as a nominee for vice president.

PUT GIRLS IN OVERALLS

Chicago, May 13.—Make Buster Browns of lace bedecked, frilled and tucked little daughters; cut their hair short, put them in overalls, and do not let them realize that they are not of the same sex as their brothers, was the advice given to the mothers in the Hull House Woman's club by Mrs. Frances Crane Lillie, daughter of R. T. Crane. The speaker urged that the display of dress on little girls is immoral. She declared children should not be allowed to be conscious of self.

"Unnecessary and painful antagonisms are caused between boys and girls," said Mrs. Lillie, "by making sex too conspicuous. Everywhere there is a conspicuous difference in the dress of the sexes; there have been different standards of morality for the men and women. I wish we could put boys' clothes on girls."

Mrs. Lillie urged that the most important things physically for a child are food, sunshine and cleanliness and order.

"These essentials to health often are sacrificed to dress," she said. "Elaborate clothes keep the little girl from muscular development—they retard healthy physical and mental growth. They make the child self-conscious and vain. She is given the idea that her chief aim should be to attract.

"The girl's life is not so unconscious nor so beautiful as the boy's. The latter is more refined and spiritual than the girl's. Neither are the girls so straightforward. Look at the children on the streets—most of them are boys. They are playing and romping in the open air. Nothing in their lives is concealed. Look for girls—you will find them in a corner, in bad air, doing unnatural things and talking clothes. I believe girls and boys until 12 and 14 years old should be dressed exactly alike, except that the boy should wear trousers and the girl kilts."

Some of the club members took issue with Mrs. Lillie. Mrs. Fyffe declared that in her opinion the girl who wore boy's apparel early in life would be more self-conscious when later she blossomed out in tucks and frills and feminine things. Mrs. Andree deprecated the idea of cutting off the girl's tresses. She said that men had mustaches and were proud of them, and believed the girls should be allowed to keep their long hair.

JUDGE COLLINS AND NELSON MAKE PUPLIC THE LETTERS RECEIVED FROM J. J. HILL

was this consideration and meaning I had in mind when writing my former letter and I therefore ask you, first, did I solicit from you any contributions of money in campaign of 1894, or any other campaign? If so, when, where and how much?

"'Second, did you contribute to me personaly or for my personal use, any money in 1894, or at any other time for campaign purposes? If so, when, where, how much and to whom was the money paid? These questions are as pointed and direct as words can make them, and I respectfully solicit an early reply. Respectfully yours,

L. W. COLLINS.'

"To this I received the folowing reply:

"'Dear Sir: I am in receipt of your letter of the 10th inst. and if you desire a personal interview on the subject of the letter I expect to be at home all of this week and will see you at any time you desire.

"'No contribution was personally solicited by you or made to you by me.'

"'By whom contributions were solicited and to whom made is a proper subject for a personal interview rather than of correspondence. Yours truly,

"'JAMES J. HILL.'

"Referring now to Mr. Hill's invitation to a personal interview as to contributions made by him in the campaign of 1894, let me say that I have no desire to ascertain about contributions, unless they were made upon my solicitations or suggestion. If Mr. Hill's letters referred to contributions made by him to the Republican state central committee, it will be seen that they have no bearing upon the charge made by Mr. Dunn. In this event, it must be presumed that the committee used its funds for the benefit of the entire ticket, including Mr. Dunn, who was a candidate for state auditor, and Hon. J. P. Heatwole, a candidate for member of congress.

"I now state without equivocation, or reservation, that I never suggested and never requested directly or indirectly that money be solicited or secured from Mr. Hill for that campaign, or for the present contest or for any other.

"If such solicitation has been made it has been done without my knowledge, authority or consent, and twice have I unsuccessfully endeavored to ascertain who did this soliciting, or secured the money—if anybody. I want the names of these parties published to the world in a letter from Mr. Hill, and then let the public judge whether or not I countenanced or authorized their acts.

"I have carefully refrained from making any attack on the character of Mr. Dunn, or any other candidate, and cannot be justly accused of any mud slinging whatsoever, but a candidate's record, political associates, and attitude on public questions are fit subjects for discussion in a contest like the present one. L. W. COLLINS."

Mr. Nelson's statement with Mr. Hill's letter is as follows:

"Immediately on learning that Mr. Dunn, in a speech at Minneapolis, on May 6, accused me of having called on James J. Hill and asked him to contribute $25,000 to Judge Collins' campaign fund, and that he gave Mr. Hill an authority, I wrote Mr. Hill asking him to state whether he had authorized such a statement and whether it was true. I never expected anything but a flat dnial from Mr. Hill, but in my haste I overlooked the well known mutual obligations and sympathies existing between him and Mr. Dunn. Mr. Hill, in his letter to me, makes two positive statements, one that I called at his office and spoke to him about 'some farmers coming to visit the state agricultural farm, the other that he has 'always tried to avoid any connection with state politics.' The former statement is true, but the latter will make some people choke if they must believe it.

"The following is Mr. Hill's letter:

"'Dear Sir: I beg to acknowledge your letter of this date, and in reply I desire to call your attention to what occurred in a call you made at my office some time during the past winter. You spoke about some farmers coming to the state agricultural farm, and then asked me if I had enough interest in the election of governor of the state to contribute $20,000 or $25,000 to a campaign fund if Judge Collins could be nominated, or that with that sum he could be nominated. I replied that I did not desire to interfere in state politics, that my interest in the matter only went so far as to hope a good man would be nominated, and that I would not undertake to furnish that or any other sum of money for the purpose requested. This, I think, you will recall, is substantially what occurred.

"For some time past there has been a determination to make a political issue in the state of myself and my work, and while what I have done in the state is a matter of public record in the past quarter of a century, I have always tried to avoid any connection with state politics. Yours truly,

JAMES J. HILL."

"I reiterate my former statement that neither Judge Collins nor his advisers ever asked me to solicit funds from Mr. Hill or the Great Northern, nor even mentioned such a thing in asked Mr. Hill for money at any time asked Mr. Hill for money for Judge Collins' campaign, nor suggested his contribution or support in any form.

"E. A. NELSON."

CONDUCTOR CRAWFORD AND HIS BEAUTIFUL WIFE

Suffered for Years With Backache Caused by Kidney Disease, But Were Both Quickly

Cured by Warner's Safe Cure.

MR. AND MRS. ELMER CRAWFORD.

"I cannot think of anything more wearing to a man who has to attend to the strenuous duties of a railroad conductor than the gnawing backache and general suffering that come from diseased kidneys or any blocking of the system with uric acid. I know it was so in my case. I suffered intensely, and when my wife told me how quickly and completely Warner's Safe Cure cured her of piercing pains in the back, resulting from kidney trouble, I got a bottle at once, and it cured me, too. We have used only four bottles altogether, have never had another touch of kidney trouble, and gladly endorse Warner's Safe Cure as the best medicine in the world for this awful scourge."—Elmer and Mary Crawford, 500 W. 117th St., New York. March 23, '04.

The testimony of Mr. and Mrs. Crawford is similar to that of thousands of men and women who have been saved from wretchedness and premature death by Warner's Safe Cure. If your kidneys are weak or diseased, your life is in great danger, as the note of warning given by the pain is not manifested until the disease has secured a firm hold. If permitted to run on without the use of Warner's Safe Cure, the result will be inflammation of the bladder and urinary organs, stone in the bladder, gravel, headache, grinding and piercing pains in the back, indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, torpid liver, rheumatic pains and swellings and all kinds of blood and skin diseases; if a woman, bearing-down sensations, fainting spells and painful periods.

MAKE THIS SIMPLE TEST FOR KIDNEY TROUBLE:

Let some morning urine stand in a glass or bottle 24 hours, and if your kidneys are affected it will become cloudy, particles will float about in it, or a sediment will form.

Warner's Safe Cure has been used and prescribed by doctors for over thirty years as the only positive cure for all diseases of kidneys, bladder, liver and blood. Cures even stubborn cases of long standing. Sold at all drug stores or direct, 50 cents and $1 a bottle.

Refuse substitutes. They are worthless and very often exceedingly dangerous. Ask for Warner's Safe Cure; it will cure you.

NEW DEPARTURE

In the Field of Journalism In Texas.

Houston, Tex., May 13.—A new departure in the field of journalism is the Texas Journal, a newspaper of a single edition, to be published by the Woman's club on May 19. The paper will be devoted to the advancement of Texas interests at the St. Louis fair.

Matters of interest pertaining to Houston—industrial, commercial and educational, as well as agricultural developments which have made the coast country famous, will be written of at length by some of our most prominent citizens. Professor Barnett will write of the excellent public school system; one of the trustees of the Rice institute will outline the unequaled educational advantages of that institution and what it will mean to Texas. The magnificent work accomplished by the womens' organizations of Texas—literary, philanthropic, patriotic, artistic—will be reviewed by the promoters of these several organizations, for Texas is justly proud of the work accomplished by her women, and the Journal considers it a privilege to give it in a condensed form to the public.

WHOLE TOWN

Asks Govenor Odell to Pardon a Felon.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 13.—The residents of Berwick are preparing to present a petition to Governor Odell of New York state asking him to pardon the escaped convict, Harry Roberts, who, for the last four years, has lived an honest life at Berwick.

Roberts, who has been living under the name of Morris McDale and who married a young woman of Berwick, was arrested Wednesday and taken back to the Elmira reformatory, from which he escaped four years ago. He has still to serve sixteen months of a five years' sentence for burglary.

So well did he deport himself while residing at Berwick and so greatly was he respected that the many who know him are convinced that he has reformed and are willing to give him a helping hand. His wife, who is broken-hearted, has faith in him and will do all she can to effect his release.

THIRTEEN GIRLS

Offer to Wed Rich Bachelor In Indiana.

Winnemac, Ind., May 13.—"Take your choice, colonel," was the invitation recently extended to Col. Lewis C. Dutton by thirteen charming young women of this city.

This was not the first time since the inauguration of leap year that the popular bachelor has been asked to wed.

The occasion of his receiving thirteen proposals at the same time was at a party given for him by the young women of the community. The colonel told his fair admirers that if he could accept them all he would gladly do so, but that their individual charms were so great that he could not decide upon any particular one.

Col. Dutton later celebrated his 65th birthday and was entertained at a banquet by women of the city. Here again he was asked to become a Benedict by several fair admirers. He told them he would have to be given time to decide so weighty a question. The colonel is wealthy and he is a member of several clubs.

When moving why not engage covered vans. It costs no more.

MALARIA

AN INVISIBLE ENEMY TO HEALTH

Malaria is a slow poison, but the most stubborn and deeply rooted when it takes possession of the system. We breathe into the lungs the polluted, germ-tainted air; the little microbes then enter into the system, and feeding upon the red corpuscles of the blood, soon reduce this vital, life-sustaining fluid to such a weak, watery state that the patient becomes listless, pale and anæmic, and mentally and physically depressed. Malaria may begin with slight rigors or chilly sensations, followed by fever and thirst; but gradually all parts of the system are affected; the liver becomes torpid, and dark or yellow splotches appear upon the skin; the stomach fails to properly digest the food, and there are frequent headaches, dizziness, bad taste in the mouth, constipation and a general worn-out, tired feeling that only a sufferer from Malaria can describe. Other and more dangerous symptoms are apt to follow where this disease is neglected, such as nervous prostration, palpitation, sleeplessness, enlarged liver, weak kidneys, boils and risings and dangerous-looking sores and abscesses. Malaria is all the more dangerous because of its insidious and stealthy nature. It is an invisible atmospheric poison, and the germs and microbes that are lodged in the blood are propagating and increasing in number all the while, clogging the circulation and gradually wrecking the health.

Amory, Miss., Jan. 28, 1903.

About fifteen years ago I suffered with boils, and took a course of S. S. S., which built me up and entirely cured me of the boils. Three years ago I suffered with Malaria, and remembering how much good S. S. S. had done me, I determined to try it again. I am glad to say that the results were all I could have desired. Since then I take S. S. S. every spring, and have no attack of Malaria. Last summer I spent most of the time on Tombigbee bottom having timber cut.

A. E. DALRYMPLE.

What is needed in Malarial troubles is a blood purifier and tonic. S. S. S. purifies the germ-infected blood, tones up the stomach, improves the appetite and invigorates the entire system. It stimulates the torpid, sluggish organs of the body, enabling them to properly perform their functions and carry off the poisonous secretions and health-destroying matter that have been polluting the blood and clogging the circulation. S. S. S. contains no strong minerals, but is strictly a vegetable remedy, a blood purifier without an equal, and the greatest of all tonics. If you have any symptoms of Malaria, write us, and medical advice will be furnished without cost.

NATURE'S POWER

Is to Be Used on Cog Railroad In Colorado.

Plans to Harness Natural Electricity of Pike's Peak.

Colorado Springs, Colo., May 13.—To harness the electricity on Poke's Peak and by means of a metallic circuit conduct it to the base, there to be stored for use as motive power for the Cog road—that is the scheme of the Manitou & Pike's Peak railway.

The proposition, according to the general manager, Mr. Sells, is feasible, and affords the only practical means of employing electricity on the Cog road. The project involves problems in electricity which are now engaging experts. There will arrive within a few days a man of recognized ability who is coming to give the matter his personal investigation.

His visit is the result of a trip which Mr. Sells recently took East, to discuss the proposition to electrify the Cog road.

The one obstacle in the way of carrying out such a plan is the static electricity with which the air is charged above the 12,000 foot point. The fact that Pike's Peak overtops all the surrounding mountains makes it the natural grounding spot for millions of volts of electricity that would otherwise be dissipated over a large area.

In the ordinary trolley line power comes along the trolley wire from the power station, thence into the motors under the cars and returns to the earth, completing the circuit.

The heavy currents on the Peak coming so quickly and so violently would, if applied direct, tear the machines to pieces within a week after operations were begun. The thing to do then is to harness this power and make it useful.

They propose, therefore, to make a complete circuit of trolley wire and a double circuit which shall contain all the power needed to operate the cars and at the same time keep it from ripping up the motors in its desire to get to earth.

This double trolley circuit will be complete in itself, starting from the power house in Manitou and returning without going through the earth.

The pole of the car will take the power in the ordinary way and transmit it to the motor, but it will return on the other wire to the power house and ont through the earth, thereby preventing the burning out of the motor.

The poles which will carry these wires will each have at the top a lightning rod designed to attract electricity which plays around the Peak so fiercely. The theory is that the poles will catch the "juice" and transmit it through the rails of the Cog road to the power house in Manitou, where it will be transformed and stored for use. They will take the electricity off the Peak and transmit to Manitou, where it can be used for driving trains up and down.

The Cog road management have already begun upon plans and specifications, as the proposition will be unique for a railway of this kind.

GRANDSON OF WARRIOR

Fighting For Share In Echo In the Fog's Allotment.

Muskogee, I. T., May 13.—The largest claim of any one estate on the entire loyal Creek roll, payments on which will begin at the Indian agency here May 15, is that of Hypoth Yalow, a once famous Indian chief. His name, in the Creek tongue, means "An Echo in the Fog," but his reputation, when it was a watchword all over the Indian territory, had no such peaceful significance.

He has been dead several years, but among the thousands of full bloods of the territory he is remembered as the great chief who led the Northern Creeks, after their factional fight, into Kansas during the civil war. By the people of that state he is remembered as the terrible red man who devastated their crops and killed their children.

The claim of his dozen heirs, as approved by the secretary of the interior, is for $9000, which will be divided among them, unless an injunction is granted against Indian Agent Shoenfelt before May 15, as he has no authority to diverge from the roll as approved by the department.

It is likely that such an injunction will be granted, as a full-blood young Creek appeared before the agent last Saturday and gave what appeared to be proof of his relationship to the famous warrior, that he was the latters' grandson.

He said that he intended to ask for an injunction, if that were necessary, and in case such an injunction is sustained and his claim established, each of the dozen heirs who are on the roll will be barred from the benefits, as none of them is a lineal descendant. The claimant's name is Tustannuggee Yalow, meaning "brave warrior."

PEACEMAKER CUT

By One of Disputants Over a Dime.

Marion, Ind., May 13.—It was like a fifteenth century morality play or a chapter from "Pilgrim's Progress," only the moral was bad.

James Fynder found a dime. Strangely true it is that James never found anything in his life before. His wife says that he cannot find his socks when they are right in front of him, and his collar buttons disappear from his view every time he takes it from a dirty shirt. But on Thursday he found a dime.

James Cash saw Fynder find the dime and claimed it as his own. Elated by his unexpected fortune, Fynder refused to deliver the cash to Cash. He was attacked by Cash and resisted manfully. Cash drew a knife and was seeking to find a vulnerable spot in Fynder's defense, when Daniel Reason, an aged inhabitant, interfered in the interests of reason. Reason's reasoning on that head was defective in the eye and ear of Cash, and Fynder, finding he had rather lose his reputation for valor than his life, fled.

Cash, infuriated at the loss of dime and victim, cut Reason so seriously that he may die.

THE TRAMP ARMY

Is Now Traveling to the World's Fair at St. Louis.

Five Thousand New York Residents Decide to Move.

New York, May 13.—May is moving month for tramps as well as for respectable householders, and the usual spring exodus from New York began this week. Naturally the great attraction this year is St. Louis, where the wayfarers look for a harvest from the exposition crowds. Fully 5000 "hoboes," "yeggmen" and gypsies will go from this city alone, the great majority beating their way on freight trains.

For the St. Louis trip, New Brunswick, N. J., is the first stopping place. From there on the "jumps" will be long or short, according to the travelers' fancy. Some think nothing of a "jump" of 200 or 300 miles; others camp every fifty or seventy-five miles.

The army has its advance guards and details somewhat on military lines. The "cat" goes first; he looks around—"feels his way," as the fraternity puts it—and selects a site for a camp for his particular gang. The "cat" is chosen for his innocent appearance. He is followed by the "gay cat," who looks over the "cat's" work and makes such changes as he deems desirable. The "gay cat's" especial duty is to see that the camp is so located as to be convenient for food supplies, and, if the camp be of "yeggmen," that opportunities for plunder are convenient.

After these preliminaries are settled the "hoboes" or "yeggmen" follow. These two classes are entirely distinct, the former embracing the ordinary wanderers, while the "yeggs" are thieves by occupation. Not that the "hoboes" will not steal, for they will take almost anything that looks easy, will rob a drunken man or a sleeper, and will even rob each other; but their main effort is to satisfy their craving for a wandering life without work, while the "yegg" belongs to a distinctly criminal class.

The "hobo" and the "yegg" are violently antagonistic, and frequently clash; then the newspapers print a brief account of the finding of a tramp's body along some railroad track. Usually in such cases he has been thrown from a moving freight car, or "done up" with a coupling pin near some camp or registering place. This enmity is due to the habit the "yeggs" cultivate of following a "hobo" gang, counting on laying on the latter's shoulders the blame for thefts committed by themselves.

With both gangs go the "Prooshians," as they are called—boys, usually, who have been stolen, and are actual slaves. If held by a "yeggman" the "Prooshian" is used as a "stall;" he steals small articles for his master, or if a large job, such as robbing a house, is in hand, he is put in at a window and unlocks the door to let the gang in. This method is usually followed only in the case of a house that is temporarily vacant. The "hoboes" utilize their "Prooshians" for begging purposes, and they usually prove successful in persuading women to make liberal gifts of food.

Both classes of tramps have thorough methods for keeping track of members, not only that "pals" may find each other readily, but to post their fellows on the chances in a new town. Their secret marks on houses and fences, denoting the liberality or stinginess of the dwellers, have often been described. Thees form only a part, however, of the sign language. At every "camp" registering is done as faithfully as though the tramps were guests at some fine hotel.

No books are used of course, the record being made on wood. The big water tanks along railroad lines are usually covered with rudely cut initials and signs, and board fences are to be seen similarly decorated. The record is brief.

Suppose a "hobo" known as "Peoria Jim" strikes New Brunswick, bound for New York; he cuts into the wood with his clasp knife the brief legend, "Peoria Jim,. B. E. Oct. 20." The "B. E." stands for "bound east," and any of his friends readily understands that Jim is to be found in New York, probably on the Bowery, if in the late fall or winter. This date makes it possible to tell if Jim was a recent visitor. This registration is of especial value in the fall, for then one's pals can be located with considerable certainty.

Every "hobo" or "yegg" has his distinctive title, usually based either on his home city, or some physical deformity or characteristic, or on some feat performed while on the road. This nom de plume is called by them a "nomaker."

Strangers are added to the ranks of the tramps constantly. They usually are attracted to the life by sheer laziness or family troubles, and begin their wandering career under the tutelage of an old-timer. Both the "yeggs" and the "hobos" regularly initiate these recruits, having different forms of initiation, varying with circumstances and the surroundings of the gang. Sometimes a new brother is made to "burn the town" for two or three days, begging and stealing food supplies, while the gang stay in camp, lazily enjoying themselves. Naturally the recruit does his best to prove his worth.

Did you ever play with a burning glass? It doesn't make the sun any hotter. It just brings the rays to a point, so they sizzle.

Same with thinking. Weak, spread-out thoughts get nothing done.

"FORCE" makes your thoughts come sharp to a point—and burn a hole in things.

GRAY TO SUCCEED HANMA IN CIVIC FEDERATION.

Philadelphia, May 13.—It has been learned that Judge George Gray has been chosen by the nominating committee of the national civic federation to succeed the late Senator Marcus A. Hanna, as president of the federation. At the recent meeting of the federation the matter of filling the vacancy caused by Senator Hanna's death was delegated to a nominating committee composed of Bishop Potter and President John Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers. They have agreed on Judge Gray as the most likely man for the place and will recommend his selection at the next meeting of the federation. The election of Judge Gray is to be deferred until after the national Democratic convention in St. Louis for fear it might seem that the federation is aiding in making a possible presidential candidate conspicuous or important.

HUSBAND HEAD OF THE FAMILY

And May Keep Out Mother-in-Law, Says Ohio Court.

Columbus, Ohio, May 13.—The supreme court has decreed that the husband is the head of the family. He may choose any reasonable place or mode of living, and the wife must conform thereto. The husband may decide who shall be the visitors at the home, even if the wife owns the home.

In the Erie county case of the state of Ohio against Oscar W. Green the interesting question if a man may keep his mother-in-law out of his home was brought to the attention or no fewer than four courts. It all grew out of a domestic quarrel. Oscar Green did not want his mother-in-law, Mrs. Martha Hibblethwaite, to visit him and his wife at their home. He gave the mother-in-law due notice to that effect. But with the perversity attributed to mothers-in-law in general Mrs. Hibblethwaite went to the Green domicile. The son-in-law met her at the door and refused to let her enter. The evidence is conflicting as to what then transpired. On the one hand it is claimed that Green struck her; on the other hand, that he pushed her from the door.

Mrs. Hibblethwaite caused the arrest of her son-in-law. He was found guilty in probate court and was fined $10 and costs for assault and battery. The common pleas court affirmed the finding, and the circuit court reversed the action, on the ground that Green was the "boss" of his "castle." The prosecution carried the case to the supreme court, and that court says the circuit court was right. It follows, therefore, that if a husband notifies a mother-in-law that her society is not wanted he has the right to keep her out of his home.

BOY CHAINED

To Floor For Many Days By Father.

Evansville, Ind., May 13.—Edgar Jenkins, aged 11, son of Cicero Jenkins, a farmer living at 614 Monroe avenue, told a story of horrible cruelty to David Mills, officer of the juvenile court, here. He says his father kept him chained to the floor for many days. The links, according to the boy's story, were bound around his neck and thighs and his meals were carried to him during the day, and the only time he was released was when he went to bed at night. The boy says one Sunday about four weeks ago his father brought home a large chain and told him he was going to fasten him to the floor. Edgar claims he was taken into a room and bound with the chain. A large padlock held the chain in place and it was fastened by a staple to the floor.

The practice of chaining the boy continued until one day last week, it is alleged, when the neighbors complained to the officers. Jenkins said he had used a rope instead of a chain to keep the lad at home. He says his son is incorrigible and runs away from home. The officers are making a full investigation.

MEETING OF BOYS' CABINET

Plans Made By Junior Department of the Y. M. C. A.

The Boys' Cabinet of the Junior Y. M. C. A. held its regular monthly meeting last evening at the residence of Mrs. W. A. McGonagle. The following members were present: Charles McLennan, president, and Messrs. Fenton, Harbison, McLean, Burris, Jaques, Ketcham, Cant, Claypool, Hamblin, McGonagle, E. H. Harbison and Secretary N. D. McLeod. Dinner was served at 6:30, after which the regular business meeting was held. Fred Buck was appointed to take the place of one of the members who has left the city.

Reports from the reception, religious entertainment, gymnasium and music committees were heard and showed that efficient work had been accomplished during the past month. The report of the religious work committee showed that the Sunday meetings are being well attended, and it was decided to continue them through the summer and to make them especially attractive. The outings from now on will be a very important feature of the work. A committee has been appointed to decide upon the places and make arrangements for these trips.

A new departure this year will be the "marooning parties." As soon as the weather becomes warm enough the boys will go out Friday evenings, taking blankets and spending the night in the woods. All the trips will be in charge of the secretary of the boys' department, assisted by members of the outing committee.

Harold Cant reported for the entertainment committee, stating that full arrangements had been made for the entertainment tonight, and it was expected there would be a large crowd.

Plans are being made for the big summer camp, to be held for two weeks in August. This will be the event of the season, and already the boys are looking forward to it. The secretary has made arrangements with the railroad company for a private car, and if twenty boys are secured they will take the trip to the exposition at St. Louis. The car will be supplied with berths, and a cook will accompany the party.

Vernon Claypool, on behalf of the cabinet, expressed its appreciation to Mrs. Gonagle for her kindness in entertaining the members.

WEST DULUTH

There have been no new developments in the last few days in the matter of the proposed ferry line to connect Billings Park, Superior, and West Duluth, thus completing a loop around the two cities, but it is believed the line will be in operation within the next ten days or two weeks. One of the men who have been prominent in the movement to get the line established, in speaking relative to the matter today, said:

"There is no question but what the route will be established soon. The move has met with cordial support from all parts of both cities, especially from the residents of Billings Park and members of the West Duluth Commercial club.

"The only hitch appears to be the little matter of four blocks' walk between the end of the car line and the West Duluth dock, but this will make no material difference in the patronage accorded the line. It was suggested the West Duluth Commercial club that they ask the traction company to extend their line to the dock. The club could not well do this, however, for when the company put on the big cars it was agreed that they should be asked for no more favors for two years in regard to this line.

"Little trouble is anticipated as to the dock on the other side of the bay. The citizens generally have promised to help, and the council has been asked for aid. It will probably be necessary to construct a new dock on the Superior side, but it would not have to be a very elaborate affair.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

The funeral of Murdo McCaskill, who died Wednesday, will occur Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the Glen Avon church. Interment will be at Forest Hill cemetery. Clan Stewart will have charge of the services.

The entertainment of the West Duluth Social club, which was postponed because of a delay in the arrival of the books, will be held at Great Eastern hall on the evening of May 24.

Mrs. John McDonald, of Central avenue, has returned from Saginaw, Mich., where she went several weeks ago with Mr. McDonald to attend the funeral of the latter's father.

The meeting of the West Duluth Commercial club this evening will be more in the line of a social session and general smoker than a business meeting. It is planned to make the meetings as attractive to members as possible, and with this end in view it was decided last week to in the future make more of a social feature of them.

Steven Barrigan has returned from California, where he has been for his health during the winter months.

Mrs. Sarah Derrig, wife of Michael Derrig, 220 Fifty-first avenue west, died early last evening at the family residence. The funeral will be held Monday morning from the St. James Catholic church. The deceased, who was a woman about 45 years of age, leaves a husband and three children, Peter P., Anthony A. and Mary E., all of whom reside in Duluth.

For rent, No. 4827 West Fifth street; all conveniences. W. B. Getchell.

Plans for the annual banquet to be given by the alumni association of the Irving school were discussed at the business meeting held last evening at the school. The date for the event was not decided upon. Necessary arrangement committees were appointed.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Irrigation Funds Badly Needed In North Dakota.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—Gen. E. A. Williams, president of the North Dakota Irrigation association, has made another appeal to citizens to help out the movement. There is no state engineer, and in view of the present condition of finances, Governor White refuses to appoint one. There will be a meeting of engineers from all states interested in irrigation, at Salt Lake, on Tuesday. North Dakota will have no official to send, but an effort is being made to have Professor Chandler of the state university go as a representative of the association.

The university club has elected D. B. Holt, president; W. R. Tillotson, first vice president; E. D. Angell, second; R. F. Griggs, secretary; E. C. Watkins, treasurer.

The police arrested William Davey on the charge of stealing a pair of trousers containing a sum of money. The complaint was made on the testimony of Hank Murray, who failed to make good on the stand. Davey was discharged. The matter was more fully investigated and it was discovered that Murray himself was the thief. He confessed and was sent to jail for fifteen days.

There is a building boom in Fargo, and an unusually large number of residences are being erected. Most of the new buildings will be used for permanent homes by the owners.

Dickinson—The president has appointed Alex McGillvray registrar and Leslie A. Simpson receiver of the newly created land office at Dickinson. The office will be opened on July 1.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Mitchell—Mitchell's corn palace has been started for the fall of 1904 by the appointment of the committee to have charge, L. O. Gale, who has been at the head of the enterprise for fourteen years, is the president; D. W. Burright, secretary, and William M. Smith, secretary. The other members of the committee are: Robert Burns, S. H. Scallin, J. E. Smith and Dr. R. F. Dundass. The dates selected are from Sept. 26 to Oct. 1 inclusive. It is the intention to wake every effort to secure Sousa's band, and if a date cannot be arranged to accommodate the great bandmaster, Sorrentino's Italian band, which made such a hit last year, will be re-engaged.

Huron—The funeral services for Miss Grace Shaw took place from the family residence, the attendance being very large. Rev. F. H. Richardson, of the Baptist church, delivered the sermon. Miss Shaw died early Tuesday morning of blood poisoning, following an illness of three weeks. She was a teacher in the city schools, but resigned a month ago to prepare for her marriage to Reese Sebree, of Pierre.

Canton—At the meeting of the city council, applications for saloon licenses were presented by John H. Webb, W. E. Bottes, M. E. Odegaard, E. C. Warner and Olof Hilstad. One of the establishments is backed by the Yankton Brewing company at Sioux Falls. A hearing on the petitions will be had on the 23rd.

Two new telephones companies have been organized in this city, and at the meeting of the council each applied for a franchise to build a local exchange. One is known as the Mutual Telephone company, headed by C. H. Cassill, T. H. Helgerso, J. G. Laxson, A. B. Carlson, F. T. Cuthbert and others. The other is the Gate City Telephone company, which is backed by A. O. Rodolph and others. It is understood that the Mutual will if its franchise is allowed, build an extensive country as well as city exchange.

Centerville—The board of education has selected the following teachers: Superintendent, Ernest D. Ede; high school principal, Agnes Jones; department of Latin and English, Marie Bryant, of Vermillion. For the grades, Bessie Fletcher, Grace Wynn and Pearl Eicher have been selected. The remainder of the corps will be chosen at the next meeting.

Yankton—August Mauksch has won a $700 engine offered by an Ohio paper for the closest guess on the number of kernels of wheat in a bushel.

Flaxton—Otto Sibb, a farmer, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head. He made an unsuccessful attempt by cutting his throat with a razor. He was despondent over farming operations.

WILL INVESTIGATE DEATH THOROUGHLY.

New York, May 13.—Although the police express the conviction that Little Josephine McCahill fell into the chimney where her body was found last night and died from starvation, it is probable that the case will be thoroughly investigated by the coroner. The child's mother and friends of the family advance the theory that Josephine was lured away and murdered by a strange man and that her body was jammed down the flue to conceal the crime.

the other things, Alice MacLean and her mother had, it was whispered about, gone-new imported gowns. It was also whispered that the MacLean diamonds had been newly and fashionably set, for the lady of the house, and that her daughter would dazzle beholders with a necklace of fine pearls. Envious folk said the pair were bent on outshining Miss Bixby, the heiress—just as they had been saying all along, there was a social duel between the two young women for the first place in Capt. Redmond's regard. The poet was no sort of makeweight to the captain—it had been understood that he was bound hand and foot to the Bixby chariot. He was thin and lank, with a washed-out color scheme, but half the girls in Manorton thought him wonderfully distinguished looking. Bernice was not of their number. She was, you see, a heterodox young person, who thought manliness the properest attribute of a man.

Possibly that was because she was herself so feminine, withal a beauty. It was, for the most part, beauty unadorned. She was nearly as poor as she was pretty, and well bred—her great-grandfather had founded Maronton, to say nothing of being governor of the state—then all down the line there were judges, generals and learned men, entitled to write half the letters of the alphabet after their names. They had been rich, too, these ancestral dignitaries, but somehow the money had all slipped away before Bernice, the last of the Lyndons, was born. She had known nothing but saving and contriving, sparing here against a modest outlay yonder, although in some fashion her mother had managed to keep her from being left out of things.

Commonly the make-shifts did not daunt the girl. She had a merry heart and a brave one—brave enough to laugh at her own locks. It may well be that the fact of having three beaux to any other girl's one had something to do with the laughter. In spite of it, however, in spite of all her humorous philosophy, she found herself crushed at the thought of going to the MacLean's in a dancing frock—her only one—that had seen hard service through two preceding winters.

There you have a root of the inspiration. Memory also had something to do with it. When she had called on Miss Bixby talk had somehow drifted to miniatures—the heiress had dilated upon her own collection of them, airily naming prices of this or that specimen in a way that made Alice MacLean turn green with envy. They were astounding prices to Bernice's simple mind—five hundred for a Melbourne and double that for unpronounceable foreign masters. But she had not remembered then the two miniatures stowed at the very bottom of her rusty treasure box, one a beauty in stays and stomacher, with a long curl lying on her bare bust, the other a young fellow in powder and ruffles, with just a glimpse of velvet coat and flowered satin waistcoat.

Bernice had played dolls with them in her solitary childhood—they were not family portraits—indeed, there was a mystery behind them. They had been found among the effects of a great uncle who, straying into the big world, suddenly died there. He had been an artist, after a sort, but the miniatures were not his handiwork. There was nothing to explain his possession of them—for long they were kept in state, in hope that a claimant would arise. Then they fell to be parlor ornaments, and later to the estate of playthings for a lonely little girl. The little girl had grown big, had a sharp twinge at the thought of parting with them—but she was young and craved the things moral to youth.

All things seemed to work together for her desperate purpose. She would never think of selling the miniatures in Manorton—not even supposing a purchaser could be found. She must go to the city—and opportunity offered. There were still three shares of railway stock in the family—the dividends indeed were almost certain income. And once a year the ownership gave one a right to ride free to town. Bernice had been there twice in all her life, albeit it was less than fifty miles away. So her heart was in her mouth as she whirled away on the early train—in fact, she was half way before she took note of the fact that Capt. Redmond was a fellow passenger—also that he was looking at her rather wistfully.

"Which is worst—to be poor or too rich?" Bernice asked him abruptly as he sat down beside her. He smiled quizzically and murmured: "Ask something easy, please! Can you conceive of anybody's ever being too rich?"

"N-o-o! Not for themselves. But they can easily be too rich for—the rest of us," Bernice said, reflectively. Redmond bowed. "You have said what I've felt this long time," he answered. "A captain's pay would not seem such beggary if one didn't now and then rub elbows with millionaires."

"Millionaires lack one thing—the fun of wishing for things, all the while knowing they can never get them. I wonder if it is not tiresome to have all you want—and more!" Bernice speculated.

Redmond laughed gayly. "I wonder," he said, "what has set your mind upon such problems. It seems ever so much more natural that you should be speculating as to the latest thing in party frocks."

Bernice shook her head at him. "I never suspected you of clairvoyance!" she said. "Really, Capt. Redmond, I am thinking of party frocks. I want a new one O dreadfully!—what is more, I mean to have it—if these old friends of mine will fetch the price."

"They ought to do more than that," Redmond said after a look at the miniatures. He raised them at arm's length, viewing them with his most critical air. "I think—I know almost—they are very fine," he went on. "Indeed, they seem to me genuine Malbones—but unluckily, I am no judge."

"I am—in a way," an old man with very white hair, who sat back of him said, holding out his hand as he spoke. Redmond unhesitatingly gave him the pictures, saying under breath to Bernice: "He is Judge Chester—the king of all the collectors." So Bernice sat with her heart fluttering madly while the king of collectors turns the miniatures over and over, and at last pulled out a magnifying glass, and made a minute inspection of them.

"I will gladly pay a thousand dollars for the pair," he said at last, handing back the two ebony frames. "But my advice is that you first go and see Sylvester—it is likely he may offer more—"

"He will not have the chance," Bernice said, impulsively. "I can't take your offer, either—it seems like highway robbery—"

"That is my own affair, young lady," Judge Chester said, smiling almost genially. "Though the pictures are not authentic Malbones, they were done by somebody quite his equal."

"I had rather take a hundred—and find out this story," Bernice said, plaintively. After that she remembered nothing very clearly until she found herself home again with a great litter of parcels round about her, yet her purse still crammed with gold and bank notes. Her frock was alike the admiration and the despair of all the other girls at the party. To a woman they vowed it subjugated Capt. Redmond. Bernice and the captain knew better. They were married the next autumn—and then only Bernice discovered that she had made a great catch in point of money. Judge Chester was Redmond's uncle and godfather, and certain to leave him a fortune—all the more certain because he approved highly of Bernice. But he would not give back the miniatures—not even as a wedding present—saying with a twinkle of the eyes: "You can wait and inherit them."

OBJECTION RAISED

Baseball Playing In the Streets Must Be Stopped.

Police Arrest Two Boys and Sharp Warning Is Given.

Boys who play ball on the streets in the central part of the city are apt to find themselves in trouble with the police hereafter.

During the past few days many complaints have been received from residents on West Second street of the numerous exhibitions of the national game which were in progress in the middle-of-the-road. The residents complained that windows were broken and that the nuisance had become unbearable.

Yesterday afternoon an officer visited the scene and interrupted a game by arresting Bruce Wellington and Stanley Robinson, two youths about 15 or 16 years of age. The rest of the boys escaped.

A charge of disorderly conduct was placed against them and they were arraigned before Judge Windom in the municipal court this morning. They both pleaded guilty to the charge, and the court, after giving them a severe lecture and a warning that if arrested again they would be dealt with sternly, released them under suspended sentence.

The police were loath to take any steps to interfere with the boys' sport until forced to do so by the many complaints received from the district between First avenue west and Third avenue west on Second street. This portion of the street has been turned into a baseball field every evening this spring and the annoyance and expense from broken windows has caused frequent complaints.

"The street is no place for baseball to be played," said Chief Troyer this morning, "and wherever complaints are made by the residents of the locality these games will be stopped. While the boys should have their sport they have no right to destroy property and make themselves a nuisance to the neighborhood. There are plenty of vacant lots about the city which the boys can use in their sport without danger of breaking windows, or disturbing people with their noise."

GRASSY SPOTS FOR VISITORS

No "Keep Off the Grass" Signs at World's Fair.

St. Louis, May 13.—There will be no signs at the World's fair warning visitors to "keep off the grass." The inviting grassy spots and shady nooks may be sought out and enjoyed by tired visitors and guards will not interfere. Some especially prepared lawns will be closed to the public, but generally speaking the plots of grass will be of free access. The embargo against smoking has also been lifted, and the male visitors who enjoy puffing the fragrant weed while traversing the ivory city avenues, will be permitted to do so, but no smoking will be allowed inside any of the buildings.

The German section in the palace of education was formally opened today. The ceremonies were brief, consisting solely in the reception of invited guests, among them being the trustees of Washington university, Professor F. Louis Soldan, superintendent of public schools of St. Louis, and other educationla officials. The guests were received by Commissioner General Lewald, Assistant Commissioner General Relieff and Count Limburgstrum, superintendent of the German educational section.

Cuba's exhibit, in the palace of liberal arts, was completed today. The display consists of photographs, the products of printing, musical instruments, chemicals, models, etc., and forms an interesting part of the many foreign displays in the liberal arts building.

Former Queen Liliuokalani of Hawaii and her party, including her adopted son, Prince Kalanianole, and his wife, departed today for San Francisco. The queen and princess will proceed directly to Honolulu, but Prince Kalanianole will return to the East and will probably visit the exposition.

Newberry — The Dannaher Hardwood Lumber company has a force of 100 men cutting the right-of-way preliminary to the construction of a railroad from McMillan to its hardwood timber lands in Lakefield township.

Manistique—The Manistique, Marquette & Northern car ferry, which has been undergoing repairs for nearly thirty days at South Chicago, is back on her route between Manistique and Northport again. She was considerably damaged during February, when it was necessary to force her through 30-inch ice.

W. L. Orr, a meat dealer at Manistique, has left for Midway, between St. Paul and Minneapolis, for the purpose of purchasing three or four carloads of cattle. One car will be fat cattle for immediate slaughter and the remainder will be placed on grazing land. Last year Mr. Orr had a large herd on the same lands and handled the cattle at a profit.

Sault Ste. Marie—Charles A. Laurier, Canadian immigration agent at the Soo, states that the month of April was an exceptionally good one for his business. There were 127 people who purchased tickets through him for the Canadian Northwest, taking with them a total of $32,360. The office is daily visited by people desiring information relative to the Northwest, and Mr. Laurier is kept busy in answering questions relative to the country.

Munising—Professor O. La Bounty has been re-engaged as superintendent of schools at Munising for another year at an increase of $100 in salary. His salary for next year will be $1200. Miss Elizabeth Cox, of Munising, formerly of Ishpeming, has been appointed teacher of music and drawing in the Crystal Falls schools.

MADISON RACE

Duluth Will Have Only Outside Crew In Contest.

Three University Crews Will Compete Against Zenith City.

Captain Mahoney, of the Duluth Boat club, has been notified that the university of Wisconsin will probably have three eights at the regatta, at which the Duluth eight is to contest. Cornell will not be represented, so the Madison boys will have their 'varsity, second 'varsity and freshmen eights in the trials.

The difficulty about getting other college crews in the contest is owing to the date, June 9. It is on this date that the final examinations of a great many of the colleges take place, which prevents their men from attending the event, either as spectators or participants.

The local contingent has been notified by the agent of the Omaha road, George M. Smith, that if 100 people can be interested in the event sufficiently to go to the trials, the Omaha will run a special train to Madison and return to carry them. This would give the crew and its friends a good train service.

ADAMS' GIRLS QUIT SOCIETY

The Daughters of the Policy King Are Heartbroken.

Newport, R. I., May 13.—Heartbroken over the refusal of the state board of parole to pardon their father, Mrs. Robert Lees Armit and her sister, Miss Ida Adams, daughters of the policy king, Al Adams, who have been occupying a pretty cottage on Narragansett avenue, Newport, will leave there and go to Carmel, Putnam county, N. Y., where Mrs. Armit owns a country home. There, with her mother, Mrs. Adams, they will live in retirement until their father is released.

For nineteen months the Adams sisters have been living in Newport. For a long period they occupied a cottage on Cliff avenue. They have lived a quiet life, takign no part in the gayeties of the place in the summer. They are greatly liked by the townspeople. They have avoided public entertainments, but Mrs. Armit has been seen every day on her big black horse, which she rides for hours through the surrounding country.

Mrs. Armit is considered one of the best horsewomen in Newport, and has taken a great deal of pleasure in this exercise, but caused the determination to seek a retreat until their father is freed, when they will leave with him for Europe.

When seen in the Warren cottage in Newport, Miss Adams expressed the feeling of the family.

"The decision of the board of parole was a great disappointment to us," she said. "We were so sure he would be home soon. I don't know what we can do now to effect father's release before the expiration of the full term set; that we have left wholly to our lawyer."

There is but little hope for the family that Al Adams will be released before the expiration of his term. His sentence was for "not less than one year, nor more than one year and nine months." The board of parole listened to all that Adams had to say as to why he should be released, but the testimony of the prison officials, who had access to all Adams' mail, rendered his appeal hopeless.

It was said they were convinced that Adams still keeps up his connection with two gambling houses in New York, and this was sufficient to kill his chance of parole.

DIETZ STILL HOLDS OUT AGAINST ATTACK

Has Secured a Fresh Supply of Ammunition From Bayfield.

Hayward, Wis., May 13.—Deputy Sheriff Giblin returned last night from the scene of the conflict, where the desperado, Dietz, holds forth. Mr. Giblin says it is almost impossible to get Dietz alive, as he is entrenched behind the locks of the dam with a commanding view of the surrounding Dietz has, he said, a fresh supply of ammunition from Bayfield, thus enabling him to hold out for a long period.

The lumber company has abandoned the drive at Cameron dam and discharged its men, thus taking quite a force away from the siege. Sheriff Peterson and a few deputies now only remain upon the scene.

Mr. Giblin's story of how he and his deputies were ambushed by Dietz puts the latter in a desperate light. As the party, including Elliott, was approaching the dam, Dietz and another man, disguised with blackened faces and hands, stepped from behind a tree and began firing at them. One bullet passed through the hat of the driver, momentarily stunning him, and he fell out of the wagon, while their team took fright and ran.

Deputies Giblin and Elliott spent the night ten miles below their objective point, but returned next day to the lumber camp in sight of the dam. While they were eating dinner with the driving crew, Giblin said, Dietz fired through the window of the camp and struck a man by the name of Tracy, shattering the bone of his left arm. Another shot grazed the throat of William Brumbley. A few shots were returned by the deputies, and they also express the opinion that Weisenbach, the settler aiding Dietz, is seriously wounded, if not killed.

Barron, Wis., May 13.—John Dietz of Thornapple dam, who has sprung into notoriety the past few days for the reported holding at bay and shooting of officers while resisting arrest, writes to his brother, W. W. Dietz, of Rice Lake, Wis., the following letter, which seems to contradict the published statement of reckless shooting from ambush of the Sawyer county officers:

"Thornapple, Wis., May 11, 1904.—W. W. Dietz, Rice Lake, Wis.: Dear Brother—The guerrilla band are here from Hayward in full force making threats to shoot me and armed to the teeth. They think they will get revenge for the part I took in the election two years ago. They claim to have a bench warrant for my body, dead or alive, but have not tried to serve it. This is a nice state of affairs for I have not done a thing, only to post a notice for the company not to trespass. J. F. DIETZ."

A request from friends of Dietz was last night sent to Governor La Follette asking that he take a hand in the matter and guarantee protection to the hunted man.

JAPANESE TORPEDO BOAT SUNK BY STRIKING MINE

This would make Japanese influence over the emperor supreme.

The Japanese merchants, soldiers and coolies are becoming arrogant and the Koreans are subordinated and helpless. The Japanese have established a naval base at Port Lazaref on Broughton bay, a short distance north of Gensan. The entrance of Port Lazaref is defended by mines.

The Russian squadron at Vladivostok is practically bottled up by the Japanese fleet. Japanese scouting vessels are watching the harbor.

It is asserted here that only one division of the second Japanese are landed on the Liao Tung peninsula and it is asserted that the rest of this army will go ashore at Taku Shan.

JAPS SEND SCOUTS

To Watch Anticipated Flanking Movement of Russians.

Seoul, Thursday, May 12.—It is asserted here that the Japanese garrisons betwen Ping Yang and Wiju have sent scouting parties through the country east of Cha-Syong, the extreme right of the Japanese forces on the Yalu river, in anticipation of a Russian flanking movement. The Japanese authorities here consider it fortunate that the Cossack raiders who passed around further east, did not do more damage than they did.

The Japanese first army having entered Manchuria, the entire control of Korea will shortly be given to Gen. Haraguchi, the Japanese commander here. A military depot will be established at Seoul.

Infantry pioneers and officers of the reserves have left Seoul for Chinampo, where they will strengthen the line beyond Ping Yang. Further Japanese forces are expected here to strengthen the garrison, which hitherto has been constantly changed. Troops are being sent to guard the South Fusan railroad line. The report that the Korean ministers, who resigned May 11, because the emperor censured them for neglect of their duties, have withdrawn their resignations, is confirmed.

RUSSIANS' FAULT

That the Japs Fired on Red Cross Train.

Tokio, May 13—The assertion that the Japanese troops had violated the Red Cross rules as provided by the conventions of Geneva and The Hague, by firing on a train of wounded at Polandien, about forty miles north of Port Arthur, on May 6, has been proven to have no foundation in fact. On the contrary, according to an investigation made by the military authorities, at the request of Minister of Foreign Affairs Komura, if there was any violation of the rules upon the occasion mentioned, the guilt must be charged to the Russians themselves and not to the Japanese. The officers in command of the Japanese column advancing on Polandien report that when approaching that place on May 6 they discovered a train moving northward from the direction of Port Arthur, which bore none of the marks required by the Red Cross, and had Russian troops on board, which opened fire, to which the Japanese promptly responded. Suddenly the train stopped and displayed the Red Cross flag. The Japanese troops immediately stopped firing and moved forward to investigate, when suddenly the train started ahead full speed and escaped.

THE RUSSIAN LOAN.

St. Petersburg, May 13.—The Official Messenger this morning gazettes a ukase from the emperor and a notice from the minister of finance with regard to the issuance of bonds of the nominal value of $160,000,000 to run five years from May 14, 1904, bearing interest at 5 per cent, to be paid semi-annually. The bonds are to be of the denominations of $100 and $1000, and are to be issued through the banks of Paris and the Netherlands, the Credit Lyonnais and Hottinguer & Co., at Paris. If further loans are floated before the bonds mature, it is stated that holders of these bonds will be given preference of subscription in such loans.

An authorized statement accompanying the ukase says that the outbreak of the war found Russian finances flourishing. There was an available surplus of $66,000,000, which was doubled by a reduction in the budget expenses. Altogether, the war found $150,000,000 in the exchequer, which was considered to be insufficient. Prudence dictated that early preparation be made to meet the heavy expenses. The imperial treasury had $422,500,000 gold in reserve May 6 to cover $322,500,000 paper in circulation, thus enabling Russia to issue another $250,000,000. This would have permitted her to meet the war expenditure without having resort to a foreign loan, but the minister of finance deemed it advisable to avoid recourse to measures which, attractively simple, would yet be likely to exhaust the last resources of the country, a step to be averted during the war.

The comparatively high per cent is compensated for by the shortness of the term of the bonds, which will enable the Russian government to resort to conversion of them after five years, when the present political difficulties are over.

INTERNAL SITUATION

Rome, May 13.—A secret report received from St. Petersburg depicts the internal situation of Russia as becoming most serious as regards the preservation of the present institutions, the military failures in the far East having strengthened the opinion that the evils are due to the present organization of the country in which a change is necessary. The hope is expressed that the emperor himself seeing the danger, will be induced to grant the country a constitution, in which event it is asserted the enthusiasm of the people will become so great as to render it possible to raise an army and collect the means necessary to defeat Japan. Otherwise, the report says, it is believed all the efforts made at St. Petersburg will remain futile, as besides the war in the far East Russia will be obliged to face a latent if not an open revolutionary movement at home, depriving her of the assistance of the most progressive elements of the empire, such as the Poles and Finns.

DEATH OF A BRITISHER

In Colorado Brings Forth Some International Correspondence.

Washington, May 13.—The British government has become involved in the labor troubles in Colorado. The government makes it a point to look after the humblest British subject, so when it happened that in the troubles at Telluride, Lancelot Collins, a British and a non-union miner, was killed by strikers, as it was alleged, the nearest British consul, at Denver, started an investigation and reported the case to the British embassy here. Sir Mortimer Durand, finding that one of the allegations was that the man was killed for lack of proper protection by the authorities, called the attention of the state department to the matter. The department in turn forwarded the ambassador's note to the governor of Colorado, and the latter has now explained that, owing to the existence of martial law in Telluride county, it is not possible to make the legal investigation required to develop a satisfactory answer to the British note. It is expected that further proceedings will be taken when the labor troubles in Colorado are at an end, and if it should appear that the British complaint is well founded, an application will be made to congress by the state department for a suitable indemnity for the killing of Collins.

COLD-BLOODED MURDER.

Frenchman Brutally Kills His Brother In Alberta.

Winnipeg, Man., May 13.—One of the most cold-blooded murders that has ever occurred in Alberta has just come to light here. About 5:30 Wednesday morning Francois Marrel, a Frenchman, went to his brother's ranch near here and it is believed murdered his brother John. The murderer used an axe while Jonn was asleep and his brain was scattered all over the bed. From evidence secured by the police it appears that Francois after killing his brother, threw the body out of the window and then carried it to a nearby ranch, where he threw it in three feet of water with the face downward. He then returned to the house and turned the mattress upside down. The body of the murdered man was found in the creek by Mine Physician Richardson, who immediately started the officers on the trail. The supposed murderer was found in a town hotel and is now locked up in the barracks.

POWELL ARRESTED.

Charged With Immoral Conduct With Young Girl.

Dover, Del., May 13.—Alfred M. Powell, husband of Mary E. Powell, who was sentenced to imprisonment for life for the murder of Estelle Albin, their foster-daughter, was arrested yesterday on a charge of immoral conduct with Georgiana Ford, a 14-year-old girl employed on the Powell farm. The girl was an important witness at the trial of Mrs. Powell. The maximum penalty for the charge against Powell is seven years imprisonment and $1000 fine. Powell declares he is innocent.

The prosecution in the murder trial charged Mrs. Powell with having committed the crime through jealousy, owing to Powell's misconduct with Miss Albin.

A Sure Thing.

It is said that nothing is sure except death and taxes, but that is not altogether true. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is a sure cure for all lung and throat troubles. Thousands can testify to that. Mrs. C. B. Van Metre, of Shepherdtown, W. Va., says: "I had a severe case of Bronchitis and for a year tried everything I heard of, but got no relief. One bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery then cured me absolutely." It's infallible for Croup, Whooping Cough, Grip, Pneumonia and Consumption. Try it. It's guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottles free. Reg. sizes 50c, $1.00.

BALLOON BLOWS UP.

Paris, May 13.—A balloon belonging to Capt. Surcouf came down in the Place d'Aumensil yesterday afternoon and the wind drove it into the narrow entrance of a street. A moment later it came in contact with the side of a house. A flame issued from the envelope and then a violent explosion followed, sheets of flame from which penetrated the open windows of the building. Eight occupants of the house were burned or otherwise injured, two severely. The aeronaut was not hurt. The explosion caused a panic in the crowd watching the descent, and a number of persons received slight injuries.

SIX WEEKS SHORT

Season of Coal Shipments Already Cut Down Considerably.

Not Much Danger But That Enough Will Come.

The persons in charge of the various coal docks in the local harbor figure that as compared with last season, there has been a loss of about six weeks in the coal receipts by boat from below.

The delay in coal receipts, it is claimed, does not necessarily mean that there will be less coal brought to the head of the lakes this season for distribution, in fact, it is expected that they will be just as heavy as they were last season providing there are no further unlooked for delays, and after the present labor troubles have been adjusted.

The season of 1903 was a record breaker in receipts in the Duluth-Superior harbor. The receipts of soft coal were 9,531,212 tons as compared with 2,382,803 tons in 1902, and the hard coal receipts were 997,773 tons, as compared with 290,736 tons in 1902.

With all the additional new dockage last season the coal companies are kept busy taking care of the increased receipts.

Thousands of dollars worth of improvements and extensions have been made during the past winter at a great many of the docks with a view of facilitating the unloading process this season, in anticipation of heavy coal receipts.

It is claimed that the outlook for the coming year shows that the companies will need fully as much, if not more coal, this year, than last, and the delay at the beginning of the season only means that the volume of coal brought up the lakes will be larger after the movement is started.

Some of the up-bound lumber boats are being loaded with coal, several having been consigned to Ashland, and it is likely that the coal companies, if they find it necessary, will avail themselves of other boats in the lumber trade coming up here for cargoes.

So far as the present supply of coal on the docks is concerned, there is said to be a shortage in some sizes while there is still plenty of coal to be had in other sizes. The first cargoes are likely to be of the size coal most needed at the present time so that any shortages that may exist are not likely to be of long duration.

The fire which started in the soft coal pile on the Y. & L. dock in Old Superior, last fall burned all winter and has not yet subsided. During the winter several thousand tons of coal have been destroyed and where there were huge piles of the fuel when the boats ceased running last winter, there are now reduced piles of ashes.

A coal dock fire is one of the hardest kind of fires to fight, in fact, the ordinary methods of fire fighting have no effect on the smoldering piles. They may be drenched for days or weeks with water, but the fire will burn steadily from underneath. The only successful methods have been found in the isolation of the coal piles containing fire from the uninjured coal. Those isolated will then burn themselves out, though it may take a long time. In such cases immense damage is often done to the flooring of the coal docks. At the Y. & L. dock, however, which was leased from the Northern Pacific company, the floor of the dock was filled in with concrete a few years ago when the dock was remodeled, so that the dock is practically uninjured. The fire is confined to the several piles at the outer end of the dock.

The new unloading system at the immense docks of the Northwestern Coal company, on Superior bay, has been completed and the apparatus has been successfully tested during the past week.

The unloading apparatus installed when the dock was built two years ago was found too slow and inadequate and the lifts and travelers were entirely remodeled during the past winter. Clam shell buckets are used and the motive power is electricity.

Whooping Cough.

"In the spring of 1901 my children had whooping cough," says Mrs. D. W. Capps, of Capps, Ala. "I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with the most satisfactory results. I think this is the best remedy I have ever seen for whooping cough." This remedy keeps the cough loose, lessens the severity and frequency of the coughing spells and counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. For sale by all druggists.

CHILD FOUND IN CHIMNEY

Mystery In Death of Little Six-Year-Old Girl.

New York, May 13.—Wrapped in rags in the top of a chimney at her home, in Third avenue, the body of Josephine McCahill, 6 years old, who has been missing since May 2, was found last night. It was necessary to tear away part of the masonry to release the body. It is thought that the body, which was cut and mutilated, was placed there within a day or two.

The McCahill case has attracted much attention, the belief being that the child was kidnapped. Rewards aggregating $350 were offered by various persons for her recovery and mass meetings were held to consider plans for conducting the search.

Yesterday a letter was received by the child's mother, which read:

"May 9, 1904.—Dear Friend: As you made such a fuss I was compelled to kill Josie. If you give $50 to a boy I will send, you can have the body. H. M."

"P. S.—Don't mind stories your hear."

The police regard this letter as the work of some heartless meddler.

After leaving her home, on May 2, to play in the street, the child was seen in Third avenue with a man, described as tall and dark. She had a bag of candy in her hand, but was crying. That is all the police have had to work on. Their search has proceeded on the belief that the man was an Italian and that the girl would eventually be found in one of the Italian colonies in this or some nearby city.

An examination of the body later disclosed that it was decomposed, but that it had not been mutilated. It has been learned that children of the neighborhood have been accustomed to hide in the chimneys while at play on the roofs and the police now believe the McCahill girl climbed on the chimney, fell into it.

Twice yesterday, before the body was found, a well-dressed young woman called at the McCahill home and said that she had had a presentment that the child would be found in the chimney. On her second visit she expressed surprise that a search of the chimney had not been made on her previous suggestion. She refused to give her name or address and the police are now trying to find her.

TROUBLE PATCHED UP.

Omaha, Neb., May 13.—The warring factions of the Bankers' Union of the World patched up their differences and the supreme officers opposing Dr. Spinney caused to be dismissed the injunction secured against him. The session yesterday was devoted to the revision of the by-laws, as ordered by the supreme court. This revision includes a section divesting the supreme president of power to order the payment of claims against the order. All money paid out in the future must be an order of the executive council.

ONE THIEF CAUGHT.

Deputy Does Excellent Work at Corliss, Wis.

Racine, Wis., May 14.—Thomas Burns, deputy sheriff of Racine county, battled with six desperate Chicago thieves yesterday, two miles south of Corliss, on the line of the Milwaukee road. They were robbing a freight car, and had piled up $3000 worth of silks, bolts of cloth, boots and shoes and other goods when discovered. The gang scattered in various directions.

Burns commenced shooting. Two men were seen to drop and it was supposed they were killed. One of them arose and disappeared, but the other was captured unhurt, brought to this city and lodged in jail. Trainmen, armed with hammers and iron bars, came to the rescue of Burns.

The man now in jail gave his name as George Mason, and made a confession, telling who his partners were, and that thousands of dollars' worth of goods had been stolen in the last few months.

MINISTERS IN AN AFFRAY

One Reverend Gentleman Fires Two Shots at Another.

Austin, Tex., May 13.—There was a shooting affray on the eastbound Texas & Pacific train coming into Texarkana yesterday, between Rev. J. B. Cranfill and Rev. S. L. Hayden. Cranfill fired two shots from a magazine pistol at Rev. Hayden, while Hayden was struggling for possession of the weapon. Neither shot took effect. The encounter occurred in the lavatory of the sleeper, on which both men were en route to the South Baptist convention at Nashville, Tenn. The Rev. Cranfill was arrested on his arrival at Texarkana and arraigned before Justice Henry on a charge of assault. He waived examination and was released on $1000 bond. Cranfill declined to make a statement. Hayden talked freely, giving the following account in substance:

"I did not know Mr. Cranfill was in the lavatory of the sleeper until I entered to make my toilet. Cranfill began to curse and abuse me in the most violent manner. He drew a pistol from his grip and pointed it at me.

"I seized the weapon by the barrel, and in the struggle two shots were fired before I got posession of the pistol and other passengers interfered, and their prompt action saved my life."

The encounter, it is alleged, grew out of past differences, legal and personal, between the two principals, Hayden was accompanied by his wife and daughter and Cranfill by a party of friends.

OBJECTIONS SURMOUNTED

A. M. Marshall Narrates How W. C. McClure's Remains Were Forwarded.

The following extract is from a letter just received by A. H. Comstock, from A. M. Marshall in Berlin, giving particulars of the sad death of W. C. McClure, which occurred in Vienna, Austria, on April 24th.

"I expected to get a letter off so it would go to you on the Deutschland, sailing April 28, but did not get the opportunity, but will now tell you of our sad experience in losing Mr. McClure, who died so very suddenly at Vienna, April 24. I cannot yet realize that he has passed away and we shall see him no more, as it was like lightning out of a clear sky. He was feeling in the best of health and spirits all the time on the whole trip, thoroughly enjoying himself; but Sunday the 24th, he felt not just himself and complained of a little indigestion. We were out riding in the afternoon and dining about six. Had tickets for the opera, but he decided not to go and Mrs. McClure remained with him, but he insisted upon his daughter going, as he was feeling better. We had never a thought but that it was an attack of indigestion, as he saw a doctor who examined him and assured him he was all right, but advised him to be moderate in his eating and smoking and not attempt too much, assuring him he was in good condition, etc. This was the same day he died.

"After returning from the opera at 9:30 his daughter, going to her room, found Mr. McClure reading the paper and her mother lying down. Within thirty minutes of this time, he was no more; life had departed. Such a shock to us all, and such a strain on poor Mrs. McClure, that we did not know what would be the result. A long and hard night for the mother and daughter, and my wife as well, as she was with them and I think there was no sleep for any of them.

"We left no stone unturned to try and leave the city in time to catch the first steamer, which was the Deutschland, sailing from Hamburg the 28th; in our own country a very simple matter to make such arrangements, but in a foreign country, it is another matter entirely, as so many formalities have to be complied with, which take time that it makes it exceedingly difficult and very uncertain until one is really on board of the steamer with the remains.

"Strong objections came from the railroad to carrying the body on their express trains, and permits must be had from the Austrian government, and the German as well, as the governments own the railroads and are in the hands of a directory, and authority must be had for a matter of this kind from the directory; and then German authorities are applied to in the same manner. As it is against the rule of the American-Hamburg line to take a corpse on their fast steamer Deutschland, we again met objections, after being assured by the assistant agent at Vienna that we would have no trouble. With the assistance and influence of our American ambassador, Bellamy Storer, at Vienna, and the help of our ambassador, Charlemagne Tower, we were able to accomplish the object, as they had influence, it seems, with this line, and we were just able to make connection at each transfer point.

"Mrs. McClure and daughter, when we left them, were bearing up as well as we could hope, and I trust they may have a smooth passage and reach the other side safely. Such a comfort to them to be able to go at once with the remains, and feel it is with them on the same boat, placed in a room by itself, covered by the American flag.

"Their son, Charles, they expect to meet when they land at New York. I had expected to return with them, and wired for passage and arranged to accompany them, but as J. B. Adams had fully decided upon returning, whether I went or not, I changed my plans, feeling it not necessary, and it seems best to remain and return with my family, sailing May 19 for home, which we shall be glad to see again."

Gets Prize Story.

In the May issue of The Rudder, the recognized authority on matter aquatic, a prize story by D. R. Smith, of this city, is published. The title is "How I Built My Boat, Ran and Handled Her and Put Her Out of Commission." It is an account of the manner of building a gasoline launch, of handling her in the water and of putting her away for the winter. The lines upon which the story was to be written were outlined by The Rudder, and Mrs. Smith got the prize. The issue was one devoted to "power boats" and contains articles by some of the leading authorities of the country.

Social, Musical and Art Circles.

The peace petition, which was started some weeks ago by Mrs. John Rockwell, has been completed and sent to Washington. The slips of paper bearing the names, numbering nearly 400, were fastened together in a circle with small bows, and a card attached bore the inscription, "Names of 384 women and children of Duluth. Minn., who would like to see the United States lead the nations in a movement for universal peace." The organizations represented among the names are the Y. W. C. A., the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., aid societies of the First Methodist, Asbury and Endion churches, the Saturday club and the Travel and Literature classes of the Twentieth Century club.

PROTECT THE ROBINS.

Audobon Society Anxious to See Them Saved.

The Audubon society of Duluth, which was organized here some months ago, hope to protect the birds of this locality not only by law, but by education, knowing that with knowledge of the birds and the benefit to mankind a greater portion of thoughtfulness and kindness will be given them. The robin is one of the most interesting of the birds here, one in which everybody has some little interest, if it is no more than that surviving from the days when the question, "Who killed cock robin," was an all-engrosing one.

The robin in most parts of the country is too common a bird to need an introduction to any one except an urbanite, says William Dutcher, chairman of the protection committee of the American Ornithologists union. However, even those who think that they have nothing to learn about the robin will be surprised how much of interest and value can be gleaned by a systematic study of the life history of this species during an entire year. Let this embrace notes on the migration, courtship, home building, food, both for young and adults, how long before young can care for themselves, how many broods in a season, habits after breeding season, etc. Such records will serve to remove any prejudices and give an amount of real pleasure that cannot be appreciated until realized by actual participation. Moreover, such a complete and intimate knowledge of a bird will excite a desire for facts regarding other species which can better be obtained by observation than from books, and thus the observer will soon be able to name all the common resident birds of his locality and know their relations to mankind. The more a person investigates nature the broader, fuller and more complete becomes his own life, and in proportion to his subjugation of nature is his own development, physically, mentally and morally.

Wherever the robin breeds within the confines of civilization, man is its friend, and a mutual attachment has grown up that borders on sentiment. The man extends his protection and the bird rewards by making his home almost under the same roof tree, displaying a confidence in his human brother that is begotten by lack of fear.

In the robin's home in the Southland all is different, for there no sentiment but that of gastronomics is displayed; the bird is simply a tender morsel to be made an integral part of a stew or a pie. In Central Tennessee are large tracts of cedars, the berries of which serve to attract myriads of robins in the winter. One small hamlet in this district sends to market annually enough robins to return $500, at 5 cents per dozen, equal to 120,000 birds. My informant naively says: 'They are easily caught at night in the roost in young cedars; we go to the roost with a torch and kill them with sticks, others climb the trees and catch the robins as they fly in." One of the officers of the Louisiana Audubon society furnishes the following information regarding robin slaughter in his own state: "They are commonly killed for home consumption and for marketing, a conservative estimate of the number killed annually being from a quarter of million in ordinary years to a million when they are unusually plenty. During the past winter one gunner killed over 300 robins in one day, and in one village in the state the boys and young men are vieing with each other for a record in robin killing, the present sscore being 200 birds in one day." Better by far sentiment than slaughter, as the one preserves and the other destroys what is of great value, as will be proven later.

THE GIRL IN GLASSES.

Uncharitable Comment By a Seattle Paper.

The Girl in Glasses is an optical error. This not Christian Science, but plain, every day sense, says the Seattle Daily Times. She not only sees through a glass darkly, but is herself seen, a distorted image sadly at variance with the reality.

She is the living exponent of topsy-turvydom. If you doubt it, make a casual test of her limitations. Her personality is the creation of the world's misunderstanding.

The eyebrows of the Girl in Glasses are a perpetual interrogation mark.

Have you ever encountered her on the street that she did not lift to yours an alert look of surprised defense? It says as plainly as a look can say that she does not know what it is all about, but that she is on her guard.

This is purely an acquired characteristic. It belongs to the type. She may not be in the least degree inquisitive or suspicious by nature, but glasses beget uncertainty and uncertainty surprise. Surprise is the first note of suspicion—and there you are! The Girl in Glasses may start in life with the utmost trust in her kind. She may be clinging and credulous by instinct. But no matter what her inherited traits of fond belief in man, the sinister influence of her glasses will inevitably turn her into a confirmed pessimist.

In the first place, she sees too much or too little of every one she meets. This has nothing to do with her prepossessions. It neither proclaims her too impetuous nor too blase. Her world is either magnified or diminished, according to te defect of vision to be corrected. The effect of her lens on the opposite sex, for instance, is apt to lead to embarrassing conclusions. How can she tell whether a man is greater or less than he seems—throughm her glasses? Matrimonially speaking, it makes her judgment bad.

Pitfalls of a less ethical description beset her every moment of the day. If she walks abroad she finds it impossible to guage distance correctly. Watch her descend the sairs. She will take each step as gingerly as a cat treading in water. Her natural impulse may be to plunge down that flight with all the reckless levity of youth. But glasses are a discourager of levity. She may be in reality as brave as a lion, but she will only succeed in exhibiting the valor of a mouse, for glases read cowardice.

The Girl in Glasses is apt to be hesitating in speech and manner. Again her "double eyes" are to blame. How can any one be decided when she is constantly in doubt of the evidence of her own senses?

She is a prolific maker of enemies, because she passes her best friends on the street with a blank stare of non-recognition. They look no further than the fact, and the Girl in Glasses acquires the reputation of a cad. Actuated again by the deceiving lens, she gives the "glad eye" to festive strangers and is dubbed a flirt.

Her gait—once more the glasses—partakes of wavering eccentricities. Whoever saw a girl in glasses who did not sway as she crossed a room? Her center of gravity is displaced and never finds itself. But ignorant gossips may suggest more potent influences. The Girl in Glasses in a hurry walks at an angle of forty-five degrees. Her head well advanced as if it overweighted her body, she is a study in feminine awkwardness.

Robbed of her right to grace, a coward by force of circumstances, made to appear a vacillating weakling in character, ungracious and suspicious in bearing, misinterpreting even the offices of cupid, the Girl in Glasses is the most handicapped of her sex. Constantly misunderstood, wounded in her tenderest sensibilities, reviled for her unintentional omissions and caricatured for her equally innocent faux pas, she goes through life the victim of her illusions. Only one ray of comfort illumines her dark horizon. She is multiplying so fast that presently the Girl in Glasses wil be as plentiful as the sands upon the sea shore. All womankind will, at the current rate of increase, be spectacled within a few years and we shall have reversion of type by force of glasses. Timid, narrow-minded and illogical feminity will succeed to the strenuous "newness" of today and science will say "I told you so."

THE EVENING STORY.

TREASURE TROVE.

By Martha McCulloch Williams

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Bernice had a sudden inspiration—she had been in despair since the invitation came. Mrs. MacLean's party was to be the event of Manorton—not only for this season, but for many others. It was not every day, nor every hostess that could show an heiress, an army officer and a post. Mrs. MacLean was the proud possessor of all three—naturally she yearned to have her world see them in all the glory of full canonicals.

Then, too, the supper and music were coming from the city—and there was to be a ball room quite apart from the parlors and their Louis Quartorze splendors. The ballroom, to be sure, had been meant originally for a hay loft—it was over the carriage house, so of undistinguished architecture. But crash upon the floor, flags and evergreens upon the walls, to say nothing of electric lights, put in specially for the occasion, would make it as festive as any heart or foot could desire. A covered passage had been built to it—that was indeed the first outward and visible sign Manorton got of the MacLean plans. The passage ran from the upper veranda, so was nearly level and long enough to afford a delightful promenade.

Certainly the MacLeans were not sparing money, although therefore they had had the name of being near, in spite of having so much to spend. Besides all

STOLEN BY GYPSIES

Eight Years Ago, Laura Nation Has Been Discovered.

Returned to Her Parents, But Identification Not Complete.

St. Joseph, Mo., May 13.—Lucy Cole was the name borne by a 10-year-old girl who was abandontd in Florence, Ala., by gypsies. She did not belong to them, but was picked up somewhere when she was 3 years old.

James W. Nation heard of the child and claimed her as his own. He says she was stolen from his home, which was then in Elwood, Kans., nearly eight years ago. He wrote to Florence a complete description of his child, including a sketch of a birthmark on her right hip. The description and birthmark tallied with Lucy Cole and she was sent to the Nations in St. Joseph.

Little Laura Nation, as she is now called, is having the time of her life. Cut off from children of her age all during the years she traveled over the country with the gypsies, she had little opportunity to indulge in childish pleasures. Now she has playmates in abundance and she is one of the most enthusiastic "mud pie" makers in the entire lot.

Her life at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Nation is a novelty to her. She soon made the acquaintance and gained the friendship of all the children in the neighborhood.

The Nation home is besieged with friends of the family, who wish to catch a glimpse of the long-lost child, but little Laura has no time to talk with them and chafes under the restraint when she was compelled to stay in the house for any length of time.

The more Mr. and Mrs. Nation see of the child the more they think she is their long-lost baby, but they will make no positive decision until the girl has been with them for some time.

"I can see a resemblance to the Nations in the child," said Mrs. Nation yesterday, "but I am not inclined to come to a hasty decision. The longer she is here the more we think she is our daughter and I hope that we may finally come to that decision. She will not talk very much about her past life, simply saying that she was stolen by gypsies. There have been so many people here all day that she is still excited and when things quiet down a bit she will probably talk more."

Mrs. Charity Nation, mother of Mr. Nation, who lives in Olathe, Kans., has come here at the request of her son. She is inclined to think that the child is little Laura.

"She has some of the Nation features," said Mrs. Nation, "and you can see a resemblance between her and the other children. She is awfully wild as a result of her life of the past few years, but she has a loving disposition and will grow up into a fine girl with the proper training. If my son and his wife should decide that she is not their girl, I shall try and get permission to take her home with me and bring her up as my own.'

The child at times insists that she is Laura Nation and at others says she is Lucy Cole.

Yesterday she was given a treat in the shape of ice cream. She had never tasted any before and did not know what it was. She has evidently been living on the plainest kind of food and most of the dishes she eats in her new home are revelations to her.

She seems perfectly happy and contented and has evidently taken a great liking to Mrs. Nation and the grandmother.

RICHEST MAN IN PANAMA

Is Dead—He Remained All His Life a Frenchman.

New Orleans, May 13.—Henry Ehrman, who recently died in Panama, was the richest citizen of that republic. He formerly lived in New Orleans.

Mr. Ehrman spent the greater part of his time in Paris, although he never failed to visit the isthmus at least yearly. In a recent letter, by Frederick Haskin, the celebrated American correspondent, an interesting account of Mr. Ehrman's life in Panama was published. Among other things, Mr. Haskin said:

"Panama's only millionaire is Henry Ehrman, who had just one American quarter when he landed on the isthmus, thirty-seven years ago. He has been a banker for many years, but made a good deal of money handling cigars in the early days. He added greatly to his large fortune when the French company was exploiting the canal. Considering that Mr. Ehrman has been so successful here, it is natural that he should be a great believer in Panama. He thinks it a health resort. He says he goes to Paris for pleasure, but must return to the isthmus for his health. He is a devoted family man, and is very fond of his brother, Felix, who is the practical head of his banking house, and who is also the American vice consul.

"The old gentleman spends much time sitting around the corridor of the hotel, which belongs to him. He thinks it is a fine place. One day he was in a very bad humor, and, when asked for an explanation, said: 'I have been insulted three times. First, a man insulted Felix. That was bad. Then he insulted me. That was bad, too. Then he insulted the hotel, and I had to put him out.' Mr. Ehrman was born in France, but lived for some time in Louisiana. The other members of his family are American citizens, but his explanation of why he has remained a French subject is: 'I don't think it is possible to make a good American out of a bad Frenchman.'"

DETECTING GUILT

Physician's Diagnosis Has Brought About Arrest of a Murderer.

Greeting to Priest Led to Capture of a Criminal.

Paris, May 13.—A distinguished surgeon, who was also a detective in embryo, was called to perform an operation upon a man who had been shot by an unknown assassin. The position of the man and the mystery of the shooting rendered the case notorious. The man was unconscious at the time of the operation, and nothing could be obtained from him. When the doctor examined the wound, he said to his assistant:

"A pistol has been fired at him by a person who is left-handed."

While he was explaining the reasons for his conclusion Mr. A——'s partner, a Mr. X——, entered the room. Something about his manner attracted the attention of the eminent surgeon, and he whispered to his colleague:

"If that man were left-handed I should at once suspect him of the crime."

The next instant he turned to X—— and said:

"Will you kindly hand me that lint?"

X—— did so, using his left hand. The man died. X—— was accused of the murder, and, upon being tried and condemned, confessed his guilt.

A dramatic example of a man's guilt being disclosed after the lapse of many years comes from the reign of Louis XIV. During the days of that monarch a brilliant abbe was one of a large party who had assembled on a certain occasion round the royal supper table. The abbe added to the interest of the evening by telling the adventures of a memorable career.

"I remember," said he, "well the first penitent who came to my confessional. I was young then, and little accustomed to hear the secrets of court life. The man was a murderer, who told me the story of his crime."

The abbe was pressed to tell the tale or to give a clew to the culprit, but he maintained a guarded silence. Presently in came one of the most trusted of all the monarch's favorites.

"Ah! M. l'Abbe," said he, recognizing an old friend. "Gentlemen," he continued, turning to the company, "I was the first penitent whom the abbe ever shrived, and I promise you when I told him my story he heard what astonished him." That night the nobleman was carried to the bastile, and the evidence of a crime committed thirty years before was complete.

Cigars and liquors vanished mysteriously from the shelves of a London restaurant. Watching seemed of no avail; the stock still disappeared. At last the detective came upon a broken piece of button. It was treasured, and a visit was planned to a man already under discreet surveillance. The suspect was wearing a coat which in one place had only half a button, and suspicion became a certainty in the minds of the officers, but they went to work with caution and unfolded their errand. The man laughed loudly.

"Think I've got light fingers, do they? You can search and welcome." But his mood changed and his face fell when a detective stepped across, and, producing the fragment of a button, matched it on his own garment. The transition from bravado to dismay was dramatic and ludicrous. Every pretense broke down. "All right," he muttered, and surrendered.

For a long while the parcels and trunks carried in the baggage cars of certain trains were tampered with. The detectives watched closely, but had no clew. When the train reached its journey's end and the cords and locks of the contents were missing. At last suspicion fell upon the brakeman, and it was decided to test him. On this particular night he was tempted to look into a large wooden package which wore the appearance of containing good things. By the aid of a screwdriver and a hammer he raised the lid of the crate and forced it half open. What was his amazement when he found it contained the detective, who sprang out and arrested him on the spot.

A number of petty robberies were traced to the factory worker, whose mode of entrance into the houses of her neighbors was by the cellar grates, so frequently left unfastened by the cottagers. As a rule, articles of clothing were carried away, these being discovered in various pawnshops, though money had been taken in individual cases. The most amusing part of the depredations was the manner in which the culprit was trapped in attempting to slide down a chute which gave entrance to the coal cellar she stuck fast and was obligingly helped out by a guardian of the peace, who had witnessed her attempts first to pull up the grate and then to squeeze through the aperture.

A story is told of a young man, the representative of a large firm, who carried a large sum of money with him, spending the night at a hotel in Pressburg, Vienna. As usual, he remained some time smoking in bed. Suddenly the burning cigar fell to the floor. He bent over to extinguish it, when he saw a hand projected from under the bed to put the cigar out. He lay awhile, and then, saying aloud, "How cold it is! I shall get my coat," he jumped out of bed, flew to the door and raised an alarm. The would-be robber was caught. He confessed he knew the occupant of the room had money, which he hoped to get while he slept. He had ben a fireman formerly, and could not resist the impulse to extinguish the burning cigar.

MEDERINE
CURES RHEUMATISM!

Shawano, Wis., March 30th, 1904.
MEDERINE REMEDY CO., Duluth, Minn.
Dear Sirs: A year ago last February I was taken with a most severe attack of Inflammatory Rheumatism, so that it was impossible for me to help myself. I called a doctor and he prescribed some medicine for me and I doctored with him for two months without any help. Then I went to taking patent medicin s but they did not help, and I was nearly discouraged, till finally I saw your advertisement and started to take MEDERINE. After I had taken three bottles I was able to work but I finished the whole course and am perfectly cured. If not it would have come back before this time. I most gladly recommend Mederine for Rheumatism. One of my children is taking Mederine for Eczema with great success.
Yours truly, A. O. ANTES, Shawano, Wis.

Mederine is sold at $1 per bottle or 6 for $5 by all dealers. Write for booklet.

SUBMARINE LOTS IN IOWA

Land at Bottom of Missouri Sold to Eastern Investors.

Council Bluffs, Io., May 13.—The "Lafayette addition" swindle is again being worked with marked success throughout the country, as is shown by deeds to lots "which lie at the bottom of the Missouri river, and that are again flooding the office of the county recorder." These deeds come principally from eastern cities where the sale of worthless river bed lots seems to be especially successful. The plat to the alleged addition was filed in 1890, and since that time there has been an annual crop of deeds sent here for record involving several hundred thousand dollars.

The latest victim seems to be B. T. Morris, of Laclede, Mo., who has just forwarded here for record a deed which states that he paid $18,000 for five lots in "Lafayette addition." The granter named in the deed is L. Thompson Bell, and it is provided that the deed be sent to R. F. Morris of Knightstown, Ind. The document is dated at York, Neb., May 3, 1903.

Another late victim is Thomas Starr of Muncie, Ind., who has purchased four lots of the river bottom, and was particular about having all the taxes paid that he might not lose his "valuable property."

To Mr. Starr, County Recorder Smith has written this painfully laconic letter:

"The fees for recording your deeds will be about 80 cents apiece, but your gold brick is not worth the price. There are no taxes due on the property in Lafayette addition for the reason that none have ever been assessed against it. The property all lies in the Missouri river five miles from Council Bluffs, and all of it is not worth the postage stamp you wasted when you wrote to this office."

The plat in Lafayette addition was filed for record in the spring of 1890 by an Omaha real estate agent, named Frank Jerome. He is supposed to have secured title to about forty acres lying in the Missouri river bed three miles southwest of the city through the fact that the tract was once dry land before the river changed its channel there during the famous flood of 1881. However, at the time the plat was filed there was not a foot of the alleged addition above water, and though the ancient deed to the land was regular it has not been included on the tax books of either Iowa or Nebraska for over 20 years.

Nevertheless, the plat was gotten up in due form and the addition laid out on paper as if it were a fashionable suburb of Council Bluffs and Omaha.

The forty acres were divided into sixteen blocks of thirty lots each, separated by broad avenues and boulevards. The avenues were named in honor of presidents of the United States, beginning with Washington and including Jefferson, Adams, Madison, Jackson, Lincoln, Garfield and Cleveland. Several "breathing spots" were also provided to avoid an overcrowded condition of the community under water.

With this addition as a basis, agents were set at work all over the country selling lots in the aristocratic suburb of Council Bluffs and Omaha, and these deeds continue in circulation without ceasing to the present day.

None of the swindlers has ever been brought to justice, and it is figured from the county record that they have acquired a fortune of several hundred thousand dollars during the 14 years of uninterrupted grafts.

CANNOT HAVE "ZOO."

Dubuque Has No Place to Start One.

Dubuque, Iowa, May 13.—Dubuque has many things to adorn its fair form, mainly the gifts of nature, but one thing she does not possess, and that is a zoo. There are some who think the city has such an attraction, but Mayor Berg declares he doesn't know whether he will transform Flatiron or Phoenix park into such a garden.

The search for the unknown haven of wild animals was started by a letter Mayor Berg received from Edward Pierce president of the National Bank at Sheldon, S. D. The letter was addressed to Board of Parks, Dubuque, Io.

There being no such body in this city the mayor took upon himself the authority of opening the communication. Much to his surprise he saw that the letter concerned buffalos—three of them, big ones—a male and two females. "What's that?" exclaimed the city's executive, "only cost $300." "Why," and then turning to Committee Clerk Lawler, he said, "John, write that man and tell him to send on those survivors of the great race of animals. Three thousand dollars are easy to get."

Then the question arose as to the place to put the animals and Mayor Berg was presented with an obstacle that was not looked for.

"I think it best that the communication be answered," said the mayor finally, "and Mr. Pierce informed that the city does not feel that at the present time the valuable sons of the West should be purchased. Another reason is the inability to secure a place where a zoo could be started."

FANS SEE NO GAME

Many Journey to Park Only to Be Disappointed.

Regular Season Opens Friday In Red River Valley.

The failure of the Superior team to arrive yesterday afternoon disappointed a large number of the fans, who journeyed to the park to witness the first game of the season between two of the Northern league teams. The telegram announcing that the Superior men would not arrive, was received too late to stop the crowd from going to the park and several hundred fans had a wild goose chase.

The postponed game will be played this afternoon, however, unless the rain interferes and makes the grounds unfit for play.

Noldin will pitch for Duluth.

All of the Northern league teams have been showing up well in practice and have been winning their games regularly. Duluth has a clean sheet up to the present time. Superior has been walloping La Crosse. Crookston has been showing up some of the teams down in Iowa and Southern Minnesota. Grand Forks has been taking the conceit out of the university of North Dakota boys, and Perry Werden's bunch has been doing things down at Eau Claire.

All of the Northern league teams are at home now, with the exception of Crookston and Winnipeg. The season will open one week from today with all of the teams playing in the Red River valley. The White Sox will leave next Wednesday night for Fargo to open the season with Perry Werden's bunch of pennant chasers.

It is likely that Bemidji will have at least ten of the Northern league teams during the coming summer. The little city has always been a good baseball town and a Sunday game there is good for 1200 to 1500 people almost any time. The schedule will probably be arranged so that some of the Crookston games can be played there, and if the attendance in any of the other cities in the league shows signs of falling off, Bemidji will see baseball at their expense.

Manager Cameron has a phenom which he is going to spring on the Northern league this summer. His name is Elkin and his position is in the box. Elkin is hailed as a wonder. He pitched last year for a little country school team down in the southern part of the state. He is a big strapping young farmer, but is said to have all kinds of speed and curves that are dazzlers.

Jimmy Foulkes has joined the Fargo team and will play with Werden's bunch again this year. He should be a tower of strength to the team.

Heatwole, asked Mr. Springer, Pierce's brother-in-law, to suggest to Mr. Smith a plan whereby Dunn was to be elected governor, Heatwole United States senator in place of Senator Clapp and Smith senator in place of Senator Nelson. If Mr. Smith considered the plan favorably, according to the story, Springer was to arrange for a conference between Heatwole, Dunn and Smith to make the deal.

Mr. Smith says that he is very sorry the names of Springer and Pierce have been disclosed, but now that they are known he states that they are the gentlemen through whom the proposal was made to him.

Pierce says that he never made any such proposal to Springer. Springer is dangerously ill at a sanitarium at Battle Creek, Mich.

There were no new developments yesterday in the tilt between Judge Collins of St. Cloud and Robert C. Dunn of Princeton. Judge Collins said that he would give out today his letter from James J. Hill replying to his inquiry as to whether the railroad magnate stated to Mr. Dunn that he had contributed from $30,000 to $40,000 to Judge Collins' campaign in 1894. The stenographers at the judge's headquarters were busy yesterday on a statement which it is presumed will be given out today with the letter from Mr. Hill. It is supposed also that Mr. Hill's letter to State Librarian E. A. Nelson will also be disclosed.

The Dunn managers have stopped talking but they appear in excellent spirits over the report of Public Examiner S. T. Johnson.

"You will notice that we are not wearing crepe," said Mr. Dunn yesterday. "If you should see the letters that I have received from Republicans in all parts of the state you would know that I have not lost any ground as the result of Sam Johnson's exposures. Scores of people have told me that the public examiner's report was the best thing that ever happened for me."

The Collins men take a different view of the situation, believing that the fight is now all over but the shouting.

"I am satisfied that Mr. Dunn has got his foot in it so deep that he will never get it out," said a Collins' manager yesterday. "People know now, if they never did before, that Dunn is Jim Hill's candidate."

Talk is rife in the Twin Cities on the advisability of brining out a new candidate for governor in place of both Mr. Dunn and Judge Collins as the result of tehir discussion over the statements alleged to have been made by James J. Hill to Mr. Dunn. Governor Van Sant, William Henry Eustis of Minneapolis and James T. McCleary are considered the most likely dark-horse candidates.

The latest move in this direction was made yesterday when several Republicans at the Merchants hotel waited on Frederick Von Baumbach, collector of the United States revenue and former secretary of state, to urge him to get in the gubernatorial race. Mr. Von Baumbach treated the matter as a joke, and said that he would not become a candidate even if he were seriously considered.

The strange part of the affair is that the movement was begun by several Republicans from Stearns county, the home of Judge Collins. One of the Republicans from that county said yesterday:

"There is a large demand from Republicans all over the state for a new gubernatorial candidate, and I believe that Mr. Von Baumbach is the strongest man that can be placed in the field. He made an excellent record as secretary of state and as county auditor of Douglas county. He would make a far better than Judge Collins."

CONTROL OF TUBERCULOSIS

Effort to Be Made In That Direction By Physicians.

St. Louis county physicians will hereafter report all cases of tuberculosis to the state board of health.

This action has been decided on by a committee of the members of the St. Louis County Medical society, and which is comprised of Drs. C. A. Stewart, J. M. Robinson, D. D. Murray, C. R. Keyes, and W. R. Bagley.

A meeting of the county physicians was held at the Spalding last evening and Dr. H. M. Bracken, secretary of the state board of health, who was present, read a paper on "Tuberculosis." Dr. Bracken urged that the physicians and the health board become more active in the effort to control the white plague.

Dr. Bracken claimed that the disease is preventable, yet 10.6 per cent of all the deaths in this state between the years of 1890 and 1901 were due to tuberculosis.

Duluth, he claimed, has an average of about 90 deaths per year from this one cause, representing about 15 per cent of the city's death rate.

In the prevention of tuberculosis Dr. Bracken said it was important that all the cases should be reported early to some responsible authority. Such a system of reporting was inaugurated in New York city and the death rate from tuberculosis has been greatly reduced.

The state board of health decided last January to have tuberculosis classed among the reportable diseases and made arrangements for the examination of sputum. This examination is conducted only when certain data concerning the patient is given the board. All information given the board relative to the condition of a patient is regarded as confidential, and physicians are not regarded as violating confidences by making their reports.

Placarding or quarantining tuberculosis patients is not regarded as necessary.

PLANTING WHITE PINE.

It Failed to Work In Northern Michigan.

Some years ago the Diamond Match company began the replanting of its Maine forests with white pine, and the saplings took root and the scheme there proved successful, but when it tried the same experiment in its denuded Michigan forests, worms soon revealed the fact that replanting was a failure as far as the northern peninsula was concernd. The company has repeatedly endeavored to protect itself in Michigan by planting white pine, but has been unable to discover a remedy for the vermin, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. It still has large forests there, but the doom of its possessions is sealed by its enormous annual consumption. It has endeavored in Maine to plant each year saplings equal to the amount of timber removed, and it would have desired the same plan carried out in Michigan had nature proven equally beneficent.

That is one reason why two years ago it purchased white pine forest lands in California covering over 100,000 acres and possessing standing timber of the finest quality equal to 2,000,000,000 feet. That is a good deal of lumber for matches, but the company has looked far into the future, mindful of the desperate work of the woodman the past decade or more. Cutting timber for matches is wasteful in the extreme, as the pine must be free from knots to form a perfect match. Two cuts, called uppers, are usually made from each tree, and all that wood above the lower branches must be sold for commercial lumber. That makes a liberal future supply absolutely necessary, as the time has not yet come when the great American public can do without matches.

It seems a pity that so much good timber should be sent across the seas when the future in America promises that it will be urgently needed at home, but demands of trade must make it so. The fine new California tract of the match combine will be opeend this summer, railroads having been constructed into it, and its Liverpool factories will receive the first installment of splints in the fall. It is a pity the Britons cannot be made to stick to their wax.

The whole question of forestry is such a serious one that it seems a great pity that the American public, especially the official side of it, is not fully alive to the situation. A tour through the northern counties of Pennsylvania will reveal mountains ocvered a few years ago with virgin forests of the finest sort blackened and charred from the ravages of forest fires. It is so in various parts of the state. Every summer discloses a repetition of the old story of the forest fire, and yet radical measures for protection, prevention or replanting seem wholly lacking. In New York state the New York Central has adopted a wise plan to prevent the destruction of the splendid forests of the Adirondacks by the conversion of a locomotive into a fire-fighting apparatus, equipped with hose and a complement of fire-fighters. This locomotive patrols the forest district, and is speedily summoned when flames begin eating away the timber.

It is strange that the railroads which pierce the forest countries of Pennsylvania, and which are responsible for so much of the destruction, have not adopted similarly wise precautions. It is also strange that someone with the influence to make his work effective has not organized a forestry commission which will strive to repair the frightful waste of the timber camps and give future generations forests of their own to cut. What a race they will be with nothing but steel, steel, steel!

COSTS MORE TO LIVE.

Unless his wages have been correspondingly increased the average workingman is today much worse off than he has been at any time since 1896, as the cost of his living has been greatly increased. People who do not understand why it is that they are unable to save although constantly employed, may find some explanation in the bulletin recently prepared by Commissioner Carroll D. Wright, showing wholesale prices during the past thirteen years, including 260 quotations and covering food, clothing, farm products, fuel and lights, building materials, farm implements, drugs and articles of miscellaneous use.

Of fifty-three articles of food quoted, thirty-five show an increase over the thirteen-year average, ranging from ½ of 1 per cent to 72 per cent, and comprising 23 per cent on corn-meal, 42 per cent on bacon and salt pork and 51 per cent on herring. Fifty-six of seventy articles of clothing were higher by from 3-10 of 1 per cent to 20 per cent. Manufactured commodities were higher by 21.5 per cent than in 1897. Fifty raw commodities, embracing beans, eggs, milk, rice, etc., and rubber, copper, etc., rose 33 per cent, above the average. Of thirty-six articles in the metals and farm implement groups, two in 1903 reached the thirteen-year average, thirty passed it and four declined below it. Of twenty-six articles in the lumber and building materials table, twenty went above the average.

The most notable increases are in those articles which produce heat and light and this is of especial importance to the people of Duluth. The increase for the year over the average was 53 per cent for refined petroleum, and for anthracite coal from 27 per cent for stove size to 34 per cent for egg. The average increase for all articles in this class, excepting matches, was 49 per cent. The refined product of the Standard Oil company from its lowest quotation of 7½ cents a gallon in March, 1893, to the price of 15 cents demanded for it in November and December last, showed an increase of more than 100 per cent.

It is perhaps unnecesary for Commissioner Wright to state that "no attempt has been made to go into the causes of the rise and fall of prices." If he had delved into that he would have found something that would not place the party in power in a very enviable light if it were made public. President Roosevelt received great credit for settling the coal strike, but he has not done anything yet that would have a tendency to compel the operators to sell coal for what it is worth.

COLLIDES WITH THE FACTS.

The frequently iterated statement that there is no sentiment in the Republican party of the East and Northwest in favor of reciprocity with Canada comes into frequent head-on collision with facts. The trouble is that the hide-bound stand-pat organs make the error of judging the popular demand by the acts of the Republican machine, which is ever guided by those interests that profit by extreme tariffs.

It was lately asserted in Duluth that the alleged sentiment for reciprocity with Canada in Massachusetts was all a myth because the Republican convention had turned down the proposition with such a strong hand. The fact is that when Senator Lodge stifled reciprocity resolutions in a Massachusetts convention his action was followed by the presentation of a petition signed by 35,000 manufacturers of his state to the Boston chamber of commerce urging that organization to make a fight for Canadian reciprocity. This shows how the people of Massachusetts feel on the subject.

The same authority that said the "Iowa idea" was dead in Iowa, and that reciprocity was not desired by Massachusetts, made the claim that there could be no reciprocity sentiment in Michigan, because Senator Burrows, a candidate for re-election, had declared against it. The Detroit Evening News, which is probably a much better authority on this matter, says that among the people of Michigan "there is an overwhelming sentiment in favor of a broad trade treaty with Canada. Industrial and commercial organizations of every kind have declared their views on the question in certain terms. In every conference of interstate delegates in which reciprocity was considered, Michigan representatives have had leading parts."

Commenting further, the Detroit paper says: "Whatever else may be said of Mr. Burrows he has been consistent throughout his official career; consistent in his hostility to any form of legislation designed to benefit the general public, particularly if it could be possibly tortured into a threat against individual industries, consistent in his insufficiency, in his narrowness, in his dependence and in his uncompromising attitude of favoritism toward tariff greed. But it is a matter of surprise that his boldness, born of the assurance of re-election, is accepted with such startling equanimity by the business men of Michigan. It is certainly an odd situation when the people of this state, and particularly those engaged in commercial and industrial undertakings, will sit idly by when a candidate for the senate makes bold to proclaim fealty to a proposition in direct opposition to a matter for which they are unanimous."

The reason for this anomalous situation lies in the fact that the political machine, under our system of government, is often superior in its power to that of the people. Like the millers of the country, the Republicans of Massachusetts, Michigan and Minnesota will vote for "Roosevelt, revision and reciprocity," and all they will get will be Roosevelt and stand-patism.

This again recalls the thought that if the people of the United States had the power to vote direct on the question, free trade with Canada would mighty soon be an established fact.

THE CHICAGO RIOTS.

Since ex-President Cleveland delivered his recent address on the Chicago riots of 1894, he has received general commendation from the press of the country for the part he took in promptly suppressing the riotous proceedings that accompanied that great railroad strike. Possibly this praise is deserved. At any rate, if error is made, it is better to err in the interest of peace and good order. No doubt he acted within his rights as he read the law in suppressing interference with United States mails and interstate traffic. At any rate his position was afterwards sustained by the United States courts.

Accompanying the many commendations of Mr. Cleveland's course, there is evidence of a disposition in many quarters to assume that he was compelled to intervene because Governor Altgeld refused to invoke federal intervention; that Altgeld was in sympathy with the rioters, encouraging their lawlessness and willing to sacrifice the peace of Chicago and the welfare of the nation. Altgeld maintained that there was a constitutional provision which prohibited the sending of United States troops into a state for the purpose of putting down disorder until they were called for by the governor of the state. He further contended that under the law of the state he had no right to order out the militia unless appealed to by the local authorities. It is a fact that the mayor of Chicago did not call upon him, but stubbornly maintained his ability to handle the disturbances with the municipal forces at his disposal. This attitude, in the governor's opinion, barred him from lawful interference, and unlawful interference, he declared, would put him on a level with the most violent and reckless of the rioters.

In both of these contentions Governor Altgeld was absolutely right, but he overlooked the fact that the president had the power to send troops to prevent interference with the mails.

The Washington Post, which cannot be acused of any leaning toward the side of public disorder, speaking of this matter, says: "Perhaps Governor Altgeld erred in standing upon an academic construction of the law. No doubt it must have impressed the country at that time as a very miserable quibble. But the railroad magnates of Chicago did not then question his integrity of purpose, however deeply they deplored his refusal to act, and they have frequently and emphatically testified to the zeal—the successful zeal—with which he protected property whenever his power was invoked in what he regarded as a legitimate manner."

Were it not for the fact that United States mails were being delayed President Cleveland would have violated the law of the land in sending troops into Illinois. If Governor Altgeld had sent state troops to the scene of the disturbance without being asked by the local authorities, he would have violated the laws of the state. What is an anarchist—one who observes or one who violates the law?

Fairness to the ex-president does not necessitate being unfair to the memory of Altgeld.

THE FIELD SURVEY

It is a matter of satisfaction that the New York Sun has finally reached the conclusion that "the Trust Cow, for all her goadings" from Roosevelt "will not kick when milking times comes." It is a matter for satisfaction because it is an indication that the Sun has been authoritatively informed that Teddy is fully entitled to milk the trusts for his campaign expenses.

The first issue of the Akeley Tribune is at hand. It is by C. F. Scheers, formerly of the Independent. The Tribune starts out with a good patronage and this motto: "Not better than the best, but better than the rest." Its assertion that two live newspapers are better for a town than one dead one may mean either one of two different things. It is evident that the Tribune is prepared by the Scheers instead of the scissors.

TALKS WITH THE STATE PRESS.

Ralph W. Wheelock, who shows people how to be happy though rich through the columns of the Minneapolis Tribune, hands out this bunch of sage philosophy:

> One of the Sunday papers devotes a whole page to a dissertation by Russell Sage as to the surest way for young men to make themselves just as mean and money grasping as he is. Not a word to raise their moral standards, not a single thought as to lives of real usefulness, not a suggestion that there is a higher aim than mere grubbing for wealth that you can't take away with you, but column after column of sordid advice about wearing the cheapest of clothing, the meanest of hats, the roughest of shoes, and eating the plainest of foods for no other purpose than to save money.

After all, it is best not to be too hard on Russell. He is serving a useful purpose in the world. Advice is always more effective if somebody can be used as a horrible example.

In 1903, the consumption had increased to 10.04 for malt, and decreased to 1.46 for distilled spirits, and increased to 0.48 for wines. HOTEL GOSSIP

One of the best fish stories that he has heard for some time, according to Henry I. Litchfield, he heard at Grand Marais, Mich. Mr. Litchfield is a salesman from Elmira, N. Y.

"As I heard it, it was about a sturgeon," said Mr. Litchfield, "and the fish was said to be nearly seven feet long, six feet 8 inches, I think the exact length was 6 feet, 8 inches. They say it was nearly a hundred pounds in weight, too, but remember that I tell you this as a fish story, pure and simple, and don't stand sponsor for the truth of it by any means. I have too many other responsibilities to undertake such a thing as that.

"They took it out of Manistique lake last week and it is said to be the first fish of the species ever taken from that body of water, which sounds like a strong statement. It is also claimed to be the largest fish taken from an inland lake in Northern Michigan for many years. They tell me that when its captor first got after it he speared it, and that the fish was so strong that it got away from the fishermen, taking the spear with it.

"The spear had been shoved into the animal almost upright, so that the handle showed above the water as the sturgeon swam away, just like a signal, so that it was an easy matter to follow it by means of this spear handle. The man who was after it was not going to give up by any means, although he had a hard time following such a big strong fish, which may have been a little slower in its movements, though, on acount of the spear in its body. At any rate, the fish was speared a second time after a short chase and was brought to shore.

"They think that the fish originally came from Lake Michigan, as no such fish have been planted in Manistique lake, and that it probably got up to where it was captured through the Manistique river. No matter whether the story is true or not, it's a good one. It don't hurt me because I am not responsible for its authenticity, and I am quite sure it will not hurt the fish—either the one that was captured or any of the surviving ones."

"By Jove, I thought for a minute I was in New York."

An Eastern man made the exclamation because he had seen a barber shop in Duluth where all the men were dressed in white from their collar to their shoes. One of the large office buildings has this feature in its barber shop, and the fad is attracting a good deal of attention. It is said the men kicked like everything at adopting the new uniforms, for they are hard to keep clean and the proprietors will not permit careless handling of the suits and shoes.

They are very summery in their appearance and give an impression of June or July to the beholder, who is liable to think he is on a yacht when he steps into the tonsorial department. Another feature being exploited is service to patrons by the month, $3 being the charge for all the shaves and haircuts that a man wants to collect at that price. He can have his hair cut every week if he wants it and get a shave twenty-six times—some months—all for the three dollars. Four hair cuts a month at a quarter each and twenty-six shaves at 15 cents would be $4.90, so that for those who rejoice in fast growing locks and the kind of whiskers that are 110 proof and assert their independence of the razor unless used every day, the new method, if worked right up to the handle, can be made the source of a saving of $1.90 per week or, if it may be carried farther, $98.80 per annum.

All this reminds me of another story. It's a true story, too, but must be told in a whisper lest the original might get on to it. The expression of "butcher" applied to a knight of the razor is not uncommon when used in the derisive sense, and it was the use of this expression that prompted the narrator of the yarn in question to tell about it. It goes something like this, as he told it:

"I know a barber in Duluth who used to be a butcher, and it's a funny thing now he happened to tell me of it. I was getting shaved by him one day, and from something that occurred while I was in the chair I happened to remark to him, in a jocular way, that he was no barber, but only a butcher. Whether he was onto my insinuation I have never been able to make out, for he started in to ask how I happened to know about it. I did not know what he was driving at, and said nothing.

"Like all barbers of the traditional sort, he was not unwilling to talk, and continued after he asked the question which I did not answer. It appears that he was for a short time employed by a butcher. This was when he was a kid. He was hired to deliver meat, and one morning the boss had a hurry order and he sent the boy out with the meat on the wagon. It began to rain, and the boy, thinking there was no great hurry for the steak, and not liking the idea of riding along in the open wagon, stopped the horse near a convenient doorway and hustled into the shelter.

"It kept raining and raining hard, and he was in no hurry as long as it kept up. But with the people that wanted the meat it was different. They wanted the meat and wanted it very badly, and when it did not arrive in a few minutes, 'phoned to the shop to have it hurried along. As the boy had started, the butcher could not imagine what was holding him back. So he thought nothing would do but for him to start with another steak.

"He had not gone far until he came across the horse and wagon at the curbstone and the kid standing in the doorway. The people got their meat and the boy got his walking papers. He never worked in a butcher shop after that, but got the place in the barber business and stuck to it. He is very prosperous, too, much more so than most barbers in the Zenith City."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Most people do very well in life till they get ambitious to do better.

When a woman isn't afraid of her cook it's a sign she is a mighty poor one.

There's a lot of satisfaction in lending your wife money out of her allowance.

It's funny how a man likes to hear about the smart things your children say when he wants to borrow $5 from you.

It's just as easy to marry a rich wife and then learn to love her as to marry a poor one and then forget to love her.

THE STAR GAZER.

New York Sun: In Chicago, as in this town, astrology and chiromancy are important sciences, and their professors add to golden numbers golden numbers. The Chicago Tribune keeps a heart reading and future scanning annex called "Your Corner." Peeping into one of the drawers of this department, we come, with a thrill of surprise and satisfaction, upon this kindly tip to an old acquaintance:

"TEDDY—You are one who loves ostentation and display of power; not in the direction of style or of waste, but in that of ownership."

"Ostentation" is scarcely the word. Some tang of dispraise belongs to that. A man may be passionately fond of equitation, declamation, nomination, and even usurpation, without having one grain of ostentation in his composition. The want of style is obvious. If there is any waste, it is of advice and nervous energy, the fund of which is so great that small losses will not be felt.

"You are inclined to be direct and forcible in speech, and, in a general way, seem to be harsh."

Only to opponents, and to opinions that clash with those wonderful instantaneous intuitional processes by which the forcible one puts to shame slow ratiocination, mere reason and hard-shelled intellect.

"You have a warm heart."

Which is much more amiable and even virtuous than a cool head.

"And a disposition to help those less fortunate than yourself."

Especially if they are Rough Riders.

"You will have some trouble in money matters this year, which will not be at all serious."

That is, the Trust Cow, for all her goadings, will not kick when milking time comes.

"You are also likely to take a journey for pleasure and profit."

Another swinging 'round the circle? A going upon the stump? If this be so, it is joyful to know that the wicked railroad corporations will not get any profit from this class of trade.

"Your wonderful endurance and energy insure an extremely long life, and a most fortunate old age is also indicated by the stars."

O, bother the stars and such bald old withered humdrum prophecy! See how the inquirer's fluttering heart is left unsatisfied. Old age must take care of itself. The reader of the face of heaven has forgotten the main thing. Will there be any fallen stars on the Tuesday after the first Monday in November?

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

St. Poul Globe: The selection of Joseph Cotton, of Duluth, to second the nomination of Col. Roosevelt is calculated to inspire the free and untrammeled colored delegate from the South to a point of enthusiasm which will make him take all hurdles in depositing his vote for the Grand Young Man, of New York.

Minneapolis Tribune: Cheaper ore may bring cheaper Iron and cheaper steel in its train until foreign markets open their doors to us again and the price of steel rails comes within reach of railroads with reduced earnings. Should this not happen, we fear people will get the notion that somehow the trust and the tariff are standing in the way. That notion will not increase the popularity of either.

Albert Lea Tribune: The talk of defeating one or more of the present incumbents of the supreme court bench has ceased, at least as far as the political writers of the Twin City papers are concerned, and it is time, as the more the matter was discussed the more the opinion was expressed that the men now occupying places upon the supreme court bench are the very ones that should be retained there. The fight was started by a few corporations that wanted to "get even" for some decisions handed down in the interests of the people of the state, rather than any particular class or vocation. Such men as these judges can be relied upon and they should be re-elected.

Big Forks Compass: The "Dismal Swamp" now lies in Northern Minnesota. It colls like a serpent in and across the northern portions of Itasca and Beltrami counties. Its presence is the greatest menace to the development of this section. The national government gave this swamp area to Minnesota over forty years ago on condition that the state would drain it and make of it homes for its people. This the state has failed to do. What is it waiting for? For private land speculators to dig the ditches and win the glory and the profits? Or is it waiting for the people of this defrauded section to awake to their rights—to collect their outlawed bill?

Grand Rapids Herald-Review: Parker cannot be the Democratic presidential nominee and those who have been booming him have not thought so at any time. It is another Palmer and Buckner scheme, calculated to make Republican assurance doubly sure. Towne looks good to the Herald-Review.

Rothsay Enterprise: May 1 fishing season opens in this state. Black bass, however, will please take notice to stay off the hook until June 1. A rush will soon be made to the lakes, and the question naturally arises, what would an innocent fisherman do the coming month if a fool black bass should absorb the bait and hook? Should the disgorger be used, the inwards of the victim hopelessly ruptured and the carcass consigned to the lake or the fish commissioners, or should the angler cut his line, sacrifice a Kirby and allow the bass to float off to expire gradually, or should he bravely smuggle it home to the pan? This is a momentous and fishy question. Will Warden Jones arise and inform us how to avoid the bass and obey the law?

Grand Marais Herald: Congressman Bede makes an eloquent appeal to the president in behalf of Minnesota homesteaders from the swamp land ruling of the interior department. But why bother the president? What has he rightly to do with such questions? Has it come to such a pass that to get justice the people must invoke arbitrary executive interference? If that is so then the more's the reason why Bede's appeal might better be made to congress.

Fergus Fals Journtl: If Mr. Hill will give less to campaign funds and reduce freight rates accordingly it will please the people better and make it less embarassing.

Crookston Journal: But reformers—not all, but the majority—are inclined to think that the interpretation they give to the law ought to be the interpretation the courts ought to give, and they lose out in consequence. They are too much given to mistaking effect for cause, to overlook the fact that sumptuary legislation is never enforcible against public opinion, and to insist that the concretely expressed views of the few must be taken by the many, and without question.

Diamond Match Company Files Another Injunction Application.

Alleges Infringement By Union Company Box Filling Patent.

A second application for injunction against the Union Match company of West Duluth, was filed with the clerk of federal courts yesterday by attorneys for the Diamond Match company. In the present application no mention is made of the match making machinery itself, but infringement is alleged upon certain patents, claimed to be held by the complainant, on a match box filling machine and improvements on it.

A temporary restraining order is not asked for, as in the first case, but it is requested that a subpoena be issued against the local concern, requiring it to answer to the bill of complaint within the established filing rule.

The patents which it is alleged are infringed, it is claimed the Diamond concern became owner by assignment. They were secured by Jacob P. Wright, of New Haven, Conn., and Charles H. Palmer, John W. Denmead and Joseph A. Baughman, of Akron, Ohio. It is claimed duplicates of the patended box filling machine are now in use at the Union company's plant. Wright is named as being the original inventor of the machine, while the others are said to be inventors of more recent improvements. The first patent is said to have been secured on Nov. 30, 1894.

The attorneys in the present instance are John R. Nolan, of New York, who was connected with the previous injunction case, and Marshall & Whipple, of Duluth. Paul Bakewell, of St. Louis, and C. D. O'Brien, of St. Paul, who also represented the company in the former case, disagreed with Mr. Nolan on certain points and withdrew from the case. Their names do not appear in connection with the present bill of complaint.

Judge Page Morris last month refused to grant the foreign concern a temporary restraining order against the Union company. An injunction was asked against the local company, seeking to enjoin it from the use of a match-making machine, claimed to be an infringement upon patents held by the Diamond concern.

It is stated by officers of the Union Match company that the foreign concern has no good grounds for litigation. They express confidence that the affair will end as satisfactorily as did the former proceedings, in favor of the Union company.

ANOTHER CHANCE

Possibility For the Improvement of Wisconsin Mail Service.

Car Should Go Out on Twilight Limited Train.

The fact that the attempt to improve the mail service between Duluth and Grand Forks, along the Great Northern railroad, met with such success, and that the mail clerks asked for were provided, has given rise to the hope in local business circles that another improvement, said to be almost as badly needed, will be made in the service between this city and Spooner, Wis., over the Omaha.

In this instance it will be unnecessary to engage additional mail clerks, as was the case on the Grand Forks run. All that is asked for is the transfer of a mail car and clerk now running over the Omaha from Ashland to Spooner. It is claimed the need for the service is much greater on the Duluth run.

Under existing conditions the various towns between the head of the lakes cities and Spooner receive mail from Duluth and points to the north and west only once a day, with the exception of Solon Springs and South Range, which are given service by the 5:30 p. m. Omaha-Chicago train.

The one daily mail leaves Duluth on the Omaha train that pulls out of the local yards at 8:50 o'clock in the morning. The conditions in this instance are not unlike those that prevailed in the Grand Forks case, for letters addressed to the points affected and mailed in Duluth after an early hour in the morning, about 8:15 o'clock, have to lie in the local office until the 8:50 train the following morning, as the afternoon train over the line carries with it no mail car or clerk.

It is desired that the mail car now running between Ashland and Spooner on the afternoon train, giving intermediate points two services a day, be transferred to the division between Duluth and Spooner, and placed on the Twilight limited, leaving Duluth at 4 p. m., thus giving South Range, Hines, Hawthorne, Bennett, Solon Springs, Wascott, Gordon, Minong and Sampson, the towns between here and Spooner, two mails a day from this direction, and bringing business letters, needing immediate attention, to their destination early in the evening instead of about the middle of the day following.

The villages between Ashland and Spooner would then receive only one mail a day from Ashland, unless a pouch exchange were established, but it is argued that this would be more reasonable than are the present conditions, for the towns on the Ashland line are neither so large nor important as those between Duluth and Spooner, and their mail is only a fraction of that going out of Duluth, Superior and tributary country to stations between here and Spooner.

If the officials of the railway mail service do not care to deprive the Ashland line of the twice daily service, it has been suggested that a pouch exchange, whereby the mail would be "made up" in pouches at Ashland and thrown off at the proper places, be established. This could be done on the Ashland division, but such a service could not be put in operation on the Duluth run, for the reason that the Twilight does not stop at the small stations mentioned. If the desired improvement is brought about it will be necessary to establish a catcher service, where the mail sacks are taken from racks provided for the purpose, while the train is running at full speed.

George M. Smith, general agent of the Omaha road, when interviewed on the subject, said he believed the demand to change the service would be a most reasonable one, and said he would endorse whatever action Duluth might take relative to the matter. Under the present order of things the Twilight takes on the Ashland mail car at Spooner. Under the desired conditions it would have with it a mail car on leaving Duluth, and would take it clear through to St. Paul.

FAULTY COMMITMENT.

Daniel Costello Released on Habeas Corpus Writ.

After serving thirty-six days of a sixty days' sentence in the county jail, imposed by Municipal Judge Vivian Prince, at Eveleth, Daniel Costello, of that place, secured his release yesterday afternoon on a writ of habeas corpus. The hearing on the citation took place before Judge Cant and the court decided that Costello's claim that the commitment was faulty and void, was well sustained. The commitment failed to state where the alleged crime for which Costello was convicted, took place.

C. E. Adams, attorney for Costello, claimed that Judge Prince had not the authority to send his client to jail after he had imposed a fine for the offense. The court held that the Eveleth municipal judge had exceeded his authority in imposing the double penalty of a fine and imprisonment.

Costello was charged with assaulting his wife. He pleaded guilty and was fined $50. Failing to pay this he was sent to the county jail for sixty days. Mrs. Costello complained that her husband had made threats against her life and Judge Prince ordered that Costello give peace bonds with two securities of $250 each, or in case he failed to provide the bond, he be confined in the county jail another six months at the expiration of his 60-day sentence.

SPARK FROM CIGARETTE

Chicago, May 13.—A spark from a cigarette is thought to have cost the life at 1 o'clock yesterday morning of William Stevens, 30 years old, who was burned to death in a carpenter shop on East Fifty-third street. The fire was extinguished with little property damage. Stevens, who slept in the shop, was known to be a cigarette smoker.

THE OPEN AIR TREATMENT

Boston Mothers Put Children to Sleep In Open Air.

Boston, May 13.—Putting baby to sleep in a box on top of the flat roof of a modern sky-scraping apartment house, or in an iron balcony far above the sidewalk, or even in the broad window seat of an upper story, is the newest method of fresh air training which is developing among the wealthy and aristocratic families of Black Bay and Brookline.

The treatment became so popular that along almost any street in the exclusive section of the city one may look up to the upper stories of houses, especially apartment houses, and outside the window is a box which in the poorer quarter of the city would be taken for a window garden. And so it is, but it is a garden for the little bud of the family.

The method begun when the baby is not more than two or three months old, may be continued until the child is 5 or 6 years old, or as long as the custom of having a daily nap is kept up. It is not devised especially for sickly children, but for strong babies as well.

Advocates of the method point out several advantages. For the child there is fresh air instead of the vitiated air of the house. This in itself conduces to sound sleep and good nature. It has an advantage over a carriage ride in that it avoids the noise and dust of the street as well as contact with other children, where is always present the possibility of contracting children's diseases.

For the mother or nurse it means a saving of many hours every day during the life of the baby. For while the baby still gets air, the mother or nurse is spared the long and often laborious work of pushing the carriage up and down the street, and they have time for other pressing household duties or for recreation.

During last winter, notwithstanding the severity of the cold, there were few days when babies were not placed in their accustomed sleeping places on the window sill or on the roof.

Most mothers or nurses wrap up the baby just about as an Indian squaw wraps up her papoose. Then it is laid on a hair mattress in a box or basket, strapped securely to the box, and covered with blankets.

SUIT BROUGHT ON HIS BOND

Court Commerce Sues L. L. Forest's Surety For Loss.

Louis L. Forest, the defaulting trustee of the local lodge of Independent Order of Foresters, is a very much wanted man in this county, but his whereabouts have been unknown to the local authorities since last fall.

Yesterday Court of Commerce, the subordinate lodge for which Forest was a trustee, started an action in district court against the Employers' Liability Assurance corporation, of Canada, to recover $500 which is alleged to be the amount of Mr. Forest's bond.

It is alleged that when Forest assumed his duties as a trustee he filed one of the Canadian company's bonds in the amount of $500.

In January, 1903, $4523 was deposited by the order with Forest, but he never accounted for more than $3452 and disappeared last fall. He was indicted for embezzlement and has been a fugitive from justice ever since. The supposition is that he fled to Canada.

The Employers' Liability Assurance corporation is claimed to have refused to make good the bond Forest is alleged to have given the local fraternal order as security. Crassweller & Crassweller represent the Foresters.

The embezzlement of the Foresters' funds was not the only crooked work that Forest was connected with before he left the city. He was the guardian of two children in the West End, whose money he spent for wildcat stocks. At the time he disappeared he had been cited to appear in probate court to make good the money he had spent belonging to his wards.

ASTOR HAS TROUBLE

To Secure License For Opening His Hotel.

New York, May 13.—John Jacob Astor, owner of the St. Regis hotel, Fifty-seventh street and Fifth avenue, is having considerable trouble to secure a license for it. The St. Regis has been leased to R. M. Haan, who intends to open the house in a few months. The new hotel is diagonally opposite the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church. The hotel also is situated in a private residence neighborhood, and, according to the law, the consent of two-thirds adjoining property owners must be obtained before a license can be granted.

The church property owners refused consent. Among the other property owners fighting the proposed license are William Rockefeller, Henry Redmond and James Everard. The hotel cost over $3,000,000.

UNIQUE WEDDING.

Crookston Couple Twice Married the Same Evening.

Crookston, Minn., May 13.—Wednesday evening witnessed one of the most unique wedding ceremonies that has ever occurred in Crookston, or probably any other city in the Northwest. The principals were O. O. Sundet, a well-known business man of the city, and Miss Bertha Morgan, who has also resided here for a number of years. The civil ceremony was performed in the early evening, and the entire bridal party, consisting of the bride and groom and the bridesmaids and groom's assistants, were afterwards driven to the Odd Fellows' hall, where, in the presence of 200 friends, the primeval Indian wedding ceremony was performed.

A band of twenty-four of the Crookston tribe of Red Men participated in the ceremony, and the center of the large hall was transformed to represent a typical Indian scene. There were a number of tepees at the outer edge of the circle, and in the center the music man beat the ketle drum at frequent intervals. The costumes of the braves were elaborate, and their make-ups were finished and artistic. The real buckskin suits, handsomely beaded, were used. The costumes of the bride and groom were also studied. After the ceremony was over and the congratulations received, the entire three floors of the building were thrown open to the guests, and while the upper two were used for dancing, the lower one was used for the banquet, where the guests were served. The bride and groom were the recipients of many beautiful presents.

DEAN PATTEE

Censured By Chicago Papers For Alleged Utterances.

Chicago, May 13.—The Record-Herald editorially censures Dr. William S. Pattee for his advising students of the law school of Minnesota to keep out of the law until necessity compelled them to think of it as a means of livelihood, and for his quoted statement: "Many of you are too honest to be good lawyers."

The editorial says:

"Is it possible that Dr. Pattee means to insinuate that men cannot practice law and be honest? The idea is a new one. Coming from the dean of a law school to law students, it is startling. Let us survey the situation calmly for a moment. Here are 1100 students preparing themselves for the legal profession—more properly speaking, 'the practice of law.' In a fatherly, confidential talk to them the dean admonishes them to keep out of the law; that they are 'too honest to make good lawyers;' that only the direst necessity should induce them to consider it.

"Why did not Dean Pattee tell these 1100 students to 'keep out of the law' before they came to his law school, with no other object in view than to prepare for the practice of the profession?

"Such indiscriminate denunciations against a whole profession carry their own refutation with them. Whenever we are told that doctors as a class, or ministers as a class, or lawyers as a class, are this, that or the other that is bad or undesirable, we know at once that the speaker has lost his head. The lawyers will find in Dean Pattee's criticisms the least of their troubles."

WOULD PLOW CORN

Rather Than Be Running Mate of Roosevelt.

Springfield, Ill., May 13.—In speaking of the vice presidential situation, Speaker Cannon remarked:

"I'd sooner go back to plowing corn than run for vice president. I'd sooner be speaker than vice president, and I've got work enough cut out for me without cutting around the country as a running mate for a strenuous presidential candidate."

"PEEPING TOM"

Shot at By an Irate Maine Woman.

Bangor, Me., May 13.—Mrs. B. K. Shepard fired two shots from a revolver through her bedroom window at 1 o'clock in the morning at a "peeping Tom."

One of the shots took effect, for the man who managed to drag himself away left a trail of blood.

Mrs. Shepard was bathing a sprained ankle when a man's face suddenly pressed against the window pane.

Investigation showed that the man was standing on a shed roof where he commanded a good view of Mrs. Shepard's bedroom.

LOVE FINDS A WAY.

Groom Not of Age Adopted By Fiancee.

Le Sueur, Minn., May 13.—The marriage of Miss Myrtle Thyme and Albert Grayland, which occurred in this county yesterday, certainly illustrates the old adage that "Love will find a way." The groom was only 20 years of age and, consequently, unable to obtain a license without the consent of his parents, or guardians, and, being an orphan, without a guardian, he was barred out all around. The young lady, though nearly two years younger, was still over 18, and of lawful age to get married if she wanted to. Neither one wanted to wait for the young man to grow older, so the difficulty was settled as follows: Miss Thyme formally and legally adopted her affianced and then, as his guardian, gave the necessary consent to there being a marriage license issued to him. The document was duly given out and Justice of the Peace Hammerly, of Sharon township, joined the happy couple in wedlock.

REAL LIFE ROMANCE.

Pretty Stenographer Arouses Ambition of Employer's Son.

Chicago, May 13.—Here is a romance of real life that turned out as they do in novels. It concerns a wealthy man's son and a stenographer, who last night reached that part of the novel where it says, "And then they were married and lived happy ever afterward."

The persons in the urban idyl are Harold McRoy, the 25-year-old son of George G. McRoy, vice president of Edson, Keith & Co., and Miss Adalla Grabow, also 25 years old, who for the last four years has been stenographer to the elder McRoy.

Young McRoy graduated from the Chicago manual training school seven years ago, entered the wholesale millinery business as a shipping clerk, and was promoted to the position of salesman. He was beginning to look upon commercial life as humdrum when he discovered his father had a new stenographer.

It was not long after the appearance of the new stenographer that McRoy became inspired with an ambition to work up to a position that commanded the opportunity to dictate a few letters to the young woman.

Then the announcement of the engagement was made, and McRoy got the marriage license. They were married last evening at Miss Grabow's residence.

DESIRES TO MARRY.

Fourteen-Year-Old Girl Applies For License.

Louise Dandre, an attractive little Italian girl, 14 years old, appeared in Probate Judge Middlecoff's office yesterday afternoon and begged the court to assist her in getting a marriage license. She had applied for one at the clerk's office, but it was refused when her age was learned.

Judge Middlecoff questioned the girl and found that she came to Duluth recently, having no relatives here. Her father is believed to be working a claim near Dawson, Alaska, and her mother, who was deserted, died in Italy several years ago. Louise has been staying with friends here in Duluth.

Before the girl can be licensed to wed the consent of her father or of her legally appointed guardian will be necessary, and the court promised to see what could be done for her.

EDICT A PUZZLER.

Christian Scientists Fail to Understand It.

New York, May 13.—Mary Baker Eddy, head of the Church of Christ, Scientist, is reported to have promulgated an amendment to the constitution of the church against the segregation of sexes in clubs.

As most of the church members are also members of clubs and associations founded on principles that preclude the association of men and women, they are said to be greatly puzzled over the enforcement of the edict. Members of the Masonic fraternity are understood to be exempt from the ruling, but many other secret societies are affected.

RAILROADS TO RESCUE

Will Take Business at Lake Rates During Trouble.

Chicago, May 13.—Eastern railroad managers have come to the relief of Chicago shippers by announcing that they will take business at lake rates until the strike of masters and pilots is ended.

Lake rates, however, already have been advanced in consequence of the deadlock. As the Lumber Carriers' association and the masters have settled their differences, the lumber vessels are free to take any business offered, and seven were chartered during the day for 240,000 bushels of corn for Buffalo at 2¼ cents, an advance of 1½ cents.

Nearly a million bushels of grain is on vessels tied up in Chicago, and all this must be taken out if the strike runs into warm weather. Vesselmen gave shippers permission to unload the ships at any time.

DYSPEPSIA OF WOMEN

Requires Treatment Which Acts in Harmony with the Female System.

A great many women suffer with a form of indigestion or dyspepsia which does not seem to yield to ordinary medical treatment. While the symptoms seem to be similar to those of ordinary indigestion, yet the medicines universally prescribed do not seem to restore the patient's normal condition.

Mrs. Pinkham claims that there is a kind of dyspepsia that is caused by derangement of the female organism, and which while it causes disturbance similar to ordinary indigestion cannot be relieved without a medicine which not only acts as a stomach tonic, but has peculiar utero-tonic effects as well; in other words, a derangement of the female organs may have such a disturbing effect upon a woman's whole system as to cause serious indigestion and dyspepsia, and it cannot be relieved without curing the original cause of the trouble, which seems to find its source in the pelvic organs. As proof of this theory, we call attention to the letters from Mrs. Maggie Wright and Mrs. Emma Sawyer, who were completely cured by the use of

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For two years I suffered more or less with dyspepsia which so degenerated my entire system that I was unfit to properly attend to my daily duties. I felt weak and nervous, and nothing I ate tasted good or felt comfortable in my stomach. I tried several dyspepsia cures, but nothing seemed to help me permanently. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, and was happily surprised to find that it acted like a fine tonic, and in a few days I began to enjoy and properly digest my food. My recovery was rapid, and in five weeks I was a different woman. Seven bottles completely cured me, and a dozen or more of my friends have used it since."—MRS. MAGGIE WRIGHT, 12 Van Voorhis St., Brooklyn, N.Y.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I will write and let you know how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. I cannot express the terrible suffering I have had to endure. I was taken last May with nervous prostration, also had female trouble, liver, stomach, kidney and bladder trouble. I was in a terrible condition.

"The doctor attended me for a year, but I kept getting worse. I got so I was not able to do any work. Was confined to my bed most of the time, and thought I would never be able to do anything. People thought I would not live. I decided to try your medicine. I have taken twelve bottles of Vegetable Compound and cannot praise it too highly, for I know it will do all and even more than it is recommended to do.

"I will tell every suffering woman about your medicine and urge them to try it."—MRS. EMMA SAWYER, Conyers, Ga.

Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Many women whose letters we print were utterly discouraged, and life lacked all joy to them when they wrote Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., without charge of any kind. They received advice which made them strong, useful women again.

ODELL WAS PIQUED

At the President's Act and He Turned Down Anderson.

Why Colored Delegate Was Not Sent From New York.

New York, May 13.—President Roosevelt has been snubbed by Governor Odell and the Republicans of Greater New York.

Early this spring, when the president and his friends in Washington were scanning the names of Republicans to be sent from this city to the Republican national convention, the president decided that in order to emphasize his attitude on the negro question it would be political wisdom if a negro were sent as one of the delegates from New York city. The president selected James W. Anderson, who for several years has been a member of the Republican state committee. Mr. Anderson lives in the Twenty-fifth Assembly district. He is one of the best known colored orators in the country. At all of the former Lincoln day banquets in Chicago and other cities Mr. Anderson has been a prize orator. He has been a leader of his people in this city for a dozen years, and always fought under the leadership of Senator T. C. Platt. Governor Roosevelt, on April 22, 1898, at the suggestion of Senator Platt, appointed Anderson one of the three supervisors of accounts of race track meetings at $2500 a year for five years and $500 yearly expenses. Governor Odell a short time ago reappointed Anderson.

Chairman Charles H. Murray, of the New York Republican county committee, and William Halpin, chairman of the executive committee of the county committee, visited President Roosevelt in Washington a short time ago to ascertain the president's views in the matter of national delegates from New York city. The president informed Mr. Murray and Mr. Halpin that he would like it very much if Anderson could go as one of the delegates to Chicago. The president added that it would be a fine example if a colored Republican of Anderson's reputation could be sent as a delegate from a Northern state.

It is apologetical courtesy which is invariably recognized to accede to the wishes of a presidential candidate in matters of this kind. Inasmuch as the president had also requested that his old friend, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, be sent as a delegate, Mr. Murray and Mr. Halpin informed the president that it would call for a little shifting in the congress district delegates, but Anderson could very easily be sent from a district in the lower part of the city, and Mr. Halpin mentioned his own.

The president's wishes were disregarded, and Anderson was not elected as a delegate to the national convention.

"Anderson was not elected," said an eminent Republican, "because the president made his wishes known to Murray and Halpin and not to Odell. The governor resented the president's request concerning Anderson, because it was made to two of his lieutenants and not to himself."

TEXAS WOMEN AFTER OFFICE

Want to Be School Trustees, But Houston's Mayor Objects.

Houston, Tex., May 13.—When it became known that Mayor Jackson was going to nominate three members of the board of school trustees for the independent school district of Houston, the importance of council proceedings assumed to the women of Houston an interest, never equaled in the past. They flocked to the meeting place of the aldermen in large numbers, and a special section of the council chamber was reserved for them. They were invited back of the railing and were seated on either side of the room in two tiers of seats facing the aldermen. The actual count showed there were just 42 women in the audience, but to those who were not in accord with their views it looked as though there was an army of 100 of them.

Before the balloting upon the mayor's nominee was begun the council went into a recess of ten minutes and then was witnessed the working of the strangest body of wire pullers that ever invaded the precincts of the city hall. The women were everywhere pressing upon the aldermen their views. Alderman Gaston, who was looked upon as the champion of the women's cause, paid little heed to the caucus as he was being buttonholed by the fair politicians and coached along the lines that had been mapped out to bring about the success of their two candidates for place on the school board. The results showed with what skill they managed their task.

The opening gun in the school trustee skirmish was fired when Assistant Secretary Emmie Speed read the petition signed by 221 women of the city asking that two women be placed upon the school board and followed this with the reading of petitions from practically all of the women's organizations of the city indorsing the proposition. Alderman Gaston moved that the petitions be granted in so far as it lay within the power of he council to do and that the petitions be referred to the mayor with the recommendation that he act in accordance with the petitions favorably acted upon by the council. This motion was adopted.

When the council reassembled, Mayor Jackson took the floor and, addressing the assembly, including the ladies, she said: "I did not require the 10 minutes in which to get an understanding of the petitions regarding the school trustees and the appointment of two women to the board. It is asked that the usage heretofore pertaining to the board be departed from. I hope that I am not inappreciative of our women and I know they are well qualified to discharge some of the functions of a school trustee. I have been honored by a call from the ladies who discussed the proposition with me. I believe I have thoroughly investigated the matter and I wish to say that the problems that now present themselves in our school matters are very difficult. My mind is made up and my conclusion reached. I will submit the nomes of three men for positions on the board. The members of the council have doubtless investigated the matter carefully, and if they believe it to be the best interest of the city that other appointments be made and wish to turn me down, as they have done in other matters, they can name women to places on the board if they see fit."

The following names were then read to the council as indorsed by Mayor Jackson: Dr. S. C. Red, Edgar Watkins and J. D. Freeman. Mr. Freeman was elected.

The failure to endorse such men as Dr. Red and Mr. Watkins occasioned no end of surprise, but it was regarded as a victory for the women. One of them stated: "Well, we have another chance, and I am sure we will now gain our point."

A Startling Test.

To save a life, Dr. T. G. Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes, "a patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages, caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles so I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attack in 14 months." Electric Bitters are positively guaranteed for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and Kidney troubles. Try them. Only 50c. at all druggists.

WEALTH IS HERS

Poor Washerwoman In Omaha Heir to Scotch Estate.

First Notice Was Accompanied By Draft For $50,000.

Omaha, Neb., May 13.—One month ago Mrs. John Duncan Sinclair, of this city, was a poor washerwoman. Today her check is good for $50,000, and she is preparing for a trip to Glasgow, Scotland, where, at the final settlement of the estate of Lord Sinclair, she will come in for a large share of the vast property which goes to make up that earldom. With scarcely a word of warning a draft for $50,000 was placed in Mrs. Sinclair's hands, and she was told of the bequest by which she was changed in a moment from poor circumstances into one of great affluence and wealth.

More than a year ago, Mr. Sinclair, a well-to-do carpenter of Omaha, died after a long, lingering illness, which had eaten into his small savings to such an extent that Mrs. Sinclair found it necessary to take in washing in order to assist in paying for the medical attentfon given her sick husband.

During her husband's life he had often told Mrs. Sinclair of the large property interests which his family might some day inherit, but as his branch of the family was the younger, there was small hope of anything ever being realized from the expectation. Therefore, after Mr. Sinclair's death, the widow continued taking in washing to support herself and two children.

Two weeks ago Mrs. Sinclair received a request to call at a lawyer's office. She had no idea as to why she was wanted, but, leaving her laundry work, she went to the office in the New York Life building. Here the lawyer asked her a few questions as to her family, and then suddenly picking up a paper from the desk, said:

"Madam, I am authoriezd to hand to you, on behalf of the estate of Earl Sinclair, of Scotland, this draft for $50,000, and to notify you to be present in Glasgow, Scotland, on June 9, when the estate will be finally settled."

And with that the lawyer handed Mrs. Sinclair a draft for the amount specified, $50,000.

"I was simply dumbfounded," said Mrs. Sinclair afterwards. "The thought of all that money took my breath away. But I just went down to a bank and deposited it. The clerk looked mighty queer when I handed in that big check. But it isn't every washerwoman who can hand in $50,000 checks.

"Then I went right back home and finished my washing. When I sent the clothes home, I notified my patrons that I was not going to wash any more. Then I bought a few things I needed, had my little cottage painted and am saving the balance of the money. It is right down there in the bank where I placed it.

"Next week I leave for Scotland to be at the meeting of the heirs. I don't know just what there is for the children and me, but it must be a good deal for them to send me $50,000 as a starter. Maybe we will stay over there and never come back to Nebraska. If there is any land for us, that is probably what we will do; but if it's all cash, I'l come right back home and live here."

The story of the inheritance which has made the poor washerwoman one of the wealthy people of country begins years ago when James Sinclair, son of Lord Duncan Sinclair, tiring of a younger son's position, left his father's castle, near Glasgow, Scotland, and came to the New World to seek his fortune. The old earl gave the young man his blessing—and a goodly amount of ready cash. In 1856 the young man arrived at Caledonia, N. Y., where he invested his money in lands, which increased in value and rendered him, in time, wealthy.

Some years after his arrival Sinclair met in New York city, where she ws visiting, Emma Segelke, daughter of George Segelke, at that time mayor of Berlin, Germany. After a short courtship the two were married and went to live on one of Sinclair's farms near Caledonia.

Two sons were born, Frank Sinclair, who now lives at Buffalo, N. Y., and John Duncan Sinclair, who was named for his grandfather, the old Scottish earl.

When John Duncan Sinclair was 19 years old, his mother died and his father soon remarried. This did not please the young fellow, and he decided to go West. Before leaving New York, however, he married Elizabeth Kolhagen, the daughter of a wealthy neighbor, and took her with him to the wild West.

Miss Kolhagen had been used to all that wealth could purchase, but sacrificed it all and went with her husband. And when the crops failed she and the young husband left the Western homestead and moved into the city of Omaha, where he found work as a carpenter.

John Duncan Sinclair often told his wife and fellow workmen of the fortune which would some day come to him from Scotland, but little credence was placed in the story. And when his health failed, Mrs. Sinclair became a laundress in order that her sick husband might have medical attention.

For two years the woman who had, in her young days, never known the meaning of the word "work," toiled day and night at the washtub, and then came the end, and John Duncan Sinclair was buried. But the washing was kept going until its end last week, when the first installment of the fortune, which came too late to be of assistance to John Duncan himself, was handed to the widow. A new earl of Sincleair had just died, and before his death had remembered the John Duncan Sinclair in far away America.

FARMER'S DAUGHTER

Revived After Ghouls Chopped Off Her Fingers.

Vienna, May 13.—An almost incredible story is related here from a small village in Hungary. Helen Fritsch, daughter of a wealthy farmer, was buried the other day, and, according to a wish expressed before she died, she was exhibited in her coffin wearing all her rings and jewels, which were afterward buried with her.

At 9 o'clock in the evening, after the funeral had taken place, the caretaker at the cemetery heard a knock at his window, and looking out was horrified to see the face of the girl he had just buried. He rushed out and just reached her as she fell to the ground in a faint. He carried her into the house, and in doing so noticed that three fingers on her right hand were missing.

The village physician was immediately notified, and when the girl was restored to consciousness she stated that she had been awakened by feeling great pain, and on opening her eyes saw two men climbing up a ladder from the grave.

The top of the coffin had been smashed in by the grave-robbers, who, not being able to pull the rings off her fingers, had chopped the fingers off, and it was the pain of this that had called her back to life from her deathlike trance.

A posse was immediately organized and scoured the country, but no trace of the robbers has been found.

GAMBLERS TO BE LICENSED

Regular Scale of Fines Decided on at Sioux City.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 13.—After deliberating over the matter more than three weeks, Mayor Sears today announced that his administration would favor fining gambling houses and games of chance, with the following scale of prices:

MONTHLY FINES.

Gambling houses	$300 00
Poker room	150 00
Card slot machine	5 00
Other slot machines	2 50

This decision was reached, the mayor says, only after he had held a conference with his political and official constituency and after he had privately interviewed "the business interests" of the town. And while the mayor believes he is doing what a majority of the people of the town desire, he realizes that he must accept the blame, if any blame attaches to restoration of a method of controlling the gaming interests long in vogue in Sioux City.

In doing so he was influenced to a considerable extent by the experience of the past two years, during which gambling thrived semi-officially and was beyond the control of the police, the city meanwhile receiving no revenue from the evil. Under the system which the administration proposes now to inaugurate, the gamblers will be under the eye of the police at all times and those not paying fines, which is in effect a license, will be dealt with in the courts.

Tonight three gambling houses will swing wide their doors, and owners of commodity slot machines who have been timid about displaying them the past week, during which time at least thirty or forty have been in operation, will bring out the devices, blow off the dust and get ready to dig up the fines which will be collected for the month of May.

Already there is a howl from the small fry gamblers—those who either have at present or were figuring on opening poker rooms and gambling houses where faro bank is not played. They maintain that only three and possibly four sets of gamblers can stand the fines demanded for gambling houses and none for poker rooms.

BACHELOR ESCAPED

From a Persistent Fiancee By Committing Suicide.

Paris, May 13.—M. Auguste Bladin, a bachelor, who had always a dread of getting married, was on the point of doing so to escape a suit of breach of promise. To celebrate the last day of his independence he entertained his friends at dinner, drinking heavily.

At 5 o'clock in the morning Blandin, very much intoxicated, started out to visit his future wife. His friends told him to desist, as he was too drunk. He then said there remained nothing for him but suicide. He tore himself loose and jumped into the river. His friends rescued him. Then he threw himself in front of an electric car. The driver pulled up in time to save his life.

But Blandin was bound to die, so he managed to throw himself in front of a motor-cycle, which fractured his skull. He lived long enough to say: "I won't be married, anyhow."

SISTER'S INSANITY

Unbalanced His Mind, and Youth Is Missing.

Urbana, Ohio, May 13.—Hiram Irwin, of Union township, east of this city, has started a search for his missing son Joseph, who wandered away from home in a demented condition about two weeks ago. The father thinks that the boy may have killed himself. Young Irwin has a sister in the Columbus asylum, and he has worried over her condition until he himself has lost his reason. Some time ago he secured paris green and as he was about to take it the poison was taken away from him by his brother-in-law.

Cured His Mother of Rheumatism

"My mother has been a sufferer for many years with rheumatism," says W. H. Howard, of Husband, Pa. "At times she was unable to move at all, while at all times walking was painful. I presented her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried, in fact, she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." For sale by all druggists.

IN SOCK FEET

He Was Allowed to Sit as Juror.

Louisville, Ky., May 13.—Peter Herberger gave the prize reason for not serving as a juror. He was summoned in the case of W. T. Pryse, charged with the murder of Tony Gegg. In explaining his reluctance to serving he said to Judge Pryor:

"I can't sit so long with my shoes on."

Judge Pryor remarked that he did not believe the juror's excuse was a legal one.

"If you let me sit in my sock feet I can stay it out with the rest of them."

"All right," replied Judge Pryor. "We will allow you that privilege."

Later Mr. Herberger caused a sensation when he took his seat in the box and was asked if he had an opinion in the case.

"I should say I have," he exclaimed, and before the court could stop him continued: "I think that young fellow is guilty and ought to be hanged." He was excused, and Judge Pryor directed that the other jurors should not consider the statement.

TWO SISTERS INSANE,

One of Whom Brooded Over Other's Condition.

Bellefontaine, Ohio, May 13.—Miss Nettie Archer, of Quincy, was taken to the Toledo insane asylum, violently insane. Her only sister, Minnie Archer, who had been her constant chum and companion, afttr brooding over the condition of her relative, became suddenly insane and attempted to drown herself in the Miami river at Quincy. A lunacy warrant was issued for her by Probate Judge Plum at the request of Dr. Speece, of Quincy. The young woman will be brought here for an inquest. Only a widowed mother is now left at home.

BUT LITTLE KNOWN

In St. Petersburg of Movements of the Opposing Armies.

Heavy Fighting Expected to Occur Within Two Weeks.

St. Petersburg, May 13.—Emperor Nicholas will leave Tharskoe Selo Sunday evening for Moscow and Kharkoff, returning there on May 22.

Much uncertainty exists here as to exactly what is occurring at the theater of war, as much in regard to the Russian movements as to those of the enemy. Gen. Kuropatkin's plans are most carefully guarded.

Although he is believed to be concentrating troops near Liao Yang, very little actual information on the subject is obtainable.

The general impression, however, is that heavy fighting will occur within a fortnight. Advices received by the general staff indicate that the Japanese are pusing the campaign in Southern Manchuria with great energy. The rainy season, which will render the roads almost impassable, begins in six weeks, and the latest belief here is that the enemy hopes to make his position secure by a decisive engagement before the rainy season sets in. The army organ believes at least eight divisions of the enemy's, not counting 20,000 men in the lower part of the Liao Tung peninsula, are in Southern Manchuria. As to the force advancing along the Littoral from the Yalu, where it is believed another army has landed, information is very incomplete.

The three divisions of Gen. Kuroki's army separated at Feng Wang Cheng. According to reports of the Russian scouts 10,000 infantry, with forty guns and 1500 cavalry, moved north to Samatsy (Sai Ma Ki?), whence they could strike either Mukden or Liao Yang. The flank of this force is protected by a battalion of infantry, three squadrons of cavalry and a mountain battery at Kuang Chan Slang.

A division of Japanese guards proceeded west to Hai Cheng and 10,000 infantry with fifty guns, mostly mountain pieces, moved southwest towards Kai Ping and reached the Salidzaypu ford of the Ta Yang river Tuesday, leaving Wednesday for Suyan Shou. How many reserves came up behind them on the Feng Wang Cheng road is not known. All of these forces, at their rate of traveling, are due at their destinations Sunday or Monday. The Russians are in the dark as to the place where to await the Japanese attack. It is considered probable that the northern force will be heavily reinforced and that a simultaneous attack of the southern division will clear the railroad to Newchwang and permit the enemy to move directly northward and strike the Russian flank at Liao Yang or Mukden, in co-operation with the force which was at Samatsy Wednesday. The Russians intend to make an attempt to hold one or two stations on the railroad, but which of them is not known. According to the last acounth they are still in possession of Kai Ping, Hai Cheng and Ta Che Kiau. It is reported that the guns which had been mounted at Newchwang have been taken to the latter place.

The valley of the Ta Yang, where a large force of the enemy, strength unknown, is moving westward, is generally hilly, but there are fairly good roads to Feng Wang Cheng, Kai Ping and Sun Cheng, on the railroad, and down the east coast of the Liao Tung peninsula to Pitsewo. There are two fords at the Ta Yang, below its confluence with the Zedzih, one at Salidzaypu, twenty miles above Taku Shan and the other sixty miles lower down the Lun Wan Mia, the latter being for cavalry.

No information is vouchsafed regarding the raiding Cossacks, who appeared south of the Yalu.

No further particulars are to be had regarding the blowing up of Port Dalny, which is considered to have been necessary, in view of the Japanese complete command of the sea, to prevent the employmnt of a ready made base of operations against Port Arthur.

The newspapers do not show any disposition to revive the criticism of the action of the commander of the United States cruiser Vicksburg, at Chemulpo, on account of M. Pavloff's report. A high official of the admiralty said to the correspondent of the Associated Press:

"So far as the Russian navy is concerned, the incident is dead and buried. We accepted Commander Marshall's statement that he could not take any foreign sailors on board without instructions."

Grand Duke Cyril is suffering from displacement of the heart, resulting from extreme weakness, and necessitating complete rest for a long time. It is doubtful if he can accompany the Baltic fleet to the far East. The Grand Duke says he owes his life to his adle de camp, Lieut. Von Kube. They were standing together on the bridge of the Petropavlovsky, and Von Kube, who shielded the duke from a flying stanchion, was killed on the spot. The grand duke says that although the Petropavlovsk sank at once by the bows, the momentum carried the flagship forward so that when he dived and came up he found himself floating astern.

PORT ARTHUR CUT OFF.

St. Petersburg, May 13, 6:40 p. m.—Both telegraph and railroad communication with Port Arthur have been cut off.

Liao Yang, May 13.—Nemirovich Danchenko, popularly known as the Russian Archibald Forbes, who is now in the service of the Associated Press, has just arrived here from Port Arthur and furnishes the following chronicle of the events of the first week of the investment of that fortress. Danchenko escaped from the beleaguered city by the last train.

"From Thursday, May 5, the powerful fleet of the enemy's cruisers, the Adsuma, Asama, Idsumo, Iwate and another, the name of which is unknown, together with the flagship Mikasa and the battleship Shikishima, Hatsuez, Asahi, Yashima and the Fuji remained constantly in sight of Port Arthur, departing every night and returning at daylight.

VIEWS THE NEW OFFICE

General Passenger Agent Teasdale of Omaha Visits Duluth.

T. W. Teasdale, general passenger agent of teh Omaha, is here today from St. Paul inspecting the newly fitted general agency office in the Lonsdale building and will try the new Duluth limited for Chicago this evening.

He says business with the line is fair and the outlook very good, especially if good weather, which is needed for the crops, should develop. In the farming districts the conditions are promising, contingent upon rain and the proper assortment of the elements.

Mr. Teasdale does not look for any rate troubles through the recent low Chicago- St. Paul rate, as he says the tickets are so protected as to insure regular business against bad effects.

H. V. Peterson, traveling passenger agent of the Minneapolis & St. Louis, was here yesterday from Minneapolis, and entertained at dinner A. E. Hathaway of this city, city ticket agent of the Great Northern. Mr. Peterson says that he finds conditions pretty good in his territory and some nice business to St. Louis is being developed by the exposition.

Among other railroad men in town today are Walter Wyand, northwestern passenger agent of the Michigan Central at St. Paul; Nelson Vanderpool, same for the New York Central at Chicago, and C. C. Carpenter, passenger agent of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe at Minneapolis. The last three sat in the city ticket office of the Omaha this noon and mutely marveled at the beauty of the quarters, of which all the officers of the Omaha are very proud.

MAY MAKE CHANGE.

Important Meeting of Police Relief Association.

The Duluth Police Relief association will hold its regular meeting this afternoon. Some important changes will probably be made in the by-laws of the association.

Up to the present time all members of the force who become members of the association are entitled to the possession of an insurance policy of $500, payable to their families on their death. A change is contemplated which will entitle the new members to a policy of $100 only for the first year, $200 for the second year, $300 for the third year, $400 for the fourth year and $500 for the fifth and all succeeding years.

The proposition has caused considerable discussion and some opposition to it may develop. The new plan will go into effect in July if it is adopted.

MORE MINERS LEAVE.

Men Deserting Ely In Considerable Numbers.

Six more miners came down from Ely yesterday and bought tickets at the Great Northern office for Birmingham, Ala. A good many miners have left Ely in small detachments since the mines there closed, and some more are expected tomorrow.

Capt. Trezona, who was at the St. Louis during the last stay here, left that hostelry Monday and returned to his home in Ely. The fact of the captain staying at his home unmolested is sufficient evidence of the change in the situation there since the hasty action of the miners in trying to drive the captain, away "for keeps."

Judge of Probate to Also Close Saturday Afternoon.

The offices that will close at noon are those of the register of deeds and of the judge of probate. In some of the other offices which will remain open every Saturday until 4 o'clock, a plan is said to have been completed to permit half of the employes to get off the entire day one Saturday, during the summer months, and the other half of the employes will get a holiday the following Saturday.

District court, after it completes the business of this term, will not be in session until the September term, and things will be, to a large degree, pretty quiet about the court house during the summer vacation of court.

YATES IN LEAD

On Balloting for Governor In Illinois Republican Convention.

Six Ballots Have Been Taken Without Any Decision.

Springfield, Ill., May 13.—Delegates to the Republican state convention were confronted with reports that a stampede to Frank O. Lowden, of Chicago, for governor, had been planned by his friends, the time to be the taking of the third ballot. A seemingly well authenticated statement was made that United States Senator Hopkins on that ballot would throw Kane county to Lowden and that a score of Hopkins' pictures would be hoisted at the moment as a token that the senator is for Lowden. The Yates managers declared, however, that the governor was in a stronger position than ever and that Yates would be nominated. Charles S. Deneen also was confident of making gains as the ballot progressed. His friends contended that, if the adherents of Deneen and Attorney General Hamlin stood firm, there would probably be a deadlock lasting through the day.

John H. Pierce who, with thirty-five votes, has been looking for the nomination as a "dark horse," was not expected to appear in the first ballot and his name, it was said, might not be presented at all, unless the balloting proved protracted. The committee on credentials were in session until 3 o'clock this morning. The Yates-Lowden slate of contested delegates went through exactly as framed up by the state central committee. The credentials committee spent considerable time in the concluding hours in discussing a propositon to increase the vote of Cook county (Chicago). It was finally decided to give Cook two additional votes.

The wild scenes which characterized the convention last night were repeated today. A daring young Yates adherent scaled one of the stringers on the roof of the convention hall and from his perilous position suspended a portrait of the governor. Immediately a follower of Deneen duplicated the performance with half a dozen pictures, while aWrner and Hamlin men, even more daring, carried the great canvas banners to other points of vantage above the heads of the delegates.

Speaker Cannon called the convention to order with a great megaphone, through which he announced that unless order was maintained he would adjourn the meeting to the hall of representatives and exclude all except delegates and representatives of the press.

Judge Elbridge Haneey, chairman of the committee on credentials, presented a report recommending that the sitting delegates be declared the delegates of the convention. This was adopted and then, on recommendation of the committee on organization the temporary organization was made permanent. The committee on delegates to the national convention reported as follows:

Delegates at largs—Senators Shelby M. Cullom and Albert J. Hopkins, Speaker Joseph M. Cannon and Governor Yates. This report was adopted unanimously and the committee on resolutions then reported through Walter J. Reeves.

The platform gives credit to the money policy of the national administration in assisting to bring about present unexampled prosperity and pledges the party to the maintenance of the gold standard. Loyalty to the protective tariff is re-affirmed. Appropriations are favored to place the navy in point of strength and efficiency in its proper position among the navies of the world. The possession of the Philippine islands gives the United States the right to a voice in the affairs of that part of the world, and the action of Secretary Hay in securing the open door policy of trade in the Orient is recognized as the greatest diplomatic achievement of modern times.

Retention of the Philippines is favored, as well as the maintenance of the open door policy of trade in Eastern Asia. The policy of the Democratic party in its desire to abandon the Philippines is denounced. The attitude of congress and President Roosevelt regarding anti-trust legislation, is commended, and such further legislation, state and national as may be required is recommended. The administration of Roosevelt is praised and the delegates to the national convention are instructed for him and to use all honorable means to secure the nomination of Congressman Robert R. Hitt, of Illinois, as vice president. A compulsory primary election law and a civil service law for the state are favored, as well as a new charter for the city of Chicago.

The vote on adoption of the report was unanimous. A resolution was adopted providing that the names of candidates be presented by congressional districts and that no nominating speeches be permitted. Another resolution forbidding the change of votes during or after a roll call was then adopted, and the call of the districts began. Candidates for governor were named as follows:

Frank O. Lowden, Charles S. Deneen, Howland J. Hamlin, Vespasian Warner, Richard Yates and L. Y. Sherman. The first ballot was then ordered, the method of voting being a roll call by counties.

The first ballot resulted:: Yates, 507 2-3; Lowden, 352 2-3; Deneen, 386 2-3; Hamiln, 121; Warner, 45; Sherman, 87.

There being no choice, the clerk proceeded with the second roll call, which resulted: Yates, 504 2-3; Lowden, 390 53-66; Deneen, 383 35-66; Hamiln, 117 2-3; Warner, 42 1-6; Sherman, 63 1-6.

The sixth ballot showed practically no change, being officially announced as follows: Yates, 493; Lowden, 404 1-66; Deneen, 383 57-66; Hamiln, 112; Warner, 34 33-66; Sherman, 54; Pierce, 21 33-66.

MARKET IS WEAK

Bearish Influence Results In Slump of Cent In Wheat.

Weekly Clearances Lowest In Many Years—Flax Lower.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 13.—The wheat market started out fairly steady this morning, but the undertone was weak and after holding within a narrow range for some time the market had a sharp slump and closed about a cent lower than yesterday. The Argentine shipments were heavy, the weather was reported favorable everywhere, and toward the latter part of the day Bradstreet reported that American clearances for the week were only 734,000 bus of wheat, one of the lightest weeks ever known. Duluth exporters worked a few loads of Manitoba and new crop winter wheat for export. The Liverpool market closed 3/4@7/8d lower, largely owing to the heavy Argentine shipments. Paris was 3/4@2c lower and Antwerp unchanged, loss in July of 1c. Chicago 7/8-1c. Minneapolis 1c and New York also 1c. In Duluth Sec. September lost 3/4c and in Minneapolis 3/4-7/8c.

Both the Modern Miller and Snow crop reportsw re bearish. Snow's report says: "Weather conditions wholly favorable, with wheat plant gaining in vigor and giving evidence of good stooling. Spring wheat seeding completed except in Red River valley, where considerable low land will not be planted. Total acreage likely to be about as last year. Conditions favorable to give the plant a good start. Oats making good, even, growth and general prospect unusually favorable. Rapid progress in corn planting with soil in good condition and acreage materially larger than last year. Planting likely to be completed fully as early as usual despite increased acreage."

The Modern Miller said: The winter wheat crop has been favored by excellent weather conditions so far during the month of May and improved prospects are reported from all sections where crop could be benefitted. The improvement extends even to the states and territories where the crop suffered most damage and loss in acreage. The outlook continues best in Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, south of the Ohio river and on the Pacific coast."

Stocks of wheat at Duluth are estimated to decrease 30,000 bus. this week.

Car receipts at Duluth were 11 against 21 a year ago, and at Minneapolis 65 against 87 a year ago, making a total for the Northwest of 76 against 108 a year ago. Chicago received 19 against 49 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 169,360 bus., last year 199,140 bus. Shipments 244,120 bus., last year 375,280 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 47,708 bus. Argentine shipments this week were 3,664,000 bus., against 3,232,000 bus. last week, and 2,104,000 bus. last year.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed unchanged to 1/2c lower. In the Chicago market July corn closed 1 1/4-3/8c lower. July oats closed 1/2-5/8c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 245,660 bus., last year 334,856 bus. Shipments 348,682 bus., last year 738,956 bus. Clearances were 33,659 bus. Argentine shipments were 861,000 bus this week, against 350,000 last week and 672,000 bus last year.

In the Duluth market wheat was not active. July opened unchanged at 91 1/4c and sold between 91c and 91 1/2c up to 11 o'clock, when it sold at 91 3/8c. From that point it slumped off to 90 1/4c and closed there, a loss of 1c. May also lost 1c and September 3/4c.

Cash prices continued on the same basis, May price to 3c over for No. 1 northern.

Flax was very dull and lower. July lost 1/2c, closing at $1.08 1/4. May and September also lost 1/2c and October 1/2c. Stocks of flax at Duluth are expected to increase 50,000 bus this week. Argentine shipments of flax this week were 1,080,000 bus, against 976,000 bus last week and 680,000 bus last year.

Oats lost 1c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Weak Undertone Prevailed In the Wheat Pit.

Chicago, May 13.—Under the influence of heavy commission house selling due to lower cables and liberal Argentine shipments a weak undertone prevailed in wheat today. July opened a shade to 1/4@3/4c lower at 84 1/2@84 3/4c on a lack of support, the price declined to 84 3/4c. Small receipts and wet weather in the Northwest brought out enough demand to cause a rally to 85 3/4c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported 76 cars against 74 cars last week and 136 cars a year ago.

The weekly crop report of a local expert was decidedly bearish, showing a marked improvement in the condition of the growing wheat. Heavy liquidation followed the giving out of this report, and in consequence the market experienced a severe slump, July selling down to 83 3/4c. The close was at the low point, July showing a loss of 7/8@1c from yesterday's final figures.

Weakness in wheat had a depressing influence on corn, but prices showed only a slight decline. July opened a shade lower at 48 3/4c, sold at 49c and then reacted to 48 3/4@49c. Local receipts were 59 cars, with three of contract grade.

Bearish crop reports and the break in wheat caused heavy realizing in corn, resulting in extreme weakness. July sold off to 47 3/4c and closed at the bottom, with a loss of 1 1/4@1 3/4c.

Oats were steady notwithstanding the easier tone of wheat and corn. There was a fair demand for the July option and little disposition to sell. That delivery opened unchanged to 39c, eased off to 38 3/4c, then steadied at 38 7/8@39c. Local receipts were 95 cars.

In spite of a strong hog market provisions were easier on realizing by outsiders. July pork opened unchanged to 2 1/2c up at $11.25 to $11.27 1/2, declining to $11.20. Lard was unchanged at $6.45 and sold off to $6.37 1/2. Ribs were up 2 1/2c at $6.40, but reacted to $6.37 1/2.

Close: Wheat—May, 90c; July, 83 3/4@84 3/4c; September, 79c; old, 80 1/4c. Corn—May, 46 7/8c; July, 47 3/8c; September, 47 1/4c, December, 43 1/4c. Ribs—May, $6.25; July, $.35@6.37 1/2; September, $6.52 1/2. Rye—May, 73c; July, 65 1/2@66c; August, 65c. Flax—On track, northwestern, $1.09 1/2; southwestern, $1; May, $1.01; July, $1.02; September, $1.05. Timothy—May, $3; September, $3.25. Clover—May, $10.75. Barley—Cash, 39@57c. Cash wheat—No. 2 red, $1.03@1.07; 3 red, $1.01@1.06; 2 hard, 91@94c; 3 hard, 81@93c; 1 northern, 94@96c; 2 northern, 92@95c; 3 spring, 85@95c. Corn—No. 2, 49@50 1/2c; 3, 48 1/2@50c. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Lower cables and fine weather with p or support were the causes of the weakness. Snow's report and the Modern Miller were bearish. There is the same dull cash situation as heretofore. Under the favorable crop developments and the lack of export business and domestic demand, bullish sentiment is rapidly becoming modified. The whole tone is heavy and while reactions are likely, we think wheat may be sold on the hard spots for considerably lower prices.

Corn—There was scattered liquidation and with the recently eliminated short interest not much support. The outlook seems rather hopeless for an immediate settlement of the strike and the West reports increased offerings of corn. Planting is progressing under favorable conditions and the promise is for a large acreage. The support to prices is not very good.

Oats—There was considerable selling pressure with scattered liquidation induced by the weakness in corn and wheat. The delayed strike settlement helps to increase the bearish feeling, but the cash oats and the May seem strongly held.

Provisions—It was a dull market, the same absence of good buying and pressure from scattered liquidation as heretofore. Receipts rather light and the distributive demand a little in excess of last year. The speculative buying and the speculative situation, however, are not very encouraging.

Chicago: An Odessa letter received, said: "Our market, notwithstanding the dullness of the consuming countries is firm. Since our recent decline we have maintained prices owing to scarcity of stocks up country, at the ports and because of discouraging crop outlook. Drought is the great enemy of South Russia. Crops might still be saved with good rains. With delay, crop failure is certain. Spring wheat and barley will be most influenced by drouth. Winter crops look poor. Maize planting is not yet begun, the ground being as hard as stone."

Capt. J. M. Phillips writes from Newton, Kas.: "I think wheat in three of our counties around here will make an average crop. Some fields are very fine, some are either too poor or too thin. From all I can learn from machine and traveling men wheat will make half or two-thirds of a crop in the Western section of Kansas. This territory has the best prospects of any. I have no opinion on the market. I think the deferred futures are high enough, but they may go higher on account of the scarcity. Many farmers are talking about holding wheat on account of the war. Harvest will be late."

Coe Commission Co.: The wheat market opened steady, but there has been quite a lot of wheat coming on the market throughout the morning which the market was unable to absorb, the result is lower prices. Reports from the Southwest are more encouraging. Reports from the Northwest are of continued rain, snow and cold unseasonable weather. We must have clear warm weather in the Northwest to raise anything like an average crop; therefore, we advise great caution in selling wheat short. Do not let a few good reports make you too bearish. We still believe that there is a better opportunity for making money on the long side of the market than there is on the short. Eighty cents is not enough to rthe new crop futures. The old crop futures will take care of themselves. Do not sell them short.

Corn and oats are weak in sympathy with wheat. On any further break would buy July corn and oats.

Provisions continue on their downward course, helped today by the weakness in the grain markets.

A NEW LOW RECORD

Is Again Made By United States Steel Common Stock.

The Market Was Fairly Active and Very Erratic.

New York, May 13.—A dull and drooping tone characterized the opening market today, a few of the specialties only, including United States Steel preferrd, showing small gains. A block of 1200 shares of Southern Pacific and of 2200 shares of Pennsylvania carried those stocks down 1/4. There were no other notable transactions.

Indications of support of United States Steel and some large purchases of Amalgamated Copper strengthened the market. Most of the important stocks sold fractionally above yesterday's close. United States Steel preferred gained 7/8. Republic Steel preferred 1 1/8 and Amalgamated 1 1/4. Consolidated Gas showed some feverishness but eventually got up a point. General Electric ran off 3 and recovered 2. St. Louis & San Francisco declined 1.

The railroad stocks generally lost their gains, with a reaction in the market after 11 o'clock. United States Steel sold down to 8 3/4, a new low record. The market steadied later and made slight recoveries, but became very dull. National lead rose 1/8. Just before noon United States Steel sagged again to 8 3/8. Bonds were steady at noon.

Dealings in the general market showed some firmness despite irregular movements in the principal specialties. United States Steel preferred was sold freely to below 52c. Consolidated Gas also weakened to the extent of a point while Amalgamated rose resolutely to 51. General Electric made a rise of 2 1/2 and Metropolitan Street Railway was also nearly a point higher.

Buying of the railroads ceased and prices reacted on the heavy liquidation; 1 United States Steel. The common broke to 8 3/4 and the preferred to 51 1/4. Reports elsewhere were small, the buying holding generally around last night's level. Anaconda moved up 2 points and Westinghouse Electric 3. The latter reacted 2.

Prices tended downwards again in the late dealings. Amalgamated Copper reacted a point and St. Paul was forced down 3@c. Of the steel industrials, Colorado Fuel, Republic Steel preferred and Pressed Steel Car preferred lost 1 to 1 1/4. New York Central, Delaware & Hudson, Erie second preferred, Hocking Valley and Colorado Gas declined 7/8 to 1 1/4. Great Northern preferred rose 2. There was some buying to cover shorts on the decline. General Electric lost its gain. The closing was irregular.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: There is no improvement in the tone or action of the market. It is heavy and prices continue to drag. Further exports of gold, the uniform unfavorable monthly reports of the railroads and the continued selling pressure on Steel stocks are forcing scattered liquidation and creating a bearish sentiment among professional traders. Bank statement tomorrow is thought will be unfavorable. There is, of course, a large short interest but there is not much in sight to disturb them. The tendency is toward a little tighter money. The immediate outlook is, we think, very favorable.

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has been fairly active and very erratic today. As a rule stocks have been weak, but there were many exceptions and only a few of the changes were of consequence. Amalgamated Copper continued buoyant while Steel stocks were again very heavy. St. Paul was steadily sold and Pennsylvania was also liberally supplied. There was very little news. Forecasts of the bank statement were less unfavorable than expected. The market closed with a rally led by Amalgamated Copper. As a rule, however, final prices were not much above the lowest.

Evans to Paine, Webber & Co.: Liquidation has at last started in on a large scale. The wonder is, not that it has begun, but that it should have been so long in starting. If Saturday's exhibit of the bank statement makes any such showing as last Saturday it will cause some uneasiness in Wall street. The London account is expanded to such enormous proportions and new bond issues are coming along so rapidly which promise to expand it still more than the question of reserves may soon become much more important than it has of late. Rallies in the market are to be expected but I believe prices must go considerable lower and I favor selling stocks whenever they show strength.

S. T. Welch & Co.: The securities market opened a shade easier all around than yesterday's close and after the initial trading gained strength as the morning progressed. All the active issues show gains over yesterday's close. While the bears have all the news in their favor lately, we do not look for any further material decline. Buy stocks on these declines, especially Union Pacific, St. Paul and Atchison will make you money. The talk that the United States Steel corporation will reduce the dividend on the preferred stock and that Schwab is selling out his holdings and will retire from the directory of that corporation is causing the weakness in the steel shares.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: If the raid in United States Steel preferred was for the purpose of forcing liquidation in the general list, it was not very successful. Stocks seem to be well held, and therein lays about the only strong point in the situation. In case of a further break I would buy St. Paul near 140, Brooklyn Rapid Transit about 43 for ten points, and others in proportion. Trade conservatively. Southern Pacific ought to be good for a long pull, but should go lower first.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The general market was influenced more by the weakness of Steel than by the strength of Amalgamated Copper, but the average loss through the list was less than half a point. It is very apparent that strong interest have been selling Steel and even at this level we would rather sell than buy it. The movement in Amalgamated Copper is based on indications of a Heinze settlement. We see no indications of public buying and the movement must be getting its momentum from a tremendous short interest or some one is accumulating a lot of the stock.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 13.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 12@13 points on the old and of 16@18 points on the new crop months, which was a surprisingly good showing in view of the disappointing cables. The initial declines were due to liquidation, but it soon developed that shorts were covering. There seemed to be a good demand for July from spot interests, and the market soon rallied to about the closing prices of last night, on the old crop, with the new crop showing slight net gains as a result of a rather unfavorable weather map. There was no rain along the Atlantic coast, but further precipitation in the western belt, where temperatures were too low in some sections. Trading was quite active at first, but became less so on the advance, with the market at the end of the first hour quiet but firm.

Cotton spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 13.65; middling gulf, 13.90; sales, 200 bales. Futures closed quiet; May, 13.40; June, 13.31; July, 13.40; August, 13.11; September, 11.76; October, 11.29; November, 11.21; December and January, 11.20.

TRIPLETS BORN AT WRENSHALL

Duluth People Send Clothing and Necessaries to the Family.

An express package, containing bundles of baby clothes and a varied collection of little necessaries, consigned to Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sawesleski, Wrenshall, Minn., was sent free of charge, over the Northern Pacific this morning. The articles were donated by women of Duluth, and were for triplets, born in the Sawesleski family a few days ago, and for the mother, who is reported to be doing well.

The parents in the case are a German farming people in poor circumstances, living two miles out of Wrenshall, Minn., who are without money to purchase necessaries. The case was brought to the attention of Duluth women, with the result above noted. The express company readily agreed to send the package without charge to anyone.

The triplets consist of two girls and a boy. No doctor was present at the time of their birth. The parents were entirely alone on the farm. The boy weighed six pounds and the two girls five pounds each. All are said to be in excellent health.

OLD ENOUGH TO KNOW BETTER

Would-Be Detective Wants Permit to Carry Revolver.

"Boys are fsequently caught by these detective agency advertisements, but it is seldom that a grown man gets landed," said a city official yesterday afternoon, as the door closed on a visitor who had just left.

"That man who was just in here wanted a permit to carry a revolver. He said he had become a member of some detective agency. He had paid over $2 in return for which he had received a large nickel badge about as big as a plate, which informed the general public that he was a 'detective' and some kind of a diploma which he could get framed and hung up on the wall of his room.

"He told me that he would frequently be thrown in the company of dangerous criminals and he wanted permission to carry a revolver about his person. I turned him

BORECK ON TRIAL

Man Who Robbed Another of $300 Is In Court.

Said to Have Spent Most of Money In Chicago.

William Wahl, who was indicted for receiving stolen property in connection with the hold-up game worked on Bert Bailey, by Patrick Egan, in a bowery saloon, April 14, did not stand trial this morning as was expected. Egan was yesterday convicted of taking Bailey's purse containing $10 and a ticket and, this morning, Wahl changed his plea of not guilty to guilty. He will be sentenced later.

Joseph Boreck, the young Polander, who is accused of robbing his roommate at the Red Star hotel of $300, the night of April 4 last, and who established a record as a rapid spender by scattering all but 75 cents of the amount in Chicago saloons within the few days elapsing until his capture, is being tried today on the charge of grand larceny in the first degree.

Felix Matel, the person who claims to have been robbed, was on the stand this morning and related how he met Boreck in Rhinelander, Wis., and responded to his inquiries as to the opportunities offered for work in this part of the country. Matel says that Boreck was anxious to come to the head of the lakes, as he had never before been in Duluth, so they started, stopping first in Ashland.

Matel says that when they reached Duluth they put up at the Red Star hotel, on the Bowery, both he and Boreck sleeping in the same room. He testified that he had a few drinks before retiring, but denied that he was drunk. His pocketbook containing the money, he claimed, was placed between the mattress and springs for safe keeping. When he awoke he found both Boreck and the $300 missing.

A description of Boreck was sent out by the authorities, and a few days afterward he was arrested by the Chicago police, Chicago being his home before he came to the Northwest.

Detective Frank Schulte, who went to Chicago for Boreck, says the young man told him that after spending a little of the money for new clothes and a watch, he left the rest in the saloons of Chicago. Boreck insisted, however, that he found the money on the floor under the bed.

Boreck was the last witness called in his own behalf before court adjourned this noon. He claimed that Matel urged him to come to Duluth and that when they were in Ashland Matel said he did not have any money and induced Boreck to pay both fares from Ashland to Duluth. Matel, he said, afterward paid back the amount of his fare.

Boreck's story was that he went to their room in the hotel and found Matel dead drunk on the bed. He claims that he saw the pocketbook on the floor, under the bed, and, after trying in vain to arouse Matel, he took the purse and boarded the next train for Chicago. He said he first opened the purse in a saloon in Chicago and found $250, which he spent for clothes, a watch, which he afterward lost, and the rest for drinks.

Boreck claims that he did not know Matel had any money, and that the latter always gave the impression he did not.

Boreck is defended by Joseph Cook. He gave his testimony through an interpreter.

Individual Steamship Managers Make Propositions to Masters.

Cleveland, May 13.—Capt. Paul Howell, of the Masters' and Pilots' association, stated today that upon request of the managers of passenger lines running out of Chicago, he will meet them in conference in the latter city probably on Tuesday next, when it is expected an effort will be made to reach an agreement whereby the boats can be operated. According to Howell, negotiations have been opened with his organization by managers of several steamship lines, looking to the starting out of their vessels. It is pointed out that this will involve the severing of connections with the Lake Carriers' association on the part of vessel companies, should such an agreement be made.

Cleveland, May 13.—The deadlock between the Lake Carrier's association and the Masters' and Pilots' association over the wage scale question continued today, with no indications of an early settlement.

The executive committee of the Lake Carriers met and discussed the situation fully. President Livingstone and the other members of the committee declined to talk for publication.

WANTS A CONFERENCE.

A well-known vesselman said this afternoon that he did not believe the summons of General Manager Coulby, of the Pittsburg Steamship company to his men, to have them report to his office at Cleveland, was equivalent to telling them to go to work.

"He wants a conference with the men and a chance to make them a proposition," stated The Herald's informant. "He has not ordered them to work in my opinion, and I do not believe he expects to unless he knows they will go. He likes to get his men together and have an understanding with them. When he was with the Pickands-Mather company that was one of his pet ideas, to have conferences with his men, and that's what he's after now. He's not the man to take any arbitrary action without the most strenuous circumstances making it necessary."

SWEDISH CHORUS

Sixty Singers From University of Lund to Visit Duluth.

Coming to St. Louis Fair —Will Visit Ten Cities.

The chorus of sixty student singers from the university of Lund, Sweden, under the leadership of Dr. F. Berg, the foremost musician of the Swedish nation, to be brought to the St. Louis exposition at great expense, will appear in Duluth on July 1, either at the Lyceum or the First Methodist church. Only ten other cities in the country, most of them in the East, larger than Duluth, will have the pleasure of entertaining this famous musical organization, which has been declared above competition, and which has captured three first prizes at Paris expositions, including the Paris world's fair.

When it was announced that the chorus was to be brought to America, Duluth Swedish-Americans set about to see if the organization could not be prevailed upon to appear in Duluth. The fact that the project for getting the club here had met with success was announced last night at a meeting of those interested in the proposition, held in the office of Dr. J. J. Eklund, 7 East Superior street, where an organization was effected and committees to make the necessary arrangements were appointed.

The chorus is said to differ from the ordinary American student clubs in that the majority of the members are graduates of the university, and therefore many of them are of middle age. The study of music and voice culture is made more a part of the university course in Sweden than in America, and because of this it is claimed there are more good singers among the Swedish university graduates than among the American graduates.

The American trip of the famous chorus is under the personal protection of the crown prince of Sweden. King Oscar himself donated 5,000 crowns, about $1,100 in American money, to assist in defraying the expense of the trip, which will amount to several thousand dollars. C. A. Smith, the rich Minneapolis lumberman, donated $1,000. Other large donations came from America. Whatever profits may be netted from the appearance of the students will go to the Augustana college at Rock Island, Ill.

The program in Duluth on July will consist of Swedish and German national hymns and songs, as well as several pieces in the English language. Several hundred people are expected to attend the event from the range, and special trains provided for their use.

The following committees of prominent men of Duluth and Superior were appointed at the meeting last evening:

Executive committee: Dr. J. J. Eklund, chairman; C. W. Ericson, treasurer; Carl Friberg, secretary.

Committee on tickets: O. N. Lundberg, chairman; John Sundin, S. Jernberg, Gust Bergquist, Rev. H. Hendrichson, Rev. A. F. Elmquist, Rev. J. A. Krantz, Rev. Carl Solomonson, Rev. K. Forsell, Rev. Albert Johanson, Rev. John A. Anderson, N. L. Bendz, Bror Florman, Rev. Louis Rietxz, Professor A. F. Lundholm, A. Hoglberg, William Carlson, Professor K. A. Ostergren, S. Brandt, Otto Gefvert, John Eckman, William Anderson, John E. Lundmark, J. A. Wohlin and Rev. A. Edstaam.

Committee on reception: C. W. Ericson, chairman; Rev. C. Solomonson, Dr. J. J. Eklund, Rev. A. F. Elmquist, Rev. H. Hendrichson, Rev. J. W. Soderman, Rev. A. Idstrom, Rev. L. Rietxz, Dr. E. APPLY FOR AID.

Several Present Appeals to Poor Authorities.

With a large bump on his head, surrounded by a deep and ugly looking cut, Andrew Olson applied at the county poor commissioners' offices for medical assistance. Olson is 30 years old, a cook by trade, but has not been working for some time past. He claimed that while he was asleep in a room in the Nicollet hotel, several days ago, somebody entered and hit him over the head with a beer bottle. The injury had not been attended to for some time, other than to put a big plaster over it. Olson was sent to the county physician.

Fred Riddle was taken suddenly ill with meningitis at the Branch Bethel this morning, and application was made to the county poor authorities to look after him. Riddle had a hospital ticket on St. Francis hospital in Old Superior, and the hospital authorities, when notified, directed that he be sent over in an ambulance at their expense. It is not expected that Riddle will survive his illness.

A county patient with a broken leg was brought down from Virginia this morning and taken to the Red Cross hospital. It is understood that the man was hurt in an accident, the details of which are not yet known at the commissioners' office.

DEFENSE BEGINS.

Washington, May 13.—With the conclusion of the testimony of F. B. Kidder, of Chicago, formerly secretary of the Physicians' institute, who resumed the stand in the Tyner-Barrett case today, and that of P. V. Keyser, a clerk in the postoffice department and formerly private secretary to Gen. Tyner, who identified a considerable amount of correspondence, the prosecution closed its case with the reservation of the right to call one other witness who was not at hand.

The first witnes for the defense was F. C. Huebner, a clerk in the office of the assistant attorney general for the postoffice department.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT AT THE VIENNA

The popular restaurant and home bakery at No. 207 West Superior street, heretofore owned and operated by Mrs. E. H. Fish, has been purchased by Charles Schober, who has had a long experience in catering to the best class of trade.

In soliciting the patronage of those who are and have been customers of Mrs. Fish, he need only say that he will conduct the business with the same regard for their wishes as Mrs. Fish has. Of those who have not heretofore patronized this store, he only asks one trial order. He knows that it will be filled in a way that will make the purchaser his steady customer thereafter.

Meals, simple or elaborate, as the customer may desire, will be served at all hours, and he invites the public to use his store as a meeting place, and they will find it an ideal lunching room.

Home-made bread, cakes and pastry of every description will be on hand and for sale at reasonable prices, and will be delivered to any part of the city.

PORT ARTHUR SAID TO HAVE FALLEN, BUT THE RUMORS ARE WITHOUT ANY CONFIRMATION

Japanese Move Steadily Northward and Occupy Suo Yin.

Kwan Tien Sien Also In Hands of the Japs.

Liao Yang Is Believed to Be the Objective Point.

London, May 14.—A telegram from Paris says a rumor is current there that Port Arthur has fallen and that 10,000 men were killed during the engagement. Nothing confirmatory is obtainable in London.

The rumor is probably false. Neither St. Petersburg nor Tokio has had any intimation of the beginning of an attack on Port Arthur.

Shan Hai Kwan, May 14.—Japanese troops from Feng Wang Cheng occupied Suo Yin, sixty miles east of Liao Yang on the mail road on Thursday. Their number is not known. The country is hilly.

A detachment of Japanese troops has occupied Kwan Tien Sien, sixty miles northeast of Feng Wang Cheng. On Thursday last a detachment of Japanese attacked and dispersed 300 Russian cavalrymen and captured a wounded officer and two men. Russian cavalry were retiring from Tuch Li Chan.

LIAO YANG

Believed By Russians to Be Japs' Objective Point.

St. Petersburg, May 14.—The army organ is disinclined to believe that Hai Cheng is the Japanese objective. It says the division of guards now marching in that direction probably will swerve northward toward Liao Yang following by the forces now at Shyan Chow and combining with the division reported to be at Somaitzi, make a combined attack on Liao Yang.

The Novoe Vreyma's expert estimates the forces advancing against Liao Yang at 100,000 men, with 50,000 horses and 270 guns and believes the Russians are retiring upon their base.

"It is a critical and anxious moment," the paper continues, "General Kuropatkin allowing the enemy to take the offensive, watching for a favorable moment to strike a decisive blow."

Although the issue price of the new Russian loan is still a secret here, the newspapers express satisfaction with its terms. The Novoe Vreyma points out that 7 per cent was paid during the Turkish war and that now the rate is only 5 per cent, whereas the Japanese are paying at least 6 per cent for a smaller amount.

The emperor has accepted $750,000 for the navy from Count Stroganow, from the Patriotic Emergency fund, consisting of several million roubles deposited in the imperial bank by denaters to his majesty's grand father.

The army medical department completed its prophylact measures for the far East and are now able to cope with any epidemic among the troops. A disinfecting apparatus has been sent to every point in Manchuria and also every kind of serum, to the total value of $75,000. Every soldier was vaccinated after passing Baikal. Smallpox is the only contagious disease reported by the Siberian hospitals. There have been three cases at Chita, fourteen at Verkhneudinsk and fifteen at Allan.

SHARP ENGAGEMENT

Said to Have Occurred Near Liao Yang.

Newchwang, May 13.—(Delayed in Transmission.)—There is a persistent rumor here of a sharp fight between the Russian and Japanese, near Liao Yang, which it is impossible to confirm officially. Otherwise, according to the latest authentic information regarding the movement of the Japanese army, it is believed that if the three divisions had passed Feng Wang Cheng toward Liao Yang they would have to go through the difficult mountain pass of Mao Tien Ling, where they would be forced to turn back. It is not believed that they would attempt this now, but rather turn towards Newchwang, establishing a base there and using the Liao river to get above to Mukden.

The censor here is passing almost nothing in the form of news, and correspondents are threatened with expulsion. The Russian agent is watching the telegraph offices on the railroad, between Newchwang and Shan Hai Kwan, and reporting all messages filed to the local censors.

Supplies are being rushed out of this place and the Russian authorities are busy dismantling the gunboat Sivouch, preparatory to her ultimate destruction.

The Japanese troops continue landing at Pitzewo and the railroad has been cut again, seventeen miles of track being gone. Communication, however, for that distance has been kept open by the aid of carts. The Port Arthur mail is about thirty-six hours' old when it gets to Newchwang. This morning a few more troops left and moved to the Russian camp, three miles east of the city, which is now practically unprotected. Two correspondents went over the entire town last night and did not see a single sentry on duty. The natives are growing more restless as the Russians continue to move out.

ADVANCE GUARD

Of Japanese Appear Below Lien Chen Kuan.

Liao Yang, May 14.—The advance guard of the first Japanese army has appeared six miles below Lien Chen Kuan, on the road to Liao Yang. It is not making any further advance, but is erecting strong fortifications. The Japanese movements were made with the greatest care.

A persistent report is current here that a Russian squadron of cavalry succeeded in getting behind the Japanese, who were several squadrons strong, and in occupying Kuan Dian San. The unexpected appearance of the Russians caused the Japanese to evacuate the town at once and retire toward the Yalu. The report is believed to be correct.

Professor Karavieff, who has arrived here on a train from Port Arthur, asserts that he saw, near Polandien station, the body of a Russian soldier, one of the railway patrol, cut into quarters. In a skirmish, near Polandien, one of the patrols was wounded. On the Japanese approaching the soldier feigned death, and it is said a Japanese officer passing shot him in the mouth.

Col. Elshen, who has returned from a reconnaissance of the district, near the river Taitsi, was attacked May 9 by Chinese bandits. One Cossack and two persons were killed by the bandits.

ALL WELL AT VLADIVOSTOK

Admiralty Denies Rumors of Engagement There.

St. Petersburg, May 14.—The admiralty denies the rumored engagement of Rear Admiral Jessens' fleet. A telegram from Vladivostok this morning reports all well there.

The admiralty admits having received a message from Port Arthur several days old, in which Rear Admiral Witt scoft reports that everything was as well as could be expected. There is no further information regarding Japanese activity around Port Arthur. The Tokio dispatch recording Admiral Kataokas operations and the loss of the Japanese torpedo boat in Kerr bay near Port Dalny, was read by the admiralty with the greatest anticipation and some satisfaction.

The general staff approves of the destruction of the piers at Port Dalny. A member of the staff said to the correspondent of the Associated Press:

"Port Dalny would not be of the slightest use in the defense of Port Arthur while it would be a fine place for the besiegers to land."

add WAR

KAO LI MAN

Is Being Strongly Fortified By the Russians.

Antung, Manchuria, May 5. (Thursday), via Seoul, May 14.—The Russians who retreated after the battle of Mar 1, are fortifying Kao Li Man. Strong reinforcements from Feng Wang Cheng joined them. Their positions are good and the next fight is expected to take place there. The enemy has built earthworks on the hills north and south of the village and have many pieces of artillery. The country about Kao Li Man is very mountainous and steep.

In retreating, the Russians burned their buildings and supplies and devastated the country, so that the Japanese should not find support.

Two Russian detachments while retreating had an engagement at Tan Shang Cheng, east of Hamaton, in the darkness on Sunday night, one mistaking the other for Japanese. The result was that 110 Russians were killed and 70 wounded. The first party was entrenched on a hill and mistook the other for approaching Japanese. The story was obtained by a Japanese patrol from the inhabitants from the village and is supported by the fact that there are many fresh graves in the vicinity.

SAYS JAPS WILL WIN.

British Officer Expresses Pro-Japanese Sentiments.

New York, May 14.—Lieut. Gen. Clement Wilkinson, K. C. B., a retired officer of the British army, who was a passenger on the steamship Campania from Liverpool today, expressed strong pro-Japanese sympathies. He said in an interview that Russia is practically sure to be beaten by the Japanese in the present war. He was equally sure that Russia will not be able to recover her lost prestige. He said the sentiments he expressed were the sentiments of the officers of the English army and navy who know how well Japan was prepared for war and how helpless Russia was and is. He said further that Russia has been living for a long time on her past and money to be spent on war and fighting ships was squandered or stolen. Gen. Wilkinson declared that Japan, who is up to the most modern military tactics, will defeat Russia both on land and sea as easily as she did China.

"The Russians may be a brave people," continued Gen. Wilkinson, "but new they are not pitted against the ignorant Turks. The Japanese are lively little fellows, good strategists and are provided with the latest implements of war. The disasters that have befallen the Russians are yet but small and in the first great battle that takes place they will be annihilated by the Japanese."

POSSIBILITY OF PEACE.

The Report Is Again In Circulation at Berlin.

New York, May 14.—On excellent authority, it is asserted by the Times correspondent at Berlin, the report is again in circulation that there is a strong possibility of peace in the far East. What makes the news doubly interesting is the belief that the Russian emperor is now being urged by the war party to end the struggle.

The basis of settlement suggested is the independence of Korea under the protectorate of Japan, Manchuria to remain Chinese territory. The integrity of Manchuria has been guaranteed by a secret treaty between Japan and China. If a settlement should be made it is said to be the desire of Russia that it be brought about independently of England.

BOY'S LIFE TWICE AS VALUABLE AS GIRL'S, ACCORDING TO JUDGE

New York, May 14.—A boy's life is twice as valuable as that of a girl, according to a decision by Judge Adams of the Essex county circuit court, at Newark, N. J.

Further, it was held that $6000 awarded to the father of Evan F. J. Eastwood, killed in a grade crossing trolley accident, is not excessive, but a verdict of $5000 awarded to the father of the girl was reduced by the court to $3000, although the girl, Ella Werpupp, was said by many to be the most beautiful girl in Newark, and accounts of the accident in which she was killed contained many tributes of love and esteem from her teachers and school fellows.

The damage suit grew out of the Clifton avenue trolley accident of February 19, 1903, in which nine high school pupils were killed.

When the cases were tried the trolley company acknowledged its liability, and the jury was asked simply to fix the amount of damages to be paid in each case, the only testimony taken being to show the character of the deceased and the estimated future earning capacity of each. In each case the trolley company applied for a rule to show cause why a new trial should not be granted on the ground that the damages awarded were excessive.

In announcing his decision Judge Adams pointed out that in each case the only question to be considered by the jury was the amount recoverable, according to the interpretation of the statutes. In each, he said, this was the probably pecuniary value to the parents of the one whose life had been ended. A woman may become a bread-winner, he said, a man must be one. The finding was made in accordance with the judge's idea.

AMERICANS WANTED

The Chinese Government Would Recruit Them For Army.

Believe Them to Be Best Officers In the World.

St. Paul, May 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Evidence that the Chinese government is recruiting officers for what is known as the Chinese imperial reform army, in the United States, developed here today on receipt by W. F. Madden, of St. Paul, of what apparently is equivalent to a commission for a second lieutenancy in the Chinese army from Edmond F. English, of Yankton, S. D., who is said to be engaged in securing American officers for that purpose.

The commission was in the form of a receipt for an application for enlistment, bearing the following inscription at its head:

"Chinese Imperial reform army, General Staff, Yankton, S. D."

It stated that the applicant would be enrolled as an officer in the Chinese service, and that his grade would not be lower than that of a second lieutenant.

A special to the Dispatch from Yankton says that Mr. English admits he is securing recruits for the Chinese army, but that there is nothing specially significant in the movement now, as the plan of securing American officers had its inception long before the Russo-Japanese war began.

He says the Chinese government being desirous of improving the efficiency of its military service, and after casting about among the various governments for material for officers, who would bring the imperial army to the desired standard of efficiency, decided that American officers were the most desirable, because they would not, and neither would the American government, expect any especial territorial preferment for services rendered. He is quotd as saying that, owing to the strict neutrality observed by the American government in the present Russo-Japanese war, all accepting service with the Chinese government will leave the United States as individuals. They will receive the same pay as officers of equal rank in the American army.

GENERALLY ADULTERATED.

But Few Jellies and Jams Are Pure.

New York, May 14.—Witnesses before the United States commission to establish standards for pure foods which is sitting here, declare that jellies and jams are generally adulterated. Glucose and coloring matter, they asserted are not harmful and one man, speaking for the manufacturers of the preserves, claimed that sixty per cent of the jellies made in United States, are imitations composed of glucose and coloring matter. Some jellies he said contained no fruit at all.

Another witness said that if the manufacture of compound jellies by mixing of different fruits were forbidden, 75 per cent of the factories in the United States would have to close. The committee will continue its hearings ten days.

TIE-UP ON LAKES AFFECTS BUSINESS ON N. Y. CANALS.

New York, May 14.—In consequence of the tie-up in traffic on the great lakes, through business on the New York canals is in a state of paralysis. Since the opening of the state waterways, only one boat load of grain and three cargoes of iron ore have come through from Buffalo. Piers here devoted to loading and unloading canal boats, usually the busiest spots on the water front, are deserted except for watchmen. Many owners have turned their truck horses out to pasture and discharged thousands of men whom they employed when the season opened While the strike has precipitated matters, the boatmen assert that the same conditions would likely have prevailed eventually, owing to the rate situation, which was cutting into their business rapidly.

EMPEROR DISCIPLINES THE CROWN PRINCE.

New York, May 14.—Crown Prince Frederick William has been confined to his quarters for three days, by order of the emperor, according to the Times dispatch from Berlin. The order stated to have been due to the participation of the crown prince in the recent dangerous riding competition on the Berlin race track, when, mounted on an Arabian horse, he outdistanced a dozen brother officers and tied with Captain Von Holzing of the First Uhlans of the Guard, for the Kaiser's cup, but gallantly renounced all claims to the prize. This is the second time the emperor has disciplined his son for reckless horsemanship.

CANNIBALS SHOT.

Had Killed and Eaten Five British Subjects.

Vancouver, B. C., May 14.—Mail advices on the Australian steamer Miowera today says that five men were killed and eaten by cannibals off Admiralty island in the South sea. The British warship Condor was sent to the scene and set fire to the village where the cannibals resided. The Condor threatened to annihilate the village if it did not hand over the cannibals. This was done and the cannibals were shot.

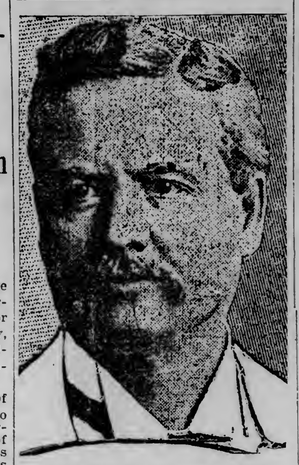
It is said to have been planned also to found a new ministerial daily to be called the Marseillaise under the direction of Senator Clemenceau.

ILLINOIS REPUBLICANS ARE AS YET UNABLE TO AGREE ON A CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR

JURY IN AMES CASE DISCHARGED AFTER BEING OUT FORTY HOURS

Reported They Were Unable to Reach an Agreement.

Former Mayor Tried on Charge of Receiving Bribe.



FORMER MAYOR A. A. AMES.

Minneapolis, May 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—The jury in the case of Former Mayor A. A. Ames, on trial for bribery, was discharged at noon today, after having given forty hours' consideration to the evidence without reaching an agreement.

Dr. Ames was tried upon a charge of receiving a bribe from a woman to secure her immunity from police interference. This was the second trial of the case, although the last trial was under a new bill of indictment. In his first trial Dr. Ames was found guilty and was sentenced to six years in the penitentiary. The case was appealed to the state supreme court, and was dismissed by it because of vital errors in the indictment. One of the contentions of the defendant's attorneys in the present case was that the prisoner was being placed twice in jeopardy for the same offense, but the court overruled this point and sent the case to a jury.

The jury went out at about 6 o'clock Thursday night, and after a night's deliberation upon the evidence, was brought into the court room at 10:15 Friday morning, and upon their request, Judge C. B. Elliott reread his entire charge.

The jury again returned and remained out until this noon, as stated.

Yates Still In Lead With Lowden a Good Second.

DeKalb County Made First Break on Sixteenth Ballot.

Threw Its Fifteen Votes From Yates to Lowden.

Springfield, Ill., May 14.—All sorts of rumors were afloat today regarding the governorship fight in the Republican state convention. It was said among other things that Yates would lose more votes and that the gains which Lowden would make would stampede the convention. The gains already made by Lowden had made his followers jubilant. The Yates men, however, claimed that their forces were solid and that if any stampede for Lowden was attempted enough Deneen men would go to Yates to insure Yates the nomination. There was general expectation that the deadlock would be broken some time today and that the convention would adjourn tonight.

It was reported that on an early ballot Yates would lose ninety votes to Lowden. Yates, however, was counting on 400 who would stay to the last ditch. Yates and Hamlin were known to have been in conference in the morning.

Despite Chairman Cannon's strict orders to prohbit none but delegates and alternates on the convention floor, the crowd gathered an hour before the meeting of assistant sergeants-at-arms and policemen and the hall was packed with a surging mob, who though entitled to seats, had difficulty in forcing their way.

The shouters for the rival candidates carried tin horns, whistles and sirens with which to keep up the enthusiasm of their delegates. The Deneen people, who had been wanting in banners the previous day, came in with hundreds of small standards bearing the name of their candidate.

At 10:50 o'clock Chairman Cannon called the convention to order with a new gavel made from an old flagpole raised at Palmyra, Ill., on receipt of the news of Lincoln's nomination in 1860.

Mr. Cannon asked the friends of the candidates to refrain from demonstrations. He said: "Thank God it has been demonstrated in a two days' meeting that this convention is composed of 1560 men who are not affected by banners and huzzahs."

The sixteenth ballot was now ordered and developed the first break of the convention when DeKalb county threw its fifteen votes from Yates to Lowden amid a demonstration by the Lowden men.

The vote of the sixteenth ballot, as officially announced, stood: Yates, 472 4-5; Lowden, 428; Deneen, 331; Hamlin, 120 3-5; Warner, 38 4-5; Sherman, 51 3-5; Pierce, 21.

The result of the seventeenth ballot was: Yates, 485 4-5; Lowden, 407; Deneen, 379; Hamlin, 109 4-5; Warner, 35 4-5; Sherman, 51 4-5; Pierce, 34. The eighteenth ballot was: Yates, 483 1-5; Lowden, 412; Deneen, 379; Hamlin, 118 4-5; Warner, 36 4-5; Sherman, 50; Pierce, 22.

AGED 125.

The Wichita Eagle gives the story of Mrs. Harriet McMurray, who died in Wichita last Thursday at the great age of 125 years. She was born in 1779 in Maryland. She was sold into Tennessee when a child, and she lived for seventy-nine years in slavery. Once she and her six children were placed on the block at the same time. Two of the children were bought by a man who also bought her, and the remaining four were bought by a painter, who took them so far away that she never heard from them again. She never saw Washington, but her dearest possession was a bone-handled knife given to her by her Tennessee master, who told her that the knife had been used in preparing a big dinner for Washington at Nashville. The Eagle says that the record of the aged woman is well authenticated.

ARRANGE SAFE CELEBRATION FOR THE KIDS OF CHICAGO

Chicago, May 14.—One policeman, one fireman, one doctor, one volunteer schoolteacher and one militiaman will be on hand on July 4th to guard each of the several mimic theaters of war that have been arranged for by the managers of the public Independence day celebration in Chicago.

The program proper will begin upon the morning of the 4th, and free fire crackers and torpedoes of the harmless variety will be supplied to all small boys for the asking. In the afternoon bands of the national guard will give concerts in the parks and a military promenade will take place.

In the evening the U. S. S. Dorothy will fight a sham battle off the lake front with a condemned hulk and will blow up the foe with a torpedo; there will be rockets, searchlights and martial maneuvers, and the day will close in a grand pyrotechnic outburst.

A committee upon medicine and science, to have charge of the work of providing safe guards for persons injured by toy pistols for fireworks, and to prepare statistics on lockjaw, has been appointed.

MAN AFTER COWS CAUSES A SCENE IN GILLESPIE CASE

Rising Sun, Ind., May 14.—Before the trial of James Gillespie, Mrs. Belle Stewart and Mr. and Mrs. Barbour, for the murder of Elizabeth Gillespie, was called today, there was an exciting scene. John Edrington, superintendent of the poor farm, came into the village with ropes for cows that had escaped. Everybody followed him, thinking there was to be a lynching. Finally Edrington halted and explained how he happened to be carrying ropes, and the crowd dispersed.

The principal witness was Mrs. Laura Johnson, a friend of the victim, who related a conversation that lasted three hours between herself and Mrs. Barbour, three years ago. At that time Mrs. Barbour attacked Elizabeth Gillespie's character, charging her with boat rides and flirting.

Mrs. Barbour also charged Elizabeth with talking about others, and said if she did not stop "peeping" some one would throw vitriol in her face. The witness thought Mrs. Barbour at that time intended to attack Elizabeth herself. Mrs. Johnson said she told Mrs. Barbour at the time she was a "wicked woman to make such threats."

AMERICAN WOMAN LOSES JEWELS

New York, May 14.—Vigorous efforts are being made by the police department, says a World dispatch, from Paris, France, to unravel a mysterious robbery reported by Mrs. Edolyn Gray, said to be a resident of New Orleans. Diamonds and other jewelry, including a pearl necklace, valued in all at $200,000 were taken, according to Mrs. Gray, from her trunk somewhere between Cherbourg, where she disembarked from a steamer and a Paris hotel. First reports placed the value of the jewels at $220,000. The victim of the robbery recently suffered from an accident while horseback riding and came here for treatment. Her jewels, including the necklace, an heirloom belonging to her sister, were in a steamer trunk which she allowed to remain at Cherbourg over night. Shortly after it was delivered at her hotel the loss was discovered. No clue has been obtained and the police are of the opinion that the robbery was committed either at New Orleans or on the passage across the Atlantic.

COMMUNICATION ALL WAY ACROSS

New York, May 14.—Among the passengers on the Campania which arrived today was William Marconi, who came over with several assistants to continue his experiments at the Glace Bay station, Cape Breton.

Mr. Marconi says he succeded in maintaining constant communication with shore stations during the voyage. The success of the tests, he says, insures the publication of daily newspapers at sea. A new set of instruments, which had been prepared especially for use in the trials made during the voyage enabled the operators, the inventor said, to communicate with the eastern shore for a distance of 1707 miles. In the meantime, before signals with the eastern shore failed, the station at Glace Bay on the western shore had been picked up and communication was continued uninterruptedly.

JUST AS AN EXPERIMENT.

The young woman's request naturally created some surprise, says the Brooklyn Eagle.

"Have you a thoroughly incorrigible child?" she asked.

"We have one or two children who seem to be just naturally bad," replied the matron of the home.

"That's what I want," asserted the young woman; "a child that will lie on its back and scream until it's blue in the face if it doesn't have its own way; a child with a vicious temper, that will bite and scratch and kick; a child that will deliberately smash something when it is crossed."

"We have one here that bit a nurse's finger to the bone and kicked another child black and blue for pure devilment," said the matron.

"That sounds promising," remarked the young woman, "but the kickers and screamers are the best. When a child yells and screams for pure temper because you refuse to let it play Indian with the carving knife, it drives one pretty close to the limit of human endurance."

"Pardon me," said the matron, "but do you want to adopt such a child?"

"Oh, no; I just want to borrow it."

"Borrow it?"

"Yes. You see, there is a woman next door to us, without any children of her own, who thinks she knows all there is to know about managing them, and moral suasion is her hobby just now. Of course, moral suasion is all right in most cases, but not in all, and anyhow, I don't like to have a woman without any children coming over to tell me how to manage mine. I thought if I could just get a real ugly and vicious youngster, I'd pretend it was sent to me for a visit, and I'd find some excuse for turning it over to her for a day or two, after working it up to the proper pitch. What! You can't loan a child for that purpose! Well, it's too bad, for I don't think anything else ever will discourage this woman."

IN THE NEW CHURCH

Services to Be Held In St. James' Catholic Church.

Mrs. La Londe Tells Another Side of Old Man's Eviction.

Services will be held for the first time tomorrow morning in the new St. James' Catholic church, on Fifty-seventh avenue west. The church will not be formally opened, however, until the following Sunday, and dedication exercises will not be held until a later date, probably in June. The exact date for these exercises has not yet been decided upon. They will be of an elaborate nature, attended by several prominent church members from outside points.

The building and interior finishings are now practically complete. A few finishing touches are yet to be added, but everything is in readiness for the holding of church services. The structure, which has been in the course of construction for more than a year past, represents a cost of about $30,000. It is built of brick and stone, measures 122 by 60 feet, and architecturally is a thing of beauty, both inside and out. It is solid, substantial and very handsome in appearance.

The building is modern in every particular, and a nicer one for church purposes is not to be found at the head of the lakes, although some, of course, are larger. The side wall measures thirty feet in height. There are two galleries, the lower seating 250 persons and the upper about 65 persons. The lower floor, built on an incline, seats 850 people. The floor is of hardwood, and all interior furnishings are the best obtainable.

The altars in particular are beautiful in design and finish. The main altar was donated by Division No. 4, A. O. H., and the side altars by St. James court, C. O. F., and the Twentieth Century Progress club. Several beautiful stained glass windows, donated by different persons, have been put in place. Three of them were donated by Mrs. B. Enright, others by Owen McDonnell and Mr. and Mrs. K. A. McDonald. Mr. McDonald is also having four stained glass windows put over the door in front.

A fine lighting system, with 680 electric bulbs, has been installed. The brass railing placed before the altars was furnished by the Daughters of Erin, and the Confessionals by the Lady Foresters.

Rev. John Feehely has been pastor of the St. James church four years. He is now entering on his fifth year. He has accomplished a great deal in this time. When he came to Duluth the church was badly in debt. This has been paid, and now only a comparatively small sum is still due on the new building. Besides this, a $4000 parsonage has been built. In a year it is claimed the church, in spite of the big cost of the new building, will be entirely free from debt.

There are about 400 families in the St. James parish.

THE LALONDE CASE.

Woman Tells Her Side of the Case.

Julius La Londe, Sr., who claims that he was evicted from his son's home, 103 North Fifty-fourth avenue west, upon the urging of his daughter-in-law, was yesterday sent to the poor farm, where he will receive proper care until further steps can be taken for his assistance, A. P. Cook, secretary of the board of poor commissioners, says he will compel the son to care for the old man.

The story told by the daughter-in-law to a Herald reporter this morning differs considerably from the tale of the old man. She admitted that the latter, 76 years of age, had been told to leave the house, but denied having thrown his clothes after him. She says old Mr. La Londe has nine grown children, besides her husband, all in better circumstances than he, and that six of them are boys, two of them single men, who are earning good wages and contributing not a cent to the support of their aged father. The children live in Superior, Hibbing, Chisholm and Dakotas. It is claimed that one daughter in Dakota is the wife of a rich rancher, owning three extensive farms.

Mrs. La Londe says she believes it time some of the other boys were contributing to the support of their father. He has been living with his son in West Duluth for over a year now, and only one of the boys has contributed any money at all to his support, and that only a small sum.

The woman said that she had eight children of her own to care for, and that the old man was mean to them. He would not allow a cat or dog about the house, she explained, but would kick them out, to the despair of the children, whenever they were introduced on the premises. The oldest son of the La Londes at home is 18 years old, but it is claimed his health is such that he cannot work. The other children attend school. The second in age is a daughter, 17 years old. Another of the boys is married, with a large family to support.

Dr. MITCHELL

Proves His Ability to Cure All Diseases Without the Aid of Drugs or the Surgeon's Knife.

That truth is stranger than fiction is demonstrated every day at 17 East Superior street, where Dr. Mitchell is healing the sick by his wonderful healing influence. If the marvelous cures that have been published in the daily papers for the past five years should originate in a person's brain to embellish a story of fiction, it would not seem strange. But to have such cures actually made right here in our midst, every word of which is true, it borders on the marvelous.

Dr. Mitchell treats all chronic diseases, as well as curing weak men in any and all stages.

It seems as though all diseases are alike to this great healer, he cures them all. The stories of his wonderful cures of hopeless cases told by the happy patients themselves read like a romance or the miracles of Bible times. There is no question of the doctor's sincerity in his claim that all diseases can be cured by his marvelous method; and one can hardly doubt his ability to carry out his claim, after having talked with people whom he has cured quickly and safely of all kidney and liver diseases, lung and stomach trouble, consumption, constipation, rheumatism, neuralgia, catarrh, bronchitis, paralysis, diabetes, lost vitality, nervous debility, insomnia, blood poison, female weakness and ailments, eczema, salt rheum. It matters not what the disease, nor how long standing, nor how many doctors or remedies have failed, he has repeatedly renewed the youth of old men and women; has often instilled into jaded men and women new vitality, health and strength. To weak, weary women he has brought the light and happiness of health. He has cured the crippled and healed the sick, and he has gone about this quietly, unostentatiously, but nevertheless with the unbounded success that is winning him the gratitude of all sick and helpless men and women. He is indeed a remarkable man doing a remarkable work, and every sick and suffering person should avail themselves of the opportunity of being restored to perfect health. Many have saved a sick friend's life by sending them to him, or their name and address. If you cannot come to the office and get treatment, take the home treatment.

Office hours, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily. Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, 7 to 8 p. m. 'Phone 579.

The entertainment opened with piano selections, followed by selections by the Mandolin club, under the direction of Gilbert Ketcham. The boys played well and were vigorously applauded.

"Sally's Love," the play composed by Dr. Ray, was well received. Miss Eva Sawyer as Sally Betts and Mrs. Dr. Day as Mary Pagett were particularly good. During the intermission Mr. Coughlan entertained with ventriloquous imitations and impersonations and had to respond to repeated encores. He was followed by Harry Carroll in humorous recitations, which kept the audience in laughter.

The second play, "Lend Me Five Shillings," made a fine hit. Dr. Day as Mr. Golightly carried the part splendidly, and Mrs. Kaake acted with much grace and ease.

CLERGYMEN WHO OWE HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO PE-RU-NA

THE SPRING CATARRH REMEDY.

Presbyterian Pastor Praises Peruna.

THE day was when men of prominence hesitated to give their testimonials to proprietary medicines for publication.

This remains true today of most proprietary medicines.

But Peruna has become so justly famous, its merits are known to so many people of high and low stations that no one hesitates to see his name in print recommending Peruna.

The highest men in our nation have given Peruna a strong endorsement Men of all classes and stations are equally represented.

A dignified representative of the Presbyterian church in the person of Rev. E. G. Smith does not hesitate to state publicly that he has used Peruna in his family and found it cured when other remedies failed. In this statement the Rev. Smith is supported by an elder in his church.

The Pastor's Letter.

Rev. E. G. Smith, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Greensboro, Ga., writes:

"Having used Peruna in my family for some time it gives me pleasure to testify to its true worth.

"My little boy seven years of age had been suffering for some time with catarrh of the lower bowels. Other remedies had failed, but after taking two bottles of Peruna the trouble almost entirely disappeared. For this special malady I consider it well nigh a specific.

"As a tonic for weak and wornout people it has a few or no equals."—Rev. E. G. Smith.

An Elder in Rev. Smith's Church Has Used Pe-ru-na With Success.

Mr. M. J. Rossman, a prominent merchant of Greensboro, Ga., and an elder in the Presbyterian church of that place has used Peruna, and in a recent letter to the Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, O., writes as follows:

"For a long time I was troubled with catarrh of the kidneys and tried many remedies, all of which gave me no relief. Peruna was recommended to me by several friends, and after using a few bottles I am pleased to say that the long looked for relief was found and I am now enjoying better health than I have for years, and can heartily recommend Peruna to all similarly afflicted. It is certainly a grand medicine."—M. J. Rossmann.

Catarrh of the Stomach.

Rabbi David Klein, 526 E. Main street, Columbus, Ohio, writes the following to Dr. Hartman, regarding Peruna:

"It affords me great pleasure to testify to the curative merits of your medicine. Peruna is a well-tried and widely used remedy. Especially as a specific for catarrh of the stomach it cannot be excelled. Peruna will do all that is claimed for it.

Peruna has among its friends many of the leading temperance workers in this country who give it unstinted praise, and do not hesitate to endorse it by the use of the most extravagant language.

Free Advice.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

An Old Pastor Has Used Pe-ru-na.

No man in the capital city of the State of Ohio is better known than the Rev. James Poindexter. For many years he has been the successful pastor of the Second Baptist Church of that city. Every day his venerable figure and kindly face may be seen on the streets of the city where he has labored for so many years. What a history of benevolence and self-sacrifice might be written by simply giving the details of the every day life of this faithful pastor and eloquent preacher.

But old age comes to the best of men. The rheumatics peculiar to advanced age had already begun its insidious ravages when it became necessary to find a remedy. If possible, that his days of usefulness might not be shortened. An efficient nerve tonic that would stimulate the circulation, improve the digestion, and increase the tone and vigor of his whole system, was needed. The only remedy capable of meeting all these indications was found to be Peruna. In a letter to Dr. Hartman he states:

"My attention was called some time ago to your medicine for rheumatic troubles by Mr. Cook, an old reliable druggist of this city, and I take pleasure in saying that I have tried them and found them good. It is by opinion that the remedy, Peruna, is justly entitled to the fame which it has throughout the United States."

A Strong Endorsement for Pe-ru-na From the Treasurer of the National Prohibition Voters' League.

Office National Independent Voters' League, St. Louis, Mo.:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen:—"I cannot think of words that will express my praise for your most wonderful remedy, Peruna. It is beyond a doubt the most wonderful cure that long sufferers from catarrh can find.

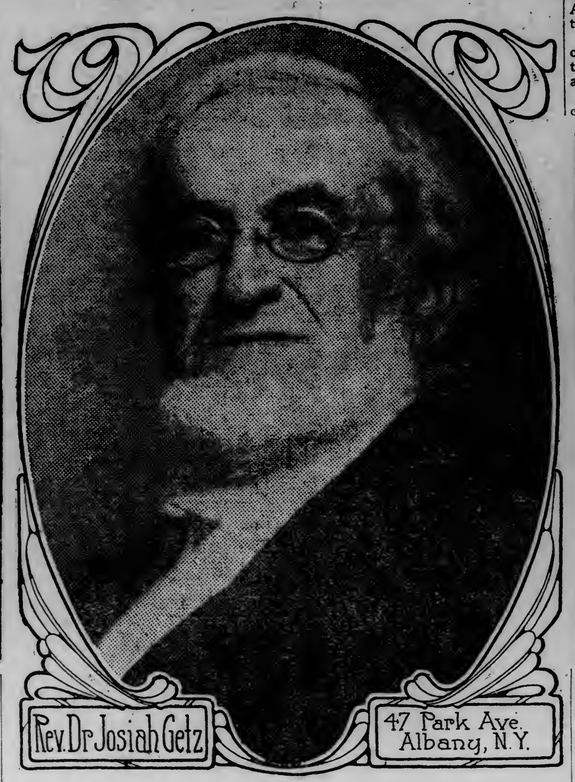
"I have suffered from this dread disease more than twenty years, and was only induced to try your remedy against my will after having spent hundreds of dollars in every possible channel seeking relief, as some of my friends had been cured by it.

"I am pleased to tell you that I am to-day a perfectly well man who cannot help but praise the manufacturers for the everlasting benefit I have received from your remedy.

"With hopes for your great success, I am,
Sincerely, yours to command."

C. L. B. POLSTON.

A Venerable Pastor Restored to Strength and Health by Pe-ru-na.



Rev. Dr. Josiah Getz, 47 Park Ave., Albany, N. Y., for years a Rabbi of the Hebrew Synagogue, but now retired, writes:

"I am fully convinced of the merits of Peruna in cases of colds and catarrh, and as a general tonic. I have taken it off and on now for several years and always find that it is very effective in ridding the system of cold. I gladly endorse it."—Rev. Josiah Getz.

The spring is the best time to treat catarrh. Nature renews herself every spring. The system is rejuvenated by spring weather. This renders medicines more effective. A short course of Peruna, assisted by the balmy air of spring, will cure old stubborn cases of catarrh that have resisted treatment for years. Everybody should have a copy of Dr. Hartman's latest book on catarrh.

A Methodist Bishop Endorses Pe-ru-na.

James A. Handy, Bishop of the A. M. E. church of Baltimore, Md., writes from 1341 North Carey street:

"I take pleasure in acknowledging the curative effects of Peruna. At the solicitation of a friend I used your remedy and cheerfully recommend your Peruna to all who want a good tonic and a safe cure for catarrh."
JAMES A. HANDY.

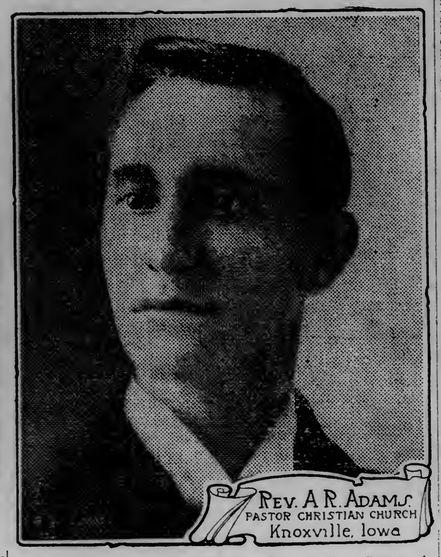
Pastor Christian Church.

Rev. A. R. Adams, Pastor Christian Church, of Fairfield, Iowa, writes:

"I was troubled with sleeplessness and nervousness for a period of nearly one year, also with catarrhal troubles. A brother minister advised me to try Peruna, and after taking two bottles my troubles entirely disappeared.

"I am satisfied that Peruna has wrought a complete cure in my case and will advise others similarly afflicted to try this remedy. An earnest desire to help the sick and afflicted prompts me to write this testimonial."

Catarrh is essentially the same wherever located. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.



Every great success is sure to make enemies. Peruna is a great success, and through jealousy and envy much has been said calculated to prejudice the public against it.

But those who have taken Peruna know better. The vast multitude of people who have been cured of catarrh in some form by Peruna, will never cease to praise Peruna for the benefits received.

Strong and Vigorous at the Age of Eighty-Eight.

Rev. J. N. Parker, Utica, N. Y., writes:

"In June, 1901, I lost my sense of hearing entirely. My hearing had been somewhat impaired for several years, but not so much effected but that I could hold converse with my friends; but in June, 1901, my sense of hearing left me so that I could hear no sound whatever. I was also troubled with severe rheumatic pains in my limbs. I commenced taking Peruna and now my hearing is restored as good as it was prior to June, 1901. My rheumatic pains are all gone. I cannot speak too highly of Peruna, and now when 88 years old can say it has invigorated my whole system. I cannot but think, dear Doctor, that you must feel very thankful to the all loving Father that you have been permitted to live, and by your skill be such a blessing as you have been to suffering humanity."—Rev. J. N. Parker.

A Pastor's Endorsement.

Rev. H. W. Tate, 47 S. 11th Street, Columbus, Ohio, writes:

"For several years I have been troubled with a peculiar spasmodic affection of the throat. It would seize me suddenly, and for a few minutes I would be unable to speak audibly, and my breath would be greatly interfered with. I would be obliged to gasp for breath.

"I finally concluded that it was some catarrhal affection which probably excited the spasm. It interfered with my vocation as a preacher, attacking me occasionally in the pulpit. I had heard so much about Peruna as a catarrh remedy that I determined to try it. After taking two bottles my trouble has disappeared."—Rev. H. W. Tate.

"Pe-ru-na Is the Best Medicine In the World."

Rev. H. Steubenvoll, of Elkhorn, Wis., is pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran St. John's Church of that place. Rev. Steubenvoll is the possessor of two Bibles presented to him by Emperor William of Germany. Upon the fly leaf of one of the Bibles the Emperor has written in his own handwriting a text.

This honored pastor, in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio, says:

Gentlemen: "I had hemorrages of the lungs for a long time, and all despaired of me. I took Peruna and was cured. It gave me strength and courage and made healthy, pure blood. It increased my weight, gave me a healthy color, and I feel well. It is the best medicine in the world. If everyone kept Peruna in the house it would save many from death every year."—Rev. H. Steubenvoll.

Reasons Why Pe-ru-na Has Become the Standard Catarrh Remedy of the World

Because it is a regular doctor's prescription. Because it was used on over forty housand patients in private practice before it was advertised by the inventor. Because it is absolutely efficient in all cases. Because it contains no injurious ingredients of whatsoever character. Because it contains no whiskey, brandy or narcotics of any character whatsoever. Because it has stood the test of popular approval for twenty-five years. Because it has been endorsed by the most prominent people in the world. Because it is used in no less than two million homes in the United States today. Because it is the invention of the greatest catarrhal specialist in the world.

These are the reasons that will continue to make Peruna the world's catarrh remedy without a rival, without substitute.

Be sure you get what you ask for.

The second one is a humorous selection consisting of two acts, entitled "Mr. Bob." The play is of a high class order for its class, and its presentation will require considerable dramatic ability.

Shirley Alexander will act the part of Phillip Royson, a college graduate; Gilbert Rupley will be Robert Brown, clerk of Benson & Benson; Harry Gilman will be the butler; Ralfe Crandall, the footman; Miss Murlen Fellows, the maid; Miss Nina Burbank will be Rebecca Luke, a maiden lady; Miss Jeanette Adams will take the part of Katherine, Rebecca's niece; and Miss Grace Staples will take that of Marion, Katherine's friend.

The story opens with Rebecca seated in the dining room watching Jenkins, the butler, setting the table for breakfast. She says that she is going to build a winter home for stray cats, and tells Jenkins that she is expecting an architect, Mr. Brown, to come and look at the rooms some time during the morning. Katherine, her niece, then comes into the room and tells Rebecca that her friend Marion Bryant will arrive in a short time.

Now Katherine's pet name for Miss Bryant is "Bob," which gives Phillip the impression that she is a young gentleman. He accordingly fixes up her room with some of his treasures, such as boxing gloves, tennic rackets and some choice cigars.

Shortly after "Bob" arrives Phillip meets Katherine in the hall and tells her that he is expecting one of his old college chums, Ned Saunders. He is going out to his yacht, and wants her to reciprocate his kindness by taking care of Ned when he comes, which she readily promises to do.

When Phillip had left the house and the others were busy about the house, a very modest and retiring young man, with a weak voice, enters the room and asks for Miss Luke, who was not in, having gone down town for a short time.

The young man, who is a lawyer by the name of Brown, promises to wait for a short time—and there begin the complications. He is first taken to be Mr. Brown, the architect, by Jenkins, then Phillip mistakes him for "Mr. Bob," and then Katherine and Marion think that he is Phillip's college friend, Ned Saunders. All these mistakes embarrass Mr. Brown exceedingly and lead him into many queer adventures. Before the day is over he has eaten three meals, one five minutes after the other, tried to sail a boat, has gotten sick attempting to smoke a cigar, and is forced by Katherine and Marion to invent a love story about Phillip's college days.

COMING BALL GAMES

Absorbing the Athletic Attention of High School.

The chief athletic interest of the school is now largely centered upon the baseball games that are to be played between the two lower classes and the seniors and the faculty, and principally the latter, which will come off on May 28.

The faculty has been holding regular secret practices during the past week, and many strange things are being said of the various abilities of the members of that team. One report says that they are going to take up a collection among the juniors and freshmen for the purpose of laying in a supply of balls, several of which have already been lost or batted to pieces.

At the last practice Mr. Towne drove the ball over the fence back of the center field, while Mr. Crull knocked such a high fly that it was lost to sight for several seconds.

Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Church, who will likely form the battery of the professors, are showing up in fine form. Both are good all around athletes, having just come from college where they took prominent part in all athletic events.

The instructors are more confident than ever that they will carry off the laurels. As an argument they advance the fact that they have five new players, all of whom have played ball before, and that therefore they will have a much better team than they had three years ago, while the senior team is not to be compared to that which opposed the teachers in that last game.

The seniors, on their side, say that while they do not expect to have a walkaway, they do expect to give the faculty a good drubbing and make up for at least a few of the "D's" that they have received from time to time in their four years' course in the high school.

The game between the sophomores and freshmen will be played next Wednesday afternoon at the ball park. Both teams are practicing regularly, and as there is a good deal of rivalry between them, a good game should be the result.

The line-up will probably be as follows:

Freshmen.	Position.	Sophomores.
Hartman and Harker	catchers	Crawford
McPhee	pitcher	McLennan
Cargill	shortstop	Ammunsen
McDevitt	first base	Cramner
Cole	second base	Crassweller
Manson or Ashley	right field	Maginnis
Ryan	center field	Harris

THE NEW BUILDING.

Plans Completed For Auxiliary to High School.

The plans for the new building which is to be erected on the vacant lot to the northwest of the High School have now been practically completed.

The basement will be on a level with the first floor of the High School building. Here will be a forge shop, a general machine shop, a room for woodwork, one for wood and brass turning, and a room for mechanical drawing. The various departments, which will be first-class and up-to-date in every respect, will constitute the manual training department of the school.

The first floor of the new structure will be on a level with the second of the High School, the same floor the Assembly hall is on. The chemical laboratory, now located on the third, will be removed from the High School itself and put on this floor. A large recitation room for the chemical classes has also been provided. It w... have a seating capacity of sixty, the seats in it being raised from front to back, as in a theater, thus enabling everyone to see clearly. One great reason for removing this laboratory is that the insurance rate on the High School will be greatly lessened by so doing. On this floor will also be the physical culture room, or gymnasium, in which the students will take their daily exercise.

The architecture of the new building will be similar to that of the high school, so that they will look like a single building.

The principal reasons for putting up this structure that more school room is needed, that the insurance rates will be greatly lessened, and that the large amount of walking that is now necessary will be reduced considerably. At the present time some of the students have to go up and down three long flights of stairs several times a day. This necessity, very fatiging to some, will be avoided by an arrangement whereby the first floor of the new building is connected by a covered bridge or passage way with the second floor of the high school building, on which the assembly hall is located.

School Notes.

Yesterday afternon the Agazzig Club, accompanied by Mr. Ulrich, went on a field expedition to Lester Park. They took a net with them and attempted to capture a few minnows and small fish, together with some small crustaceans upon which to feed them. The Geology classes also went out exploring, but with the purpose of examining the rocks and the soil on the hills back of Duluth.

Thursday afternoon the senior boys held a meeting in Room 206 and elected Carrol Steele, captain of their class relay team. The other class captain's have already been chosen. The juniors elected Robert Smith, the sophomores, Chas. McLennan, and the freshmen, Fred Ryan.

The students are all taking a large interest in the Seymour lectures, three of which have already been given. The lectures are all very highly entertaining as well as very instructive.

Raymond Wilcutts has not yet arranged a complete schedule for the baseball team. So far he has arranged two games with Ashland, one for June 4th at Ashland and the other for June 18th at Duluth, and also two games with Superior, to be played some time in June also.

Thursday afternoon the seniors, not satisfied to practice against anything but a crack professional team, played a game with the Duluth policemen.

BORECK IS CONVICTED

Found Guilty of Stealing Felix Matel's Fat Roll.

Joseph Boreck, who was accused of robbing his roommate of his roll of $300, in the Red Star hotel, April 4 last, was yesterday found guilty, the jury deliberating only a few minutes.

Boreck came to Duluth from Rhinelander, with Felix Matel, both men stopping at the same hotel and occupying the same room. While Matel was asleep Boreck stole his pocketbook from between the springs and mattress on the bed and took the train for Chicago. When captured a few days later Boreck had spent all the money but 75 cents. He claimed that he found the money on the floor under the bed and did not suppose it belonged to Matel for the reason the latter had claimed to have no large amount of money.

Mike Lekovich, who was to have been tried yesterday afternoon on an indictment charging him with keeping his saloon at Eveleth open on Sunday, was released on a $100 bond and will be tried some time next week. It is claimed that it was in Lekovich's saloon that Joseph Schutte stabbed a man. Schutte pleaded guilty to the charge of assault in the second degree.

VERDICT IS DIRECTED

Conductor Radley Loses Suit Against Lumber Firm.

Alton B. Radley, the Duluth & Iron Range conductor who claims to have been injured by the derailing of a car on the spur track to a sawmill at Skibo, lost his suit for damages against the lumber firm of Nolan Bros. & Laird. The case has been on trial in district court most of the week and, when the testimony was finished yesterday afternoon, Judge Ensign instructed the jury to return a verdict for the lumber company.

Radley sued for damages in the amount of $10,500. He claimed that the accident whereby he received his injuries was brought about by carelessness on the part of the lumber company in leaving material between the rails.

The lumber company, in defense, claimed that Radley was careless in operating the car and that the Duluth & Irong Range road has already given him satisfaction. Another claim of the lumber company was that Radley was injured on a Sunday, when he was not required to perform any duties.

In his instructions to the jury, Judge Ensign said there was a lack of evidence to show that the lumber company had been guilty of negligence and that the evidence introduced tended to show that Radley had, after his settlement with the railroad company, considered the matter as dropped.

DIETZ NOT OUTLAW

Has Fought No Sheriff's Posse Nor Shot a Deputy.

Rice Lake, Wis., May 14.—J. F. Dietz is not holding deputy sheriffs at bay with a Winchester, nor has a sincere attempt been made to capture him. He has fought no posse, nor did he shoot a deputy sheriff through the window of a house a half mile away.

Dietz and his family are armed and will resist any attempt on the part of the Chippewa Lumber company to run logs through his property. He will not resist a sheriff. He is quartered in a stone fort at the sluice dam on Apple creek. People in Rice Lake sympathize with him and believe him in the right as far as his controversy with the lumber company is concerned. As far as is known, Dietz has not fired a shot.

Public sympathy is entirely with Dietz. It is not believed that he is doing anything more than protect his rights at Hayward, Dietz, whose brother was sheriff of Barron county, did much to quell the disturbance and make it unnecessary to call out the troops. Dietz never was sheriff of Sawyer county as has been reported.

Dietz owns property through which Apple creek runs. The Chippewa Lumber company has been running logs down this creek. Dietz is entitled to ten cents per thousand feet of timber going through his lands. He claims that he never has been paid by the company. The company, it is said, offered to settle for $500. Dietz thought he had $14,000 or $15,000 coming from the company. He built a stone fort near his house and at the dam in the creek. There he has remained, waiting for the company to attempt to run logs through. He has not left this place, as has been claimed. The company could run the logs through in a short time and would do so if Dietz left his post. All the timber has been cut and this is the last consignment of logs to be run down the creek. Dietz believes that he never will get his money if he allows the company to get down what logs are left.

Hayward, Wis., May 14.—Sheriff Peterson has not as yet made any request upon the governor for the militia to help capture Dietz. Peterson is now and has been all week out on the Lower Chippewa making an effort with his own force to effect the capture. Responsible parties here wired the governor in Peterson's name for guns and ammunition and these were promptly forwarded from Camp Douglass. It was the intention to arm some of the employes of the lumber company, but before the guns were fairly out of Hayward on their way to the dam, Deputy Giblin was met on his way in with word that the company had let their men go. The guns then were returned to Hayward and are now being held for further orders.

Dietz's home is forty-five miles from Hayward and the last sixteen miles is difficult of access.

Many unreliable rumors have gained circulation from the meager news that comes in from the besieging parties. The present indications are that Dietz is maintaining his ground.

AS SPECIAL JUDGE

Governor Will Appoint Neil McInnis of Eveleth.

St. Paul, May 14.—Neil McInnis, of Eveleth, will be appointed special judge for the municipality on the return from Aitkin of Governor Van Sant. The new appointee has served as a member of the house from St. Louis county, and later was a member of the board of county commissioners for that county.

The appointment, it is said, was made upon the recommendation of leading Republicans of Eveleth and St. Louis county.

THIS is the caution applied to the public announcement of Castoria that has been manufactured under the supervision of Chas. H. Fletcher for over 30 years—the genuine Castoria. We respectfully call the attention of fathers and mothers when purchasing Castoria to see that the wrapper bears his signature in black. When the wrapper is removed the same signature appears on both sides of the bottle in red. Parents who have used Castoria for their little ones in the past years need no warning against counterfeits and imitations, but our present duty is to call the attention of the younger generation to the great danger of introducing into their families spurious medicines.

It is to be regretted that there are people who are now engaged in the nefarious business of putting up and selling all sorts of substitutes, or what should more properly be termed conterfeits, for medicinal preparations not only for adults, but worse yet, for children's medicines. It therefore devolves on the mother to scrutinize closely what she gives her child. Adults can do that for themselves but the child has to rely on the mother's watchfulness.

POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

Hornet's Nest Stirred Up By Dunn-Collins Mud Slinging Arouses Talk of Third Candidate.

Van Sant Credited With Third Term Aspirations —Democrats See a Chance to Select Their Candidate For Governor—Interest In Democratic State Convention.

Since the gubernatorial situation has developed into a matter of the candidates for the Republican nomination throwing all the accusations they can find at one another even their managers have become highly disgusted. The henchmen of Robert C. Dunn of Princeton and Judge Loren W. Collins, of St. Cloud, are thoroughly out of breath over the mud slinging character of the campaign as developed in the past ten days and in many instances they concede that the sentiment which has been aroused in favor of a third candidate is well based.

In this connection Governor Van Sant has been spoken of as liable to jump into the breach if the matter of a third candidate should come to an issue. Some say that it is his anxiety to succeed himself that led him to stir up the hornet's nest which has developed so rapidly since the governnor made public the "alarming" discoveries in the affairs of the auditor's office in Mr. Dunn's regime.

If it is not such a desire as this that prompted the governor, it is evidently his anxiety to see Judge Collins take his place at the end of the present term. At any rate whether the governor did the bomb throwing to help Collins or give himself a chance to jump in as a third candidate is a question that cannot be answered off hand. Of course the governor will not tell.

But it is very certain that all the local campaign managers have just about been prostrated by the state of affairs and those who have not "happened" to be out of town are keeping very quiet.

On the Dunn side there is not a man who is openly prominent in the campaign who could be found yesterday. W. C. Sargent, chairman of St. Louis county for the Dunn side, returned home from a two weeks' trip Friday and was ill at home. William Getty was out of the city and is expected home today. Collector of the Port Willcuts has gone to Baker City, Oregon, and Guy A. Eaton is said to have been navigating in the harbor for several days. At least he was not found in his office the latter part of the week when sought.

In the Lonsdale building where the Dunn people have had their campaign work going on a young lady was in charge who said she had no political information for publication, and it was expected that Mr. Sargent might be on duty again Monday.

No systematic work was being done, as far as could be learned, in favor of the ex-auditor, and one old friend of his who was seen said he intended to write to Dunn and tell him that his prospects were being unattended to in this county and suggest that he have an organization perfected that would start at work and keep going.

On the Collins side it was admitted by the leaders that they were doing nothing and were not pleased with the character of campaigning which developed. They said the other fellows had stopped to rest and that they might as well. One reason of their apparent apathy was the intention of wainting for Judge Collins' promulgation of the letters from James J. Hill about campaign contributions. They had been notified from Collins' manager in St. Paul under date of May 11, that such a letter was to be given for publication, and it was not put abroad until yesterday.

From the present indications the gubernatorial fight will not liven up again for about two weeks, which is said to be time enough to begin the hard work. This will give five weeks of work before the state convention.

"The Republican candidates for governor are laying themselves out and the Democrats of Minnesota will get together along in the summer and will nominate a clean-cut fearless man for governor, who will be elected," said J. H. Buck, of Winona, chairman of the Democratic state central committee, in St. Paul a day or two ago.

"The Republicans are in a pretty row, and I see no good reason why the opportunity is not ripe for the nomination and election of a Democrat as governor of this state. Everybody remembers that in a presidential year Governor Van Sant narrowly escaped being defeated by John Lind, and with a thoroughly organized and united party behind the Republican candidate.

"I fail to see how the Republicans can ever get together after telling so many plain truths about each other as they have in the past few weeks and after having engenedered a bitterness that has not been equaled in the past decade of Minnesota Republican politics, if ever before in the history of that party.

"It seems to me that the time is ripe for united action by the Democrats and with a strong candidate, even with the prestige of a Republican candidate for president on the ticket, there will be thousands and thousands of Republicans who will never vote forl the nominee of that party after the scorching fight that has been raging and promises to continue in the party until long after the nominations are made June 30.

"We will have a convention about Sept. 1 and we will be in a position to take advantage of the Republican turmoil and bring out a man who will command the respect and admiration of not only the members of our own party, but of a great many Repulicans, who are thoroughly disgusted with the conduct of their leading candidates for governor."

Chairman Buck, while advocating the nomination of a man who will fill every requirement as a candidate to make a winning fight, declined to name a man who is available. "It is too early," he said, "and we will cross the bridge when we come to it. There are a number of men in the party who could be suggested to lead the party on the state ticket this fall, but it would not be wise to suggest them at this time. The Republicans will be given the fight of their lives this fall, and they may as well realize it now as when it is too late."

Leonard A. Rosing's visit here during the week in the interests of his candidacy for delegate-at-large to the national Democratic convention at St. Louis stirred up considerable interest in the chances of various Democrats for these posts.

Mr. Rosing while here stated that, while he was opposed to Hearst, he was for an uninstructed delegation, and it appears that the feeling in this respect is growing stronger continually. One of the strongest evidences of the anti-Hearst sentiment is the action of the Indiana Democratic convention the past week, when the delegates were instructed for Parker. New York has also turned down Mr. Hearst, and the fact that these two great pivotal states of the Democracy have declared against the New York millionaire publisher and congressman is regarded as deeply significant.

In this neighborhood the names of L. A. Rosing, John Lind and J. D. O'Brien are foremost in the mention of possible delegates-at-large. Mr. Rosing came up from his home at Cannon Falls on Wednesday and returned home Friday, after having made a pretty general list of calls on Democrats in this city.

It appears that he had heard considerable about the situation in St. Louis county as developing in favor of Hearst, and wanted to look over the ground in person. He is said to have found the situation more favorable to the field than in favor of the New York congressman.

The other two gentlemen whose names are mentioned above have not begun an active canvass in their own behalf. In this respect Mr. Rosing's interests are considered identical with those of Mr. Lind, as they have usually stood pretty nearly as one man on all issues, and during Mr. Lind's term as governor Mr. Rosing was his private secretary.

Whether Mr. Rosing's look at the situation here was for the purpose of seeing if for Mr. Lind as well is a question that has been asked, and it is taken for granted that an affirmative answer fits the case. Mr. Lind is believed to stand well forward as a favored candidate, who is anxious to go to the convention unbound by a promise to vote for any one candidate.

If Hennepin should send a Hearst delegation to the convention this would be regarded as a direct slap at Mr. Lind, whose record as congressman has been an exceptionally good one, and has placed him practically next in Democratic leadership to Congressman John Sharp Williams. His being the only Democratic congressman from this state, and having been governor of the state, are believed to be strong considerations in his behalf.

Thomas D. O'Brien, the national committeeman, is said by some people to be desirable as a delegate, but he is said to be undesirous of going to St. Louis, and George Porter, of Minneapolis, is said to be anxious to go. All the above are in favor of going to St. Louis with no string tied to their votes.

In the district there has been mentioned the name of J. B. Galernault, of Aitkin, whose prospects seem to be very favorably spoken of by the anti-Hearst people. There is another delegate to be elected in this district, and if Mr. Galernault should be chosen, the other might be picked from the excess candidates for delegate-at-large.

This might be the case in the situation of the candidates in favor of Hearst as well. Those mentioned in favor of Mr. Hearst are H. L. Buck, of Winona; James R. Bennett, of St. Cloud; Dr. A. G. Aldrich, of Anoka; Frank D. Larrabee, of Minneapolis; Hon. Charles d'Autremont and T. T. Hudson, of this city, and Mr. Turnblad, of Minneapolis. Mr. Hudson stated, however, to a Herald reporter, that he was not a candidate.

In respect to the comparison between the favor in which Mr. Hearst is held as opposed to the others in the field, it is a very hard matter to determine satisfactorily who are right in their estimates. Mr. Rosing said when he was here that he had correspondence from all over the state, and fully 85 per cent of it was opposed to Hearst. The Hearst people have been sending out letters from this city, and they say they have not had 5 per cent of their replies show the writers unfavorable to Hearst. It looks very much as though the anti-Hearstites did not answer the letters of the Hearst people, nor the Hearst people the letters of the anti-Hearst workers.

Neither side claim to have any regular headquarters, but it is said the Hearst workers have an eyrie on the top floor of the Torrey building, from which they are putting forth all the correspondence they can. There is no name on the door, and the room was locked yesterday, but a certain attorney is said to be in charge of sending out the tracts.

When the Republican state central committee met in St. Paul a short time ago it took action which is expected to relieve the nominations for supreme judges of the political strees that frequently attaches to them. This was effected by having these nominations placed at the first of the list, by which they will take precedence when the nomination of the ticket comes before the state convention next month.

Conservative people say this is an excellent move, being a step that tends to remove the handling of bench nominees as far as possible from the political character of the general selections. It is asserted in this direction that the farther down the list of names for a ticket a convention gets, the more defined does the political status of a convention become, until the final nominations are purely the choice of one faction or another.

It is claimed that by putting the names for judges before the convention first there is a better chance for electing good men regardless of the divisions of the party which so often arise when then names for the regular political offices are taken up.

Wisconsin is pointed out as a state that has benefitted by this method of naming its candidates for judges, and friends of the badger state assert that it has one of the best supreme benches in the United States.

Trevanion W. Hugo has been mentioned as a desirable candidate for the legislature from the Fiftieth district. It is his brother, N. F. Hugo, who now represents the Fifty-first and is desirous of succeeding himself and ascending to the speakership as well.

The record of the former as a mayor and in other public affairs gives to him certain important political stress as a candidate and there is no doubt that he would make a desirable man if he cared to take the office.

The ex-mayor has dealt so much with public questions that he knows how to get hold of them, and this is a point that his friends put out strongly. Another feature of Mr. Hugo's fitness is his ability as a speaker, for while he is not an orator, and lays no claim to being one, he is a concise and logical narrator on any subject that he takes up and a good debater and this is a qualification very desirable in a legislative representative.

EDDY LOOMS UP

As Result of Dunn-Collins Mud Throwing.

St. Paul, May 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Frank M. Eddy, of Glenwood, who arrived in St. Paul yesterday in time to read the accounts of letter of James J. Hill to State Librarian E. A. Nelson, in which the president of the Great Northern railroad said that Mr. Nelson had asked Mr. Hill to contribute from $20,000 to $25,000 to Judge Collins' campaign, does not believe that a candidate for nomination for public office should solicit or receive large contributions from anyone, whether it be the president of a railroad or a man of less commercial importance.

"I do not think that it is the proper thing for a candidate for a nomination to solicit or receive large contributions to assist to assist him in his campaign," said Mr. Eddy. "If the man has been nominated by a party it is a different question entirely, because then the money is contributed not to assist him personally, but to help the party.

"When a contribution is made to secure the nomination of any particular candidate, it is in the nature of an investment. The man who makes the contribution expects some time to get value received. The donation is really a mortgage on the official conduct of the candidate after he has been nominated and elected."

Although there is a difference of opinion among Republicans of the Twin Cities as to the effect on Judge Collins and Mr. Dunn of the letters of Mr. Hill, no one believes that Mr. Hill's statements have injured Mr. Eddy in any way. In fact, Mr. Eddy has been looming to the front ever since the tilt began between Judge Collins and Mr. Dunn, and the friends of the former congressman believe that he will get the nomination as a result of the developments.

"No one has accused Mr. Eddy of making a personal attack on any candidate and in many ways he has conducted a more irreproachable campaign than any of the other candidates," said a Republican yesterday, who so far has taken no part in the gubernatorial contest. "I will not predict that Eddy will be nominated, but I am satisfied that he has gained strength ever since Public Examiner S. T. Johnson sprang the report containing charges against Mr. Dunn and since Mr. Dunn struck back by accuaing Judge Collins of receiving contributions from Mr. Hill.

"Of course it all depends on whether there will be more candidates. The friends of Mr. Eustis think that this is an excelent time for him to get in the race, and there is a good deal of talk in favor of Congressman McCleary and others.

"Undoubtedly there are many Republicans hitherto friendly to Judge Collins who are at least lukewarm in his behalf now, in view of the statements of Mr. Hill and of the report of the public examiner. Most of these Republicans will support Eddy, provided Eustis or some other candidate does not get in the race."

The general sentiment in the Twin Cities is that the episode of Mr. Dunn's charges has injured both Mr. Dunn and Judge Collins and that probably Judge Collins has the worst of it. Mr. Hill, in his letters to Judge Collins, does not state that he made no contributions to the judge's campaign; in fact, he insinuates he did. He says: "By whom contributions were solicited and to whom made is a proper subject for a personal interview rather than of correspondence." On learning from Mr. Hill that no contributions were personally solicited by the judge or made to him, Judge Collins decided that it was not necessary to have the personal interview with Mr. Hill to learn who solicited and who received the money.

Republicans who remember about the campaign of 1894 say that owing to the heated contest between Judge Collins and Judge Willis, who was considered in the light of a Populist, there was a separate judicial committee having charge of Judge Collins' campaign, aside from the regular state central committee, which had charge of the entire campaign; that large contributions were made to the judicial committee, and that Mr. Hill was one of the principal contributors. If any of this money came from Mr. Hill, Judge Collins at least said that it came without any suggestion from him and entirely without his knowledge.

"As a matter of fact the Great Northern railroad put in an entire organization to elect Judge Collins," said a Republican yesterday. "I can give the names of some of the men who carried the money between the Great Northern offices and the office of Judge Collins. It was common talk at the time, and Judge Willis says himself that he was defeated by wholesale corruption."

If Mr. Dunn's candidacy is injured by these developments it will be because the affair shows that James J. Hill and the Princeton candidate for governor are on very intimate terms, and that as between Judge Collins and Mr. Dunn the president of the Great Northern will certainly not throw his influence for the St. Cloud candidate.

Most people don't eat too much—according to their appetites.

The trouble is that appetite (in these cultivated days) is no longer the trustworthy guide it was designed to be. It's apt to play hob with the machinery.

The beauty of "FORCE" is that it fits any appetite, and makes digestion wait upon it.

Sunny Jim

If "FORCE" simply made people happy, nothing more, it would be a power for good. But when you know it makes them strong, energetic, useful—millions of them—think how it must be pushing the world ahead.

LIONS HATE LIQUOR.

"Most persons would scarcely class lions, tigers, jaguars and the rest of the largest and fiercest members of the cat family as temperance advocates or reformers," observed the man who had spent years as an animal trainer, in conversation with the New York Times. "Yet these animals seem to have a strong and inherent feeling against the use of liquor, and they make this feeling manifest in a curious way.

"Of course, the life which the trainer of wild animals lives is a good deal of a strain on a man's nerve and he is often tempted to take a little too much and then comes near his fierce charges? Every lion and tiger instantly is aware of the man's condition. They stare at him in a manner which indicates curiosity. Instinctively they appear to know that the man, the being of a higher order than themselves, has degraded himself below their level.

"No matter how well trained they may be, the big cats will refuse obedience to a trainer who is in the least degree under the influence of liquor. In fact, it is not necessary for him to be in an actual state of intoxication; the animals will appreciate that he is not in a normal condition when it is scarcely perceptible to human observers.

"It isn't often that an animal trainer will make a mistake of this sort; he knows too well the risk he is running. But when one does, there is only one thing to do—that is, to get him away from the animals as quickly as possible. Otherwise a bad accident, perhaps a fatal one, is certain. And there is another curious feature to cases of this sort. The animals seem to remember, sometimes for years, that they were accustomed to respect and obey, in a degraded condition. The result is that they will often refuse to obey him any longer. I have known cases where it was necessary for a trainer to leave a show because his lions or tigers had once seen him under the influence of liquor. His usefulness as a trainer with those animals was gone forever."

Y. M. C. A. CLUB TO ST. LOUIS

Meeting Called to Consider Arrangements For the Trip.

The Y. M. C. A. has called a meeting of the young men interested in the World's Fair club, to be sent to St. Louis on a special car by the loal organization, under direction of the association bureau at the Missouri city, for next Friday evening, May 20. Officers will be elected, and from now on regular meetings will be held at the association building for the purpose of making a systemati study of the big exposition and its different departments, so that when the club visits the fair it will have a fair idea of what there is to be seen, and the best way to see it.

The association has arranged to receive bulletins from the press and publishing department of the fair, and so keep fully posted.

From the interest that has been manifested in the move locally it is believed that several parties will be organized to visit St. Louis, the first to go next month. Norman D. McLeod is preparing to organize a party from the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A.

A diagram of the car to be used in making the trip has been received and is now to be seen at the association rooms. The car is one which has been used by a syndicate for personally conducted tours through the West and Southwest, and differs from the ordinary Pullman in several ways. It is more conveniently arranged to live in for several days, and is considerably larger, and fitted with all modern conveniences. The club rate for the round trip from Duluth will be $40, and this will include five days at the fair, living expenses and railroad fare. The entire trip will take one week.

MORMONS MAY BUILD A BIG TEMPLE IN NEW YORK.

New York, May 14.—A committee of Mormons, representing the Harlem colony in this city, probably the largest outside of Utah, has prepared to leave shortly for Salt Lake, where a favorable report will be made upon plans to build a temple here covering from six to twelve blocks.

It is stated that options already have been secured on six plots near One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and Lenox avenue and that the plan embraces the erection of a splendid structure as headquarters for the church in the East. The elders in charge of the church's interests here, refuse, however, to discuss the matter.

SEALED VERDICT.

Jury's Verdict In McKenzie vs. Banks Not Known.

A sealed verdict was the result of the jury deliberation, last evening, in the personal injury case of Mrs. Belle McKenzie against Mrs. Sarah Banks. Until the court convenes at 9:30 o'clock next Monday morning the nature of the verdict will not be made public.

The case reached the jury late yesterday afternoon and the jury arrived at a verdict about 11 o'clock last night.

Mrs. McKenzie claims that Mrs. Banks, during the course of a quarrel, pushed her against a woodbox, causing injuries that brought about premature confinement, and permanently wrecked her health. She asked for a judgment of $5000.

WHO WILL BURY CHAMBERLAIN?

Clash of Authorities Over Disposition of Pauper's Body.

The body of David Chamberlain, aged 27 years, who died a pauper, lies in the morgue at Durkan & Crawford's, while the county authorities are trying to decide which department shall be responsible for the burial expenses.

Chamberlain died at St. Mary's hospital, of a cancer, last Thursday. Nothing is known of his relatives or friends and his case was reported to the county poor authorities when the undertakers took charge of the body.

On the advice of the county attorney's office, the county poor board decided that Coroner Boyer was the proper person to take charge of the remains for burial, but the coroner declares that Chamberlain's death and the disposal of his body does not come within the province of his department.

The county attorney holds that unless the deceased is a county charge before death the case is for the coroner and it is his duty to make an inspection and provide for a burial.

Coroner Boyer denies the jurisdiction of his office in the matter, claiming that Chamberlain had the attendance of a regular physician and there is no call for an inspection by the coroner as to his death. Dr. Boyer says the county poor board has a contract to bury the county poor in Greenwood cemetery at $2.40 for each case, and that it costs $15 for each case buried by the coroner. He says that for reasons of economy in the expenditure of county funds, if nothing else, he will keep out of the matter.

It seems that there has been more or less trobule for the past several months in fixing the responsibility of the payment of the burial expenses of the pauper dead in the county, and there are several claims of undertakers from various parts of the county being held up at the present time because of this situation.

Brought From Hibbing.

Neil O'Connor, Thomas Ryan and John Keefe were brought down from Hibbing yesterday afternoon and lodged in the county jail to serve terms of 30 days each on conviction of stealing a quantity of pork chops from a Hibbing restaurant, a few days ago.

Keefe was first arrested on suspicion and when put in the sweatbox, confessed. The other two men afterward visited him in jail and were placed under arrest as accomplices. All three pleaded guilty to petty larceny and were sentenced by municipal court at Hibbing.

Accurate Treatment Of Men's Diseases

I guess at nothing. My understanding of men's diseases is so sufficient that I have no need to resort to guess work. To men's diseases alone I have devoted my entire attention for many years. I have closely studied them in every possible phase and complication. I believe there is no case that I cannot accurately diagnose. My diagnosis is the foundation of my treatment. It determines the course to pursue. As the cure progresses I carefully note developments and vary the remedies accordingly. I employ original and distinctive methods of treatment, but they are not set methods. They are pliable to meet the conditions in individual cases, and their use calls for the most delicate prescribing. That they are correct, scientific and rational methods is conclusively proven by the cures they produce.

The longest established, most successful and reliable specialist in diseases of men, as medical diplomas, licenses and newspaper records will show.

"WEAKNESS"

That disorder commonly known as "weakness," has for years and generations baffled the efforts of physicians, yet to this very day a majority of doctors are attempting to overcome it by methods that have been in constant use and that have constantly failed for half a century. They dose the system with powerful stimulants and tonics calculated to restore nervous forces or strength that is not and never has been lacking, with a result that the functions are temporarily excited to the positive detriment of the patient. Weakness, we will call it such for convenience just now, is only a symptom resulting from a chronically swollen and inflamed prostate gland, and is curable by local treatment only. Either early dissipation or some improperly treated contracted disease is responsible for the inflammation in most instances, though accidental injury, strain, etc., may produce the same result. I have permanently cured thousands of cases of prematureness, loss of power, which demonstrates the absolute accuracy of my understanding and treatment of the disorder. In years I have not met with a single failure, and I have entire confidence in my ability to cure all cases that come to me for treatment other than that which I have perfected can completely and permanently restore strength and vigor.

CONTRACTED DISORDERS

To but partially cure a contracted disease is almost as dangerous as to allow it to go untreated. Unless every particle of infection and inflammation is removed, the probability exists that the disease will gradually work its way into the general system. All greater is the danger of the prostate gland becoming chronically inflammed, which always brings partial or complete loss of power. Perhaps 25 per cent of the cases of so-called "weakness' are a direct result of some improperly treated disease. During the past five years I have treated over 6500 cases of contracted disorders and have effected an absolutely thorough and safe cure in each instance. There have been no relapses or undesirable developments whatever and my patients have been cured in less time than other and less thorough forms of treatment require in producing even doubtful results.

VARICOCELE

Many men afflicted with varicocele are endangering their general health, their manly power and even life itself by allowing the disorder to remain uncured. Varicocele results from partial paralysis of the delicate nerve fibres that have a part in controlling local circulation of the blood. The muscular coating of the veins being deprived of nervous communication and control, become inactive, weaken and relax. The blood vessels expand from the pressure within, the circulation in the parts become sluggish, and frequently stagnant pools form in little nooks and pockets that constantly enlarge as the relaxation continues. The possibility exists that clots may form in these stagnant pools and then pass out into the general circulation. Should one find lodgment in the valve of the heart the result might be instant death, or should it be carried to the brain, general paralysis will follow.

I guarantee to cure varicocele in one week by a method that involves no cutting or ligature, or caustic. No other physician employs a like method, and so thorough is my work that there need not be the slightest fear of a relapse into the old condition. Those who have been long afflicted with varicocele will never realize the injury it has caused until they feel the vim, energy and buoyancy of spirts that a complete cure will bring.

STRICTURE

My treatment for stricture removes the necessity for surgical operations, even in severe cases of long standing. I do no cutting or dilating. No other physician employs my methous of overcoming this disorder, so the service I offer you is original and distinctive. Do not give up hope because others have failed. I will cure you and the cure will be a prompt and painless one. My treatment dissolves the stricture and permanently removes every obstruction from the urinary passage, subdues all inflammation, relieves all ig itation or congestion that may exist in the kidneys or bladder, reduces enlargement of the prostate gland and restores to health and tone all organs affected by the disease.

SPECIFIC BLOOD POISON

I permanently cure this most hideous of all blood diseases. I employ harmless, blood cleansing remedies that positively drive the very last taint of virus from the system, and every symptom vanishes to appear no more.

We charge nothing for private counsel and give to each patient a LEGAL CONTRACT to hold for our promises. Is it not worth your while to investigate a cure that has made life anew to multitudes of men?

If you cannot call at our office, write your symptoms fully. Our home treatment by correspondence is always successful.

DISMISSED CASE

Damage Suit of F. A. Teall Against Boyle Bros. Ended.

Plantiff Did Not Appear When Case Was Called.

Last March Frederick A. Teall, a local attorney, entered suit for damages to the amount of $7148 against James Boyle and Charles Boyle, proprietors of Boyle Bros.' restaurant and saloon, claiming that he was assaulted and thrown out of the restaurant last December and was injured to such an extent that he was laid up in the hospital for several weeks. He charged the proprietors of the restaurant with thus assaulting him, and asked $7000 damages, in addition to cost of surgical attendance.

Boyle Bros. entered a general denial of the complaint and prepared to fight the case in court.

The case was called in the district court on Thursday. The defendants were on hand with attorneys and witnesses, but Teall did not put in an appearance, and on motion of Boyle Bros.' attorney the case was dismissed.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT.

Philadelphia Press: If it be true, as reported, that the Methodist Missionary society has refused a bequest from one of the most useful laymen who has served that denomination in recent years, simply because he met his death in a theater fire, then it may frankly be said that such narrowness proves the society incompetent to direct a worldwide work.

St. Paul Pioneer Press: A hero who would not think of himself as deserving a Carnegie medal is Rev. R. M. Labaree, pastor of the Doylestown Presbyterian church. It will be recalled that Mr. Larabee's brother was recently murdered by fanatics in Persia, and these murderers are still at large, seeking opportunity, it is reported, to repeat their crime upon other missionaries. Yet this Doylestown pastor—a gentleman of fine parts, honored and useful in the community—promptly offered himself to the mission authorities as a substitute for his slain brother.

St. Louis Republic: Archbishop Ryan's telegram of congratulations to Archbishop Glennon, of St. Louis, was read at an ecclesiastical dinner this week. When the see of St. Louis became vacant the names of two auxiliary bishops were sent to Rome on the slate of the clergy and prelates. The two were Bishop Dunn, of Dallas, Texas, and Bishop Messmer, of Green Bay, both of whom, contrary to the general custom of Roman Catholic prelates, wear beards. Neither of the candidates pleased Rome, and Archbishop Ryan was consulted. The Philadelphian's choice was Auxiliary Bishop Glennon, of St. Louis, who has been called the Apollo of the American hierarchy. Archbishop Ryan's telegram of congratulation read: "You won it by a close shave."

DIVED TO HIS DEATH.

Raliegh, N. C., May 14.—Professor Danton, the Hungarian diver, one of the attractions at the Goldsboro carnival, circled in flame, dived to his death from a 110-foot ladder into a tank last night. He made a slight miscalculation, his head and shoulders striking the side of the tank.

MAN HAD BEEN MURDERED.

Chicago, May 14.—The body of a man, who had evidently been murdered, was found in the Illinois and Michigan canal, last night. The corpse had evidently been in the water for some time as it was badly decomposed. A gag had been placed across the mouth, and two heavy sections of steampipe were attached by a heavy cord to the right arm of the body. There was a deep knife wound, about four inches above the right knee, the skull had been fractured by a blow behind the right ear, and the left shoulder was broken.

THE LABOR WORLD

The Trades Assembly Elects Delegates to State Federation.

Duluth's Representation Will Be Smaller Than Last Year.

Duluth Trades and Labor unions will meet the coming week as follows:

Lumber pilers, Sunday, at Victor's hall, West Duluth.

Stone masons, Monday evening, in Axel building.

Tug firemen and linemen, Monday evening, in the Hunter block.

Painters, decorators and paper hangers, Tuesday evening, in Kalamazoo building.

Carpenters, Tuesday evening, in Kalamazoo building.

Building Trades council, Monday evening, in Kalamazoo building.

Leather workers, Tuesday evening, in Kalamazoo building.

Cigarmakers, Wednesday evening, in Kalamazoo building.

Electrical workers, Tuesday evening, at 221 West Superior street.

Stationary engineers, Thursday evening, at Lyceum building.

The Federated Trades' assembly, at its regular meeting in Kalamazoo hall last night elected the following five delegates to the annual convention of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor, to be held at New Ulm, June 13, 14 and 15: President Henry Perreault, Fred McKelvey, C. J. McDowell, Edward Schubisky and J. M. Brown. J. A. Barron, E. S. Kromroy and Matt Ettinger were chosen as alternates.

There was considerable discussion among members of the assembly as to the number of delegates which should be sent to the state meeting. The organization is entitled to five, according to the laws of the federation, but the opinion was last night expressed that three would serve the purpose just as well, and save $50 to the local assembly. J. A. Barron argued strongly against sending more than three men. He was opposed by Delegates McKelvey, Kielley and Skinner, who argued that it was of the utmost importance for Duluth to have her full representation at the convention. Mr. Skinner said it was as much the duty of unions to send delegates to the state meeting as it was for the citizen to get out and vote on election day. These arguments finally prevailed and five delegates were elected.

Another warm discussion arose over the amount of expense money which should be provided the delegates. Some wanted the amount fixed at $25, and others at $30. The fare for the round trip from Duluth is $9.72. It was decided that $25 would be a sufficient sum to allow the delegates as expense money. Mr. Skinner said that if they lived economically while at the convention they should have 73 cents left on returning home.

It is thought that Duluth will have a smaller representation at the convention this year than last. It was stated at the assembly meeting that several of the unions did not care to expend the money necessary to send their full quota of delegates. The Painters' union, which had three delegates last year, will have none this year, according to a statement made by their representative at the assembly.

The following newly elected delegates handed in their credentials last night and were obligated: William Elliott and J. P. Londeau, barbers; William Campbell, O. L. Ingebo and Hans Berg, Building Laborers' union; Marshall Hebner and Philipp Blanchard, cooks and waiters; Michael Bushele, Brewery Workers.

Carpenters, painters, printers, plumbers, butchers, and building trades men reported trades good.

The usual number of appeals for aid from outside unions were read. One from striking blast furnace men at Hanging Rock, Ohio, showed the worst condition in union labor circles that has been brought to the attention of the local body for some time past. It stated that the men were compelled to work twelve hours a day and seven days a week, and that they were so few in number they were unable to do the work. They are now on a strike to better their condition.

Considerable interest was manifested in a communication from the California State Federation of Labor, warning all laboring men to keep away from California and other coast points for the reason that the labor market there is flooded with men now. A part of the communication reads as follows:

"The Citizens' Alliance, the California Promotion society, and the ever-ready agents of the enemies of trades-unions—the employment agencies, have for some time been busy flooding the Eastern states and foreign countries with lying and misleading literature regarding the Pacific coast, and California in particular. The transportation companies, eager for profit, have aided greatly in these frauds perpetrated upon the working people. There is nothing to encourage working people to come to California except the misrepresentations of those who wish to break up the unions on this coast, or make a profit by supplying and transporting help on that purpose."

A communication from a Patterson, N. J., union, offering for sale a ticket on an $1800 residence, to be raffled off, was read. Delegate Kielley moved that the communication and ticket be referred to ex-Mayor Hugo, but the motion found no second.

The report of E. S. Kromroy, who had been appointed on a committee to call on Mr. Panton, of the firm of Panton & White, relative to certain difficulties existing between a foreign union and its employers, who made goods handled by the local store, occasioned considerable amusement. Mr. Panton accused the union men of paying too much attention to Hearst and yellow journalism, and when asked to define yellow journalism, said that when a man fell and broke his leg in one place and it was reported in the paper that he had broken it in six places, that was yellow journalism.

J. A. Barron, who had been on a committee to call on all the local clothiers, reported that the store men told him that union men in Duluth very seldom asked for the union label. They are just as ready to buy non-union goods, he said, as the other kind.

Members of local labor unions express satisfaction at the action of the longshoremen, in their meeting this week with the Lumber Carriers' association, in leaving the question of wages to a board of arbitration. All other points were settled with the carriers, but no satisfactory agreement could be reached on the wage question. The men ask 52½ cents an hour, and their employers say they will give only 50 cents an hour. When the conference began the longshoremen demanded 60 cents an hour. Joseph Gauthier, J. Cleugh and Thomas Ultican represented the local union at the conference, held at the Spalding hotel, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Arthur Moore and Edward Brown, for many years prominent in local union labor circles and popular with their fellow workmen, have gone into business for themselves under the firm name of Moore & Brown. They have a roofing, cornice, tin and coppersmith shop at 19 Fifth avenue west.

SORRY PLIGHT

Of Woman Who Lost Her Railroad Ticket.

Omaha, Neb., May 14.—Mrs. Emma Smith, of Helena, Mont., her dress torn and bespattered with mud and the soles of her shoes nearly worn away, walked into the office of the county commissioner with a babe asleep in her arms. She sank exhausted into a chair, crying bitterly.

She said she had been in Canton, Ohio, her former home, to attend the funeral of her father. Several days ago she left there for Helena. She purchased a through ticket from Chicago to Helena and had $5 in her purse. When the conductor called upon her for her ticket, after the train left Chicago, she discovered that her purse had been lost or stolen. The conductor compelled her to leave the train at a staion in Central Iowa.

With her babe in her arms she set out on foot for Omaha. She was a day and a half covering the distance. The county commissioner will buy her a ticket to Helena.

NO CHANGE

In Y. M. C. A. Method of Dealing With Railroads.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 14.—An important question of policy was decided at today's session of the thirty-fifth international convention of the Y. M. C. A. Those who favored taking the power of dealing with the railroad branches of the Y. M. C. A. out of the hands of the international committee and placing it with state and local committeees, were defeated by a large majority. The matter came up in the majority and minority reports of a committee of twenty-one, which was first appointed at the Grand Rapids convention in 1899, reappointed at the Boston convention in 1901, and again reappointed at Cleveland in 1902. The majority report was in favor of leaving matters as they stand under the control of the international committee.

The minority report was defeated by a vote of 872 to 295. The majority report was finally adopted by a vote of 931 to 131.

LATE WILL STRENGTHENS BELIEF IN WENTZ SUICIDE.

Bristol, Va., May 14.—It appears that the late E. L. Wentz left a will executed only a few days previous to his death, in which he leaves his entire fortune to Mrs. D. B. Wentz, wife of the brother with whom he was so closely associated through the years of their residence at Big Stone Gap. The report that the will of Wentz had been found, and that it bears a date only a few days prior to his tragic death lends color to the theory of suicide, now firmly believed by many of those most coversant with the facts.

TO BEAUTIFY DULUTH.

A daily newspaper published in the city of Portland on the Pacific coast makes the claim that so far efforts to make that a city beautiful have been largely impotent because of a lack of civic pride and organized effort. If such a charge against as handsome a city as Portland is legitimate and just, what can be said for Duluth? Actually there is no comparison. To Duluth visitors the city of Portland appears as a beautiful panorama, with clean, well-paved streets, sightly residences and charming grounds profusely decorated with shrubs and flowers. Not only in one section, but in all sections of the city is this the case. Certainly if the newspapers of Portland are not satisfied with the progress of civic adornment in that place, there are grounds for a strong indictment against the people of Duluth for their delinquencies in this respect.

A plan recently set on foot in Eastern cities for the beautifying of municipal environment is a simple one and is reported in the newspapers as being very effective. This is an organization of the people of each block in the residence districts, with a view to securing the co-operation of all the residents in the block as well as to create a rivalry with the residents of other adjoining blocks, and bring about the greatest harmony in the effect of color and mass. Such an organization in Duluth might have the effect of creating sufficient pride in the cleanliness of their surroundings as to induce the careless and thoughtless to refrain from endangering the public health by littering alleys and yards with filth and trash of all kinds. It might also lead eventually to interesting more people in the acquirement of homes of their own, so that they could enjoy the delights of living where there was opportunity for adornment and recompense for the labor.

There is also reason to believe that if this block organization were effected the movement to plant and protect shade trees in the streets could be more successfully carried out, because every resident would then have an interest in the matter.

Those few individual property-owners who have made an effort to improve and beautify their surroundings deserve all credit, but an organization which will include practically every resident of the city must first be effected before much progress will be made in creating here a city both healthful and beautiful.

A STATE DISGRACE.

The people of this nation are confronted with no greater evil today than that of food adulteration. A member of the United States senate made the statement recently while addressing that body, that nearly all the people are sick or ailing as a result of some sort of poison consumed in their food, medicines and liquors. And he was right. This is a great evil because these adulterated and poisoned foods and liquors attack the very foundations of health, and without good health there can be no real happiness. Yet, when the curtains are drawn aside and facts revealed, we find state legislatures trading away the people's health for their own financial advancement.

It is hoped that this is not the condition of affairs in Minnesota, but the fact remains that the so-called pure food laws of this state are entirely inadequate and inefficient to protect the people from fraud and imposition.

An interview published elsewhere in this number of The Herald gives details of a few of the blunders and inconsistencies of these laws and the result is that the state officials paid by the taxpayers to prevent food adulteration and protect the public health are practically powerless to do so.

The people of Minnesota ought to rise as one man and insist that the men who ask their votes this fall, because they desire to go to the legislature, shall pledge themselves in advance that these pure-food laws shall be overhauled and strengthened so that they will be of some value to the commonwealth in the purposes for which they were intended.

Whether a result of ignorance or cupidity, the present statutes are a disgrace to the state because they are so constructed that they cannot be enforced.

CHILDHOOD'S GREATEST GRIEF.

No greater grief can assail the youthful heart than the permanent separation from father, mother, brothers and sisters. To the poignant suffering that comes to the childish mind from the loss by death of one or both parents is often added the terror of separation from brothers and sisters.

Recently a case of this kind occurred in St. Louis county. The wife of a homesteader residing near Tower, the mother of a family, sickened and died. The father bravely bore the trial of trying to keep his family together until the strain became too great to endure, when he sought to place the younger ones in the Children's home in Duluth so that they might finally be adopted into other families. As he parted from his two little boys, the father's tears were mingled with those of his children, whose tender hearts were wrung with despair over their separation from the ones they loved.

Time, no doubt, will heal all wounds, but there will always remain deep scars in the hearts and minds of these little boys. One of the greatest causes for happiness in their lives is at least temporarily destroyed. Grief over loss of one member of the family, even of a mother, cannot be so great as is caused by this separation of the children of a family.

It is well that there are places like the Children's home for such as these. But is society doing its full duty toward mankind when it provides a temporary shelter at the expense of torn and bleeding hearts? The remark is often heard in extenuation: "It will be better for them in the end!" But will it be better? Let those whose hearts have been thus wounded, and those whose youthful minds have been horrified even at the contemplation of such a thing, find the answer in their own consciousness. And when the read this answer they will surely agree that society is not doing its full duty to bereaved childhood until it can devise a plan for keeping the family intact.

REWARD OF SELFISHNESS.

"He has been engaged to a girl at Stanley, Wis., for about three years and has spent all his earnings on her, clothing her and buying her everything she wanted as far as he could. While he was here the girl married another man and he has not been the same boy since he received the news.

"The last we heard from him he was in Thorpe, Wis., he wrote us from there saying that he 'was going to the bad,' and that he 'hoped that he would not live long.'

"Oh, I have prayed to God so hard to keep him, I don't see how he could go astray. He has spells of being gloomy and I am afraid that he will think that we will cast him off, but we will never do that and will try to bring him back to the right way, with the grace of God to help us."

This is the outpouring of a mother's heart that is breaking over the waywardness of a son who is accused of horse-stealing.

She is Mrs. Fowler Hopkins, of Huss, Roseau county, Minn., and he is but 21 years of age. She says in another part of her letter to a friend of the family: "It seems a hard sentence for one so young, although his crime is a great one. The blow has come with crushing force upon us all. We have tried so hard to bring our children up in the love and fear of God. Will you please see him for us?"

It was the principal concern of one of the carbarn bandits who was hung in Chicago lately that he had disgraced his family and was to leave a grieving mother behind. But he thought of his mother too late. Had he kept her and a desire to make her happy in his mind all through his life he would not have entered upon the career of vice that led to his own destruction and brought a curse upon his entire family.

The young man whose mother wrote the above pathetic letter, has evidently been grieving over the loss of a sweetheart whom he adored, and in his despair decided to throw his life away. There is a lesson here for enamored youth. Pure love is the holiest as it is the strongest of passions, but no matter how pure and strong the love man bears for woman if she renounce it unjustly she is unworthy thereof and the man is better that he lost her. It is a severe trial, of course, but experience has amply demonstrated that any person so situated should bear with fortitude. The man who lets go his grip upon life and honor because of the loss of such a love is a fool who is bound to suffer from his own folly.

In this mother's pathetic letter is also shown the evil of selfishness. Here is a boy who, because of a personal grief, does not hesitate to bring shame, disgrace and suffering upon those who love him most, even the mother who constantly prays to God for His guidance and care, and cannot understand why he has been deserted. His nature is so selfish that he looks only inward and in a spirit of self-pity declares: "I am going to the bad."

What a warning for those who live only for self and self-happiness. There can be no real happiness that is not shared with others.

The Labor World of Duluth was established just ten years ago, and a special industrial number was issued this week in commemoration of the event. It is a meritorious publication in every particular. The present publisher, W. E. McEwen, has had charge of the Labor World for four years, and has not only made it a success financially, but has placed it in the front rank of its particular field. He points with satisfaction to the fact that there was not a single strike in Duluth on May 1, and says of the strike: "It is as foolish as war, and every civilized person admits that war is barbarous."

HOTEL GOSSIP

Fred Steinle, who has for some time past been behind the desk at the McKay, will leave next week to take srvice on the steamer Easten of the White line, as purser. He is an old-time sailor, and some years ago was for two years purser on the New York and Cuban Mail steamship line running out of New York.

He was assistant purser of the City of Washington when that boat was stove in below Hatteras, the accident resulting in several casualties. The captain of the boat was named Aiken, and as his first name was John, he acquired the sobriquet of "Black Jack."

The captain did not have much use for effeminate men, or timid ones, and his highest animosity was for the imitators of the so-called English type of dude. One of these was on board when the accident occurred. There was a heavy sea, and on one swell the boat failed to right herself and was caught by a heavy sea which stove her in badly. As soon as everything was calm after the trouble a young man who liked to ape the English went up to the captain.

"I say, captain, you must have thought a few things when we were caught back there, now didn't you, really?" he asked.

"No, I didn't think a few things," was the laconic reply of the master of the vessel. "I thought only one thing. I thought we would all go to h—— together."

And he walked away and left the young man to figure it out himself. The inference drawn by some people who heard the story that the captain's regret in the thought was that he could not choose his company to his destination.

Not so long ago there died in Paris a well known Democrat who had gone to Europe with his family for recreation and a change. He was a man of over 80 years of age and was well known throughout the West, having at one time sat on the bench in New Mexico as territorial judge. He was noted for his kindly and jovial disposition, which prevailed throughout the entire family he had raised to bless his last years, and the entire tribe were like so many chums.

Unfortunately, while in the Parisian capital, he was taken very ill and various doctors were finally called in one after another. After much studying they decided that he had appendicitis and thought he would have to be operated on. He had suffered for many years from a severe case of rheumatism and this had left his framesomewhat shattered, but a mind and heart as full of brightness as ever. His bodily condition did not permit him to survive the shock, especially at his age, but an illustration of his sunny nature is shown by the incident which took place immediately after the operation and only a few hours before he passed away.

The doctors had finished their incision and cutting of the vermiform appendix and after properly bandaging the patient, moved away from the bedside. The family and nurses, as well as a priest, stood with him for a few minutes. He was able to talk a little but not to move.

The priest stood by him after the family and nurses left.

"Are they all gone, father?"

"Yes, judge."

"Are the girls all gone?"

"Yes."

"The nurses, too?"

"Yes."

"Well, then, for the sake of suffering humanity, let's have a drink."

And they did.

In six hours the patient was dead.

"Ve stood dere from a quarter bast nine until half bast vun an' nobody came to asg us to danz."

Such is the plaint of a gentleman with a peculiarly shaped olfactory organ who told his trouble to the hotel reporter in a hope that something would be said of his trouble in the paper.

He had gone to the military ball at the Armory with a dozen of his friends, so he says. He keeps a restaurant west of Fifth avenue, and said that one of the men who works for him invited him to go and sold him and his friends their tickets.

While there's life there's hope, the proverb says, and this dozen of waiters evidently thought if they waited long enough they would get a dance. After over four hours' waiting probably they should have been entitled to something—a seat at least.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Minneapolis Tribune: A St. Louis preacher announces that "St. Louis in the fullness of her glory is a city whose immorality is only paralleled by the debaucheries of Babylon and Rome before their fall." We submit that the World's fair promoters are carrying their advertising tactics too far. They are bound to arouse the jealousy of Chicago.

Mankato Free Press: Here's a suggestion to Minnesota Democrats: They might nominate Mayor Smith of St. Paul for governor, and our own Charlie Taylor as his running mate.

Elk River Star News: The Republican state central committee is usurping power that will eventually do away with all necessity for holding conventions for the nomination of candidates for office, and if persisted in will surely result in a shaking up some day that will jeopardize the success of the party.

Isanti Press: Hon. J. B. Cotton, of Duluth, one of the delegates from this district to the Republican national convention at Chicago, has been selected to make one of the speeches seconding the nomination of President Roosevelt. It is a great honor to Mr. Cotton to be selected for so distinguished a position. It is also a great honor to our district and state. Those who have heard Mr. Cotton speak know that the honor has been worthily bestowed, and that his speech will be second to none in the convention.

Wabasha Herald: Having failed to secure a Republican convention, Duluth will be obliged to lavish all her kindness on us Democrats. But we assure her that she will find us worthy of all she has to bestow; also willing recipients. And if it be true that the Republican party believes in doing things, it is not ahead of us in the slightest, because we believe in going places.

Wabasha Herald: We are pleased to learn from the Northfield News that it will support the Democratic ticket this fall. While it does not mention the party directly, it makes its intention clear when it says: "The News will support the candidate who favors tariff revision, equitable taxes, 4 per cent gross earnings, tax on railroads, opposition to mergers of parallel and competing lines of railroad, decency in politics and observance of the rights of the people."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A man couldn't resist going to church if the preachers denounced it the way they do Sunday saloons.

Boys learn many things in college which can be very useful to them if they never try to use them.

You can mostly always tell when a girl is bored with you by the way she pretends to be interested in you.

A woman gets afraid she is not a good wife unless she worries herself sick every once in so often lest her husband will break down from too close attention to his office.

The Cleveland Bond Sale.

New York World: Not until the World made its appeal to the government to "Smash the Ring"—not until it offered to take $1,000,000 of the bonds at market rates and pay gold for them—not until it published telegrams from 7000 bankers outside of this city proffering $235,000 in gold in exchange for bonds—was there an official word uttered at Washington in favor of a public sale.

Then, when congress in both branches joined in the popular demand for an open and public sale, and not until then, did the president repudiate the agreement which somebody in authority had made with Mr. Morgan, and order a public sale.

Mr. Cleveland cannot rewrite history by the aid of his "hindsight." The record is too plain, too well remembered, too indelible.

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

What Will Others Say?

To what extent should we conform to the opinions of others? How far should we modify our beliefs and practices because of the fear of what others may say or think? Here comes along the thorough-going independent who boldly declares that he does not care a button for anyone else, that he knows perfectly well what suits himself and that he proposes to go ahead on that line. But the timid conservative dares not take a single step until he has found out what his family, his friends, his neighbors or the community think about it, and if they hold up their hands in holy horror at the proposition he will have none of it himslef. Between these two extremes is there any safe and desirable middle ground?

If you must be one or the other, choose the position of the independent by all means. You have but one life to live and you are the person responsible for it. You know, or you ought to know, yourself better than anyone else knows you. You first of all will reap the advantage or suffer the damage arising from your forward step. The moment you pass over to some individual, or to public opinion generally, the making of your decisions, the shaping of your actions, you abdicate the sovereignty which God entrusted you with when he made you a man. You become a weather vane, subject to all the fluctuations of popular dictates and whims. No slave is more abject than that one who is continually in terror lest he should offend popular tastes.

Moreover, no one ever makes any headway with his life until he is ready to brave and even go contrary to public opinion, provided he has made up his own mind after due deliberation, that his course is correct. The man who first carried an umbrella on the streets of London was a laughing-stock to all who saw him, but he kept dry while others got wet, and he may have lived to see the day when the man who failed to carry an umbrella was the laughing-stock of his fellows. He who is sure of his position can calmly wait until the world comes up to it.

Nevertheless, one should not be so wise in his own conceit as to pay no heed to what people say. That consideration may be a valuable guide in the right path and a powerful deterrent from evil. The accumulated wisdom of the world is not to be lightly set one side. In all civilzed communities a body of opinion touching manners and morals has been slowly forming through the decades until it is now crystallized into a written or unwritten code with which it pays for a man to be familiar and which he ought not to defy flippantly. It is perfectly in order for a man to walk down Broadway on a spring morning in his dressing-gown and slippers. He has a right so to do. But most men prefer to array themselves in clothing of a more conventional and generally accepted pattern for a public thoroughfare.

American parents as a rule prefer that their young daughters should be properly attended when they go into society or off for a holiday, and the girl who in her association with young men is governed by certain wise restrictions not only maintains her own dignity best, but is in the long run better respected and liked by the men. A wholesome fear of what people will say may lead many a person into paths of sobriety and decency who might be too weak willed to go there from the promptings of his own nature. For people do not always say unkind and foolish things. The average sense of a respectable community is to be respected, and other things being equal, I want the approval of my fellow men.

Courage to work out your own problems to a finish and readiness to listen for and receive the wisdom of others make the proper blend. To our own selves we must first of all be true, but that does not mean necessarily that we should be indifferent or superior to our fellowmen. Emerson hits it about right when he says, "It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion. It is easy in solitude to live after one's own. But the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude."

All this has a direct bearing upon the matter of religion. For most of us the midway position is safe there. We must get our own thought of God, of Christ, of duty, of immorality, but why should we throw to the winds all the conclusions wrought out slowly, painfully, by those who have gone before us? We need not conform our beliefs in every particular to them. On the other hand, we should not disdain this precious inheritance of faith and hope upon which we may build our temple and dwell securely there. THE PARSON.

Not a Common Carrier.

P. A. B. Widener, the traction magnate of Philadelphia, told the other day a story of the boyhood of his son Joseph.

"When Joe," he said, "was a little fellow, a visitor, calling at my house one day, found him in the drawing room, busy with the drawing room chairs, which he had ranged in a row. The visitor sat down on one of the chairs and Joe remonstrated.

"'Here,' he said, 'this is a train of cars.'

"'Very well,' said the visitor, 'I'll be a passenger.'

"But Joe didn't want this grown-up man for a passenger, so he said:

"'Where do you want to get off?'

"'Chicago,' was the reply.

"'All right,' said Joe. 'This is Chicago.'"

Light on a Heavy Subject.

Boston Herald: All is not gloom ahead. Humorist J. Adam Bede is going on the stump. This will help to relieve the heftiness of the tariff schedules.

BIG SHELL IS HERE

Comes In Special Express Car of Unusual Length.

No Chance For Four-Oared Race at Madison.

Express car No. 2530, of the New York Central line, containing the new eight-oar shell for the Duluth Boat club, came in during the night and lay on the Omaha track all day. It was expected that Capt. J. D. Mahoney would get together a force of enthusiastic disciples of Nautilus at 3 p. m. and take the boat from the car, but it was not believed the craft could be rigged today in time to row in her, although she could be floated.

When the eight oarsmen get in her it will be the culmination of many vexatious delays. Owing to the great difficulty of making proper shipping arrangements, the boat is practically two weeks late, as she was finished a fortnight or so ago, but there was great difficulty in arranging for the transportation. If navigation had been open there would have been no trouble in getting special car service to Buffalo for the boat, and there she could have been put on an ore vessel and landed in Duluth much more cheaply than has been the case.

For a time it looked as if no arrangement could be effected by which the boat could be landed here in good condition. Shipping it on flat cars was dangerous to the safety of the boat and would have taken at least a week, so negotiations for a special baggage car had to be undertaken. The trouble on this point was that the railroads owning the particularly lengthy cars which would accommodate sixty-foot shells, were chary about letting such cars leave their regular territory. For a time it looked as though the shell might not be brought at all, and that the people who contracted with Davy, the maker, would have to let him dispose of it for them to other purchasers at his factory in Cambridgeport, Mass.

But it was finally arranged to have the boat come in a special car from Boston with some other through express matter, and the big car reached Chicago the night before last and left Chicago at 3 a. m. yesterday on a fast freight train.

The shell is just a little too long to fit entirely in the car and at one end a special door with a boxed section had to be put in to permit one end of the boat to project through the doorway.

It will be of great advantage for the Duluth eight to have a new shell at the Madison meet. One difficulty they have always had to overcome in previous contests was the fact that their boats had to be kept economically, and retained in use longer than some of the more fortunate people who were able to spend a few hundred dollars for a new boat every time they cared to.

Another advantage the local crew will have will be the fact that it will have three eights to row against. There will be the 'varsity, the second 'varsity and freshmen crews, so that if the Duluth boys are beaten by one crew they will still have a chance of winning from the others.

Unfortunately, however, there will be no four-oared contest at Madison. It seems that Andrew O'Dea, the coach, was contracting for a new four-oared shell for the university and it got as far as Chicago, when he wanted to go to take charge of the shipment the rest of the way. But the transportation people insisted that they be let alone and in transferring the boat from one car to the other, they smashed it so badly that O'Dea found it to be beyond repair. This will be a great disappointment to the local oarsmen who had hoped to contest in a four-oared race, but is not the fault of the racing committees.

Another unfortunate occurrence which will hinder the facility of bringing off the race is the fact that the coaching launch, which Capt. O'Dea had expected to work with, is "out of the business." He had her overhauled and she toppled off the carriage in the launching. Then she was floated off but leaked very badly, so was pulled out a week ago last Thursday and again repaired. Then O'Dea steamed her up and she ran well, but the same afternoon of this trial a fearful storm, with a 60-miles wind, set in, causing the launch to teeter around on the carriage for some time.

Eventually she washed off again, and at last reports was ashore. But the Madison people promise to make the Duluth men's visit as pleasant as possible.

The varsity eight put in a good week's work last week and are said to row the boat well, although they are said to have no great speed yet. Out of the eight only four are last year's men, making four new men to get in trim for smooth work. It is said that the freshmen with a big heavy boat, and O'Dea for coxswain, rowed them to a length in a mile spin about ten days since.

The exact time of the race has been set for 6 p. m. on Thursday, June 9. The commodore of the 'varsity people conferred with the jubilee committee and learned that there would be no event on that date or that hour which would conflict with the proposed race.

R. W. Marshall will be the coxswain of the Duluth eight. He is light and quick and is expected to stay very little wind. W. S. Telford had been expected to take the position, but owing to business matters is unable to give the time to the work which he would like to if he went in to stay.

District Captain Paul Howell of the Masters and Pilots today gave out a reply to the statement made last night by President Livingsone of the Lake Carriers' association. Mr. Howell said in part:

"The communication given out by Mr. Livingstone caus for an answer on my part. In the first place, we were to have an early meeting with the Lake Carriers in the spring, but instead it was delayed until nearly time to start some of the boats. Since our first meeting they have done all in their power to delay matters and not come to an agreement. If the season can be shortened a better demand would be created for their boats and higher rates made possible. The vessel owners with one or two exceptions would like the struggle prolonged."

WILL RETIRE FIVE BISHOPS

Unprecedent Decision On Part of Methodist Committee.

Los Angeles, May 14.—After a secret session lasting over ten hours and marked by periods of great confusion, the committee on episcopacy of the Methodist general conference adjourned after midnight, after having definitely decided, it is reliably stated, to retire five of the present bishops because of age and ineffectiveness and to choose six and probably eight new bishops. The action is said to be without precedent in history of the church.

There is little doubt that the conference will confirm the action of the committee as all the prominent leaders are members of the episcopacy committee. The committee's report will be placed before the general body next Tuesday.

SOIL SURVEY

Of St. Louis and Other Counties Is Promised.

Washington, May 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representative Bede this morning called upon Secretary of Agriculture Wilson to urge him to send into St. Louis, Aitkin, Carlton and Pine counties, a corps of soil surveyors. There is a growing desire among the residents of these counties that a soil survey shall be made. Secretary Wilson informed Mr. Bede that he would use his utmost endeavor to make a soil survey of at least a portion of the acres indicated during the coming summer.

Under the annual readjustment of postmasters salaries, these increases were announced today: Annadale, $1100 to $1200; Chisholm, $1300 to $1500; Delano, $1400 to $1600.

NORWAY'S DAY

Independence Day, May 17, Will Be Celebrated In Duluth.

Means to Norwegians What July 4 Does to Americans.

Duluth Norwegians are now making great preparations for the celebration of their Independence day, May 17, and programs, suitable to the occasion, will be rendered in different parts of the city.

One of the best programs will be that of Lodge Fram, No. 5, Sons of Norway, to be given at the Great Eastern hall in West Duluth, on the evening of Tuesday, May 17. There will be several select musical and literary numbers, and addresses in both the American and Norwegian language. Many of the Duluth Norwegians will observe the day at Lester Park, where there are to be appropriate exercises.

Since the year of 1814 the 17th of May has been a day of joy for the Norwegians, as their day of liberty. May 17 is to them what July 4 is to Americans, and it is celebrated throughout Norway as the Fourth of July is in the United States.

The heart of the Norwegian people has always been beating for freedom in government, and factions of the nobility in Norway and Sweden trying to increase the power of the throne, have always been met with strong opposition from the people.

After being under the rule of Denmark for 400 years, Norway got a free government, with own legislation, after the declaration of independence on May 17, 1814. The result of this change in government gave the people of Norway an opportunity to take care of their own interests.

What they had been most wishing for was a better school system. Today the school system in Norway is of the very best, and the people are classed among the most educated of nations.

The Norwegians in this country have love in their hearts for their fatherland, and its freedom, and they take part in celebrating the day of the event with as much enthusiasm as if they were in the land of their fathers.

Lodge Fram No. 5, Sons of Norway will have charge of the celebration of the day at the Great Eastern hall, West Duluth. The program is as follows:

"Seventeenth of May"..... Mostue Orchestra.
Welcome ..... L. J. Nordheim.
"Ja vi elsker"..... Bjornson
"Mer-rize" .....

BOATS ARE COMING

Three More Steamers From Lower Lakes Reach Duluth.

One Brings In Hundred Passengers---America to Leave.

Three more lake steamers, the Wyoming, Huronic and Osceola, reached Duluth last night and this morning. The Huronic, of the Northwestern Transportation company, Capt. R. D. Foote, cleared at 12:30 o'clock today for Sarnia. The other boats are still in the harbor.

The first of three to arrive was the Wyoming, Capt. John McLean, of the Port Huron and Duluth Steamship company. She steamed into the harbor at 1:30 o'clock this morning, and was the second inter-lake boat to reach Duluth this season. The Huronic and Osceola, the latter of the Lake Michigan and Lake Superior Transportation company, arrived at an early hour this morning. The Huronic came to Duluth from Sarnia via Port Arthur, and had on board more than 100 passengers. She also had 65,000 bushels of wheat, loaded at the Port Arthur elevators, as part of her cargo, which will be taken to Sarnia. With other freight she took on 1000 sacks of flour at the local docks.

It took the Wyoming just forty hours to come from the Sault, or only one hour over her summer record. The other boats made a record almost equally as good, and though all of them passed by and through miles of ice fields, they were not delayed to any extent from this source.

The steamer America, of the Booth line, Capt. J. F. Hector, will leave for Isle Royale and north shore points at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. It is expected that she will be well laden with passengers and freight. Five lighthouse keepers will be taken to Isle Royale and the present occupants of the island, who have remained there during the winter, will be brought to Duluth on the return trip.

There is now little ice about the head of the lake, except for a fringe along the north shore. A wide expanse of clear water still extends down the north shore as far as the eye can reach.

The steamers Queen City and America were brought to the local docks from Superior today, and the Easton and Phoenix were taken to the Superior dry dock.

The Mary H. Boyce, the first boat to arrive from a lower lake port, will load with 700,000 feet of lumber for Cleveland.

WILL BREED THEM.

White Line Company to Develop Carrier Pigeons.

It is probable that this fall the White Line Transportation company will build some pigeon houses on its docks and cultivate some of the birds of the homing variety for use next year. They are very useful in bringing messages to this port from stations on the White Line route which have nothing in the way of telegraphic communication.

A carrier pigeon can be loosed on the arrival of a boat at a certain point or upon its departure, and bring the word to the home office here in a comparatively few hours. This would be especially useful in the case of boats bound this way with passengers who wish to catch a certain train. A bird bearing word of the hour that the boat started for Duluth would afford easy basis for computing whether it would be worth while to hold a train for the arrival of a boat, this depending, of course, on the time the boat would probably arrive and whether the number of inbound passengers in prospect would justify delaying the train.

A stock of birds will probably be furnished the White line by H. P. Flynn, who is a well known fancier. It is well known that on the majority of occasions these birds make better time than fast express trains, at least in the daytime. On one occasion two birds were released at 4:30 p. m. at Hinckley, and at 5:50 landed home in Duluth. By rail the distance is seventy-six miles and the distance, probably shorter by an airline, was covered by the birds in 85 minutes.

So with these comparisons in speed it can be readily seen what advantage the boat company can derive from getting word of the movements of its boats by homing pigeons. In case of accident to a boat the services of the birds are invaluable. In one instance a rescue of the Bon Ami from where she went aground at Split Rock was effected many hours earlier than it would have otherwise been, if it had not been for the services of the pigeon which was released with a message telling of the accident. The trouble occurred at 2 p. m. and the bird was in its loft here at 3:45 p. m.

As no message was expected, Mr. Flynn did not look at the bird until 5 p. m., when he found the message. Wrecking crews were sent out the same night, which was Saturday, otherwise the boat might have remained in her bad position well into Sunday, as it is a pretty hard matter to get boats ready for rescuing a disabled vessel late at night Saturday or on Sunday.

At 9 o'clock the same night word came from Two Harbors of the trouble, but by this time the wrecking party was nearly to the scene of the trouble.

When the White line gets its season in regular running order, with six boats a week, it is probable there will be a bird in every day from Washington harbor, which is 140 miles. The last group of six birds sent out were not properly equipped with the messages, as some were placed in their tail feathers. These messages it was no trouble for the birds to pick out with their bills, and this is probably what they did.

The birds do not fly at night, however, as they always roost, which not only delays their trips, but puts them at the mercy of hawks. The wise plan is to start them on a journey so calculated that they may run to their destination during the same day they start.

JAPS ATTACK PORT DALNY

Forts Silenced and Troops Landed For Combined Attack.

Chicago, May 14.—A special cable to the Daily News from Che Foo says Admiral Kataoka's fleet, the third Japanese squadron, began a fierce bombardbardment of defenses of Dalny this morning. The land batteries were speedily silenced. Russian troops were again seen in the vicinity and driven out of the positions by shells. Under the cover of the fire from the ships, troops were landed and a combined attack on the city undertaken. There is every indication that the town is now in the hands of the Japanese.

Han Hai Kwan, May 14, 9:40 p. m.—A report of a severe battle in the hills around Haly Yen last night has reached here. It lacks verification, but according to it the Russians lost 1500 men killed and wounded and the Japanese occupied the town of Hsiu Yen. The Japanese loss is not given.

10:15 p. m.—It is impossible to obtain confirmation here of the reported fighting near Hsiu Yen, but a battle there is not unlikely as this place is in the path of the advance of the first Japanese army corps. Hsiai Chenz is the apparent objective of this corps.

Hsiu Yen is situated in the midst of rugged hills, where a small force could resist the enemy with telling effect before being compelled to retret.

THE SEA SERPENT.

Scienctific Paper Tells How to Capture It.

Scientists in the government service are very much interested in a sea serpent story which comes by way of France with a degree of authority unusual in such narratives. The French Zoological society, in a bulletin issued appropriately enough from a building in the Rue Serpente, gives to the world a mass of information regarding a creature which was a few years ago denounced as a creature of mythology and the summer resort reporter's imagination, but is now recognized as at least a possible reality and actually given the Latin name of megophias. As Emile G. Racovitza, assistant director of the Arago laboratory, remarks in his paper leading up to the new evidence now published, very few naturalists go to sea, and that is the reason why sailors' yarns have been the only foundation for such scientific inquiry as has been made thus far regarding the sea serpent. Making allowance for inaccurate observation and downright romancing, the stories put on record from time to time in the last 400 years have agreed on so many points that it has been possible to make a rough composite picture of the creature in question. Now to the story. The French gunboat Avalanche was in 1897 in the bay of Fai-tsi-Long on the coast of Tonquin. Her commander, Lieut. Lagresille, declares that on one July day of that year he saw in the waters of the bay two great swimming creatures twenty meters long and two or three in diameter. He could not go into particulars at that time, for with the instinct of the hunter he immediately took a shot at them at a range of 600 meters, whereupon they sank under water and did not appear again. On the 15th of the following February, however, while again crossing the bay, he saw two more o fthe same creatures, possibly the same pair, and gave chase for an hour and a half, firing at them from time to time. Once, he is sure, one of the creatures was hit, but the ball glanced off harmlessly. Racovitza is skeptical about this invulnerability and suggests the more probable theory that the shot ricochetted from the surface of the water. The chase was given up, as the lieutenant quaintly puts it, because the sea serpent had greater endurance than the Avalanche. But some observations were made. The animal was gray in color and it seemed to him that it had many flippers. Here again the scientist remarks that probably it had only four, but that they moved too rapidly to be counted.

It swam with an undulatory movement in a vertical plane, its body not being rigid like that of a whale, but extremeflexible. Nine days later, when the Avalanche had on board the commander and eight officers of the French ship Bayard, another of these monsters was encountered and pursued for thirty-five minutes. This time the boat came close enough for the men to see that the creature's head was like that of a seal, though very much larger in dimensions. When it came up after diving it blew water into the air as a whale does, but this was in the form of a cloud of spray and not a single jet. The officers of the Bayard had photographic apparatus with them, and when they recovered from their surprise ran at once to get their cameras, but before they had secured any pictures the creature, with the shyness recorded as one of the invariable characteristics of the species, dived and was seen no more. An officer of the Bayard ruefully remarked in a letter that "the apparatus was too small, the beast too far off and its movements too unexpected." But he added the observation that there was a sort of crest along the animal's back.

The popular idea that there is but one sea serpent, a solitary monarch of the deep, is upset by the conclusion which Racovitza draws from the story just told. The megophias, he thinks, is actually abundant in the region on the coast of Tonquin, which bears the general name of the Bay of Along. It is very important, therefore, that anyone who goes to that region or to points on the north Atlantic, another of its haunts, should heed the directions this scientist gives as to what to do on seeing a sea serpent. "It cannot be doubted," he says, "that the capture of the great sea serpent would be an important scientific exploit, but this capture, as we have seen, is almost impossible to hope for with a merchant vessel or a warship with its ordinary armament. It will be much more useful and just as interesting for ships like these to aproach the animal as near as possible to make photographs and sketches." The worst thing to do is to shoot it on sight, because it probably keeps on the surface only by swimming and will sink like a hump-backed whale when killed. Attack it, therefore, only in the shallow water or with a harpoon gun. Supposing that the creature should venture into a shallow harbor, the proper tactics are to approach it slowly in a concentric curve as quietly as possible, to a distance of a half mile or so, and then make the direct attack cautiously in a small boat.

A Foregone Conclusion.

Washington Post: Representative J. Adam Bede, the Minnesota wit, says one of the funniest incidents he ever knew of in the District of Columbia was about a negro servant.

"We had a servent in our family," said he, "who early one week applied to get off the following Saturday. She wanted to attend a funeral.

"Is your friend dead yet?" she was asked.

"'Oh, no,' came the stolid reply.

"'Well, how do you know the funeral will be Saturday?"

"'Coz,' replied this far-seeing servant, 'he's done goin' to be hanged on Friday.'"

MUST GO TO HIM

Mrs. Jacob Hanbiner's Charge of Non-Support Not Maintained.

Husband Cannot Be Compelled to Support Two Establisments.

Because Mrs. Jacob Haubner preferred West Duluth to Scanlon as a place of residence, her husband, Jacob Haubner, was arraigned in the municipal court this morning on the charge of non-support.

Haubner is a blacksmith in the emplov of the Brooks-Scanlon Lumber company at Scanlon. Mrs. Haubner claimed that he had not sent her any money since March 10, when she received $5 from him, and that she and her eldest daughter were supporting the family. She claimed that her husband was in Scanlon and refused to aid her.

Haubner was then placed on the witness stand and gave his side of the story. He stated that he had moved to Scanlon last fall and had sent money to his family regularly until last February. During that time he had attempted to get his wife to move to Scanlon, and he claimed that she refused because of trouble she had had with his relatives who lived near there. He testified that he was willing to furnish her a house and all the necessaries of life if she would go to Scanlon, but that he was not able to support two establishments.

Hubner is employed as a blacksmith and stated that he was earning $3 per day with extra pay for overtime, which amounted to a consid rable sum each week.

O. J. Simens, the village marshal of Scanlon, testified that he had frequently brought money to Mrs. Haubner from her husband during the fall and early winter, but he claimed that she had used such abusive language toward her husband in his presence that he had refused to act as messenger any longer, as he did not wish to become mixed up in the family troubles.

"I don't know of any law which compels a man to support two establishments," said Judge Windom, in passing on the case. "The blame is not all on either side. When a husband and wife go so far as to bring their troubles into court it is hard for either of them to recede. It would be unjust to place the defendant under bonds to support his wife in West Duluth, and the best thing for all parties would be to have her go to Scanlon and live with her husband. She claims that he spends all of his money for drink, but the evidence has shown that he has saved about $100 during the winter, and if she would go and live there so he could be at home, he might drink less. He can't be a heavy drinker or he could never keep his position with the company. The case is dismissed."

HANDSOME BARBER SHOP

H. E. McCollom's Establishment Receives Many Callers.

Many are the congratulations being showered upon H. E. McCollem, one of the most popular men in his line of business in the city, and proprietor of the new barber shop in the Palladio building, which occupies the space hitherto known as the court in the same building.

The shop has been fitted up with the most modern fixtures that are to be had, and would create a creditable appearance in any city in the country. Each of the artists wears a full white uniform, the effect produced being truly metropolitan. The shop is one of the best lighted in America. There are seven chairs, of the very latest pattern, known as the Koken Congress chairs, which are upholstered with Spanish hand buffed leather. The handsome, heavy combination cases are from the same manufacture.

The complete equipment was installed by F. L. Stoddard, 107 Lake avenue south, who has the exclusive agency of Koken & Co.'s goods in this territory. Mr. Stoddard, in the space of one and one half years has built up an extensive trade in his specialty of barbers' supplies throughout this state, Northern Michigan, Northern Wisconsin and North Dakota. Several articles, put up by himself, have become firmly established, and can be found in all the leading shops of the Northwest. Chief among these is the Echo hair tonic, which has achieved an immense popularity as a successful dandruff cure.

Mr. Stoddard, as well as Mr. McCollom, is receiving many congratulations on the up-to-date and handsome appearance of the new barber shop.

ANXIOUS TO TALK IT OVER

Saloonkeeper Would Let Court Decide as to His Guilt.

"I think, probably, that I am guilty. I don't want to misstate the facts, your honor," was the very frank admission made to Judge Ensign, in district court, this morning, when George Wadsworth, a Fall Lake saloonkeeper, was arraigned on an indictment charging him with selling liquor to Walter Lindbloom, a minor.

Wadsworth had been given a copy of the indictment which he read over. When arraigned before the court he declared that he would be his own lawyer and wanted to get the thing fixed up as soon as possible to leave for home on the afternoon train. He said he wished to waive the time for pleading or anything else that might make a delay.

"Do you wish to enter a plea of guilty or not guilty?" asked the court.

"Well, you see, Mr. Judge, I would rather not make a plea just yet until I have told you all there is about it. I would rather tell the judge just how it happened and leave it to him to decide."

The liquor dealer's volubility was interrupted by the court, who informed Wadsworth that the district court had an entirely different method of doing business and before he made any explanations it would be necessary for him to either plead guilty or not guilty.

Wadsworth was reluctant to do that off hand and he was given until this afternoon to think it over. The court told him he would have ample opportunity of telling his story.

Wadsworth is the saloonkeeper from whom Charles Riley, afterward shot and killed at Chisholm, was accused of stealing some $800, after the bartender had fallen into a drunken sleep. Riley was tried on the charge, but was acquitted.

Several months after the trial Riley had a row in a saloon at Chisholm and was fataly shot by the proprietor, who was afterward acquited of a murder charge the jury concluding that he acted in self-defense.

Andrew Peterson, another Fall Lake saloonkeeper was arraigned on an indictment charging him with selling, through his bartender, two glasses of beer to Albert Olson, a minor. The hearing in Peterson's case was also set for 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The arrest of the Fall Lake saloon men is said to be in keeping with the movement in Duluth and all over the county to a stricter observance of the law relating to the sale of liquor to minors.

BUYS A STEAMER.

Capt. Majo Purchases Ideal For Local Harbor.

A telegram received from Capt. A. C. Majo, at Oswego, N. Y., today states that he has just purchased the steam yacht Ideal and will bring her up the lakes to be installed in the independent ferry line service between Duluth and Superior.

The Ideal will be an important addition to the passenger-carrying harbor boats. She has a gross tonnage of 40, is 60 feet long, with a 13-foot beam and draws five feet of water. She was built at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1885, and her last owner, before Capt. Majo bought the boat, is understood to have been W. H. Field, of Sodus Point, N. Y.

Capt. Majo went East on a business trip several days ago, with a view of finding a suitable boat to increase the facilities of his ferry line in taking care of the passenger traffic between the two cities at the head of the lake.

Although Capt. Majo did not say when the Ideal would arrive in the local harbor, it is expected that she will be started on the trip up the lakes just as soon as navigation for the smaller boats is thought to be perfectly safe from floating ice.

ROLLING IN WEALTH

Swan Johnson Arrested For Drunkenness Has Big Wad.

Mystery Is, How Did He Pass the Bowery Grafters?

The confidence men and petty grafters of the city allowed a rich prize to slip through their fingers when they let Swan Johnson accumulate a jag in their very midst and then fall into the hands of the police.

Johnson was picked up on the Bowery last evening, about 10 o'clock, with a glorious jag on. He had evidently been going the pace all day, and he looked like the fag end of a misspent life when the officer landed him at police headquarters.

"He ought to be good for about 35 cents," said Jailer Fiskett, as he commenced to search him preparatory to booking him on the police records.

As the officer shoved his hand into the prisoner's inside pocket, however, it encountered a heavy leather purse, which, when opened, proved to contain a roll of bills and a little pile of gold and silver coin. When counted up the total sum amounted to $515.45. Of this amount $200 was in bills of large denomination, $100 was in gold, $200 in a certificate of deposit on a bank at Grand Marais, and $15.45 in silver. The amazed officers thought they had landed a bank president in disguise. The prisoner was unable to speak a word of English, and he was locked up until this morning. When he appeared in court he was sober and pleaded guilty through an interpreter to the charge of drunkenness. The judge imposed the usual fine of $10 and costs.

Johnson was given back his roll and after peeling off a few twenties to get at ten he paid the clerk, and left with $503.45 on his person.

The police were somewhat suspicious concerning the money and made some investigations, which proved that he had come by it all honestly. It was the result of two or three years' work in the woods and more economy than is usually known by a woodsman. The spree he had yesterday was the first in many months.

"He can figure that his night in the city jail saved him $500," said one of the court officials this morning. "A foreigner with no knowledge of our language, a comfortable jag and $500 cash, stands a pretty slender show of making a clean break in Duluth."

The man was advised to place his money in a bank the next time he went on a jag.

PETITIONS OUT

Several In Circulation For Nomination of School Directors.

Important Year and Board Hopes For Public Interest.

A petition is being circulated today asking the school board to place the names of J. L. Washburn, Alfred Le Richeaux and S. L. Frazer on the ballot in the approaching school board election which will be held in July.

There are also other petitions asking for the re-election of J. J. Moe and N. C. Hendricks, and at least one separate petition for Mr. Washburn.

The petitions are in accordance with the plan adopted at a recent meeting of the board. The members of the board asked that petitions be circulated among the electors asking for the nomination of any persons the citizens desired as members. The petitions will be submitted to the board and the names petitioned for will be placed on the ballots at the approaching election.

The plan was adopted in the hope of arousing more interest in the choice of members of the board. The electors can vote for three of the names on the ballot, and the three securing the highest number of votes will be declared elected.

The terms of J. L. Washburn, J. J. Moe and N. C. Hendricks expire this year, and three members will have to be chosen to fill their places. If a sufficient number of names are not petitioned for, the board can order names to be placed on the ballot.

The coming year will be a very important one in the history of the board. Three new buildings are to be built during the summer and $125,000 worth of bonds will be floated if they are authorized at the coming election. The old members of the board are all anxious that more interest should be taken in the election and the best possible men chosen for the positions.

Mr. Washburn is now present in Washington and it is not known whether or not he is a candidate for re-election. There is, however, a very strong sentiment that he should be returned. It is understood, however, that none of the old members are very anxious for another term, although they might accept, if they saw the electors wished them to remain in office. The past year has been a very busy one for the board, and the members have been compelled to give a large share of their time to the work, with no remuneration for it beyond the thanks of the citizens.

CASES ARE DISMISSED

New Trial In Cargill Case —Two Are Dismissed.

The cases against J. B. Cargill and John Shea, the Superior street saloonkeepers who were accused of selling liquor to minors, have been dismissed.

On a former hearing J. B. Cargill was convicted of the offense with which he was charged, but immediately entered a motion for a new trial through his attorney, Albert Baldwin. The motion was heard this morning in the municipal court. It was claimed that in the complaint Cargill was accused of having sold the liquor, and that when the case came to trial the prosecution attempted to prove that the liquor had been sold by Cargill's bartender. Mr. Baldwin admitted that under the ordinance the proprietor could be held responsible for the acts of his employes, but he claimed that the complaint should have specified that the liquor was sold by the bartender, in order to give the defendant proper information on which to prepare his case.

Mr. Baldwin also claimed that the chief evidence against the defendant had come from a youth named Romney Kelley, who was under parole from the municipal court and whose evidence was therefore apt to be prejudiced through fear of the assistant city attorney, who was prosecuting the case.

Judge Windom sustained Mr. Baldwin and granted a new trial on the former point.

Assistant City Attorney T. J. McKeon then moved to dismiss the case and also the case of the city against John Shea, which was due to come up for trial this afternoon.

DIVORCE GRANTED.

Gearge Armstrong Gets Separation From His Wife.

Judge Ensign made findings this morning, granting a decree of divorce to George C. Armstrong, local agent for a brewing company, from Emma Belle Armstrong, who is conducting a boarding house business in Chicago.

This was the only divorce action during the present term of district court, where there was an appearance of both parties and a contest.

In making his findings, Judge Ensign said that owing to the very conflicting testimony of the principals in the case it would be impossible for him to determine their marriage relations, that he would have to depend entirely on the other evidence offered. He found that Mrs. Armstrong left her husband, and that she told other persons she intended to desert him, and in reality did desert him.

The court held that the fact that she had intimate relations with another man in Chicago and an agreement had been made between them to get married as soon as Mrs. Armstrong got a divorce, was strong enough evidence in itself that Mrs. Armstrong had deserted Mr. Armstrong and wanted another husband.

A stay of twenty days before execution of the decree was granted at the request of Mrs. Armstrong's attorney.

Mr. Armstrong was represented by Baldwin, Baldwin & Dancer, and Mrs. Armstrong was represented by Alford & Hunt.

FOR A TOWNSITE.

Approval Sought For One in Reservation.

A declamatory statement, seeking the approval of a townsite in the Fond du Lac Indian reservation, was filed yesterday at the local land office by Judge H. B. Dibell, acting on the part of alleged settlers and occupants.

This is the first time that such a townsite declamation, within an Indian reservation, has ever been filed in the Duluth office. The declamation will be forwarded to the department of the interior for instructions.

The statement sets forth the alleged fact that twenty persons, on May 12, settled upon and occupied as a townsite, the land sought to be approved and that it is the intention to declaim that tract as such, in trust, for the use and benefit of the occupants.

The proposed townsite includes 320 acres in Carlton county, near Stony Brook, on the branch lines of the Eastern Railway and Duluth, Missabe & North-

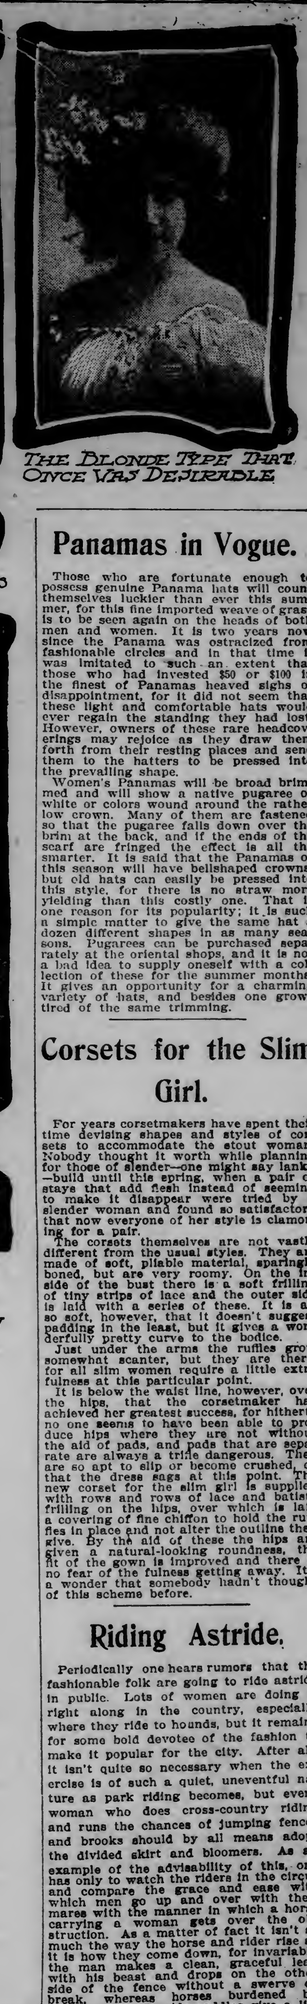
Latest Fads and Fancies FOR WOMEN

SEPERATING AND BRUSHING THE STRANDS PREPARATORY TO PUTTING ON THE COLOR

THE DASHING BRUNETTE TOO HAS HAD HER DAY.



THE BLONDE TYPE THAT ONCE WAS DESIRABLE

ONE MUST EXAMINE THE HAIR EVERY DAY TO SEE THAT THE COLOR IS KEPT UNIFORM.

EVEN YOUNG GIRLS HAVE A LITTLE TOUCHING UP TO THEIR TRESSES

HAIR OF A RICH, REDDISH BROWN GOES WITH ANY COMPLEXION.

FLUFFY HAIR OF A CERTAIN LIGHT SHADE TAKES THE NEW RED TINT ADMIRABLY

BY MISS MANHATTAN.

New York, May —.

Every woman you meet has hair exactly the same shade as every other of her kind. This is generally speaking, of course, for the one-color fad is not yet in its zenith, but it is forging ahead with such wonderful rapidity that in a very little while American women, or New York ones at least, will all present heads crowned with the same gloriously tinted locks.

The fashionable shade is reddish brown, and whether your hair is by nature of a golden color or the dusky hue of the Spanish type it should, if you want to be thoroughly up-to-date, be tinged with that coppery tint which, when cleverly done, actually defies detection. At the theater one is struck forcibly with the predominence of red-brown hair, for it is there that heads are very much in evidence, and even a cursory glance at the house leaves an impression of "claret-colored" coiffures.

Blonde hair is passe, but the woman who once considered herself fortunate in possessing tresses of this one-time envied hue is decidedly better off than her brunette sister, because light hair can be touched up more successfully than dark hair. A medium shade is most satisfactory of all to deal with, and if there is a gleam of reddish gold in the hair it is a simple matter to secure the new red crowning glory without trouble or fear of challenging criticism.

It is easy to understand why women who are no longer young follow this bent of fashion, for when gray hairs begin to make their appearance they present an everlasting telltale of age, but by the dexterous use of the red-gold tint-producer these provoking revelations are silenced forever, or at least they are kept from proclaiming one's age so long as the hair is properly touched up. But why young women resort to hair-dye is a little less clear until it is understood that reddish brown hair has wonderful color effects and makes a fair complexion seem far more beautiful than it is in reality. The pink and white of the skin seem to take on an additional depth of shading—that is the pink does, while the white becomes clearer and more pearly. Now that complexions of rare beauty are more common than they were a few years ago—in fact, since women have begun taking very good care of their skins and muscles—the new shade of hair is tempting to a greater number than it would have been then, and the result is that even the most particular young woman, the one who wouldn't have thought a few years ago of dabbing powder on her shiny little nose and chin, has taken to wearing reddish brown hair with the utmost nonchalance.

Those who start in touching up their hair have no conception of all the trials that are in store for them. If they had I doubt if they would pay the penalty of being beautiful; but the coloring matter once put on, the dye once set, there is nothing to do but go on with it until it is desired to change the color entirely. A visit to the professional hairdresser once a week is advisable when one is wearing the new shade of hair, though this depends largely on the individual, for some hair seems to hold the color longer than others. The actual tinting process consumes something like two or three hours, and between times the owner of coppery tresses must either spend considerable time herself or have her maid do it, in keeping the tresses smooth, uniform and glossy.

It would be giving away the secrets of the trade to go deep into the details of the touching-up process, but for the benefit of those who are seriously thinking of joining the ranks of the fashionably coifed it may be said that henna comprises the chief ingredient of the dyeing mixture. Henna is comparatively safe for this purpose, but it must be used with knowledge and discretion, and for these reasons it is never advisable to make the attempt oneself. The first thing the hairdresser does is to give the hair a thorough shampoo with the simplest of materials. Then, when the hair is quite dry, each lock is brushed out separately, and after the entire head has been gone over in this manner he is ready to put on the dye. Each professional has his own mixture, but all give about the same results, if properly applied. With a small brush the dye is carefully laid on each separate lock, almost on each individual hair, without touching the scalp; but the roots of the hair, or rather the hair at the roots, should be treated just as much as the rest of the hair, for it is here that the first signs of artificiality appear.

Hair that is touched up with this reddish tint is much more apt to have a consistent coloring than bleaches used to give, and on account of its rather neutral shading there is less chance for detection than with lighter coloring. Another thing in its favor, so long as women insist upon attempting to improve nature, is that there are so many more women of a medium type than there are of either decided blondes or brunettes that complexions, eyes and eyebrows go much better with this popular color of hair than with either very dark or very light shades. There are not the startling contrasts that were once so vulgarly obtrusive when golden hair reigned and the darkest of brunettes sometimes had a fancy to try a golden frame for her olive-tinted face.

No matter how expertly henna or any reddish coloring is used, the t't will come off a little on one's brushes and it is not only advisable, but essential, that the brushes be kept thoroughly cleaned.

A little vaseline applied to the bristles, a very little be it understood, will impart a lustre to the hair when the tint begins to grow a trifle dull. It is unfortunately true that this wonderfully beautiful shade of red brown will become dull and dingy if it is not carefully watched, and to prevent this a vaseline brushing once in three or four days is recommended. Eventually, however, it will be necessary to revisit the hairdresser and ver and the ordeal must be gone through with all over again. However, the price is none too great if one's personal appearance is vastly or even slightly improved, and so long as the means used are harmless and not too glaringly artificial, perhaps there is really nothing to be said against the fad. Even if there were much to be set forth on that score, it is to be doubted if it would have a lasting effect upon fair womankind; past experience has certainly not led us to believe that it would.

From the dressmakers' and milliners' point of view the reddish brown hair fad has everything to commend it, for colors that look startling with either very light or very dark hair blend beautifully with the fashionable shade of hair. It is a much simpler matter to find becoming colors and to produce lovelier color combinations with coppery tresses than with any other and the results are both artistic and satisfactory.

It is said that many of the younger girls, those who are still in their teens and under the guidance of a governess or school teacher, have displayed a liking for reddish hair, and whereas they used to resort to a bit of soda in the shampoo water in order to get a gleam of gold in their hair, they now prefer a harmless chemical that secures the much-prized reddish shade. And it looks very natural, too, but only in cases where the hair is of the red brown color.

Parisfal Belts.

Wide belts made of calfskin showing a mottled red and white hairy surface are one of the many novelties to be found in this line. They are about four inches wide and fasten with a very simple brass buckle, with a flap of the leather running through it. Coltskin, too, comes under the head of Parsifal dress accessories, because belts of this material have rather an uncouth appearance.

Collars to match are occasionally worn with a tiny buckle to fasten them at the back.

Panamas in Vogue.

Those who are fortunate enough to possess genuine Panama hats will count themselves luckier than ever this summer, for this fine imported weave of grass is to be seen again on the heads of both men and women. It is two years now since the Panama was ostracized from fashionable circles and in that time it was imitated to such an extent that those who had invested $50 or $100 in the finest of Panamas heaved sighs of disappointment, for it did not seem that these light and comfortable hats would ever regain the standing they had lost. However, owners of these rare headcoverings may rejoice as they draw them forth from their resting places and send them to the hatters to be pressed into the prevailing shape.

Women's Panamas will be broad brimmed and will show a native pugaree of white or colors wound around the rather low crown. Many of them are fastened so that the pugaree falls down over the brim at the back, and if the ends of the scarf are fringed the effect is all the smarter. It is said that the Panamas of this season will have bellshaped crowns, but old hats can easily be pressed into this style, for there is no straw more yielding than this costly one. That is one reason for its popularity; it is such a simple matter to give the same hat a dozen different shapes in as many seasons. Pugarees can be purchased separately at the oriental shops, and it is not a bad idea to supply oneself with a collection of these for the summer months. It gives an opportunity for a charming variety of hats, and besides one grows tired of the same trimming.

Corsets for the Slim Girl.

For years corsetmakers have spent their time devising shapes and styles of corsets to accommodate the stout woman. Nobody thought it worth while planning for those of slender—one might say lanky—build until this spring, when a pair of stays that add flesh instead of seeming to make it disappear were tried by a slender woman and found so satisfactory that now everyone of her style is clamoring for a pair.

The corsets themselves are not vastly different from the usual styles. They are made of soft, pliable material, sparingly boned, but are very roomy. On the inside of the bust there is a soft frilling of tiny strips of lace and the outer side is laid with a series of these. It is all so soft, however, that it doesn't suggest padding in the least, but it gives a wonderfully pretty curve to the bodice.

Just under the arms the ruffles grow somewhat scanter, but they are there, for all slim women require a little extra fulness at this particular point.

It is below the waist line, however, over the hips, that the corsetmaker has achieved her greatest success, for hitherto no one seems to have been able to produce hips where they are not without the aid of pads, and pads that are separate are always a trifle dangerous. They are so apt to slip or become crushed, or that the dress sags at this point. The new corset for the slim girl is supplied with rows and rows of lace and batiste frilling on the hips, over which is laid a covering of fine chiffon to hold the ruffles in place and not alter the outline they give. By the aid of these the hips are given a natural-looking roundness, the fit of the gown is improved and there is no fear of the fulness getting away. It's a wonder that somebody hadn't thought of this scheme before.

Riding Astride.

Periodically one hears rumors that the fashionable folk are going to ride astride in public. Lots of women are doing it right along in the country, especially where they ride to hounds, but it remains for some bold devotee of the fashion to make it popular for the city. After all, it isn't quite so necessary when the exercise is of such a quiet, uneventful nature as park riding becomes, but every woman who does cross-country riding and runs the chances of jumping fences and brooks should by all means adopt the divided skirt and bloomers. As an example of the advisability of this, one has only to watch the riders in the circus and compare the grace and ease with which men go up and over with their mares with the manner in which a horse carrying a woman gets over the obstruction. As a matter of fact it isn't so much the way the horse and rider rise as it is how they come down, for invariably the man makes a clean, graceful leap with his beast and drops on the other side of the fence without a swerve or break, whereas horses burdened by women sitting in side saddles give a little involuntary twist as they descend that is entirely due to the unevenness of weight. Their horses never seem to go at a fence so straight, or take it with the same precision and accuracy as when the weight they carry is evenly divided. Now, if women riders wore divided habits there would not be this very noticeable difference, which is a great disadvantage as well.

There is a rumor that riding astride will be popular for all occasions this summer.

Cause of the Popularity of Blue.

Did it ever occur to a woman to ask why she is so fond of wearing blue and why her men friends without exception approve her choice? Most women think that they select blue because it is a serviable color, especially cool looking in summer, but that is not the real reason. It is a well-known fact that blue has always been said to be the one color that is positively irresistible to men, and so fair woman has taken advantage of this fact by dressing in blue as much as possible, choosing dark shades for the street and pale cerulean ones for evening.

Blue stands for truth, from the old saying true-blue; it means also gentleness and steadfastness, attributes that women love to believe themselves possessed of, and ones that men who love them endow them with.

Is it to be wondered at then, when blue is such a universally becoming color, that it is woman's as well as man's favorite?

THE GRAIN MARKETS

Wheat Was An Uninteresting Affair and Closed Weaker.

Flax Trading Very Dull and Close Without Change.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 14.—The wheat market was a very uninteresting affair, and after a session of dull trading, closed weaker, though not markedly so. In Duluth the July option lost ¼c, in Minneapolis ⅜c, in Chicago a shade, and in New York it was unchanged. The September option in Duluth was unchanged and in Minneapolis ⅛-¼c lower.

The weather was generally good. The visible supply is expected to show a large decrease on Monday, and there was some buying on the strength of that. Broomhall estimates the world's shipments for the week at 10,400,000 bus, against 10,880,000 bus in the same week a year ago. Indian shipments this week have been 1,102,000 bus. The English visible supply this week increases 176,000 bus.

The Liverpool market closed ¼@¾d lower and London ½@⅝d lower and Paris ⅛@½c lower.

Car receipts at Duluth were 18 agains: 17 a year ago and at Minneapolis 45 against 87 a year ago, making a total for the Northwest of 63 against 104 a year ago. Chicago received 34 against 36 last year. Winnipeg receipts were 46 cars against 156 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 155,200 bus., last year 215,714 bus. Shipments 177,740 bus., last year 709,933 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 48,348 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ⅜@¾d lower. In the Chicago market July corn closed ¼-⅜c lower. July oats closed ⅛c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 238,400 bus., last year 416,600 bus. Shipments 457,248 bus., last year 392,250 bus. Clearances were 906 bus.

In the Duluth market trading was extremely dull. The July option opened unchanged at 90¾c, fell to 89¾c at 10:35, advanced to 90¾c at 11:07 and dropped again to 90c at 11:40 and closed at that price, a loss of ¼c. The May and September options closed unchanged.

Cash offerings were very light and prices paid vary considerably. No. 1 northern in store brings May price, to arrive 1¾c over and on track from May price of 3c over.

Flax was very dull hardly a trade being made. July and September closed without change. May ¼c higher and October ¼c lower.

Oats and rye were unchanged.

Following were the closing prices on the Duluth board:

Wheat—In store, No. 1 hard, 91¾c; No. 1 northern, 90¾c; No. 2 northern, 87¾c, to arrive, No. 1 hard, 93c; No. 1 northern, 92c; No. 2 northern, 89½c; on track, No. 1 northern, 90¾@93c; No. 2 northern, 87¾@89¾c; macaroni, No. 1, 85c; No. 2, 83c; May, 90¾c; July, 90c; September, 79¾c. Flax, on track, $1.07; to arrive, $1.07; May, $1.07; July, $1.08¾; September, $1.08¾; October, $1.08¾. Oats, to arrive, 42c; to arrive, 42c. Rye, on track, 67c; to arrive, 6.c.

Cars inspected—Wheat, 38; last year, 17; oats, 1; rye, 1; barley, 1; flax, 4; last year, 9.

Receipts—Wheat, 16,463; barley, 428. Shipments—Wheat, 800; oats, 3712.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Decreased Shipments Had Good Influence on Wheat.

Chicago, May 14.—Decreased shipments from Australia had a strengthening influence on wheat prices today. Reports of severe drought in the Danube country also tended to create an improved demand. Coverings by shorts caused a slight advance over opening figures. Initial sales on July were ⅛c lower to ¼c up at 85¾c to 84c. With only small offerings the price advanced to 85¼@85¾c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 91 cars, against 125 cars last week and 157 cars a year ago.

General selling developed later in the day, many traders being unwilling to carry their cash over Sunday. As a result the market became quite weak, July declining to 83¼@83½c. A firmer tone was manifested late in the day on predictions of a large decrease in the visible supply. July closed at 83¾@83⅞c, a shade under yesterday's final prices.

Smaller receipts and a large cash business caused a firm tone in corn. There was very little corn for sale, and offerings were readily taken by commission houses. July opened unchanged to ¼c up at 47⅜c, to 47⅜c and sold up to 47⅝@48c. Loaal receipts were 39 cars, 4 of contract grade.

With the break in wheat the corn market also declined, the weakness continuing the remainder of the day. The close was near the lowest point of the day, July being at 47⅛c, a net loss of 1¼@⅜c.

Oats were firm in sympathy with other grains. Trading was mainly by scalpers. After opening a shade higher at 38¼c, July advanced to 38¾c. Local receipts were 82 cars.

Buying of ribs by packers held provisions steady in the face of selling of pork by outside interests. A small run of hogs and firm prices at the yards were bull factors. July pork opened a shade lower at $11.15, sold off to $11.12½ and then rallied to $11.15. July lard opened unchanged at $6.37½ and firmed up to $6.37½@6.40. Ribs went down 2½c, at $6.37½@6.40.

Close: Wheat—May, 90¾c; July, 83¾@7⅝c; old, 84⅞@85c; September, 78⅝@¾c; old, 79⅝@80c. Corn—May, 46¾c; July, 47⅛@¼c. September, 46¾c. Oats—May, 41⅜c; July, 38½@⅝c; September, 30⅝@½c. Pork—May, $11; July, $11.17½; September, $11.37½. Lard—May, $6.30; July, $6.43½@6.40; September, $6.52½. Rye—May, 73c; July, 65c; September, 62c; August, 65c. Flax—Cash northwestern, $1.09; southwestern, $1; July, $1.02; September, $1.05. Timothy—May, $3; September, $3.20. Clover—May, $10.75. Barley—Cash, 33@57c. Cash wheat—No. 2 red, $1.03@1.07; 3 red, $1@1.06; 2 hard, 90@94c; 3 hard, 81@93½c; 1 northern, 92@96c; 2 northern 90@96c; 3 spring, 85@93c. Oats—No. 2, 40@40½c; 3, 39½@¾c. Corn—No. 2, 49½c; 3, 48@49c.

NEW YORK GRAIN.

New York, May 14.—Close: Wheat—May, 91c; July, 88½c; September, 82½c; December, 81¾c. May corn, 57½c; July, 53¼c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—It was a Saturday market with a good deal of evening up for local account. Prices at the close were ½c to 2¼c lower than a week ago. This decline practically represents the modified tendency of the bullish sentiment by reason of the improving crop news. The cash situation is the same as heretofore, dull with a very limited demand, but with holders firm in prices. Cables also show a declining tendency, under continued large supplies of wheat. World's shipments for Monday are estimated at 10,500,000, and the visible will show some decrease. The market has had about four days of a declining tendency and it is not unlikely the scalping trade will work for some reaction early in the week. We are still of the view, however, that with favorable weather for the crop it will be difficult to maintain advances.

Corn—The weakness represents bearish local sentiment on the exceeding large acreage of the new crop. While movement by lake is impossible to any extent, yet there is a fairly good cash demand. Speculative support is a little slow and no better than of a general character. All crop advices indicate a record-breaking acreage.

Oats—The strength in the May option sustains the whole market against quite a little bearish sentiment on the crop news and outlook. The market shows but little tendency for the past few days.

Provisions—The only change we can note in the situation is the relative strength in ribs, which is due to Armour buying, but as to whether he is accumulating long stuff or covering shorts the market is in doubt. Receipts are a little light, but they are expected to increase as soon as the corn planting is done. While the action of the market the past day or two has been a little more encouraging by reason of above buying, we are in doubt as to tendency.

Coe Commission Co.: Wheat—Weather clear and warm with exception of rains and rising temperatures in Minnesota. Our market opened at 90¾c, sold off to 90c but soon eased off under commission house selling which looked like long stuff coming in the market. Crop reports from both winter and spring wheat sections are more favorable. Sentiment seems to be all one way and until that has run its course, or something new turns up, we may see lower values. Would watch the market, however, with a view to buying wheat on any further material decline. Minneapolis September wheat below 80 cents looks cheap, and purchases made of any of the little breaks, which we are liable to have from now on, will prove profitable, in a scalping way as well as for a long pull.

Corn—Corn and oats have ruled steady all day with trade not very large. Market has acted well in face of the continued weakness in the wheat pit. Believe both corn and oats have seen the low point for the present at least and purchases for a scalp can safely be made around these prices.

Provisions—Dull and steady around yesterday's closing prices. Receipts 15os 8000 with market slow to 5c lower.

Kansas City wires: A message from Dallas today says: "The harvesting of the Texas wheat crop will begin within the next two weeks. The oat harvest will begin in about thirty days. Both crops will be at least twice as large as they promised thirty days ago. The long drought of the winter and spring months put the crop in such a condition that in the early days of April almost total failure was foreshadowed. Comparative rains place the wheat yield this year at 12,000,000 bus."

McKinnon, Chicago: See nothing bullish in the wheat situation. Cash interests generally against the price. Crop news on the whole favorable and with a very light public interest the market looks a sale on the bulged spots. Corn is with no support and has a dragging tendency; looks like a safe sale on all rallies.

Chicago Record-Herald: The big cash wheat interests everywhere, Northwest, Southwest and at Chicago, are bearish, and have been for weeks. Like all interests identified with the movement of crops, the cash wheat people are indisposed to go into a new crop at high prices. This is one reason why cash wheat interests as a class are bearish. But wheat handlers too, have all along born the ill-luck that usually attends bull operations at the end of a short crop, and they have been impressed by the lack of outside business, and have caught some of the bearishness from the flour makers.

There seems to be a fair demand for wheat from millers, judging from the prices. Kansas city wheat is selling as high as the Chicago, and the No. 1 northern is held ⅛c to ¼c over May, according to the brand. Duluth and Minneapolis are talking a little stronger and are doing something in Manitoba and Kansas wheat. The seaboard yesterday reported eight loads. Sales of 50,000 bus No. 1 northern were made here. There is more doing in corn than is reported. About 400,000 bus were sold here, although the shippers were denying the business. Corn loaded and under contract to go out this week on the lumber boats commands 3c premium, showing the East wants corn. Oats sales must have been around 200,000 bus, and standard are easy to sell.

Some vessels will go out of here loaded with corn this week. One interest, Armour, is loading 300,000 bus of corn on boats which are under contract to leave here. The vessels are probably part of the lumber fleet and possibly some Canadian boats. They were loading yesterday. Not likely any of the corn in vessels now will be unloaded for the present is that would be an expensive operation. The corn which is under contract to sail this week commands 3c premium.

Oats are making a good, even growth and the general prospect is unusually favorable. There is rapid progress in corn planting, with the soil in good condition and the acreage materially larger than last year. The planting is likely to be completed fully as early as usual, despite the increased area.

B. E. Baker's Chicago grain letter: Wheat—The wheat market was rather firm. Shorts covered freely early, on the stronger cash talk and the big falling off in the Australian shipments and the reported drouth in the Danube country. The most potent steadying factor was the better cash inquiry. St. Louis reports only 127,000 No. 2 red wheat left, and a miller has an option on that. Receipts were light. Weather on the whole favorable. Temperatures were a little low, but no harm is anticipated, and warmer weather is indicated for tomorrow. Northwestern markets seem weak pointing that Minneapolis advises us that any weakness here would cause further break there. Mixing houses are turning out on No. 1 northern a little more freely. Estimated receipts for Monday, 15 cars.

Corn—Corn was a little stubborn at the start, mainly on a good cash business reported yesterday and evidence of a fair movement. The tone became weak and prices slid off easily. Country advices particularly from Nebraska and Illinois indicate increased receipts. Omaha market was weak on larger receipts. The decline there yesterday amounted to 2c on a bushel. The local cash market was from 1 to 1½c a bushel lower. Estimated for Monday, 70 cars.

Oats—The were quiet with a show of strength at the start which was lost on the weakness in corn. Trade was light. Demand is a little slow. Eight thousand bushels were loaded from store yesterday and receipts for 12,000 bushels standard canceled. The sample market was about ½c lower all around. Estimates Monday 95 cars.

HINDUS REAL VEGETARIANS.

Vegetarianism is one of the principles that the Vedanta society is bringing to the attention of the people of Brooklyn borough for the good of their souls and stomachs, says the Eagle. Of course, Brooklyn has seen vegetarianism before, but there is vegetarianism and vegetarianism, and this is vegetarianism with a difference. The vegetarianism of the American vegetarian societies is the sort Brooklyn has seen, a pale, anemic article, dealing in noxious flavorless masses, and serving them badly in stuffy little restaurants. This is the vegetarianism of the far East, rich, savory, satisfying and preached by picturesque Orientals. It is a vegetarianism that attracts the eye, appeals to the nose and satisfies the stomach.

It is a vegetarianism, according to Swami Abhedananda, that eschews "health" foods, takes little stock in nuts, but glorifies vegetables and fruits. It is a vegetarianism, according to the Swami's housekeeper, which deals largely in rice and curries and most delectable vegetable potpourris which stimulate the appetite that they are to satisfy and tickle the palate while they appease hunger. It is on the whole a most attractive brand of vegetarianism that has much to commend it and little to condemn.

THE LATEST WOLF STORY.

A Tofte citizen tells a pretty good wolf story, "actual experience," which, though out of season, is worth repeating, says the Grand Marais Herald. While walking through the woods one day late in the winter he was startled by the sudden appearance upon his trail of a vicious bull moose. As the animal showed a very decided inclination to become better acquainted with him, he decided without wasting much time debating the question with himself to get into the high branches of the nearest tree as fast as possible, and he did so. The moose came up and pawed madly at the base of the tree and then leisurely took a walk around, as if determined to "stand by" and await developments. It was a cold and stormy day, and the man in the tree was considering whether it was best to freeze to death or tackle the moose, when he heard the howling of a pack of wolves coming near. Mr. moose did not tarry longer but made off into the woods. The pack, following the scent, went on in the direction taken by the moose. When the sounds had died away in the distance the man came down from his perch and hurried home. He thanks this ferocious pack of wolves for his timely escape from a perilous predicament.

The number of times in a year that a man uses The Herald's Want Columns is an idex to his interests and activities.

SELLING OF STOCKS

On Account of Uncertainties In the General Outlook.

No Effect Was Produced By the Bank Statement.

New York, May 14.—The week's record gold exports and the further heavy borrowings have aroused some uneasiness over the future of the money market and have increased the disposition to sell stocks on account of uncertainties in the general outlook. Discouraging reports from the iron and steel trade and the weakness of United States Steel stocks have had an important sympathetic effect on the rest of the market. Declining railroad erninags and reports of a falling off in business activity, together with the prospect of a deficient winter wheat crop have been depressing influences.

New York, May 14.—The opening movement of prices in the stock market today was mixed, within a narrow range, except for a few of the specialties. General Electric and Consolidated Gas rose a point and Metropolitan Street Railway ¾. There were declines of a large fraction in Erie first and second preferred, Wheeling & Lake Erie and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie.

Unnamed liquidation of the Eries on a large scale depressed the entire market to a lower level. Free offerings of some of the specialties and minor railroads gave some degree of activity to the dealings. Losses reached 2⅝ in Erie first preferred, 2½ in the second, 1⅞ in Reading second preferred and about 1 in Wabash common and preferred. Amalgamated and Realty preferred. Metropolitan Street Railway touched 111 and lost the rise while General Electric rose 2 in all. Consolidated Gas gain was also cancelled. United States Steel preferred, after dropping slightly, rallied to above 52 and Republic Steel preferred rose ⅞.

The undertone of the market was firmer but the principal movements were in the specialties. Erie first preferred rallied 1 and the second preferred ¾. Consolidated Gas rose 2¾ and Metropolitan Street Railway, Northwestern and Sloss-Sheffield Steel about a point. There were closing losses of 1 to 1⅝ in Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis, Canada Southern, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo, Colorado Southern second preferred, Wheeling & Lake Erie and Pump. The bank statement produced no effect. In the final dealings Copper ran off to the lowest and the closing was irregular.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Fractional declines are again the rule in the stock market. The bank statement was bad. This is the result of heavy gold exports. This, if continued, must result in a stringent tendency of the money market. This, together with the decreased earnings of property is forcing scattered liquidation. There is some covering of shorts but buying of a good class is not much in evidence. The action of the market is heavy and the tendency seems lower.

Coe Commission Co.: The opening in the stock market was irregular and has ruled so throughout the session. Some of the railroad issues were neglected and are a fraction lower. Some of the specialties which have been conspicuous for their weakness the past week were steady; shorts covering held them up. The bank statement, as expected, was not a good one. Gold shipments engaged for today's steamer $13,000,000. This is the largest amount ever sent out in any one day and it brings the total shipment on the present movement up to $49,975,000. Stocks are in a strong position and the short interest is very large. Good railroad shares act very stubborn and look as if they were on the bottom. Believe purchase of Atchison, St. Paul, Union Pacific and Southern Pacific will prove profitable.

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has been irregular, feverish and heavy in tone today, although very few of the net losses were more than fractional. Sentiment was influenced by the engagement of $10,000,000 gold for shipment next week and by the unfavorable bank statement which showed large losses in the cash and reserves. There was some short covering at times during the day, but the rallies so caused were short-lived. The market closed heavy in tone, but dull.

Dickinson to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The important development in the market at the moment is the engagement of $13,000,000 gold for shipment by today's steamers, this being the largest amount ever sent out on any one day, and it brings the total shipments up to the present movement $49,975,000. Thus far this has had little influence upon the money market, as the reports have been offset by receipts of gold from Japan and a heavy currency movement in the interior. The rumors of a settlement of the copper war are emphatically denied by F. A. Heinze and it will be well to take profits on any advance in this stock list. Continental Gas is too dangerous for the average trader to handle. The general railroad market has shown decided resistance to the pressure on the specialties and there is reason to believe the standard railroad stocks are now about on bottom.

MacDonald to Paine, Webber & Co.: The weakness in Erie is caused by the nine months' statement issued regarding earnings showing only $20,000,000 earned. I am told a study of this statement will show that it does not include the earnings on their coal properties, while they have charged up interest on $25,000,000 bonds issued against coal stocks. With the coal earnings in, the statement will be very different.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The bank statement showed heavy loss in cash. It has been discounted and had no effect on the market. The fund of bearish advices and preponderence of bearish sentiment is making headway very fast in the campaign for lower prices. Amalgamated Copper is closing lower, but it still shows excellent buying after dropping slightly, rallied to above 52 and Republic Steel preferred rose ⅞.

The undertone of the market was firmer but the principal movements were in the specialties. Erie first preferred rallied 1 and the second preferred ¾. Consolidated Gas rose 2¾ and Metropolitan Street Railway, Northwestern and Sloss-Sheffield Steel about a point. There were closings of 1 to 1⅝ in Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis, Canada Southern, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo, Colorado Southern second preferred, Wheeling & Lake Erie and Pump. The bank statement produced no effect. In the final dealings Copper ran off to the lowest and the closing was irregular.

Mexican dollars, 44½c. Government bonds steady; railroad bonds irregular.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, May 14.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 1@2 points, which was rather better than due on the cables, particularly when the bearish nature of the English news was backed by a fairly favorable crop situation as reflected by the early map, and a bearish visible supply statement. It seemed, however, as if the opening decline was attracting quite as much covering as it was forcing liquidation and for a time following the call the market hung steady around the initial figures. A little later it developed a sagging tendency under moderate liquidation but fluctuations were limited and the net decline was not very materially increased. Trading was moderately active as compared with recent Saturdays.

Cotton futures closed quiet; May 13.14. June 13.24; July 13.33; August 13.01; September 11.70; October 11.26; November 11.15; December 11.17; January 11.18. Spot closed quiet; mid ups 13.55; gulf 13.80. Sales 800 bales.

WEEK NOT ACTIVE IN REAL ESTATE

Some Sales Made But Market Is Not Brisk—Rental Agencies Find Demand For Houses Not Up To Their Expectations and Much Less Than a Year Ago.

No great amount of acitivity has been shown in the local realty market this week, though there have been a few sales right along. More attention seems to be paid to improvement work just at present than to the acquisition of property. Most of the sales reported for the week have been of vacant lots, that will be improved before the coming winter. The improvement movement has stimulated the loan business, and nearly all the local real estate offices that handle loans report an excellent demand.

For some reason the rental agencies cannot understand, there has not been the rush for houses this year that there was a year ago. Last spring, during the month of May, it was almost impossible for the agents to furnish houses or flats to meet the demand. They had scores of people on their lists for the first available vacancies.

At the present time there are several agencies that have a number of desirable houss for rent, many of those being located in the East End. Some have rented out all the houses they have charge of, but the fact remains that there are good houses, and some good flats, that are still seeking tenants.

There does not seem to be a lack of tenants, but in most cases the rental prices have been fixed too high to suit people looking for a place to stay, and they are still on the waiting list. To avoid paying high rents many families are now moving to Park Point, some of which expect to remain there until next spring.

There are at present many desirable houses in the East End for rent, and unoccupied houses can be found in several of the other sections of the city.

A locality of the city where building activity is very apparent this spring is that portion of Lakeside, near Forty-second avenue east and McCullough street. Several new homes, moderate priced, are either under way or projected, and the locality will have quite a residence air by next fall. The Lakeside Land company has sold a number of lots there within the past few weeks for improvement on the company's building plan. The locality has the advantages of a graded street, sewer, water and gas.

George H. Crosby says the past ten days have witnessed considerable activity in his office and a number of sales have been closed. He reports the sale for immediate improvement of a lot on East First street, to L. R. Blake, for $1500; the sale of a 25 by 90-foot lot on the upper side of Fifth street at First avenue west, for Burdette Riddle to local parties, for $850; a lot on the upper side of Second street between Eleventh and Twelfth avenues east, to J. McDonald, for $825; a lot on the upper side of Huron street, to Joseph Carter, for $825; a lot on East Fifth street to S. Gibson, for $850.

The residence property at 2127 West First street, has been sold to Thomas McDonald for $1500. Earnest money has been paid on several other prospective deals.

The Lakeside Land company reports plans out and bids received for the erection of a modern seven-room residence at Forty-third avenue east and McCullough street, for John Hartley. The company has sold three lots on the upper side of the same street on which houses will be erected this summer.

J. D. Howard & Co. report a very active loan business for the week and the sale of some acreage in Carlton county and a lot on East Fifth street for improvement this summer.

Work was commenced this week on the two-story double brick house on the east side of Fourteenth avenue east, between Jefferson street and London road, for H. C. Fulton. J. A. Watterworth has the contract for construction.

Each house will have seven rooms, with hardwood floors throughout, hardwood finish on each floor, the first in oak and the second in birch. Each house will have a separate heating plant.

E. F. England is building a modern flat building, costing about $4000, on Fifth street, near Fourth avenue east.

Bruno Eyeferth has purchased the McCard residence on Seventeenth street, Park Point.

Theresa Patterson has sold to Ida M. Farrell two lots at the corner of Third street and Nineteenth avenue east, for $3000.

J. L. Washburn has bought two lots between Roslyn and Butte avenues, block 5, Hunter's Park, for $1000.

T. F. Trevillion has purchased two lots on St. Louis avenue, Upper Duluth, and two lots on Lake avenue, Lower Duluth, from J. C. La Vaque, the consideration being $1000.

The Independent Bulletin says: Some objection is raised at Duluth over the proposed building line planned for one of the leading streets, and incidents are cited where it is feared that it might work an injustice. This, however, is bound to be the case in the change toward any improvement, and the time will hardly come when any pronounced departure can be put into effect without working some hardship."

Transfers for the week were as follows:

The contract for rebuilding the O'Brien & Knowlton block, on West Michigan street, has been let to McLeod & Smith, for $12,000, not including elevators or heating. The building will be known as the Milton block, will be reconstructed entirely, new front elevator will be put in place and made first class in every respect. John R. De Waard is architect.

Alfred T. Burris has purchased a residence property on the upper side of Second street, between Third and Fourth avenues west, of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance company, for $4050. The property is described as lot 57, West Second street, Duluth proper, First division.

E. L. BRADLEY'S HANDSOME NEW HOME.

Among the handsome new residences to be erected this summer in the East End will be the $20,000 home of E. L. Bradley, at Twenty-third avenue East and First street. The contract for construction has been awarded Theo. Nauffts and the building is to be completed by Oct. 1 next. A handsome barn will be erected on the property as soon as the home is completed.

The residence will be of a style known as the Georgian Colonial house. It will be constructed of St. Louis pressed brick, with trimmings of Bedford buff stone. The windows throughout will be of plate glass. The interior finish will be of quarter-sawed oak and curly birch, throughout, except in the attic. The interior style of architecture will conform with that of the exterior, except the dining room, which will be of the old Dutch style.

The bath rooms have tiled floors and walls and the plumbing fixtures in the principal bath rooms will be of porcelain. In the others the fixtures will be of white enamel. The residence will have a twin boiler hot water heating plant. The home was designed by W. T. Bray, architect.

SCENES IN AND ABOUT HISTORIC CITY OF HAVANA

Narrowness of Entry to the Harbor is Surprising.

The Cuban Milkman Has Mules Instead of Cows.

D. A. Willard, of 1504½ East Third street, who recently returned from a trip to Havana, bringing with him a number of odd photographs of scenes in and about the historic town, says that it has never been his pleasure to visit a prettier or more interesting city. He is enthusiastic in his praise of the place and its people.

"The inhabitants of Havana, as a set, are the cleanest and neatest I ever saw," said Mr. Willard yesterday, in speaking of his trip. "This is noticeable even among the lowest laborers, who, like most of the other citizens, dress in white, no matter how dirty their work. Every morning they appear spotlessly clean, their fresh white clothes immaculate. They must wash them every day. It is the same with the farmer in the country. Every farm house you pass, any day in the week, has its line full of clothes at the back."

Mr. Willard says that the city appears to be a modern one now in most respects, although there are many peculiar features about it. The streets are very narrow, but the car lines are equipped with cars similar to the large double-truckers used in the Duluth railway system. The tracks are laid close beside the sidewalk, and then there is barely room for a team to pass. Twenty per cent of the population is colored, but there are few mulattoes in evidence. The color line is not drawn strictly, as in the United States, but the white and black races never intermarry.

Mr. Willard was delighted with the historic buildings about the city, and spoke particularly of Morro castle, at the harbor's mouth. He was surprised to find that the entry to the harbor was very narrow, as shown in the accompanying photograph, and its narrowness will be a surprise to most people.

Most of the milk used in Havana, Mr. Willard found, came from mules and goats. Instead of a herd of cows the Cuban milkman owns a herd of mules. He gets 20 cents a quart for mule milk, and 10 cents less a quart for that from an ordinary cow. Mule milk is considered richer and better. Children are not infrequently brought up on goat milk, and to insure its freshness the baby is fed as shown in the photograph, one person holding the beast, while the other holds the child, so that it may get its meal after the fashion of a baby goat. This practice is followed by people of high and low degree alike, and in most families where there is a baby one will also find a goat.

While Cuba has modern bands, which furnish excellent music, there are also musical organizations within its borders which boast of odd-looking instruments, as in the case of the negroes here shown. Two of them have instruments made from peculiarly shaped gourds, and a third is the proud possessor of a combination drum made by stretching the right sort of material over two small butter tubs.

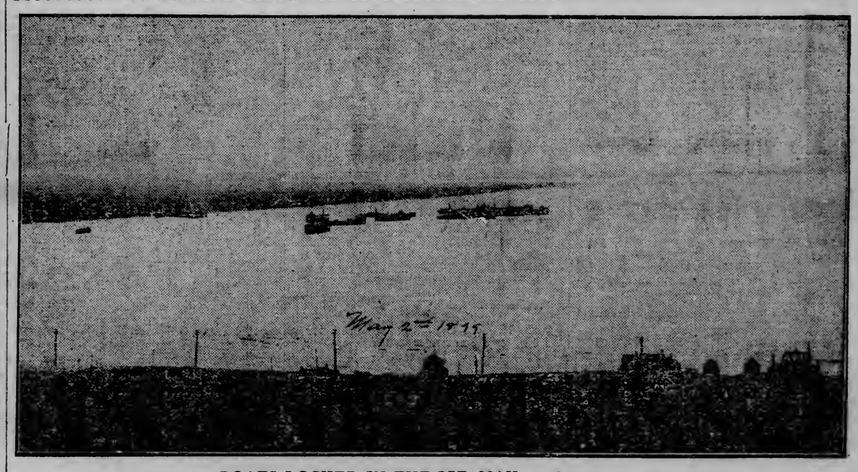
FIRST BOAT IN AT DULUTH FOR TWENTY YEARS PAST



BOATS LOCKED IN THE ICE MAY 2, 1899.

The opening of the season of inter-lake navigation this year is the latest but one in the history of the port of Duluth.

The opening of navigation is generally taken to mean the date on which the first boat arrives from the lower lake ports.

Many people realize that this is a late season, but few outside of those who are in some way connected with the marine business realize how backward the season realy is. At this date last year the port had been open for over a month and many of the vessels had made two or three trips. This year but three boats have arrived from lower lake ports.

H. G. Inman, cashier of the Union Towing & Wrecking company, has in his possession an interesting table, showing the first arrivals in the port for the past twenty years. During that time the latest opening was in 1885, when the first boat from the lower lakes arrived in Duluth on May 14. In 1883 navigation opened on May 12 and in 1888 on the same date. This year the first arrival was on May 12.

In 1899 a peculiar sight was witnessed from Duluth. A number of vessels from the lower lakes came up together and the whole fleet was caught in the ice. The above picture shows the vessels in the fleet. There were twelve in all as follows: Superior City, Schuylkill, Selwyn Eddy, H. H. Brown, Senator Chili, Fayette Brown, George Stone, Empire City, Mohawk, Rosedale and R. G. Stewart. The season that year was also a backward one and the above picture was taken on May 2. They were imprisoned there for several days before they succeeded in reaching the harbor.

Another interesting event in connection with the opening of the season occurred in 1890, when the Mitchell, Gratwick and Fryer raced up the lakes for the honor of reaching Duluth first.

The Gratwick was supposed to be the fleetest of the three and after passing the Sault her captain waited for the other two boats to come up in order to have the pleasure of showing them a clean pair of heels. The Mitchell, however, was a new boat and she proved too much for the Gratwick. Much to the chagrin of the crew of the latter the Mitchell held her own all the way to Duluth and was a few minutes ahead of the Gratwick in reaching the harbor.

The following is a copy of the list in the possession of Mr. Inman. It shows the name of the first vessel to arrive during the past twenty years, and the date of the opening of navigation in each year during that time:

1883—May 12, Empire State.
1884—May 9, Jay Gould.
1885—May 14, Ariozna.
1886—May 7, 6:30 p. m., E. B. Hale and consort.
1888—May 12, 1 a. m., Kasota. Afterwards the A. A. Parker, lost fall of 1903 off Grand Marais, Mich., Lake Superior.
1889—April 20, Osceola.
1890—April 23, 1:45 p. m., Mitchell, Gratwick and Fryer. All three steamers within a few minutes of each other. Came racing all the way up the lake.
1891—April 30, 5 a. m., William Livingstone.
1892—April 22, 12:35 a. m., steamer George W. Roby.
1893—May 9, 8:40 a. m., George W. Roby.
1894—April 19, 7 p. m., W. H. Gratwick (steel).
1895—April 30, 10:10 p. m., I. W. Nicholas.
1896—April 23, 5 p. m., Mahoning.
1897—April 30, 10:10 a. m., Harlem.
1898—April 16, City of Rome.
1899—May 2, 10:35 a. m., L. C. Waldo.
1900—April 24, 10:30 a. m. M. A. Hanna.
1901—May 2, 11 a. m., Oscoda.
1902—April 6, 3 a. m., F. R. Buell.
1903—April 13, 2 p. m., Capt. Thomas Wilson.

NEW PIERS AT SUPERIOR ENTRY

Three-Fourths of the New Concrete Work Will Not Be Seen Above the Surface of the Water.

"Considering the size of the work to be done this coming summer season it will look rather lonesome around here," remarked Assistant United States Engineer Clarence Coleman, at the Superior entry new pier work, one day this week.

"It will seem lonesome because so much work will be accomplished by so small a crew of men," Mr. Coleman then explained.

When the concrete piers were built at the Duluth ship canal a few years ago workmen to the number of over 125 were employed regularly on the construction work. In fact that number were needed to make the necessary headway with the new piers.

At Superior entry, where a new concrete pier 1800 feet will be laid this summer, the crew will not number more than 50 men, yet it is expected that the work will go on a great deal faster than it did at the Duluth canal.

The explanation of this is easily realized by visitors to Wisconsin Point, who see the preparations that have been going on ever since last summer. All the planning has been done beforehand. Machinery will take the place of manual labor and where on ordinary occasions from 15 to 20 men would be required for a certain portion of the operations, one man to look after the machinery will accomplish a great deal more in the same length of time.

The only thing remaining to be done before the actual work begins of laying the concrete in place is the re-assembling of the second big traveler for the cement mixture. A litle delay in the arrival of minor parts of the machine will cause the work to start a few days later than had been intended.

One of the interesting things in connection with the big improvement at Superior entry this summer is that when it is completed there will be practically nothing showing of the work done.

Last fall and winter a trench was excavated in the bottom of the bay leading toward the lake, piles were driven in this and sawed off within three feet of the bottom. Around and on top of these piles, this summer will be placed the cement that will make the substructure of a pier that is expected to stand long after the lives of the coming generation is lost in memory.

The new pier will be constructed of monolithic subaqueous blocks of concrete. These blocks will have the following dimensions: 16 feet long, 20 feet wide at the base, 14 feet wide at the top, 21 feet high.

It will be a novel thing in the way of pier building from the fact that the concrete work will all be done under water. When the work is completed the blocks will be hidden from sight under water. To give a rough estimate, it is claimed that fully three-fourths of the new concrete work will not be seen above the surface of the water.

To build a concrete pier under these circumstances required a great deal of Invitations are out for the formal opening of the new club house of the Northland Golf club to be held Monday evening. Four hundred have been issued, aside from those of the 225 members, and in this opening of the beautiful house the way will be paved for a brilliant season of entertainment. Following the inspection of the house there will be dancing and the opening promises to be the brightest social event of many months. It will be made a very formal and brilliant function. During the summer there will doubtless be much entertaining at the house, the informal lunches and suppers that may be given being most popular. The house is ideally situated on a small knoll with the hills behind and overlooking the lake and the style of architecture offers no jarring note to the beauty of the whole.

The reception yesterday afternoon, at which Mrs. George L. Chesebrough was hostess, in honor of Mrs. John H. Upham, Jr., was a most charming affair. The afternoon was dull and gray, but the rooms in the Chesebrough home, on East Superior street, were beautiful with flowers and the lovely gowns of the callers. The reception hall and drawing rooms were simply decorated with American beauties and the dining room was particularly effective with its decorations or marguerites.

An interesting event in fraternal circles was the eighth annual ball given by Court Eastern Star, No. 86, U. O. F., at the Armory, Friday evening. LaBrosse's orhcestra furnished a specially prepared program of dances and the 200 couples who participated were more than pleased. The committee in charge was as follows: N. H. Wilson, George Boyden, H. Gelinean, Charles Hanson, Mrs. George Boyden, Mrs. N. H. Wilson, E. Iverson, Miss M. Calmqvlen, E. O. Olund, James Kelly, H. J. Kolling.

CLUBS AND MUSICAL.

The Minnesota State Music Teachers' Association convention to be held in Duluth, June 16, 17 and 18, promises to be a great success, for the interest shown in the meeting is unusual. The officers of the association are as follows: President, E. C. Murdock; first vice-president, Gerard Tonning; secretary-treasurer, Edna F. Hall; auditor, William L. Gray.

Program committee: Carlyle Scott, Mrs. Marie-Giest-Erd, D. F. Colville.

Public school music section: Chairman, Elsie M. Shaw.

The program will have for its basis the educational element and round tables will be a special feature.

The program committee is at work on the programs for the three days' meeting and has been so fortunate as to secure the world famous violin virtuoso, M. Sauret, for an appearance June 18. M. Sauret was for years at the head of the Royal Conservatory of London and is one of the greatest attractions before the American public this year.

William J. Henderson, the greatest New York newspaper musical critic, has been engaged to give one of his famous lectures and will prove a most valuable attraction in an educational way. Mr. Henderson needs no introduction to the musicians of the state for his numerous books on musical subjects are indispensable to the musical history. With the concerts by state talent a most valuable session is planned.

One of the annual features most vital to the state membership is the Home composers program which will occupy one evening giving the public an opportunity to hear what Minnesota musicians are doing in composition.

The First Methodist church has been secured as the place or meeting and with its three manual Hutchins organ will afford much scope for the music of that instrument. Special railroad rates will be secured and the Spalding hotel has been chosen as headquarters. All in all a most interesting and istructive session is planned.

All teachers of voice, organ and piano and standard orchestral instruments are eligible to active membership and anyone interested in the work will be welcome as an associate member. The county vice presidents for St. Louis county are Mrs. James McAuliffe, of this city, and Miss Mabel Fulton, of Minneapolis.

Much interest is being shown in the lectures that are to be given here by Edward Howard Griggs, who is to be brought to Duluth by the Ladies' Literature class for three lectures, May 23, 24 and 25.

Professor Griggs is a young man, yet already his experience in lecturing is wide. Like many other good things, he comes to the East out of the West, to which fact, perhaps, he owes not a little of his strength and breadth of view. He was graduated from the university of Indiana and later became the professor of literature there. He joined the faculty of Leland Stanford university in California at the inception of that institution and remained there until last year, when he went abroad for study and recreation. He was at first at the head of the department of ethics in the California university and later at the head of the department of ethics and education. While still in the college work he commenced lecturing on literary and ethical topics, and gradually his work in this field grew so large and important that he determined to turn aside for a while from his academic career and devote himself exclusively to the more public work of lecturing. Professor Griggs is a student as well as an educator, and his study is humanity. Through all the courses of lectures which he is to give for the institute this season, through all his work in the School of Pedagogy, illustrations of the great truths and tendencies of human living will run like a connecting thread. Those who can follow all of his lectures will find them correlated, component parts of a complete whole.

A number of the members of the drawing clases of the high school have been making posters to advertise the Seymour lectures which are being given at the high school for the next few weeks. The posters are distributed about in the windows of the city and few know that they are the work of the high school pupils. The work done is accurate and well done, the contrast in colors and the effectiveness of the whole is very good. The work in the drawing department under Miss Gertrude Carey is progressing finely and much interest is being taken in these particular posters.

THE PASSING OF A SHADOW

By Nellie Cravey Gillmore.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Calthorpe's face bore a strangely broken look as he made his way slowly up the dim gravel path and sat down at the foot of the veranda steps. His hands, which he thrust into his pockets, were clenched till the purple nails bit into the flesh.

"God!" he said, hoarsely. "Helena!"

A long despairing silence ensued, during which the persistent throbbing of his brain kept pace with aching heartbeats.

Presently the subtle swish of a woman's skirts broke through the stillness, and he glanced up.

"Why, Mr. Calthorpe—Frank—what is it?" Miss Hasselton paused, abruptly, a look of pained inquiry on her pretty face. In all her life she had never seen despair so naked in human eyes. Her heart plunged breathlessly. Ever since she had romped about in pinafores with long, beribboned curls flying over her shoulders, and he—the boy sweetheart—had swept away her childish tears, and soothed the wounded young heart, no other shrine had reared itself there.

Calthorpe did not speak for several minutes. He hesitated between an almost overwhelming longing for a fellow being's sympathy and a shrinking antipathy to exposing the crying bitterness of his soul. His face—thin, keen, expressive—was white and sharp in the moonlight; his eyes startling in their haggardness as they lifted to meet hers.

"I'm a broken-hearted man, Violet," he said, huskily.

"Tell me what it is, won't you?" She came a step nearer, and laid one of her long, cool hands on his shoulder, looking down at him with strangely gentle eyes. "Maybe I can help you," she went on, as he did not reply.

Her touch and voice roused him, and two faint points of color came into his cheeks. "As to helping me," he answered, wearily, "no one can do that—I'm afraid." He glanced up, with the wretched imitation of a smile. "However," he added, "perhaps you will advise me about—it."

The girl sat down on the step beside him, drawing up the edges of her skirts from contact with the gravel.

A constrained silence fell between them. Miss Hasselton was the first to break it. "Is it—Helena?" she asked, presently, in a low voice.

"Yes—Helena!" he returned, gravely.

She shuddered as Calthorpe spoke. It had come, then, at last—the denoument with Pennington. She had feared this.

"I trusted her," he said, simply. "I would have credited a breath of suspicion against her from no one—not even you; but—" He broke off abruptly, and his head sank. "A man is compelled to believe the evidence of his own eyes," he concluded, after awhile.

Violet Hasselton looked down at the bowed head, and a feeling of utter helplessness stole over her.

Calthorpe raised his face quickly to hers. "I thought," he said, in a sharpened voice, "that Pennington was paying his addresses to you?"

She started and flushed. "So he is—has been," she affirmed, in a cool tone, assumed to hide the unease that otherwise must have betrayed itself.

"Ought I to put a bullet through him, then, or let them both go?"

"Frank?" Miss Hasselton sat up quite straight all at once, the color fading swiftly from her face and lips. He had seen, then! Seen Pennington kiss his wife in the poplar lane. There was hardly any other way to account for his rash words. And she—she had seen, too, only too clearly. Helena was wearing a white India muslin, with mauve ribbons, a Marechal Neil bud fastened in the knot of hair at her neck. She remembered this fact distinctly, for, with the old schoolgirl fancy, they had chosen to dress nearly alike tonight. Miss Hasselton thought rapidly. Her own heart had long since been wrung dry of all that made life worth while, and why should she not dare the risk for his sake? After all, she could only fail, at the very worst, and one had far better fail in an object than in passivity.

"Are you sure—do you know what you are saying?" she asked, presently, bending toward him with tightly-clasped hands.

"What is a man to do—to think," he broke out, harshly, "when he finds his wife in another man's arms, his own kisses warm on her lips?"

"You saw that? Are you positive that it was she—quite positive?"

"I believe so. It was less than an hour ago, under the poplars. I recognized her by the dress she wore—the rose in her hair—"

Miss Hasselton interrupted him suddenly, with a little soft laugh. "You goose!" she said, turning away for a second, "don't you know—can't you see—can't you guess?"

Calthorpe gazed at her uncomprehendingly, then eagerly—incredulously, and a smile broke through the cloud in his eyes as they traveled quickly from the flower in her hair to the dainty white frill at the bottom of her dress.

"Violet!" he exclaimed, tremulously, "it was—yourself!"

"Yes." She looked at him gravely, an earnestness in her glance which he could not doubt.

"I beg your pardon, Violet, but I've been a blanked, suspicious fool; but, thank heaven, she need never know that I doubted her."

"No, she must never know that," the girl returned, in a suddenly sharp voice; "never!"

"I suppose, then," returned Calthorpe, rising to his feet, with an accession of new life, "that congratulations are in order?"

Miss Hasselton regarded him in sudden dismay. "Oh, not just yet, please," she laughed. "Here comes Helena, now."

Mrs. Calthorpe came quickly out on the veranda. There was a strange gladness in her eyes as they sought those of the other woman.

"Violet," she said, unsteadily, as they walked off together, "I was in the room, there—I heard every word—of his and yours. You have made a woman out of me. Thank you." She held out her hand. "I mean to deserve it hereafter."

Soon Pennington joined them, and the four went in to dinner.

A week later, at the breakfast table, Miss Hasselton announced her intention of departure on the following day.

"Sorry to break up the charming party," said Pennington; "but Violet has done me the honor to accept my heart and hand, and—"

The girl winced, though imperceptibly, and smiled as she met Calthorpe's significant glance.

"We are to be married in June," she finished, flushing faintly.

CAPTURED HORSE THIEF.

How Indians Did It By Sherlock Holmes Methods.

"This is a Ponca Indian Sherlock Holmes story," said an old-timer, puffing a freshly-rolled cigarette, to a correspondent of the Kansas City Times. "I lived at the Ponca agency in the '80s when few persons except government inspectors and cowboys ever came. Occasionally a stranger stopped on his way through the country to buy 'chuck' at the trader's store. The Poncas were blankets in those days, and were much better Indians than now.

"It was high noon one spring day, and the agency was as quiet as a graveyard. Four Indian policemen sat drowsing on a bench, the usual loafing place, against the agency building. Summer was in the air and the prairies and timber in the river bottom looked fresh and green. In the agency office hung the six-shooters and ammunition belts of the four policemen, and nearby was a stock of rifles, ready for quick use. Desperadoes were in the country, scouting between Kansas and the Indian territory, and the agency employes were always on the alert. The Ponca pony herds often were raided, and the policemen kept close watch for the horse thieves.

"The four policemen on the bench were disturbed by the sound of a horse's feet. The horse, a fine one, was ridden by a stranger, who dismounted at a trader's store and disappeared inside. The first policeman rubbed his eyes a moment, said 'ugh,' and the second, third and fourth did likewise. One after the other they went quickly into the agency office and came back with their belts and pistols.

"They made a dash for the trader's store, but the trader saw them coming and ran out the back door toward the timber on Salt Fork. The four policemen began firing in volleys. The stranger shot as he ran, and escaped into the heavy growth of trees without a scratch. The four policemen were in fighting trim and kept up the chase.

"The noise of the firing awoke the sleepy agency like a cannonade. Men and women ran out doors to learn the cause of the uproar. Little clouds of smoke that hung in the air, and occasional shots in the timber, showed that the fight was still on, but no one could tell now or why it began.

"The stranger ran to the river, sprang into a skiff and was on his way down stream when the four policemen drew up opposite and commanded him to come to shore and surrender or be killed. The stranger refused and bullets began striking the water near the skiff. He changed his mind quickly and gave up.

"He was marched before the agent, who asked the four policemen:

"'What's the matter; who is this man?'

"'Him horse thief.'

"'Do you know him?'

"'No; we never see him.'

"'Do you know his horse?'

"'No; never see him horse before.'

"'Well, how in thunder do you know that this man is a horse thief?' demanded the agent, who was growing angry at the idea that the four policemen had suddenly jumped up, half asleep, and began shooting to kill at a possibly inoffensive stranger.

"The chief of the four policemen curved a hand around each eye and said: 'White man ride with "blinders" on bridle.' And that was his only explanation.

"His evidence, however, was strong enough to convict in that part of the country. The Indians knew that any stranger riding on horseback so far from civilization would have a regulation outfit for his horse, and that a stranger with a good horse and a bridle with blinds in all probability was a thief who had stolen both from some man's stable.

"The stranger was locked up in the agency calaboose and held for inquiry. The policemen had made no mistake. In a day or two a postal card was received from a Kansas sheriff asking the agent to keep a lookout for a man and a horse whose description tallied with the stranger and the horse captured by the four Indian predecessors of Sherlock Holmes. The sheriff came and identified the stranger and the stolen property and took them back to Kansas."

A NEW DAMON AND PYTHIAS.

From North Wales comes the romantic story of a lifelong devotion, begun in early boyhood, between two men, and only ending in death at the ripe age of 80 years. Henry Price and Robert Ellis when boys struck up a friendship, pledge to stick to each other until death. When young men they emigrated to Australia and lived and worked together, come weal, come woe, for more than fifty years.

Two years ago they both returned to their native village of Rhoslianerchrogog, in Wales, having each amassed considerable wealth. This week Price and Ellis died within twenty-four hours of each other, both being over 80 years of age.

MOUNT BOOKER WASHINGTON.

Mrs. Hill, an artist, of Tacoma, Wash., has been commissioned by one of the Western railroad trunk lines to execute for the Louisiana Purchase exposition several canvasses illustrative of the scenery of Washington state. One of the pictures represents a lofty mountain, which for some reason had never received a name. The artist suggested that the mountain be christened Mount Booker Washington, in honor of the principal of the Tuskegee institute. Her suggestion was confirmed by the United States geological survey, and the name, Mount Booker Washington, is now in use. The picture will be exhibited at St. Louis this summer.

THE DAYS OF GOOD LIVING.

Dent Murdock pays tribute to the sheep-sorrel pie, which was one of the luxuries of primitive Kansas, says the Kansas City Journal. "It was dried apple pie from December until grass, or until the squaws came around with wild gooseberries. But, happy thought! With the coming of the Johnny-jump-up came sheep sorrel, and with sorghum sweetening what lovely pies were made. Cornbread and Missouri bacon, sorghum and buttermilk, with a quarter section of sheep sorrel pie to finish up. Kansas people of this day and generation don't know what real good living is."

MIRIAM SPIER.

Evidently expecting a hot summer after this cold winter, the most diaphanous of fabrics are now being utilized for summer gowns and the modern fashionable outfit in progress would be serviceable for the leading summer resorts.

For many years it seemed impossible to convince the inhabitants of New York city and the surrounding country that for at least three months the weather, as a rule, was so hot that the only sensible plan was to dress as did the Southerners. Men and women alike attire themselves in heavy garments, and thin wash materials for street wear were considered anything but smart. For the last two or three years a much more sensible state of affairs has existed, and thin unlined silks, vellings, nets and wash materials have been made up in quantities.

That this is to be the season for loose, fluffy clothes there can be no doubt. The trim tailor-made girl will have to stay in the back ground for 1904. According to the edict of Dame Fashion, tight-fitting garments are seldom seen. Long sloping shoulders, full skirts, big sleeves and loose effects predominate. The 1830 modes are becoming more and more popular as the season advances, and the summer girl must look as though she stepped out of some old painting rather than what one would expect of the up-to-date miss of the twentieth century.

From a sartorial standpoint this is undeniably the age of the coquette. One has only to glance around to see that all the dep tures of feminine attire are for her alone. A few years ago everything was tailor-made, the severest of the severe, the most rigid of the rigid. Now it is absolutely the reverse. Shoes, hats, dresses, wraps, fans, and dresses and muffs all join to lay their prettiest and most seductive modes at the feet of the coquette. As for anything even suggestive of seriousness, there is no time for it. The aim of the moment is to be as airy and fairy as the limits of one's figure will allow—in effect and in reality.

It is the thin woman's day. She has had to stand by for years and hear her plump, well-rounded sister extolled to the skies, while she, an angular, insignificant nobody, took massage, drank glycerine, swallowed libations of olive oil or followed tiresome exercises to develop portions of the anatomy which stingy nature had left flat or flabby. But the plump sister now is the one who is working harder than the thin one ever did to alter her figure; for awhile there has generally been a truce in the styles and cuts for slender women; nowadays there is absolutely none for the stout one, since the entree of the sylph.

Dresses are made so bouffant around the hips that no one of much development in that particular can expect to look anything but balloon like. When the styles of 1830 are strictly adhered to the skirts are gathered full into the band, with no gaufferings, but these rows of gathers look neat and hold the fulness in position. Six weeks ago Parisiennes declared they would have none of the full skirts and loose boleros, but, like thieves in the night, the styles crept in, no one asking how, and women are well satisfied with the result. At fashionable resorts one sees nothing but bagging boleros full skirts and billowy sleeves. Ultra fashionable costumes hang so loosely and are so very negligee that one is almost disgusted, but these are extremes, and an extremist in fashion is never well dressed.

Numerous, indeed, are the beautiful materials so stunningly treated for the dressy occasions during the summer season. Silks of many descriptions, chiffon, net, elaborately embroidered linen and muslin, daintily flowered organdies and magnificent laces, rich in their elegance.

The combination of laces with the soft fabrics so prevalent now is responsible for as sumptuous appearances as Fashion has ever displayed. Shirrings, fine tuckings, needlework and webs of all orders make up the modish afternoon toilets. While the coarse laces are less used than formerly, finer threads with bold effects and wide meshes are quite as prevalent as ever. One of the fancies of the present is the union of such lace with old English eyelet embroidery, which is again at the height of popularity. In mull gowns, and linen as well, the much-used Tenerife wheels of last year again appear. But this time they are rather a part of the setting for the embroidery than of first importance themselves.

The imported costumes which have been brought over for the summer wear clearly demonstrate one thing—there is to be a furor of silks this summer. Endless seem the quantities of silk which realize with fragile passementeries, narrow velvets and delicate laces the beautiful toilets which only Paris can send.

A new silk, shown in self-figured weaves and brilliant colors softly shadowed, combines exquisitely with chiffons and nets, and shapes gowns of a delightful dressiness. In gunmetal grays—shot, with pois diamond or dots—effective gowns are seen in this silk for middle-aged women, whose bonnets for such toilets may show yellow crocuses. Yellow is a frequent contrast with spring and summer finery, while violet is seen with green and black, and white with all colors.

Another self-figured silk which is in faint mauves and grays is used by the French makers. One or two of the models seen were a much older texture, moire, in fact, though chameleon and opal colorings gave the ancient fabrics an air of novelty.

A new wrinkle with louisines is the introduction of broche figures in a contrasting shade, some of the backgrounds of these also showing a faint watering like moire.

Lastly, among the silk novelties is lace chiffon, a gauzelike fabric, with plaid patterns outlined in drawn thread—all in the weaving, of course.

Frocks of the sheer fabrics, such as mousseline, organdy and net, are particularly pleasing for dancing. Many of these gauzy materials are strewn with trailing blossoms in the palest shades, but they are suitable only for tall, slender figures.

Grenadines promise to become extremely popular, and are shown in beautiful colors and designs. These thin fabrics demand a silk or satine foundation.

A fine silk, as soft as chiffon and nearly as thin as India silk, but with more body, is called "messaline." It is procurable only in plain colors, and is especially appropriate for present modes. An exquisite shade of pale pink is the color selected in this beautiful new material to make a dinner gown for a young matron to whom the "1830" modes are especially becoming. Another new silk is soie semiliante. It has a crepe weave, soft and pliable, and is shown in a variety of fashionable shades and designs.

Youthful wearers are revelling in the afternoon and dance frocks of fine white batiste, much befrilled and flounced, that are typical of our great-grandmothers. The skirts are straight and full, and trimmed to the knee with innumerable tiny lace edged ruffles of the material. While the waist, with its slightly bloused front and semi-fitted back, is made with a low, round neck, edged with lace, and the sleeves, which reached only to the elbow, are formed entirely of the tiny lace-edged ruffles. A soft folded girdle of Liberty satin, that may have long ends falling at the back, is worn, and if preferred, this dressy touch may be in some delicate color. A separate shoulder cape made of the material and lace trimmed is sometimes included. Fine embroidery is frequently introduced with the lace in these modes, which will undoubtedly gain in favor as the summer advances.

At a reception given recently, a dainty toilette was seen in turquoise chiffon combined with a changeable turquoise messaline, to which sleeves of Point de Venise in ecru and a cravat of the same lend an air of distinction. The corsage of chiffon was bloused in the deep featherboned girdle of messaline; a strapped cape effect over tre shoulders gave the desired width. The upper sleeve of lace was in bell design, flaring widely at the elbow over the wrinkled sleeve of satin. The skirt was fashioned of the chiffon, shirred to the waistband, and alternate bands of messaline and chiffon bouillonnes finished the design. The flounce of messaline was faced with a turquoise velvet to afford a weight and stability at the foot.

Another especially attractive costume worn at a garden party was an elaborate design in Mechlin lace and silk mull, to which a little narrow Valenciennes gave relief. This creation was beautifully executed entirely by hand. The blouse of mull was covered with the lace bolero, and the loose sleeve was a bell pattern covered with pilase ruffles of mull edged with Valenciennes. The skirt was built in tiers or sections, a lace yoke appearing at the hip, followed by vertical tucked mull, this in turn followed by a band of horizontal tucks, and the whole was finished by a deep volant of vertical tucks to afford fulness and two deep tucks above the hem. Panels of lace were posed over the tucking of the volant with good effect. The model is one which would lend itself well to reproduction in the oscillating stitch of the sewing machine, and is equally effective in less expensive materials.

A pale green messaline costume attracted great admiration recently at a prominent social function. This was made with the nun's tucks, each of these three tucks being headed by quarter inch pipings of the same lustrous silk. The skirt was very full, with a plain front, but the fulness began over the hips. The bodice showed the drooping shoulder effect, the upper part of the arm being cut in one, with the body of the waist. The trimming concealed the joining of the sleeves to this overlapping body.

The gown was entirely in monotone, with the exception of the wide sleeve ruffles of lierre lace. A very similar gown was in silver gray messaline, the skirt being made in two sections, the lower one quite full, and more on the order of a flounce, but also with the nun's tucks.

In the pale green costume the waist showed a surplice effect, produced by the stole trimming of the neck being carried down and crossing just above the belt. A deep cream lace chemisette filled in the neck and same lace was utilized for the sleeve ruffles.

With every dainty summer frock, for out-door occasions, it's absolutely essential for the fair wearer to complete her toilette with equally as dainty a parasol. Endless, indeed, seem the gorgeous displays at the fashionable resorts, each one displaying some individuality suggestive of the bearer.

Description of Above Models.

With a Tartan Border.

Champagne taffetas is tucked deeply to cover the main portion of the frame, and the edge is of a clan tartan silk, showing dark green, scarlet and gold bars upon the white ground. The little rib tips are gilt, and the long handle is encircled with little brass hoops at intervals.

Reception Toilette of Chiffon and Messaline.

A turquoise shade in chiffon is combined with a changeable turquoise messaline, to which sleeves of point de Venise in ecru and a cravet of the same lend an air of distinction. The corsage of chiffon is bloused in the deep featherboned girdle of messaline, a strapped cape effect over the shoulders giving width to the design. The upper sleeve of lace is in bell design, flaring wildly at the elbow over the wrinkled sleeve of satin. The skirt is fashioned of the chiffon, shirred to the waistband, and alternate bands of messaline and chiffon bouillonnes finishing the design. The flounce of messaline is faced with a turquoise velvet, to afford a weight and stability at the foot.

In the 1830 Mode.

The extremely long shoulder line is emphasized in this 1830 design by means of the lace flouncing which is applied to the epaulette, a second piece arranged to simulate a bolero. The corsage is loose, the sleeve showing the elbow puff and deep cuff of lace. The skirt is shirred over cords around the hips, the same cording appearing again on the deep flounce which is applied beneath a vandyked applique of lace entre deux.

For a Garden Party.

This elaborate design in Mechlin lace and silk mull, to which a little narrow valenciennes gives relief, is executed entirely by hand. The blouse of mull is covered with the lace bolero, and the loose sleeve is a bell pattern, covered with pilsee ruffles of mull, edged with valenciennes. The skirt is built in tiers or sections, a lace yoke appearing at the hip, followed by vertical tucked mull, this in turn followed by a band of shirred horizontal tucks, and the whole finished with a deep volant, with vertical tucks, to afford fullness, and two deep tucks above the hem. Panels of lace are posed over the tucking of the volant with good effect. The model is one which lends itself well to reproduction in the oscillating stitch of the sewing machine, and is equally effective in less expensive materials.

In Persian Printed Organdie.

This quaintly simple design is developed in a printed organdie showing tints of lavender, violet and pale yellow. Fashioned over a slip of pale yellow pres de soie, which has all the crl or rustle of silk, the blouse has the 1830 shoulder defined in the fichuilke arrangement of ruche and ruffle, dropping into a featherboned girdle of organdie. The skirt is shirred to the band, and a lower flounce is simulated in the vandyked applique of ruffles; these in laces of pale yellow and green tinted to suit the Persian shades in the organdie. The gown is one of those exhibited at the International Society of Dressmakers' Spring Salon de Style.

"The Grafters," the new book by Francis Lynde, comes at a time when general conditions have prepared the people for the novel of business and politics. It is a story of love as well as politics and business, and the author of "The Master of Appleby," has added much to his reputation as an interesting story-teller by this unusually excellent novel. It is said of Mr. Lynde that he does not claim to be a born writer, but after reading "The Grafters" and comparing with the work of some other well known authors, the conclusion must be reached that it would be well for some of the "born writers" to follow the course of study of men and things and books that has made Mr. Lynde one of the best of modern novelists. Mr. Lynde begun life as a railroad man, and in "The Grafters" he has worked his practical experience in the railroad shops and offices. It is said he knows more about a locomotive than Mr. Kipling—which is saying a good deal—and that he knows more about politics than a Tammany judge—which is saying even more. In "The Grafters" are found railroads, newspapers, politics, corporations, bosses, gangs and all the bustling, contending forces that are many things that may properly be regarded as improbabilities, but the story is so interesting and filled with swift, spirited action that the improbable is lost sight of by the reader. It depicts a man stealing a railroad and a woman controlling the politics of a state. The night run of Engineer Callahan, with the special train and the gang of grafters, is one of the most exciting incidents in modern fiction. Published by the Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis.

"Anna, the Adventuress," by E. Phillips Oppenheim, published by Little, Brown & Co., Boston, is a thrilling story. According to the plot these two sisters of good family left alone in the world and not blessed with independent incomes. One of them is artistic and tries painting. She is a girl of splendid character and most charming personality. Her sister, on the contrary, finds pleasure in living a wild and indiscreet life, only whispers of which reach the ears of her sister, who, however, is conscious that something is very wrong about the other's point of view. As the story progresses the unwise sister gets a chance to marry an eminently respectable Englishman, but only because he believes she is the artist whose name is above reproach. To save her sister from the consequences of her mad actions the real artist agrees to carry out the idea, having no thought at the time that the whole of her sister's indiscretions are to be loaded onto her shoulders before she is much older. This happens because they look so much alike their best friends do not seem to be able to tell them apart—also because one is named Anna, and the other Anabel. Nothing could be more thrilling than the positions the real Anna is continually finding herself in after her sister's mantle has fallen upon her. The plot thickens with every chapter until the unfortunate scapegoat for another's sins is in a fair way to go under. However, things adjust themselves in the end but not before the most baffling complications have arisen. Those who like stories that thrill should not miss reading this novel.

A philosophical work of great importance is about to appear simultaneously from the press of the Baker & Taylor Co., New York and of Williams & Norgate, of London. Its title is "The Evolution of Knowledge," by Raymond St. James Perrin. In 1885 Mr. Perrin published "The Religion of Philosophy," in order to prove that the ultimate reality is motion rather than "The Persistence of Force," as postulated by Herbert Spencer. The present work is a revision of the former, the original being reduced to about one-half its size. Owing to the vast difficulties of the subject, the condensation has occupied some fourteen years, for the author has proved his thesis by comparing it with the results of all the different schools of thought from Ancient Greece to the present day, including an exhaustive analysis of the entire systems of Herbert Spencer and George Henry Lewes. It will be found that "The Evolution of Knowledge" will be of the greatest value, not only in the class-room, and as a book of reference, but as a popular treatise on philosophy, for it is written in a direct and simple style and is free from those ambiguities which have usually been inseparable from philosophical writings.

The publishers of "Ann Arbor Tales," George W. Jacobs & Co., of Philadelphia, hardly realized before the preliminary advertising of the book had been made how numerous and how widely distributed are the men and women who were at one time students in the University of Michigan, about undergraduate life in which Mr. Harriman has written in the book mentioned. Not long since the publishers received from a one-time student an order for the book bearing the postmark of Dawson City. Indeed, it is quite safe to say that no recent book of college stories will be read in as many widely separated localities as this volume of "Ann Arbor Tales." Former students of the university may be found in every quarter of the globe. There are many in Japan, half a dozen in India, an equal number in China, several in Sydney, Australia, five in Tasmania, two working on the great dam of the Nile in Egypt, and a proportionate number in all the mining camps of the West. It is these former students, moreover, who should find a particular interest in Mr. Harriman's book of stories, as all the tales are founded on facts in undergraduate history between 1875 and the present time.

The author's first book, "Barbizon Days," has gone into three editions.

Mrs. Hugh Fraser, who has lived so long in the East that it is as familiar to her as her own land, is about to issue, through Dodd, Mead & Co., "The Stolen Emperor," a remarkable story of Japan in the thirteen century. The accounts in it of court and military life are delightful, and the condition of the country is admirably described after the manner of the old chronicles of the times. In this curious story so many events are crowded into 300 pages that the reader is in a daze before the end. Castles are attacked, an infant emperor is murdered, a child is abducted, warriors are stabbed, and breathless escapes from castles and fortresses are recorded, and yet we are told life at that time in old Japan was just as Mrs. Fraser states it to have been—neither more cruel nor more kind. Mrs. Fraser has many books on Eastern subjects to her credit.

No question is of more vital importance to us as Americans than that of how to make good citizens of the foreigners who are flocking to our shores. Joseph R. Buchanan's clear, concise style is well adapted to the subject of his book, "The Story of a Labor Agitator," which the Outlook company publish. In telling his personal experiences in the stirring labor field, he passes rapidly from one event to another, bringing in all the human incidents which give the book its real interest. Mr. Buchanan has a true love for the workingman, and in putting forth facts in a most convincing light, makes a strong plea for him. The labor movements of which Mr. Buchanan tells appeal because they are clean.

George B. Burgin, author of "The Shutters of Silence," has been busy of late contradicting the report that he is dead. A certain English literary annual, in a discussion of "The Shutters of Silence," spoke of Mr. Burgin as one "whose premature death has robbed the public of a promising author." Mr. Burgin published an immediate reply to the effect that the report had been "grossly exaggerated," but nevertheless his house has been besieged by interviewers, the papers and magazines have taken up the matter either in jest or earnest, the "widow" hands him touching letters of condolence across the breakfast table—one earnest sympathizer inclosed his "little account"—and Mr. Burgin's many friends have found in the situation a mine of material for facetious letters and amusement in general. The mistake arose from a confusion of Mr. Burgin with the late George Douglas Brown, author of "The House With Green Shutters."

The announcement that McClure-Phillips are to bring out a new volume by Charles Wagner will be welcome news to the thousands of American men and women who have profited so much by the author's previous books. "The Simple Life" and "The Better Way." The new book will bear the title "By the Fireside." It is a volume of wise and kindly advice to family gathered at the hearth, in which are expressed the ideal relations between all the members of the home, parents and children, brothers and sisters, husbands and wives, grandfathers and grandchildren. Through it all runs as an undercurrent a plea for the return to simpler relations in the household to take the place of the complex ones that modern civilization is thrusting upon us.

Will Carleton, the author of Songs of Two Centuries," has recently rediscovered one of the most famous hymn-writers in the world, the celebrated blind poet, Fanny Crosby, author of "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," "Pass Me Not, O Gentle Saviour," and hundreds other hymns. Mrs. Crosby, despite her valuable work in the Christian cause, has now in her old age been very much reduced in income. Mr. Carleton, during the past few months, has held no less than thirty "Fanny Crosby Meetings," in New York and its vicinity, in which her own hymns constituted the whole or greater part of the music. Upon these occasions Mr. Carleton made remarks upon Miss Crosby's life, as "Girl and Woman," upon which he was well qualified to speak, having known her for several years. The work has been a labor of love, done mostly on the Sabbath evenings, and has resulted in an increased interest in the book "Fanny Crosby's Life Story," which is published by a Brooklyn publishing company and is being sold for the aged lady's benefit.

Mrs. Sara Andrew Shafer's recent story of child life in the Middle West, "The Day Before Yesterday," has been compared to nearly all the classics of child life and village life, from "Cranford" to "The Golden Age." Mrs. Shafer writes to her publishers to express her gratitude to the reviewer for the pleasure she had experienced in reading Stevenson's beautiful story, of which she had never before heard. The translator of "Religions of Authority" (McClure-Phillips), Auguste Sabatier's posthumous work, which has made such an impression on the religious thinkers of today, was Mrs. Louise Seymour Houghton. Mrs. Houghton was requested to do this work by Mr. Sabatier before his death. She was in Paris in 1898 and met Mr. Sabatier who expressed a high appreciation of a review she had written on one of his works and made her promise that she would do the translation of any of his books which thereafter should apear in English. She would have translated his other book, "Outlines of the Philosophy of Religion," had it not been published in England first. Mrs. Houghton has translated a great many French theological works. Among them, the "St. Francis of Assisi," by Paul Sabatier. She has for many years been associate editor of the Christian Work and the Evangelist.

It bears every evidence of being a record of spicy facts, but the author insists that it is all fiction.

"The Balads of Bourbonnais," by Walace Bruce Amsbary, with pictures by Will Vawter, has just been publishtd by the Bobbs-Merrill company. The poems deal with a settlement almost unknown to the country at large. In 1835 certain venturesome French traders from Lower Canada came into the fertile valley of the Kankakee, in Illinois. They brought land of the red men for a mere song and induced a number of their countrymen to settle with them. Today the colony numbers about 7000. Bourbonnais is the typical town settlement, with not a single resident of English descent. The ballads were written by Mr. Amsbary in the hope of preserving the dialect of the Illinois French-Canadian. In adition to the quaintness of the dialect, the volume has considerable humor of a whimsical sort.

One of the most entertaining and delightful travel books describing the American colonies on the eve of the Revolution is the Rev. Andrew Burnaby's "Travels Through the Middle Settlements." Burnaby was a native of Lancashire, an cleve of Westminster school and a graduate of Queen's college, Cambridge. He journeyed to Virginia in 1759 and during the following years visited all the colonies. He published the record of his travels 1775 and it at once passed into a second edition. In 1798, after he had become archdeacon of Leicester and vicar of Greenwich, he issued a third and revised edition. Though the book gives evidence that it is the work of an acute and kindly observer, it has never since been reprinted, and has therefore been included by the A. Wessels Company in its projected series of rare and important Americana. It will be issued in May with an introduction and explanatory notes by Rufus Rockwell Wilson, thus placing within the easy reach of students a work that is indispensable to a full and accurate understanding of the conditions that prevailed in the later colonial period.

In his introduction to "The Journey of Coronado," which is to be published immediately in A. S. Barnes & Co.'s Trail Makers' Series, George Parker Winship gives a picture of the first exploration of the West. He says: "Seventy-five years before the English succeeded in establishing themselves on the northeastern coast of North America a band of Spaniards, starting from what was already a populous and flourishing colony at the City of Mexico, penetrated the opposite extreme of the continent and explored thoroughly a region as extensive as the coast line of the United States from Maine to Georgia. Coronado has added to the world as known to Europeans an extent of country bounded on the west by the Colorado river from its mouth to the Grand Canon, on the east by the boundless prairies, and stretching northward to the upper waters of the Rio Grande and the southern boundary of Nebraska."

Miss Margaret Horton Potter's new novel is described as a colorful picture of Indian life during the early thirteenth century, while the Mohammedan invaders were gradually conquering more and more of that country and subduing the Hindoos and Brahmins. But the coming of the Arabs and the whole civilization of that age, real as it is, is merely the background of an absorbing and passionate love story. "The Flame Gatherers" relates the love of a captive prince of the Asra and the beautiful queen Ahalya.

Country Life in America for May, with a thrilling salmon-fishing cover in colors, is one of the largest and most beautiful magazines of the season. Devoted to such vacation topics as camping, canoeing, fishing, mountain-climbing, woodcraft and nature study, with timely articles on home-building, chicken-raising and a hundred other subjects as well, touches upon all sides of work and pleasure under the open sky. "The Delightful Art of Canoeing" is a practical article with many illustrations of quiet waters and swift rapids. Ernest Thompson Seton in "Stories of the Tree Trunks" offers some of the most delightful of his real nature observations. John Burroughs contributes the article on "The True Test of Nature Literature." "The Evolution of a Mountain Home" is the true story of an abandoned farm and a trout stream in the Catskills. Other important articles are on "A Mountain Climbing Vacation" in the Rockies, "Emerson's Country Home," "Orpington Chickens—the Most-Talked-of Breed of Poultry," "Asparagus Growing for Profit," "An Inexpensive Vacation Club in the Country," "Going Odds and Ends," by W. The story runs that some years ago, when Charles Dudley Warner returned from a visit to Chicago, he was asked about the status of that city's culture, and he is said to have replied that when Chicago once tackled culture it would make culture hum. The same may be said of the West in regard to literature—the West has tackled literature and it is making literature hum. The magazines have had many contributions from Western writers, but it has remained for the Century to announce what it calls a "Western number," in which nearly all the contributors live in the West. The June Century is the issue, and the writers include Ray Stannard Baker, of Ann Arbor; the Indian writer, John M. Oskison, of Indian Territory; Miriam Michelson, of San Francisco, (who here prints the first of her "Madigan stories";) Hamlin Parker Butler, of Iowa; Octave Thanet, of Iowa; William Allen White, of Kansas; David R. Francis, president of the St. Louis exposition; Jack London, of San Francisco; O. Henry, of Texas; Joaquin Miller, of California, and a score of others—with a few writers from the East, like ex-President Cleveland, Secretary Hay and Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, thrown in for good measure. If any person has the idea that editors of the big Eastern magazines get into a rut and seek for contributors only in their immediate surroundings, this June Century ought to convince them of their error. Editors are on the lookout for everything that is good, no matter whence or from whom it comes. At least a dozen of the nearly fifty contributors to the June Century are unknown writers.

In no war of the past was the camera used so freely and extensively as it has been during the present conflict in eastern Asia. Striking evidences of the enterprise of the war camerists may be found in the current number of Leslie's Weekly, whose wide-awake special photographers are with the armies on both sides. Three full pages of the current issue of the Weekly are given up to pictures of stirring scenes and incidents in the great struggle, and in addition a spirited drawing representing the undaunted spirit of Japan adorns the cover. Included in the other artistic features are attractive depictions of the brilliant opening of the world's greatest exposition at St. Louis; pictures of the recently burned imperial palace at Seoul, Korea, with descriptive article by one of the special correspondents of Leslie's Weekly in the far East, Herbert G. Ponting; illustrations showing the activity in athletics at Cornell university; a fine full page likeness of Judge Alton B. Parker, the probable Democratic nominee for president.

The opportunities of life engross the minds of thinking people perhaps more than anything else. Uncle David, the Field and Stream, "filosofer," says he notices that "the best opportunities is them that is Hand-made," a very timely hint to the man who is waiting for an opportunity to indulge himself in a holiday out-of-doors. However, there are other writers who know the wisdom of the silent out-of-doors, and the humorous old sage of San Marcus county, Texas, has no monopoly on the "filosofy" contained between the covers of the May number of Field and Stream. There are the usual number of articles of interest to sportsmen, James A. Cruikshank's article on the successful propagation of small-mouth black bass, and the editor's hints to anglers being of especial value. Pictorially the May Field and Stream is the most attractive number that has appeared, the handsome cover design by Frank Tenney Johnson breathing the full, wild, life of the deep woods and waters.

The May World's Work presents a variety of suggestive articles of contemporaneous interest. The recent Ware service pension orderg ives special interest to "Our Enormous Pension Roll" by Robert Lincoln O'Brien, which is an illustrated statement of startling facts and figures. In "From Coast to Coast in an Automobile" M. C. Krarup, with the aid of the best automobile pictures ever printed, tells the thrilling story of the fastest motor car trip across the continent. Business events fresh in the public mind give "Making Cotton Pay," which is richly illustrated by Ulrich B. Phillips and "Cotton Again King," a fresh value. "The Americanization of Porto Rico" is explained by John Ball Osborne, with many illustrations. "Can Labor Unions Be Destroyed?" by William English Walling shows the significant growth of the Employers' Association movement. In "Professional Training for Business" H. S. Person tells of an interesting educational step, and "A Flower Garden for Every Child" by J. M. Bowles tells how a whole city is being beautified. Of timely interest is William Thorp's article "Our Problem in Santo Domingo." In "The Day's Work of the Mayor of New York" Franklin Matthews writes of the official whose power is second only to that of the president.

THE GOSSIP OF GOTHAM

Groom-To-Be Tried To Be Fashionable—Fellows Took Advantage of His Haziness and Steered Him, After Stag Affair, To Intended's Home.

New York, May 14.—The appearance and manner of the bridegroom of one of this week's weddings caused much comment. Those in the know chuckled. Others wondered much. He was pale, but not interesting in the usual sense of the latter word when linked with the other, seeming not soulfully elevated or distraught, but dopey. And as for his legs, they wobbled suggestively of locomotor ataxia, or did until the bride got hold of him, and then she steadied him in their course down the aisle. For the remainder of the time he was in view during and prior to the ceremony he was in charge of relatives, who realized fully his especial need of care. So the ceremony went off without serious hitch, but it was a narrow squeak. Had bride and groom not been related—had not the purpose of their union been primarily the uniting of two already sizeable fortunes, and had not the nuptials been led up to and been carried out more according to the standards of cold business than of warm sentiment—it might have had another outcome.

SOMETHING HAD TO BE DONE.

The wedding had been announced in midwinter. The principals were well on in the thirties, the bride having at least thre years the worse of it. They were second cousins, or first cousins, according as you describe the faint relationship. No younger folk were in either branch, consequently both branches were threatened with extinction. Something must be done, and the older folk took matters in hand. The outcome was a church wedding of unostentatious character, to which relatives and close friends only were invited. So the singular behavior of the groom is still pretty much all in the family, and some of them don't understand the real cause of it now. His fault was that he tried to be fashionable—sought to follow, or to permit his friends to lead him into, the growing practice with men about to be married of giving to his young men acquaintances a farewell supper.

This came off two nights before the day of the wedding, but it had been agreed upon a month before. Let it be known, too, that the guests were single men, and especially that some of them were still very young. It was the youth and ambitiousness of two of these that caused the beginning of the trouble. They sought and obtained permission to assist in preparing the supper and entertainment that went with it. Indeed, had it not been for them there would not have been an essentially "stag" affair, anyhow. Or so the bridegroom's defenders put it.

EXPECTED FEW STUNTS.

These two young fellows had so much of time on their hands that they were, according to the old copy book motto, likely to get into mischief; but they evinced a willingness to take the preparations off the groom's hands, and by urging that it was the usual thing, secured some degree of assent to a warm time.

The invitations were for a supper, and the acceptors knew that there were to be stunts. And not a few of the blase youths who appeared at the affair had attended lively farewells, but the doings made them first sit up and then gasp. There were a half a dozen women present, professional entertainers, to classify them kindly, and their performances were of a startlingly brazen character. Let it go at that. When a performance depends almost exclusively for its interest on lack of costume for the performer, description loses value. That the display of the historical Seeley dinner wouldn't count as a marker to the doings of the hired dames wouldn't have staggered the young sinners, but the behavior of the groom to be did surprise and shock some of those present.

THE SESSION EXTENDED.

Consequently before the damsels withdrew from the company, it had thinned out to some of the youngest and veuliest of the lot. Thus composed, its session was extended, though there was further thinning, this time through loss of some of the young women. Those dear girls felt that they had lost favor, and went home. That the cause of their giving displeasure was their insisting on resuming civilized attire, or part of it, and that other of these entertainers remained in favor, will give hint of the character of the orgie. And in the fore front of it was the groom.

He was no stranger to liquor, but little given to it, and the night's wince, which the two youths had arranged for in heady sucession, were several shades too many for his judgment. Not only was there no one of sufficiently stable judgment to restrain him, but one of the guests had lost his head as singularly, but in another way. This other wanderer from reason was primed to scheming. He figured out in his highly elated condition that nothing would be so exquisitely funny, nor would reflect so much credit on the farewell and its partakers, as to compromise the giver of the frolic with the intended bride. So this chap, though long past the stage when he should have got away from such roisterers, competed with the tipsy groom in leading the drinking and setting dates for the remaining women.

CONSPIRACY FELL THROUGH.

It was not until the schemer felt that it was time to do or slip under the table he invited one of the charmers to join him in the conspiracy. It would be, he urged, a devilish sly joke if she'd call, with the groom, upon the bride—as she was! Let it be said for the about shameless woman that she declined positively to be a party to any such outrage. Nor would she assent even when the original awful proposal was modified enough to admit of her making the call in disarrayed attire. No, she announced in most positive fashion, when she went out of the room, she'd be dressed like the perfect lady she was. Then she began to cry. Some touch of remorse or recollection of bygone decency, perhaps; maybe only the maudlin stage of intoxication; whatever it was, it served to bring about the end of the seance after another half hour of good-by toasts that were well-nigh as dreadful as the rest of the blowout. The groom drank the first one standing, but throughout the remainder rested with his arms on the table and his head on them.

PILOTED TO INTENDED'S HOME.

The schemer took the groom away. Well gone himself, he was about as able as any of the party, and none denied him the right to conduct the groom home. The others had fairly large orders in seeing to themselves. But the schemer still was bent on mischief, and he ordered his carriage driven, not to the home of the groom, but to that of the latter's intended. There he dismissed the driver and almost dragged the groom up the brownstone steps and inside the vestibule door. His victim had no sense of his whereabouts; probably didn't realize that he had left the cab. By the time the other had satisfied himself that his repeated ringings were going to fetch some one to the door the groom was in a heap at his feet. Then the mischief-maker vamoosed, nor has he been seen since, though he is credited by friends with suffering in the Southern resort to which he fled untold remorse for his drunken trick.

The servants who responded weren't quite equal to undertaking care of the situation, and the master of the house was roused.

It was just as well, for after the young man had been caried to his home his case proved more desperate than it looked. Thirty hours of doctoring and nursing served only to make him barely presentable, and even then if he hadn't had a somewhat forceful cousin for a bride, his wedding might have been dished.

TAKEN IN TOW BY A WOMAN.

The sight in upper Broadway of two policemen lugging away to the station house a man and a woman in an advanced stage of intoxication was enough to attract a crowd of idlers, mostly children, but very few of the crowd knew what led up to the arrest. In the beginning there was only a drunken man, a chap who would, in his senses, have made an excellent appearance, but now was in very bad shape. The exhilaration had all oozed out of his jag, and it was just all he could do to keep his feet and maintain progress. His head and body wobbled with each step, he seemed at every other step about to collapse, and through the stupidly drunken look in his face could be seen an expression that showed that his progress cost him vast effort. Altogether he was a sight to make the sympathetic hope his haven was not far off, and to lead the curious to wonder where such a helpless object could have come from.

Presently he staggered badly in approaching the curb of a street crossing and seized the corner's lamp-post. Here, though leaning half his height against the post, he could stand neither steady nor straight, but wobbled with eyes half shut as if struggling against a desire to nap right there.

THOUGHT HIM A VICTIM.

Only a few urchins paid attention to the inebriate for a minute or so, when a new factor was added to the show. This was a woman almost as full as the man, but in an earlier stage of intoxication. She had some liveliness in hers, and, as it proved, was in the actively affectionate stage. She surveyed the sleepy struggler for a moment, and then counseled, with every indication of serious interest:

"Keep yer head up, Sport, er ye'll spill it."

The man regarded this as an attempt to guy him and responded by deserting his lamppost and starting on. But it was a big undertaking and the woman volunteered assistance. He should come with her, she'd take care of him, and with her arm about him she strove to have him retrace his steps. Something, perhaps aversion to such help, or possibly a dim idea of the direction of home, led him to object stubbornly. They had a considerable inning of wrestling before a rapidly growing audience, the man urging her to g'way, the woman bestowing endearing terms on him and seeming seriously interested in his welfare.

HER ATTEMPTED "GOOD WORK."

She was greatly surprised that the policeman who first came up would not assist her in her good work; also was disturbed that her unwilling charge took advantage of his release from her importunities to move off. She cried after him that he should not desert her, but he would have done so except that unfortunately he fell, and finding rising difficult remained to slumber until another policeman roused him roughly and made him "walk turkey" until able to keep his feet under him.

Progress to the station house was rapid, the woman protesting that she be allowed to take her spouse home, her victim assuring the minion who held him that he'd have been all right if it hadn't been for that dratted woman. Later the woman seemed almost heartbroken when she realized that, though both in quod, she and the man were to be parted. Even the Desk Sergeant was moved to ask of the man what the woman was to him, and when informed by a bystander just what the relationship was he sent the man downstairs and had the susceptible dame taken to another station house, where she could be given into the hands of a police matron.

YOUNG SCAPEGRACE'S DEEDS.

A young blood, who, within two years, went through the bankruptcy court as a penniless debtor, is seeking to recover jewelry worth hundreds dollars from a man who held it while the other was getting his debts wiped out. These amounted to $180,000, not so bad for a chap of 25, who has never risked a cent in business or other investment. So much of them were just, in the opinion of the young man's relatives, were paid in full independently of the court, it is said. The remainder might have been liquidated without leaving the young scapegrace poor, but they were gaining debts and accommodation loans incurred or given while the youth was more or less tipsy, and it was to be rid of these notes of hand that recourse was had to bankruptcy proceedings. Now that he is debt clear the young man has moved against one of the swindling crew who trimmed him so thoroughly a few years ago. A watch, a chain with a very rare date of British sovereign for a charm, modest cluster scarfpin and less diamonds in cuff links are what he seeks to recover, and his lawyer, while convinced that the swindler has the lot intact, or can lay his hands on them readily, finds it difficult to secure them.

REFUSES TO LET GO.

Your worthy who lives by his wits of well-to-do youngsters isn't quick to let go of what looks like a good thing, and it is plain that especial value is attached by their owner to some items of this collection. Their holder uses as leverage the fact that the jewelry has been in his possession since before the court proceedings, in which they were not mentioned as one of the creditor's assets.

But the restoration of the articles to their rightful owner is only a business of giving up roundly. What is more interesting is the manner in which he was separated from them. He was putting in a night with two of the blackguards who had trimmed him to the point where he shied at card and ordinary games, and had assured each that he really could not accommodate them with further loans.

THE SWINDLERS' SCHEME.

The swindlers were acting the good fellow not keenly on the lookout for coin, and had in good degree regained so much of their victim's confidence as they had lost. They were supping in a well-known Sixth avenue eating place, and had reached the stage of cigarettes and cordials. Suddenly one of the sharpers bethought him of a remedy for indigestion that his physician had insisted on his taking regularly. Would his friends excuse him? They would, and he drew forth a bottle of large tablets and gravely dissolved one in water while telling of their virtues. While listening the second scoundrel had shaken another tablet from the bottle, and with a pencil had sketched on it roughly a woman's head. Turning it over he as quickly drew on its other side an eagle. Then he set it spinning on the table, exclaiming as he watched it, "Heads or tails?"

Before the tablet dropped he added: "Here's a lark. Let's match 'em; there just enough."

Since the plant was carefully prepared it wasn't at all singular that the bottle held just a tablet for each of the trio. The scheme worked, for at the end of two hours' matching the victim had lost all his cash, had given his note for a round sum, and had excitedly staked his jewelry. And now, after some two years of wishing he hadn't, he's seeking to get even.

BLISS FOR THE CHAIRMANSHIP

And Blythe Vice Chairman of Republican National Committee.

Washington, May 14.—For chairman of the Republican national committee, Cornelius N. Bliss, of New York; for vice chairman, J. W. Blythe, of Iowa. This is the slate which President Roosevelt has made up, and while it may be broken he trusts it will go through the campaign intact.

Last week a semi-official announcement was made at the White House that Mr. Bliss, who is now treasurer of the national committee, had not been selected to succeed the late Senator Hanna as chairman. That was true for the reason that the selection actually had not been made.

But the president, it was ascertained yesterday afternoon, has made up his mind that the former secretary of the interior shall have the place if he will take it. He furthermore would like to have Mr. Blythe act as vice chairman, and when Secretary of the Treasury Shaw goes to Iowa tomorrow he will present the matter to that gentleman.

The president's idea is to have Mr. Bliss take charge of the New York headquarters during the campaign and Mr. Blythe direct affairs at the Chicago headquarters. One reason, or perhaps the chief one, that Mr. Roosevelt wishes Secretary Bliss to become chairman of the committee is that he is in close touch with the great financial interests of New York and would be able to raise a good-sized campaign fund. Money, and a great deal of it, will be needed next fall, and the president realizes that it behooves the party managers to be well supplied with the sinews of war.

Mr. Blythe enjoys the reputation of being one of the most astute political organizers and managers of men in the Middle West. He is a railroad attorney of pronounced ability and has always taken keen interest in the politics of Iowa, although he has never been a candidate for any public office. But a conception of how he stands in the public favor may be formed when it is said that when Secretary Shaw was governor of the state he offered to appoint Mr. Blythe to the United States senate to succeed the late Senator Gear. Mr. Blythe declined to consider the matter, whereupon the governor appointed Representative Jonathan P. Dolliver to the vacancy. This was in August, 1900.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Seasonable Weather Restores Normal Conditions In Many Branches.

New York, May 14.—R. G. Dun's Weekly Review of Trade says:

Seasonable weather has restored normal conditions in many branches of retail trade, but the improvement has not yet extended to wholesale, jobbing or manufacturing departments, except in special lines. It is difficult to find evidences of increased activity in any of the leading industries, and there is more idle machinery. Traffic conditions are little changed, railroad earnings in the first week falling 7.5 per cent behind last year, and the late opening of lake navigation was further retarded by a strike. While many features of the business situation make poor comparisons with last year, it is worthy of note that few presidential years have made a better exhibit.

In the leading manufacturing industries scarcely any decline in prices occurred during the past week, but the average has fallen considerably from the best position of last year, and consumers are confident that further delay will result in still more attractive terms. This impression is largely due to recent disagreements among ore producers, yet it is stated on very high authority that provision has already been made for most of the year's requirements. In spite of a large increase thus far this year in active capacity, furnace stocks have decreased from 597,904 tons on Jan. 1 to 444,059 on May 1. Yet those figures do not inclued the holdings of the steel companies, which reported the largest share of the increased output.

Western hide markets are firm and fairly active, recent gains being fully maintained and in many cases holders insist on further advances. Receipts of foreign dry hides have increased without weakening the tone or reducing demand.

Commercial failures this week in the United States are 236, against 207 last week, 202 the preceding week and 196 the corresponding week a year ago.

Failures in Canada number twenty-three, against twenty-seven last week, sixteen the preceding week and 180 a year ago.

CARRIERS' SIDE

President of Association Makes Statement Concerning Controversy.

Reviews Negotiations With the Masters and Pilots' Association.

Cleveland, May 14.—The following statement in part, signed by William Livingstone, president of the Lake Carriers' association, was given out yesterday, before Mr. Livingstone's departure for Detroit:

"The executive committee of the Lake Carriers' association adjourned today and the out-of-town members went home after having been in session in Cleveland about four weeks, during which time they have met six labor organizations and have completed satisfactory contracts with five. The sixth one of these unions, the Masters' and Pilots' association after several sessions is the only one that has not been willing to recognize the existing business conditions, but has insisted upon a material advance in wages over last years, with more stringent conditions. We spent several days in session with them and last Monday, the 9th, we met their advisory board and agreed with them on all the conditions except the wage scale. We went over this particular point at great length and explained to their committee that the business conditions did not warrant any increase in wages, that the operating cost of boats had been advancing every year until today the vessel owner was confronted with the highest operating expenses on record, with a very dull season ahead and a corresponding reduction in gross earnings and that we could not possibly entertain any proposition that would further increase our already heavy operating expenses and we were even warranted in asking for a reduction instead of granting an increase. They seemed to be unwilling to recognize the necessity of reducing and as a compromise we agreed on asking all members of the association this year to pay last year's Lake Carriers' wages. The advisory board of the Masters' and Pilots' association unanimously agreed that this was fair and that they would go back to their different lodges or harbors and use every effort to have it acepted.

"Inasmuch as the advisory council of the Masters' and Pilots' association have repeatedly stated that they had full authority to act except on wages and on this point had agreed and concluded that they ought to re-submit that question to the various lodges and had positively agreed that they would not only recommend, but would urge its adoption by their members, the Lake Carriers' executive committee awaited confidently favorable action upon which a contract could be drawn up and executed.

"So positively was this indicated by the advisory council that the manager of the largest lake fleet announced his appointments of masters and called them for a conference in Cleveland this morning in the belief that the whole matter had practically been adjusted. To his intense surprise, after he had made the call, he was notified by Capt. Howell, the district captain and lake manager of the Masters' and Pilots' association, that he (Capt. Howell) had countermanded the invitation of the manager to his captains and notified the manager that in consequence none of his captains would appear at the proposed conference.

"The manager at once asked Howell just what the position of the Masters' and Pilots' association was, now that the referendum vote had been rejected, on the compromise proposition of the Lake Carriers' association. Howell replied that all-negotiations that had been had between the Masters and Pilots and Lake Carriers' association, were declared off and they would not sail any boat except upon the stringent conditions and the schedule which they originally presented with full season's pay to masters at an advance of almost 14 per cent to masters on the great vessels and a larger increase on smaller; also that the mates' wages would be increased so as to give them a full season, regardless of when they report for duty.

"The Lake Carriers can only lament a condition by which an average crew of twenty-three men by virtue of their government licenses, are tying up the entire busines of the lakes, and this including the men entrusted as the personal representatives of the owners, vested by law with high and responsible powers, action which is stopping wages to the amount of many thousands of dollars each day to the vessel crews and said to deprive not less than 100,000 men of employment in the various branches connected with the traffic.

"The Lake Carriers' executive committee feel that they have sought in good faith to avoid this condition by every consistent and reasonable endeavor.

"WILLIAM LIVINGSTONE,
"President."

CAPT. TREZONA ARRESTED

On a Charge of Slandering Mayor Vail.

Ely, Minn., May 14.—Capt. Charles Trezona, superintendent of the Chandler, Pioneer and Minnesota mines, was arrested here yesterday at the instance of Mayor Vail, who charges him with slander. The captain was released on his own recognizance to appear before Judge Obre next Thursday morning for trial.

The specific offense alleged by Mayor Vail is that the captain, when compelled to flee from the irate miners, during the recent strike at Ely, came to Duluth and reported to the officials of the United States Steel corporation that Vail denied him proper protection, saying, among other things, that had he been allowed five men he would not have been compelled to flee from the city.

Mayor Vail, in an interview, said that he gave the captain all the protection necessary, and as a matter of fact there were from twenty-five to thirty men who stood ready to defend him against any possible harm from the strikers. "When Capt. Trezona made that statement about me it was the same as calling me an anarchist," said Mr. Vail, "and I am no anarchist and want the people to know it. In bringing this action I am not seeking damages or anything of the kind. I simply want the court to decide which of us is telling the truth."

WILL BE FIRST BENEFICIARY OF THE CARNEGIE HERO FUND

CAPT. WILLIAM CLARK.

Of hook and ladder company No. 2, New York fire department, as a reward for his brave and courageous acts in rescuing many lives, will head the list of heroes to receive the benefits of the Carnegie fund. His last rescue, which brought him prominently to the attention of the board having charge of the Carnegie fund, was that of Robert Hyndman, aged 35 years, from the fifth story of the premises located at 103 Park avenue, New York, occupied by the Manhattan eye and ear hospital, on the morning of April 24, this year. Hyndman, a violently insane patient, had climbed to the roof of the burning building, and police and attendants were unable to get him. With pitcher in hand, the demented man threatened the life of his pursuers, but the brave fireman stole up behind him and caught the insane man in his embrace. A fierce struggle ensued, during which time the plucky fireman had his right arm and shoulder badly wrenched. Finally the insane man was overpowered and bound fast with bed sheets, and taken to Bellevue hospital.

Theatrical

THE COMING WEEK AT THE THEATERS

Otis Skinner In "The Harvesters" on Tuesday and Wednesday and Al. G. Field's Minstrels on Friday and Saturday at the Lyceum—"Why Girls Leave Home" and Kennedy Stock Co. In "Faust" at the Metropolitan.

Otis Skinner will present here at the Lyceum Tuesday and Wednesday, the first American adaptation of Jean Richepin's famous French play, "Le Chemineau." The American play has been entitled "The Harvester" and Mr. Skinner regards it as perhaps the most important work he has thus far undertaken in his career.

He acquired exclusive rights to the French play about four months ago, since which time, though en tour with Ada Rehan, he has devoted his every energy to the important preliminary details of the cast, scenery, costumes and the thousand and one matters of detail involved in "making a theatrical production." Since this is the first Richepin play to receive production in America it is a matter for congratulation that Mr. Skinner is to give Milwaukee opportunity for first judgment.

"The Harvester" is a dramatic idyll of life and love among the humbler types of the soil, these types that Millet has glorified in his "Angelus." Though pastoral in character the play is really a prose poem, as far removed as possible from what theater-goers usually characterize as a "rural" play. "The Harvester" follows the structure of the original work closely and every care has been taken to preserve the lyric quality of the gypsy Frenchman's exquisite fantasy of the harvest fields. The locale, however, has been changed from a Normandy village of today to the valley of the upper Saguenay, French Canada, in the year 1859.

The pith of the romance lies in the the adventure of a young girl who leaves home despite her parents' wishes and falls into the clutches of a tempter, who attempts to lead her on the wrong path by inducing her to take a drink in a cafe, where a number of low characters aid him in his purpose.

A series of thrilling scenes are said to follow and the acme of melodramatic power said to be attained. Plenty of bright comedy lines deftly woven throughout the story relive the more intense scenes and the two combine to make what is described as a play really worth while.

The play was produced in St. Paul at the Grand last week and the Dispatch said of it:

"As a matter of fact, the story told in the drama is not in explanation of why girls leave home, for that question is more befuddled at the end than at the beginning of the drama. It is more a setting forth of the consequences which attend upon willfulness carried to an extreme by a headstrong nature.

"As such it might serve as a lesson, although the fate of women who swerve from the path of rectitude is seldom surrounded by such dramatic situations, and is infinitely sadder and terrible.

"The play is full of dramatic situations and of humor common to this character of plays. The company is adequate and the play wel staged.

"One unique feature hitherto unnoticed as a possible agent of escape by the ingenious yellow dramatist, whose usual weapons are the trusty revolver, the knife or the ax, was the introduction of a folding bed into which the heroine shuts the villain as he was pursuing her. The folding bed has been in the past almost the exclusive property of the joke artist. Its dramatic possibilities were never properly demonstrated until this elucidation of the whyfor of girls leaving home was attempted. It is unnecessary to say that the trapping of the villain in the folding bed and the dismanteling of a water pitcher upon the head of the black porter of her roadhouse prison brought down the house in a storm of merriment and applause.

"John Webster as Dan Sherwood, brother of the girl who left home, showed a capacity for acting superior to the oportunity offered by his part. Ellen Boyer, as Pearl Sherwood, the erring sister, gave a good portrayal of a girl with a headstrong temper. W. A. Gilbert, as Johnny Hobbins, contributed much to the amusement of the audience with his horse play. The remainder of the cast was competent."

OTIS SKINNER,
Who Will Appear at the Lyceum Next Week.

strange, wayward character that gives the play its title, though the Harvester does not convey, as did the French "l'chan'neau," the peculiar qualities of the vagrant but not uncommon type who looms chief figure in the action, Chemineau (from chemin—the road) indicates the roamer, the wayfarer, the rolling stone, and in Richepin's subtle moldings, the phase took new meanings, suggesting as well the dreamer, the mystic, the soul and spirit too big to be cabinet and confined, too bold to be shackled to the prettiness of conventional existence.

Mr. Skinner would seem to be physically and temperamentally well adapted for the role. A carefully chosen company of well known players will surround him. The production has been specially painted by Walter Burridge of New York and is said to be atmospherically accurate and unusually beautiful. The full cast of principals is as follows: Otis Skinner, J. W. Colville, George Clarke, Walter Lewis, Ben T. Ringgold, Russell Crawford, Daniel Pennell, John Boylan, Lizzie Hudson Collier, Maud Durbin, Marion Abbott.

"WHY GIRLS LEAVE HOME."

Melodrama at Metropolitan First Half of Week.

The plot of "Why Girls Leave Home," the play that will hold forth at the Metropolitan the first half of next week, is said to be a most original one. The play tells in an elaborate manner

"OFFICER, DO ME A FAVOR WILL YOU? PUT US BOTH IN THE SAME CELL."

"IT IS FOR SUCH THINGS AS YOU THAT GIRLS LEAVE HOME."

TWO SCENES FROM "WHY GIRLS LEAVE HOME," TO BE PLAYED AT METROPOLITAN NEXT WEEK.

AL FIELD'S MINSTRELS.

Noted Organization Coming to the Lyceum.

Next Friday and Saturday, with a matinee Saturday afternoon, Al. G. Field's minstrels will be at the Lyceum. The first part is said to be a joy forever. It is entitled "A Musicale to Fountain Park" and is an elaborately conceived stage setting resplendent with electric lights of varied hue, which addenchantment to the scene, as the various members of the company execute intricate marches, and sing catchy choruses, while the orchestra seated in gilded balconies to the right and left contribute with perfect music greatly to the picture.

The singing contingent comprises Reese V. Prosser, Tom McKenna, Charles Flynn, and Albert Flint in sentimental ballads. Harry Shunk, Tommy Donnelly, Lew Spencer and Al G. Field furnish enough comedy to make the audience forget their troubles. The spectacular effects produced by Mr Feld include the grand transformation from Fountain Park to Mystic Lake and is one of the most realistic moonlight, water and cloud effects ever produced. Transformation scene No. 2 is patriotic to a degree and includes some very inspiring war pictures, while superb choruses render "Tenting tonight" and other familiar battle songs.

Al. G. Field has some new things in his monologue. The Mignani family of musicians have an up-to-date musical act, the Walton family of acrobats par excellence in their special line. The celebrated Ollie Young and brother who have just been added to the company have been headliners in the vaudeville houses and are considered the very acme of artisticness in hoop rolling and juggling. Percy Leigh and brother, direct from the old world, are marvelous equilibrists and finish an Ollo of great merit. The after-piece, entitled "The Darktown Circus and Menagerie" is a fitting finale and serves to show the ability of every member of the company to do things up-to-date.

AL. H. WILSON.

This evening at the Lyceum Al. H. Wilson will be seen in "A Prince of Tatters." In the character of Prince Hugo Von Reppert, Mr. Wilson's delicate honor is forceful at all times and he can grow pathetic when occasion demands with charming tenderness. "A Prince of Tatters" tells a most interesting story and its situations are well conceived and finely executed.

HAMLET AND CAMILLE.

Why They Attract Men and Women Players.

What the North pole is to the intrepid explorer seeking for fame Camille is to the actress. It is the undiscovered country, always alluring, always fascinating. No other role—unless it be possibly that of Juliet—holds such potent attrativeness for the ambitious woman player, says the New York Times.

Every embryonic mime wants to play Hamlet. Even after he has ceased to be an amateur and has acquired some measure of professional experience, the actor of ambition is likely to look forward to a day when circumstances will be such as to enable him to appear in the role of the melancholy Dane. Nor is the desire confined to those who, by reason of their talents, have attained to success in tragedy. Comedians who have moved thousands to mirth by their humorous antics, if their efforts are to be believed, weep salt tears in the privacy of their own apartments because a cruel fate has denied them the opportunity to shine in the chief role of Shakespeare's immortal tragedy.

But for the women of the satge the Lady of the Camelias is the perennial attraction. True, the role divides honors in a measure with that of Juliet, but there is this distinction. It is the youthful actress who, as a rule, most seeks to pine for Romeo. And novices sigh to enact it. Not that youthful actresses do not want to play Camille, too. But few professionals are willing to essay this part until their experience is more or less matured.

There are in the acting drama plenty of other parts which might tax their abilities to as great an extent. The explanation of why all actresses want to play Camille, as of why all actors want to play Hamlet, lies perhaps in the fact that all great players of the past have attempted these roles. Mention the names of the famous Camilles of the stage and you mention the names of the foremost actresses of all times. The role has come to be considered the ultimate test of the actress' right to her title.

Players are essentially beings of an imitative turn of mind. What others have done they want to do. An actress might appear in a dozen modern roles—were they available—presenting all the complexions of Camille, but she still would feel unsatisfied did she not have at least one chance to challenge comparison as the lachrymose heroine of the Dumas drama.

When newcomers arise to contest the laurels of those who have gone, it is always interesting to inquire into the mental state which inspires their attempt.

Two new Camilles were seen in New York recently—Margaret Anglin and Virginia Harned.

To both actresses these questions were put:

"Why does every actress want to play Camille?"

"What phase of Camille's character appeals especially to the actress?"

"Since first playing the part, have your ideas of its portrayal changed materially?"

"What are the chief difficulties encountered in such a role?"

"When you play a part of this sort, do you for the time being lose your own identity, and become the character?"

Virginia Harned answered:

"Because, as in other professions, she wishes to excel in the most difficult."

"Possibly it appeals differently to each individual. Camille's self-sacrifice and her love for Armand, of course, joined, appeal to everly human mind."

"Yes, in minor details. For instance, I do not think it necessary to cough violently in the last act to show that Camille is mortally ill. To my mind, it should be shown in other ways."

"Physical strength first of all, as it is a very long and exacting part; even if all the other equipments necessary—which is rare in one person—the endurance is absolutely necessary to make a telling Camille."

"At times, yes—that is, there are moments I feel as if I were really Camille."

These were Miss Anglin's views:

"I am not aware that every actress wishes to play Camille. Personally I had no wish to do so, and I simply studied it at the dictation of my manager."

"The regeneration of the woman through the influence of love."

"Not materially changed, only a development in expression consequent upon continued practice."

"The physical strain due to such a long and exacting emotional part."

"Not for a moment."

Here, then, will be an opportunity to judge of at least one knotty question of dramatic art. Miss Anglin distinctly avows that she never loses her own identity and becomes the part she is playing. Miss Harned, however, says that she does.

VALE, WEBERFIELD.

The End Has Come To Remarkable Show.

New York, May 14.—The house of Weberfields has fallen—wrecked by the hands that built it. New Yorkers and the great amusement world are the losers as much as are the wo men who now are to part, after twenty-six years of partnership. The name of Weber & Fields is never to be used by them again. That is nominated in the deed of separation. Each man is to seek fortune and new fame on his own account. Weber will remain at the old stand, but with a new coterie of players Fields will have a playhouse built for himself and make his bid there for popular favor. Tonight sees them together for the last time.

The cloud no bigger than a man's hand has been noticed for a long time. Report says that Weber and Fields were unable to agree.

People "on the inside" assert that Fields, impressed by the words of critics who assured him that he was a good, legitimate, "straight" actor, began to fret at the eternal link that bound him to Weber, and the funny little man with the padded stomach, rebelled—or his friends did—at the encomiums lavished upon his partner. Money rolled in, but they were not happy.

Like Punchinello, each camedian made merry with a heavy heart. "Quips and cranks and wanton wiles" proceeded as usual from the lips of the jocund team. But above leered the horrid thing with the eyes, and—in classical parlance—the "jig was up." A very marked coolness sprang up during the last season between Weber and Fields, which has continued until now. In fact, since Mr. Fields was so strongly commended by both the press and the public for his clever character work in the travesty on "A Message From Mars," he asserts that Weber's brother and other members of the Weber family took offense with each succeeding "skit" in which Mr. Fields' stage work received additional encomium.

Mr. Weber has taken over the old music hall, with which, as he is a brainy man, he will probably do well. Fields has sold his birthright for a mess of pottage ($40,000 is the reputed price, and will enter into theatrical partnership and be "featured."

Unless stage precedents are upset, neither man will get the reward in the new field that he found in the old. It would be strange if he did, for in all the history of vaudeville no team has had so much and so long continued prosperity as that of Weber and Fields.

The story of these men's rise is like a page of fiction. Twenty-six years ago, when Joseph Weber and Lew Fields were East Side youngsters with a craze for the stage, they managed to get an engagement in a Bowery music hall to do an Irish song and dance. Think of it—Weber and Fields doing an Irish turn! They received $3 a week—$4 each—and were glad to get it. At an entertainment recently they gave a burlesque of that first appearance of theirs, and it was one of the funniest things they ever did.

The Irish song and dance was a good deal of a frost on the Bowery, and they tried a Dutch team act. That came more natural to them. Their make-up in those days was practically the same as it is today—Weber with a wonderful paunch and the elongated Fields with his clothes drawn so tightly that his leanness was accentuated to the highest degree. They went about the music halls of the Bowery for several winters and managed to pick up a living in the summer by appearing at seaside resorts.

It took them a long time to make much headway, but after five or six years they managed to bet engagements in the variety houses. They were quick, clever and enterprising, kept up with the march of events and managed to incorporate local hits into nearly everything they did. After fifteen years of effort they had climbed to the top notch of variety performers and were getting $300 a week. They were ambitious to spread out and they put a show of their own—a variety show—in the field, and did good business.

Seven years ago their great opportunity came. The Imperial Music hall, which George Krauss had been conducting at Twenty-ninth street near Broadway, New York city, was run down, and was on the market. Weber and Fields had an idea that if they could get hold of the place, fit it up and remain there long enough to overcome its bad reputation they could make a success there with the same sort of a show they had been giving on the road. They managed to get the little box of a playhouse at a ridiculously low rental, and then started in to enlist the good offices of all their friends to give them a good sendoff.

In the language of the day they went in on a shoestring. They didn't have much more money than was necesary to pay salaries for a week or two. To boost the thing along they stood in front of the New York theater a day or two before they opened the house and sold tickets to such of their friends as came along. The first ticket they sold was to Emmanuel M. Friend, the New York attorney. He paid $12 for a box. He has bought the same box at every first night in the Weber and Fields music hall from that day to this, but he has had to pay a little more. On the second year he got his box for $16, last year he paid $270. When Weber and Fields appear for the last time together in the West End theater tonight, it is Mr. Friend's purpose to buy the last ticket that is sold for that night. He was in at the birth, and he means to be in at the death.

From the very first Weber and Fields met with phenomenal success. They adopted a radical and what seemed then to be a remarkable policy, gathering about them some of the highest-priced entertainers in America. They didn't recruit their forces from the variety stage, either, but made drafts on comic opera, comedy and the legitimate. No such show as they put on had ever before been attempted in New York. Everything was light, bright and frothy.

Within a few months their salary list was the highest of any playhouse in New York. It has remained so ever since. The pay roll was close to $7000 a week. The first burlesque they put on was "The Geezer," by Joseph Herbert, a travesty of "The Geisha," which was then being played at Daly's. Since that time nearly every great success produced in the other theaters has been burlesqued and laughed at by the Weber-Fields following. Of the high-priced players they gathered about them, this partial list gives a good idea of how lavish they were in spending money:

De Wolf Hopper, Henry Dixey, Fritz Williams, Louis Mann, Sam Bernard, David Warfield, Fay Templeton, May Robson, Lillian Russell, Ada Deeves, William Collier, Charles Bigelow, Louise Allen, Pete Dailey, Irene Perry, Vesta Tilley, Charles Ross and Mabel Fenton and Henry Lee and Evie Stetson.

The highest-priced player they have ever had was Lillian Russell. She got $1250 a week. Next to her came Louis Mann and Willie Collier, at $1000 a week each. It is doubtful whether the Weber-Fields players ever got such salaries before or ever will again. In the light of the big money that was paid to performers, it didn't seem possible that Weber and Fields could have much profit, but from the time the opened that house until the first of the present season they made from $3500 to $4000 a week in New York and much more than that on their road tours. In fact, on their tours out of town they broke all records in some of the cities they visited. In Chicago they played to $44,000 in two weeks, and in St. Louis one week they played to $25,000.

This is all the more remarkable in the light of the fact that their show was essentially of a Tenderloin flavor. Most of their gags and hits were fully appreciated only by New Yorkers, and Broadway New Yorkers at that. But it came to be the fad to go to Weber and Fields'. Persons from out of town didn't consider their visit complete unless they had been to the little box of a playhouse and seen the show about which the whole town talked.

Not to be at a Weber and Fields' opening was to write oneself down as being distinctly "out of it." Seats auctioned off sold at fabulous prices. After the performance people stayed to see tons of flowers, costing thousands of dollars, handed over the footlights. It was swagger; there was nothing like it. That two variety men should have built up such a scheme seemed little less than amazing. In no metropolis have two young men had such a vogue in such a bewilderingiy brief space of time. In an inconceivably short while they built up an institution that became nationally famous. "Weber and Fields" were the "thing" in New York, and outside of there, too.

Ladies who would have hesitated to patronize a resort where men smoked and drank went in their carriages, attired like queens, to this little music hall. A "first night" at Weber and Fields' was in New York an event like the opening of the opera season or the horse show.

Weber and Fields had six years of wonderful prosperity. Money seemed to pour in on them. It came so fast that they did not know what to do with it. They became ambitious to branch out. That was the beginning of the end. They wanted to own other playhouses, and they wanted to manage other shows. In every outside enterprise in which they engaged their losses were heavy except in one instance, that of the purchase of the West End theater in Harlem. In starring Willie Collier they lost nearly $50,000; in starring Charles Richmond they lost a lot of money. In fighting the syndicate they lost more. Their Boston venture, the Globe theater, proved unremunerative.

But these experiences would not have been bad if Weber and Fields had not been involved in family differences and jealousies that led to an open rupture. For the last three years they have been bitter enemies. Never in all this time, except when absolutely necessary, have they had any intercourse. At the time of the first rupture they came close to parting. Two years ago the breach was so wide that it required the best energies of their friends and well-wishers to prevent a split. One year ago the firm was on the verge of disruption, and this season the condition became so unbearable that there was no longer any chance of patching up a truce and they agreed to disagree.

Weber is credited with having saved nearly $500,000. Fields has not been as provident as his old associate, but he is understood to have $100,000 or more. As a player, or, more particularly, as a character actor, he ranks higher than Weber, but he is not considered so good a business man.

Of the great entertainers of the Weber-Fieldian tribe, few if any will be seen in the old music hall next season. Pete Dailey and John T. Kelly have made other engagements. Lillian Russell is out of a job. Louis Mann is likely to star on his own account. Evie Stetson has plans of her own. David Warfield has developed into one of the greatest and most prosperous stars. De Wolf Hopper is back in comic opera. Sam Bernard is at the head of the "Girl From Kay's." Fay Templeton is with the syndicate. Willie Colier is a star again, and the whole tribe is scattered.

Business, not personal difficulties, led to this partnership's dissolution. To each other and to everyone else who knows them Weber and Fields are "Joe" and "Lew," while collectively they are always "the boys." They have had their personal rows—in twenty-six years that would be expected—but it is a matter of business now.

"Purely business reasons," said "Joe" in a recent interview anent their parting. "It has been coming on for a long time. A great many little things contributed and one thing led to another until it was useless to keep together any longer."

"We couldn't agree as to the policy of the house or of the firm's business," added "Lew." "I wanted to make a decided change in the style of entertainment."

"And I believe it is a good thing to stick to a success, and not go experimenting," said "Joe." "Experience has shown us where our strength is, and we would be very foolish not to heed the lesson it teaches. Our style of show has made us a great deal of money and a big reputation. Why shouldn't we stick to it?"

"Musical shows of that kind are played out. Their day has passed. Something new is wanted, something different," remarked Lew, "The general demand now is for a chance in entertainment."

"Oh, nonsense; look at our business. That hasn't played out, and that's the test. Weber & Fields are identified with a certain style of show. That reputation is part of our capital. It's our stock in trade."

"Oh, I don't know. I think the public has got sick of sidewalk conversation," from Lew. "They had too much of it lately. It has been overdone. There is nothing to it, anyway. There is no acting in getting close together and talking into each other's face. Anybody can do it who can learn a quick dialogue with a few jokes in it. I tell you the public is educated beyond enjoying that sort of stuff. Why, all we have ever done is to come out and I try to get your money. That has been the whole business in every scene we ever had."

"Well, we ought not to find fault with the bridge that carried us over. It is just that business and sidewalk conversation that has made the public laugh, has filled the theater, has given us a reputation, and, incidentally, a few dollars. We have never had a failure since we became known in that line. I don't think I am cut out to play Romeo, and I have my doubts about the kind of a Hamlet you would make, Lew."

"Oh, that's all right, but you must keep up with the times or you'll get left behind."

"Did not those disastrous outside ventures you had this season have a good deal to do with your separation?" was suggested.

"Not a bit," said "Joe." "You can make that as strong as you like. If they had all proved to be successes we should probably have parted just the same."

"No," added "Lew," with equal vigor. "Those ventures had nothing to do with the dissolution of the partnership. Of course everybody knows we got a few hard blows, but we are able to stand them all right."

"We could not foresee that it was going to be a poor theatrical season generally, any more than we could tell in advance that the Chicago fire was going to happen and kill business everywhere for a time," said "Joe." "It was not a case of bad judgment on our part. It was only our misfortune."

"Is there any likelihood of your tearing down the Music hall and putting up a big office building there?" was inquired of Mr. Weber.

"Really, I have not decided yet. There are a good many office buildings in that neighborhood already. My main idea at present is to use the hall as a place of entertainment when the alterations are completed."

"Is there any sentiment between you as to separating? Are you really sorry to part?"

"Of course we are," said "Joe." "We have been together in hard luck and good luck, rain and shine, for more than twenty-six years. It was twenty-six years ago Jan. 1 last that we started out."

"And ten minutes before the papers were signed last Monday," said Lew, "I did not believe we would separate. All along I had a sort of an idea that we would stick together."

"This present disagreement started with the production of 'Waffles,'" continued Lew. "We disagreed about that, and the breach has been widening ever since."

"What will Miss Russell do next year?" "I believe she is going out in a musical comedy. Mr. Dailey, you know, stars in 'The Billionaire.'"

"Will this present trouble be patched up? Do either of you think that you will ever get together again?"

"No!" they both said in unison.

"It's too late," said "Lew."

"Things have gone too far. The papers are signed and the matter is out of our hands. The lawyers have it now," added "Joe."

Then they told a story which is more typical of the true Weberfields than anything else that could have happened. It was anent their last bitter quarrel, when for weeks they didn't speak, except in their parts on the stage.

"Why, all that long time we didn't speak we stuck together," said Joe. "We were always seen together on the street or in restaurants whenever we could be. It was a business necessity. We didn't want the public to get any idea that we were not good friends, and of course we kept right on using the same dressing room. That was for the benefit of the members of the company. Then they could only say to outsiders that apparently we were on the best of terms."

"Yes, that's about the idea," continued Lew. "And all the time we were right on the point of separating and for months did not speak to each other, except when we had to. You remember that time, Joe, when a story got out that we had quarreled and the next day we sat together on a corner shoe shining stand and you handed me peanuts to eat when anybody we knew came along. Say, we must have had about a dozen shines each. I know I paid the boy half a dollar for them. We sat there nearly an hour, and I ate more peanuts then and there than I have since I was a boy. They spoiled my dinner."

"Well, say, I ate a lot, too. Don't forget that, Lew. You weren't doing all the eating."

"Maybe you did. I wasn't looking at you, because I didn't want to have anything to do with you anyway. But the main thing is the peanuts stopped the

WILL PRESENT "FAUST."

Kennedy Company to Appear In Famous Drama.

Goethe's famous play of "Faust" will hold the boards at the Metropolitan Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Saturday matinee, presented by the Kennedy Stock company. "Faust" has been one of the feature plays of this poular company's extensive repertoire for the past five years, and the scenery and mechanical effects used are said to be almost perfect in every detail. The cast is also said to be especially suited to this class of play and something out of the ordinary is promised for the coming week. All of the electrical effects used in Lewis Morrison's version will be in evidence, including the electrical garden, the river of fire, the cross of fire, and the ever looked for rain of fire at the finalle of the Brocken scene. These are triumphs in the world of stage craft that have seldom, if ever, been presented at popular prices.

An entire change of vaudeville will be presented between the acts, and the scenery and dressing is promised to be the most elaborate yet displayed since the opening of the Kennedy Stock company's engagement in Duluth.

The usual family matinee will be given on Saturday, at which time a genuine diamond ring will be given away to some lady in attendance.

Following "Faust," Roland Reid's phenominal success of "Cheek" will be presented, at which time John J. Kennedy will appear in the role of Dick Smythe.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO.

David Belasco Commences a New Oriental Drama.

New York, May 14.—David Belasco announces that he has accepted for production next season Mr. Joseph Arthur's Oriental drama, which is to be entitled either "Sedrine," the name under which it received its English copyright performance, or perhaps "Cross and Crescent." The play has a strong religious element, with its story based historically on the life and career of a certain great prince of India. The scenes are laid in India in 1605, in and around the golden-domed, ancient capitol—Agra—during the reign of the famous Mogul Emperor Jehangire, the father of Shah Jehan, who built the wonderful Taj Mahal at Agra.

In one of the acts there is a scene which Mr. Belasco considers one of the most remarkable ever written for the stage, and which for audacity, ferocity and opportunity for magnificance of production has been rarely equaled. Mr. Belasco says of this play that "its author has gone up the ladder many rungs;" that his acceptance of the play without hesitation indicates his opinion of it and that he "intends to give it a production heavier and more elaborate than any play he has hitherto handled."

Under Mr. Belasco's direction Mr. Arthur goes to Europe in June, and afterward to India, to secure historical effects and native types and costumes to be used. Mr. Arthur has spent three years on this play of India, backed by a close study and detailed knowledge of the land, and its peoples and customs.

Mr. Belasco has long been ambitious to produce a drama laid in this land of mysticism, for India offers so many elements of romance and tragedy, and the religious emotions of its people are so intense that it offers every opportunity to such a playright as Mr. Arthur. For some years Mr. Belasco has been gathering material for the writing of such a play himself. But for the past two seasons he has been so closely absorbed in the working out of Mrs. Leslie Carter's new play that for a time he put the idea definitely aside. Meantime Mr. Arthur submitted his play of India, and Mr. Belasco was so impressed with its dramatic power and pictorial possibilities at its very first reading that he closed his agreement with Mr. Arthur without delay.

The Jefferson family is evidently going to be perpetuated on the stage. Loretta Jefferson is the last of that name to arrive. She will try Meenie in "Rip Van Winkle," next season, and her father, Thomas Jefferson, the son of Joseph Jefferson, will play Rip.

Collin Kemper, of Wagenhals & Kemper, has made a contract with Clyde Fitch while abroad to fit Blanche Walsh with a play, to be ready for production Jan. 1. He also arranged for the rights to the new Richepin and Caln play, which Bernhardt will do at her theater in Paris next season. He has a comedy by Gresac, author of "The Marriage of Kitty," which will be done in London by Sir Charles Wyndham. His firm will produce early next season "La Baillonnee," a melodrama by Pierre Decourcelle, now running at the Theater L'Ambigu.

James E. Sullivan has permanently retired from the cast of "Red Feather" and will be seen no more in the character of the baron. The retirement of Mr. Sullivan comes as a climax to a long series of clashes, including a fist fight on a fast-moving train, and the final statement of Miss Grace Van Studdiford that she would no longer appear in the company if Mr. Sullivan was permitted to reappear upon the stage.

Minnie Seligman will return to the ranks of the stars next season. Miss Seligman, it will be remembered formerly played the stellar role in "My Official Wife."

It is reported that Charles Frohman will make an effort to introduce into American theaters the drinking adjunct, which is in vogue in London playhouses. If he does succeed in New York it is sincerely to be hoped that he will improve on the quality of the London brand.

That there is still more patronage left for the wholesome comedy is evident from the fact that "The Secret of Polichinelle" has passed its one hundredth performance.

Instead of going to Europe this summer, Henrietta Crosman will rest in the woods after her season at the Belasco theater closes. In the fall she will reopen at the Belasco theater in "Sweet Kitty Bellairs." Arrangements have been made by David Belasco and Maurice Campbell for Miss Crosman to open the new Yorkville theater in New York next season directly after she closes her run at the Belasco.

The London newspapers are beginning to direct attention to the fact that Sir Henry Irving will complete his half century upon the stage in two years' time. Immediately following his Brooklyn engagement, E. H. Sothern commences a tour of this country which will take him to the Pacific coast and back. The week after Brooklyn he will be in St. Paul, the week following that in Kansas City and two weeks after that in Los Angeles. His season does not close until July 15, at Helena, Mont. As he commenced early in September of last year, this will be the longest season he has ever played. In it Sothern makes his farewell appearance as an individual star, and final appearance in romantic drama, as commencing next year he enters into the alliance with Julia Marlowe for the next five years in presentations of Shakespearean plays entirely. Mr. Sothern will play here "The Proud Prince," which has proved as great a success on the road as it was in New York. Immediately after his season closes he will make a three weeks' visit to Yellowstone park with Rowland Buckstone and William Harris, of his company, returning to New York in time to conduct the rehearsals with Miss Marlowe.

"The Sword of the King," which Henrietta Crosman made a success in this country, has been a failure in London.

figuring and planning and, necessarily, will require much special machinery.

One of the features of the preparations, the feature, in fact, is the big mold carrier, which is constructed of Washington timber reinforced by iron and which weighs in the neighborhood of 100 tons. This traveler is propelled on an extraordinarily wide guage track which has been built over the entire route to be covered by the portion of the new pier to be built this year.

One of the pictures herewith shown gives an idea of the mold carrier, with one of the 40-ton molds swung into place ready to be taken out to the place.

The mold traveler is the result of a long and careful study of the needs of the government and the strength of a machine that would be put to so immense strain.

The big molds here shown was swung up into position without a hitch or even a creaking of the timbers, so nicely and perfectly did all the parts work.

The molds are assembled by means of a large derrick with a 10-ton lifting capacity, on a powerfully built truck which runs under the traveler. When the mold is thus located, the five-eighth inch cables are attached to each of the four corners and at a given signal all four cables act simultaneously and the heavy boxlike structure raises clear of the trucks. Heavy timber rests supported by inch cables from the overhead trolley then slide under to keep the mold from swinging and to relieve the strain on the small cables.

A pulley system in connection with the small cables distributes the big weight to be lifted.

To hoist a 40-ton weight with perfect safety and to be able to do it right along, required special machinery and to Frank Hayes, of Superior, is due the credit of designing the special engine which so successfully operates the hoist. The hoisting is done by cables on what is termed synchronal drums, meaning those which act in unison. Each drum has its cable operating on a corner of the mold and so perfectly is the whole under the control of the operator that either one of the drums can be made to work independent of the other three.

The feature of this hoisting apparatus is the absence of the old friction drums usually seen on large hoists. In place of the friction drum is a powerful worm or spiral gear, the creation of Mr. Hayes, and claimed to make it absolutely impossible for the drums to slip backward under the heaviest load the hoist is capable of. The mold traveler must, in the course of its travel run around one quite abrupt curve.

According to a principle of physics it can be readily seen that with so wide a guage of track, the outer wheels must necessarily run very much faster than the inner wheels and under a heavy load, as in this case, the big traveler would be likely to tear things to pieces on the curves. To obviate this there is a differential gear for compensation on the curves, meaning that the gearing is such that the inner wheels can be made to stand still, if necessary, while the outer whels are covering the longer distance they must run.

The traveler carries its own engine which furnishes the motive and hoisting power.

The traveler will carry the mold out over the place where it is to be placed. The rests will be withdrawn and the heavy structure will by its own weigh sink to the bottom. As soon as it is in place the concrete traveler will run out and dump in concrete until the mold is filled.

The time that it will take for the concrete to fix, or harden, will depend on the temperature of the water, but the average will be about four days.

When the concrete is hardened, the rods holding the sides of the mold together will be withdrawn and the hoists will lift the sections clear of water to be taken back to the yards and rebuilt. About eighteen or twenty of the molds have been constructed.

The concrete traveler, the steel apparatus, shown in another picture, is an interesting bit of machinery, though not so special as the larger mold carrier.

It is constructed of steel and has a lifting capacity of ten tons out at the end of the long arm, seen in the picture. There are two of these concrete mold travelers, the second being seen unfinished, attached to the rear of that already set up. These carriers weigh about forty tons each, the motive and hoisting power coming from an upright engine, which serves also the purpose of a counterweight to the machine.

The large amount of trackage at the new work gives one the idea of a terminal railroad yard. All the tracks are built on trestle work and the arrangement is such that the mold carriers can pass each other while the diminutive locomotive, which hauls the supplies and cars of concrete, can run under either mold. This little engine, or rather the two of them, for the other is standing in a shed, is a very interesting piece of machinery.

One of the pictures shows an engine standing on the side track and furnishing steam to the gravel pit, where the dump of last fall is being thawed out. To get in the picture an idea of the size of the little locomotive, the 7-year-old boy of one of the government employes took his place on the cab steps. By the side of one of the big mogul engines that the Missabe road uses to pull loads of iron ore to the docks, the comparison would resemble that of the cat and mouse.

Yet, small as it is, this little locomotive is a perfect model of a large engine, and it is a powerful machine, pulling loads of fifteen tons around the curves and up the grades on the trestles with apparent ease.

Some months ago The Herald reproduced a picture of the big concrete mixer when it was in an uncompleted state. The picture herewith shown gives a representation of the mixer ready to begin mixing concrete at a minute's notice.

The costly part of this apparatus is in the mixer itself, which is not well shown in the picture. To describe, briefly, its mode of operation, proportionate amounts of cement, gravel, sand and water are dumped into the mixer, which revolves and dips forward and backward continually, as the material is properly mixed it is automatically dumped into a chute leading to the concrete cars beneath.

One engine pulls the cars of gravel, about 10,800 pounds to the load, to the top of the incline, and operates the cement hoist, while a second engine pulls up to the top of the inclined road the sand, pumps the water and operates the mixer. A complete electric bell system is used for signals.

At the chute opening into the mixer one man can put in the cement, measure and dump the sand and gravel and let in the amount of water needed.

A last picture gives a view of the gravel pile from the top of the mixer plant. The mouth of the pit can be seen at the bottom of the inclined road, where the cars run under the pit and are loaded through chutes.

Mr. Coleman was asked to give some idea of the amount of material used in the concrete, and he replied:

"See that gravel pile? Multiply that of gravel added by twenty and you can gather the amount of gravel needed. Ten times that amount in the pile represents the sand that will be used, and to this add over a million pounds of cement."

The gravel in the pile is unloaded from scows in the slip, seen beyond the engine house.

Many people have an idea that the entire south pier is to be built this year, but the fact of the matter is that only the inner 1800 feet can be built under the appropriation made available by congress.

This will not take the pier out as far as the lighthouse, and when fully completed it is to extend 400 feet out in the lake beyond that point. Before that work is done, however, another appropriation will be made by congress.

Following the completion of the south pier, the government expects to build a concrete north pier, and when it is ready to do that work the entire plant, with the machinery, trestles, etc., will be moved from the south side to the north side of the Superior entry to the harbor.

It is understood that there is talk among the people of Superior to park the grounds on the Wisconsin side of the entry after the government has concluded its pier building. There is ample space and the opportunity of making the location a very attractive one.

CLIMATE AND CROP BULLETIN BOARD

To Be Provided In the Duluth Board of Trade.

Secured Largely By Efforts of Congressman Bede.

On recommendation of the chief of of the weather bureau, the Duluth board of trade, within the next few weeks, is to be provided with a new style climate and crop bulletin board, supplemented by a weather map measuring about seven feet square, which can be changed daily in accordance with the climatic changes throughout the country.

The whole affair measures twenty-four feet long by over seven feet high. There are only two or three pieces like it in the United States, which fact shows that the Duluth board of trade is generally recognized as one of great importance. The piece, which represents a cost of about $1000, was secured largeily through the efforts of Congressman J. Adam Bede.

As the grain crops depend to so great an extent on the climatic conditions it naturally ollows that the board o trade men, particularly those of Duluth, who are interested almost entirely in the different kinds of grains, should be interested in the weather from day to day. The daily and weekly reports are closely followed because of the effect of the weather on crops. Heretofore the weather reports have been chalked up daily at the board of trade on an old blackboard, purchased some years ago. There was no particular place for the crop bulletins. The whole arrangement was very unsatisfactory, and caused much inconvenience. But the new apparatus will do away with this inconvenience.

A good idea of the affair may be obtained from the accompanying photograph. The large map, framed in oak and covered with glass, occupies the center of the piece. To this, one on each side, are hinged the bulletin boards, with a square for nearly every state in the union, besides Cuba and Porto Rico, where the weekly reports sent out by the government regarding crop conditions may be posted and filed.

Each square is provided with a hook, so that the bulletins may be placed one upon the other, making it easy to quickly refer to back reports. The spaces for the states are alphabetically arranged. The boards and map are handsomely framed in oak. The map itself is nothing more than an enlarged reproduction of the ordinary weather map, showing all the weather stations in the country. Lines showing climatic changes may and will be drawn on the glass daily.

Local Forecaster Richardson expresses great satisfaction at the improvement, and says that it will greatly increase the efficiency of the weather bureau at this point. He is highly gratified that the bureau officials at Washington should thus recognize the importance of the Duluth board of trade, putting it in a position to receive the very best possible service. Only two or three other boards in the entire country will be so well equipped, and none will have better service.

LAWS ARE NEEDED

Discussion of State Pure Food Laws and Shortcomings.

More Danger In Adulterated Canned Goods Than Bad Milk.

That the pure food laws of Minnesota are entirely inadequate to prevent imposition and fraud upon the public, and to protect the people from injury, is the verdict of the many who have had most to do with their enforcement.

Discussing the matter of milk inspection and the efforts being made to protect the public from consumption of milk from diseased cows, a man who has had opportunity to know whereof he speaks made the statement to The Herald today that there is often more danger from the eating of one meal of canned vegetables or fruit than from all the impure or diseased milk that a person might consume in a lifetime.

"The efforts to protect the consumers against impure and low-test milk are commendable and perfectly proper," said he, "but to one on the inside, who knows the workings of the pure food laws of this state, the efforts along this line appear almost farcical.

"For instance, take the matter of milk inspection. The local authorities have added to the cost of milk by compelling the dealers to dispense with tickets that are passed from hand to hand. And yet, meritorious as this movement may be, you will notice if you are observing that the woman on a street car, who goes to pay her fare, will very often, after taking it from her pocketbook, place the nickle in her mouth while closing her shopping bag. We also know that children generally carry their pennies in their mouths. Yet there is nothing filthier than the money, and nothing that carries more disease germs to the square inch than the nickles and pennies handled by the populace. This is but one of a thousand different ways that people daily expose themselves to the very dangers (real or imaginary) that the inspectors of milk have labored so hard to prevent.

"Again, in the matter of milk. The state law provides that its inspectors may examine the milk of dealers after it has gone into the hands of the first customer. Supposing this inspection is made and the milk is found to contain 20 per cent of butter fat, the requisite amount. There is nothing to prevent this purchaser, if he be a restaurant or hotelkeeper, from watering or adulterating this milk in any way he may see fit, and disposing of it for pure milk to the actual consumer. So there is no state protection whatever for the man who boards away from home.

"The state food inspectors have devoted most of their attention during the past winter to blackberry and port wines, because it was realized that much of this stuff, especially in drug stores, is disposed of to people who need it because their stomachs are ailing. And yet, let a person drink one quart bottle of adulterated wine, that contains salicylic acid, and he will do more actual harm to his stomach and intestines than he can repair by a year's rational treatment. In fact, he may do himself irreparable injury. Yet there are few concoctions sold as wines in this state that are entirely free from this or other highly injurious acids and poisons.

"There are many brands of peas on the market that not only contain this harmful acid as a preservative, but the peas themselves have been run through a solution of poisonous green paint in order to give them a look of freshness and to prevent them from shriveling. What is true of peas is true of many kinds of canned goods that are handled throughout the state.

"Owing to the defects in the state law there are many loopholes through which those guilty of these adulterations can escape. For instance, some time ago butchers were prosecuted for using certain preservatives and coloring matter in their sausages. The supreme court found a defect in the law, and as a result nearly all the sausage now handled in Minnesota is colored with boracic acid, and contains other injurious preservatives. And the dealers can laugh at the officers of the law.

"There is a crying need for rational laws that will effectively protect the consumer against the dealers in impure, adulterated and poisoned foods, medicines, wines and liquors, but the best that can be said of the present laws is that they only cause trouble and expense, both to the dealers and to the state, and are practically of no use in effecting the reforms that were intended by their passage."

An Open Letter.

From the Chapin, S. C., News: Early in the spring my wife and I were taken with diarrhoea and so severe were the pains that we called a physician who prescribed for us, but his medicines failed to give any relief. A friend who had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy on hand gave each of us a dose and we at once felt the effects. I procured a bottle and before using the entire contents we were entirely cured. It is a wonderful remedy and should be found in every household. H. C. Balley, Editor. GIRL BORN IN PRISON.

Has Never Seen the Outside World.

Reading, Penn., May 14.—"Resolved, that we instruct our solicitor to see the court with reference to discontinuing the death watch on Sam. Greason and Kate Edwards, and if the court allows same, that the warden discharge the said watchers; also, what disposition can be made concerning the child of Mrs. Edwards."

The above resolution was passed by the board of prison inspectors. It means that the inspectors intend to do away with the death watch, which has been on duty night and day at the cells of Greason and Mrs. Edwards for nearly two years. There are two men and two women, and the county has paid to them $5000 in wages. The matter has even become an issue in local politics, and several Democratic candidates for county office have denounced the death watch as a piece of needless extravagance.

The hardest question to solve is the disposition of Mrs. Edward's daughter, Alma, now 2½ years old, born in jail, who has never been out of the institution and is constantly in her mother's cell. Mrs. Edwards vigorously protests against septration from her child.

IRON ORE TRADE.

Much Uncertainty as to Prices Still Exists.

Cleveland, May 14.—The Iron Trade Review says:

There have been some preliminary negotiations this wek between sellers and consumers of ore, but very little progress has been made, as nearly all furnaces have supplies which will meet their requirements for several months, apart from possible shortage on particular ores. There is much uncertainty as to what prices will prevail, but at present sellers are adhering pretty closely to the basis of $3.50 for old range Bessemer and $2.85 for old range non-Bessemer. Some furnacemen have shown a strong desire to ascertain the probable policy of the United States Steel corporation in regard to selling ore. The corporation has heretofore sold only a limited amount of ore, and latterly its shipments for others were practically confined to old contracts. Those most closely in touch with the corporation say that it is not likely it will change its policy this year, except that it may make conversion deals if it should need to buy pig iron. Having acquired the Clairton furnaces, it does not seem probable that the corporation will have any difficulty, for some time to come in carrying out its contract to furnish steel and pig iron to the Cruoible Steel company, and in meeting its own requirements from its own stacks.

THE LATEST HAPPENINGS IN THE WORLD OF SPORTS

COLTS ARE EASY

Cameron's Superior Bunch Makes Poor Showing Against Duluth.

Noldin's Curves Puzzling and Duluth Batters Too Fierce.

Cameron's colts proved to be about as easy marks as Ashland or the Duluth amateurs. After the second inning yesterday they never had a look-in, and the White Sox romped away with the easiest kind of a victory.

Inability to hit Noldin and the wildness of their own pitchers were the two principal reasons for their defeat. There were a few other reasons, including the heavy hitting of the White Sox, their fast work on the bases, and their clean fielding, but the two reasons will suffice.

Noldin was in magnificent form. He allowed but three hits, two of which were very timely ones, however, and after the second inning the Bugville men went out in one-two-three order. The big southpaw struck out only two men, but everything hit went up in the air.

The game was called in the seventh inning on account of the rain and the cold wind, which kept both the spectators and the players shivering.

Superior went to bat first and only three men faced Noldin in the first inning. Egan went out on a hit to Quillan, Keas was caught by Corrigan, and O'Dea put Quillan a little pop-up fly.

In the second the Bugville men had their only sport of the day. Noldin handed Cameron transportation to the initial bag, and Chandler placed a neat single just over Quillan's head. Foster went out on an outfield fly to Randall, and then Wilkes, who was playing short stop in place of Ball, who was ill, fumbled a hot liner over second from Simons' bat. The error was an excusable one, but, left three men on bases with only one out. Then Rogers "Johnny-on-the-spot" with a clean drive to deep center, which was good for two bases. Cameron, Chandler and Simons all crossed the plate, and the Superior contingent went crazy. Gilbert and Egan died at first, however, and the stuff was off.

In the next five innings only nineteen men came to bat, and although things looked a little dangerous in the seventh, the visitors did not have another look-in.

Duluth started in gently. The first inning was not productive of any runs, although Laggar and Randall both connected with the mild curves served up by Gilbert, the white-haired youth who was in the box for Superior.

In the second inning, the said youth got started wrong. He issued a pass to Martin, Quillan sacrificed, Wilkes got some more free transportation, Noldin tried to hold out his brother pitcher by striking out, and then Corrigan and Laggar got passes forcing Martin across the plate. Randall failed to hit for the only time during the game.

In the third inning the carnival of slaughter commenced. Hughes waited for four bad ones. Zink had left his batting clothes at home and the best he could do was to saw the atmosphere, but Martin drove out a clean single. Noldin got to first on a fielder's choice which caught Wilkes at second. Corrigan drove a hot one to Gilbert, who fumbled it and "Jack" was safe on first. And then Laggar and Randall loomed up with two- baggers and six men had crossed the plate. Hughes, who was up for the second time in the one inning, ended the agony by a dainty litle tap to Egan.

That was enough for Mr. Gilbert and Elken faced the White Sox in the fourth. He didn't succeed much better than his predecessor. Zink went out, Egan to Cameron, and Martin knocked a foul tip to the later, but Quillan was there with a single, Wilkes got a pass and Noldin scored them both with a two-bagger. Corrigan received one of Elken's shoots in the center of his back, but Lagger struck out.

Randall started things again in the third with his second two-bagger. Hughes followed with a single, scoring him. Zink sent a long fly to Simons, but Martin scored Hughes with a clean single. Quillan struck out, and Joe Wilkes was on hand with a two-bagger scoring Martin. Noldin went out, Keas to Cameron.

With twelve runs to their credit in five innings the White Sox let up, and only four batsmen faced Elken in the sixth, Randall as usual getting a hit.

Lagger, Randall, Martin and Wilkes didn't appear to have any mercy on the slab artists. Randall had two two-baggers and two singles out of five times at bat. Lagger had a two-bagger and a single out of four times up. Wilkes had the same record out of twice up, and Martin got two clean singles out of three times up. The White Sox had thirteen hits in all, of which five were good for two sacks each. Their errors, with the exception of Wilkes', were not costly.

Notes of the Game.

Eight straight victories for the White Sox.

Randall's bat looked like a cricket bat to the Superior twirlers yesterday.

Lagger as a "substitute" is not so bad. A batting record of .500 and two accetped chances will do.

Noldin promises to be one of the best pitchers in the league this year. He has twice the speed of last year, and better control.

The Superior men will do good if they get some pitchers. Their fielding was clean and fast yesterday.

The White Sox will meet Hibbing this afternoon. Shaw will be in the box for Duluth and Whitman will pitch for Hibbing.

TOURNAMENT CIRCUIT

Planned By Trap Shots of the Northwest.

Crookston, Minn., May 14.—A strong effort is being made to organize a Northwestern tournament circuit, comprising all of the gun clubs of the Northwest. A. A. Farrington, of the Duluth Cenral Gun club, is promoting the idea, and the managers of the gun clubs will meet with him in St. Paul some time this month.

The matter has been presented to the members of this organization in Crookston, and Manager J. Harry Staire will represent them at the conference. The project is looked upon favorably by Crookston shots, and will be given their hearty encouragement.

The rules governing the Northwest circuit will be formed and adopted at St. Paul, and all questions that are likely to come up during the summer will be discussed as far as possible at this meeting. The members of the Crookston Gun club will make a strong fight for the admission of professionals, who are barred in many places.

DOING FINE WORK

Boat Club Crew Putting In Much Time In Shell.

Season Opens Late But Expect to Overcome Handicap.

But three weeks now remain before the date of the Madison regatta, and the boat club crew has that much time in which to complete its training for the big race.

While the time is short, the men will doubtless be in condition. They have been handicapped by the late opening of the harbor, and the consequent shortening of the time allowed them for work in the shells. Their opponents had the advantage of several weeks work in the shells before the Duluth men could do more than exercise in the gymnasium. Since the harbor has opened, however, the crew has lost no time, and every night the weather was in any way favorable the eight has been out for a spin to Oatka beach and return. Heavy winds have interfered somewhat with the work, and during the past week there have been several days that were too stormy to launch the shells.

The news that Cornell would not be in the race was somewhat of a disappointment to the local followers of the sport. With two of the fastest university crews in the country in the race, there would be an excellent opportunity of judging of the speed of the local crew. Wisconsin will have their three crews in the race, however. The 'varsity, 'varsity second and freshmen eights will all take part, and Duluth will complete the quartet.

Duluth will doubtless be the heaviest crew in the race with the possible exception of the 'varsity. The men will average about 175 to 180 pounds.

Five of the members of the crew are veterans at the sport, Gibson, the stroke, has rowed in more races than he can remember, and he has a wide reputation as an oarsman. At Lake Minnetonka he was a well known figure, and a former Yale captain, who saw him bring the Duluth crew in first in one of the races, was heard to say that Gibson was one of the best strokes he had ever seen. He possesses the faculty of bringing a crew up from a slow to a fast stroke almost instantly.

H. H. Peyton was always the wonder of the crowds at Lake Minnetonka. Weighing around 200 pounds, it was always a mystery where he got staying power, for he seemed to have surplus flesh, yet he was always as fresh at the end of a race as the most athletic-looking member of the crew. He seemed to have an unlimited capaity for hard work. His brother, B. M. Peyton, always rowed with him and was always one of the most reliable of the crew.

Calhoun and MacPhail also rowed with the Duluth crew for at least two seasons in the Lake Minnetonka races.

Puck, L'Estrange and Whyte are new members of the crew, but they are all known as finished athletes, and with five veterans in the shell there is little chance of the eight losing the race from lack of head work.

The following are the positions and the weights of the eight men:

Gibson, stroke	196
Calhoun, seven	168
H. M. Peyton, six	207
B. M. Peyton, five	202
L'Estrange, four	168
Puck, three	175
Whyte, two	155
MacPhail, one	162

TOO MUCH MISTER JOHNSON

Colored Woman Puzzled Race-track Patrons By Rooting.

During the running of the last race at Worth on Thursday of last week, a middle-aged colored woman, standing at the paddock end of the grand stand, was heard shouting: "Come on thar, you, Mister Johns'n. Come on thar, you, honey boy," all the while snapping her fingers like a 7-come-11 crap shooter.

As there was no "Mister Johns'n" in the race except a Mayor Johnson, who was leading his field, those who stood near the colored woman took it for granted she was "rooting" for that horse and assured her it was in front.

"Dat ain't no hoss ahm shoutin' foh," declared the woman. "Ahm shoutin' for W. G. Johns'n." Then, with her eyes protruding and riveted upon some horse apparently in the rear division of the race, she resumed snapping her fingers and shouting: "O, you deah honey boy! Come on thar, you Mister Johns'o!" and "Sit still, honey."

Then the field passed the winning line, with Mayor Johnson an easy winner, upon which the woman clapped her hands joyfully and said: "Thank the Lawd, it's all over."

"If you're not rooting for Mayor Johnson what are you shouting for?" inquired a puzzled bystander. "Mayor Johnson won."

"Ah doan' 'care who win," was the rejoinder. "That boy, Stout, who rode Mister Johns'o's hoss, am my boy, an' he nebber rode befo'; an, ah was jes a prayin' he doan' git hurt. My Lawd, if dat dar boy git hurt I w'u'd jis' jump f'um dis bale'ny head fust, I declar' to Gawd I w'u'd."

Then she ambled down to the paddock and, catching up her boy, hugged him in the presence of all the horsemen. The horse on which the cause of so much solicitude had his first mount was Annu, the property of W. G. Johnston.

REVOLUTIONIZED.

Baseball Game Has Improved All Around In Science.

The old baseball player of a third of a century ago, when he contrasts the breezy game of those times with the refined sport of today, finds much to admire and commend, says Clarence Dunning in Outing.

Curved pitching, close play behind the bat, team work and a "dead" ball have revolutionized the game. With the incoming mask, pad and glove, the ancient aroma of arnica has all but passed away.

Throwing is more accurate, trick plays, including the picturesque but often effective "bunt," are far more highly developed, and, if the long hit is more uncommon, it is more dramatic when it comes.

In this higher evolution of baseball there appears but the general fault to be expressed in the seeming paradox that between closely matched nines the greater the science the less sure the result.

The refinement that reduces scores, ipso facto throws stronger accent on the single passed ball, the bad throw and the lucky base hit that wins or loses a match.

Given two teams essentially even in batteries, field play and hitting, and we find thtat the "luck" factor grows as science deepens.

With baseball thus, so to speak, sublimated, it follows that finer details of play wax in importance.

A single stroke of quick judgment in baseball play might have been the winning "scratch" base hit of opponents, and the nine which can crystallize into a habit this attention to nice points must, in the end, win against teams equal or even somewhat superior in general play.

The matter is of the greater interest because its flaws and their correction fall into the limbo of what we may call mental, as distinguished from executive baseball.

We pardon the occasional flaw of execution—the missed fly, the fumbled grounder, the wide throw. Justly is the baseball critic less merciful to the errors of headwork and of judgment.

The concentration of modern baseball in the work of the pitcher is probably incurable, but the size of our curable evil, the "base on balls," is not fully appraised.

Several years ago the writer kept at Yale field a special score for twelve consecutive games to measure in exact terms the value of this still obstinate "base-on-balls" factor.

The figures show for both sides 189 runs and 134 bases on balls. Of the 189 runs 49 runs, or about 26 per cent, were the direct result of bases on balls.

How many a bad inning opens with the base on balls, and how many games have been won by it negatively can be recaled by the shortest baseball memory; nor does the evil seem to have been much abated by the new form of the home plate, which, when adopted, was supposed to favor the pitcher.

When the pitcher learns that his four balls are to be treated generally as capital and not as surplus, and indulges his "trick" balls only after seeing one or two strikes, with a margin of at least two balls left, we shall see fewer baseball games presented by those pitching as a kind of gift to opponents.

GEORGE H. KETCHAM

Talks of Record Made By Cresceus at Wichita.

Toledo, O., May 14.—George H. Ketcham, owner of Cresceus, has returned from a trip to several Western places, which he took immediately after the board of appeals of the American Trotting association denied the right of Cresceus to a two-minute record. He says: "Despite the ruling of the board of appeals, I still have faith in Cresceus and in the time he made. I believe he made the mile on Oct. 19 in 1:50¾, and I also believe the people of Toledo think he did. The members of the board themselves believe it, and there is not a fair-minded horseman in the country who does not. The action of the board in denying him the record is altogether because of a technicality.

"This was, that the attempt against the record had not been sufficiently advertised to conform with the rules of the association. I believed at that time every rule had been lived up to, especially as, when I came to settle up my accounts with the Wichita association, I was charged for a portion of the advertising. The Wichita officials attempted to make good with me at the meeting before the board by testifying that the advertising had been done to conform to the rules, but when they were called on for the proof they could not produce it. Under those circumstances the board could not take any action other than it did. But I still think the members of the board believe, and will continue to do so, that Cresceus made the mile in 1:58¾."

AMERICAN DERBY

English Lad Makes Brilliant Showing and Stimulates Confidence.

Highball and Stalwart Perform Well—Flower King's Workout.

Last week was prolific in material regarding American Derby candidates. English Lad, Highball, Proceeds, Bill Curtis, and Stalwart, all prominent in Derby calculations, started during the week, and Flower King, another conspicuous colt, was credited with a phenomenal workout which might receive less attention did it not follow the year in which a colt won the great race that had done nothing except show good workouts, says Merrill in the Chicago Tribune.

Of the leading quartet which appeared in races, English Lad was the only one to add prestige to his fame and stimulate confidence in his supporters. Highball did nothing especially to discourage his backers, nor did Stalwart, but Proceeds and Bill Curtis, especially the former, ran most disappointing races.

English Lad's victory over Witfull and Gregor K. has already been exploited. Nor has the significance of it been exaggerated. That the colt was not up to a bruising race is sure. The advance in the betting in a small field from 5 to 1 to 15 to 1 is sufficient evidence of this fact. For him to defeat a mare of Witfull's class, therefore, under such circumstances, marks his performance the best yet recorded by any of the present Derby candidates. In addition to this, the manner of his winning was satisfactory and indicative of qualities of greatness. He finished with wonderful courage and apparently largely on his own determination. The little boy, Nicol, on his back was of no help to him and the colt came on and doggedly fought it out with the other pair as a matter of instinct.

The distance, one mile, was sufficient to prove something of a test on his first start as to his ability to negotiate a route, although everything about the colt last summer pointed that way. He carried only ninety-eight pounds, but last season he showed himself to be a good weight carrier, and when he gets in against his own kind there does not seem to be much doubt about his ability to pack up his weight.

English Lad's looks, too, were in his favor. He is a grand looking 3-year-old, a little light behind, possibly, but with powerful shoulders, short coupled and splendidly muscled. The colt is perfectly sound. He experienced a slight accident in the race, being struck in the eye by a clod, but it is quite possible this is what caused him to begin swerving shortly after turning into the stretch, rather than the use of the whip, to which the action was attributed at the time. The injury had no bad effects, however, and it will be ill luck to Owner Cook if such a promising colt should go wrong in any way between now and June 18.

Highball has been to the races twice this season, and on neither occasion has he done much to fulfill the great expectations held out concerning him. In the Metropolitan handicap he was beaten out during one or two strikes, with a margin of at least two balls left, we shall see fewer baseball games presented by those pitching as a kind of gift to opponents. finish by Beldame, the filly which defeated Peter Paul in the Carter handicap. It is quite likely Beldame is a filly of unusual class. That being so there is some ground for Robert Bradley to maintain his faith in his own Derby candidate. Beldame's defeat of Peter Paul was not much more decisive than her defeat of Highball. The latter, however, is probably being prepared carefully, and he may show vast improvement. It is probable he will. He was late in developing last season. But all of these things seem to apply to English Lad, whose first shing was surprisingly good. At the present writing it looks like a good guess that Highbad will stay "down East," while the American Derby is being run.

Stalwart, the Thomas entry in the American Derby, ran a race in the Metropolitan handicap that marked him neither good nor bad. It will take further tests to establish his 3-year-old form.

Proceeds' showing in the Kentucky Derby was a stunning surprise. That the tall Brown colt was not able to defeat such animals as Elwood, Ed Tierney, and Brancas after the form he had displayed at Memphis seems amazing. Of course, the main assumption is that the track was too hard. The Memphis track at its best is sandy and soft and perhaps that is why Proceeds did so well there. But if this is the explanation it is plain that Proceeds' fate in the American Derby hangs solely on the chance of rain. That he is a remarkable muddier was satisfactorily demonstrated last season. He never met defeat in the mud after he ones got into condition. Bookmaker O'Leary thinks enough of the chances of rain on June 18 to keep Proceeds' betting price in his own original derby list at 15 to 1, while he shows his estimate of the quality of Elwood, the Kentucky Derby winner, by offering 40 to 1 against Durnell's colt.

Bill Curtis, who ran fourth in the Kansas City Derby, came back and finished second to Judge in the Derby Consolation on Wednesday of last week. Judge beat him decisively. On their California form Bill Curtis fairly outclassed the Daly colt. It is possible Griffin's colt has been rested up since the Ascot park campaign. Otherwise he does not seem worthy of much consideration in the big derby.

Flower King's much talked of workout occurred on the morning of the opening of the Worth meeting, but it did not get into the papers until a few days later. According to report, the Tichenor colt worked a mile in 1:40 1-5, with a big boy up, so that his weight must have been 130 pounds. This gossip sounded so much like a fairy tale that it was discredited more or less. But those who saw the work were not among the skeptics.

Owner Tichenor, who got back from the East the day following the trial, discredits the report in part. He thinks the time was considerably over 1:40 1-5. G. W. Poole, who formerly trained for Tichenor, says the time was 1:41. Mr. Poole also thinks the weight carried was about 122 pounds. The colored boy weighed about 112 pounds and the saddle, according to Mr. Poole, must have weighed ten pounds. Even 1:41 with 122 pounds was a remarkable performance, and indicates that this Tichenor representative is keeping up his reputation for fast work made as a 2-year-old, although he has yet to win brackets.

HARNESS HORSES

The Decision In the Cresceus Case Interests Horsemen.

No Trotting Meeting This Year At Cleveland Track.

The decision in the Cresceus case was naturally the occurrence of most interest to horsemen last week, second only in moment being the practical official announcement that there will be no trotting meeting this year at the Cleveland track on account of the veto of the racing bill by Governor Herrick, says Henry Ten Eyck White.

It was a foregone conclusion from the evidence adduced at the meeting last fall that the American Trotting association officials would reject the Wichita performance of the Ohio stallion so far as the validity of the claimed mark of 1:55¾ was concerned, but the action of the board of review in stigmatizing the whole affair as one suggesting fraud was a surprise. From the confident attitude taken by the management of the Wichita track when the case was heard in December it was supposed they would have no difficulty in proving the truth of their sworn statement that the meeting at which Cresceus trotted was duly advertised in accordance with the rules, but when independent action by the American association developed the fact that such allegations were without the shadow of foundation the whole affair so far as the Wichita people were concerned assumed a grave aspect.

It is reasonable to suppose that the Kansas track management learned of the independent investigation that was being made with a view to determining how much of truth there was in the statements made last fall, and thereupon decided that it was of no avail to go further in the matter, since they have apparently completely abandoned the case, not putting in an appearance in person or by proxy at the session at Chicago last week. This practical confession that the meeting was irregular left not the faintest hope of the record being sustained, and all that was left for Mr. Ketcham's attorney was to argue that the horse should be given a bar, claiming that the evidence showed the much talked of mile to have been actually trotted in 1:59¾. But from the wording of their decision it would seem that the American association people are by no means satisfied on this point, and it will be recalled that when the matter originally came up for investigation there were present affidavits from men who timed the stallion in about 2:05, and that the official timers were neither jointly nor individually the owners of a stop watch, the three with which they performed their duties that day being handed to them by outside parties. The singular unanimity with which all three watches agreed as to the fractions of the mile, as well as the entire journey was, to the minds of men of experience in such matters, pregnant with suggestion.

It is now the evident purpose of the American association to go to the root of the matter if it is possible to do so. The Wichita track is now in the position of a defendant and will be cited to show cause why it should not be penalized by its parent body. On the face of matters as they now stand, expulsion of the Kansas track seems the next logical step, and, as "all parties to the performance" are included in that part of the board's finding which bears on this phase of the case, there is no telling to what lengths the investigation may go.

The abandonment of its meeting by the Cleveland track means a serious break in the grand circuit chain of trottings, and incidentally the veto by Governor Herrick of the recently passed law to regulate racing will prove a serious blow to the breeding interest in Ohio, as under the circumstances trotting will naturally be henceforth confined to the small meetings—county fairs and the like—where betting is not a necessary adjunct of the sport.

This means, of course, that in Ohio, at least, the carning capacity of harness horses will be decreased to such an extent that their price will fall in a corresponding degree, putting the large and small breeder alike in a position where his venture, necessarily an expensive one, will prove so unprofitable that its total abandonment by all but a few rich men will be a matter of only a short time. Indeed, the rich man who loves horses and makes the breeding of them part of his life's pleasures does so mainly for the reason that if he succeeds in giving the racing world a real crack in the trotting or pacing line its victories in important stakes will gratify his ambition in a manner that nothing else could hope to do.

Ohio has come to be the home of some of the greatest stallion and brood mares in the land, and Cleveland was the central point and well spring of interest in the light harness horse, not only on account of its annual trotting meeting, at which events that had become classics in the turf world were decided, but also for the reason that the amateur interest in the sport there was so great that the city had become the marketing ground for hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of high class harness horses every year.

Although Governor Herrick cites, among other reasons, the alleged unconstitutionality of the Chisholm law as a reason for his veto of that enactment, it is the current belief in Ohio that his position as the executive head of one of the greatest savings banks in the country was a potent determining factor in his action. However this may be, the fact remains that as long as the present mayor of Glenville, where the Cleveland track is located, holds to his present purpose, there is not likely to be any trotting meeting in a city where the sport has flourished for so long, and under such favorable auspices that it had become a social function second in importance to nothing in its line.

Apropos of the Cleveland track, it was there that the historic miles of Maud S. and Lou Dillon to high sulky, about which there has been so much contention of late, were made. The latest chapter in the controversy as to whether or not Maud S. pulled a roller-bearing sulky when she trotted in 2:09¾, close to twenty years ago, is a statement from "Billy" Blair, who drove the chestnut mare. The crux of his version of the matter is: "I never had a roller-bearing or ball-bearing sulky in my outfit. When Redmond swears to the contrary he swears falsely."

Robert Bonner's sons secured the statement from Blair, who is living in Philadelphia, and have made it public. They further assert that the sulky drawn by Maud S. at Cleveland is now in their possession, and that, although not as staunch as it once was, it can be secured by Mr. Billings in case he desires to give Lou Dillon a tryout to it. The Bonners still talk as if they were omnipotent and omniscient in matters pertaining to trotting, as witness the following from their latest promulgation:

"It is generally admitted that the tracks of today are faster than those of the last decade, but the sons of Robert Bonner, who believe in progressive breeding, will

THE GREAT BOXERS OF ALL NATIONS AND CREEDS.

There was a time when you either had to be Irish or go into the ring wearing an Irish name to command any attention as a fighter. Now it is different. There are fighters of all nationalities and creeds from the true-born American to the heathen Chinese.

Ireland and Australia years ago turned out the best scrappers, but at the present writing you can find first-class men of any color or kind.

Jim Jeffries, the king of them all, is a thorough American and more than that, a native of Ohio. He was born in Carroll, Ohio, 29 years ago of American parents.

Terry McGovern, who for years wore the green so galantly, was born in America, but his parents are both Irish. He is undoubtedly one of the most popular Irish fighters that ever lived, and there were many in years gone by who were public idols, such as John L. Sullivan and Jack Dempsey.

The Australan boxers have in recent years dropped into the background of pugilism, but there was never any better than Bob Fitzsimmons. The most formidable representative of the Antipodes of the present day is said to be Arthur Cripps, now fighting in the East.

Fighters representing the Hebrew faith have always proved themselves game and willing. Joe Choynski is undoubtedly the greatest of them all, but in Abe Attell, the young Californian, we have a boy who is a wonder at 122 pounds.

Charley Mitchell for years has been pointed out as England's gentlemanly boxer, and undoubtedly has as many friends in this country as if he was born on Yankee soil. The reigning sensation in England right now, however, is Jabez White, who has defeated a number of Americans, including "Spike" Sullivan.

The negro has always cut quite a figure in pugilism. Poor old Peter Jackson was the greatest man of color that ever stepped in the ring. Joe Walcott comes next, but the one attracting the most attention these days is Jack Johnson, who, in the near future, hopes to whip Jim Jeffries. Joe Gans, the present holder of the lightweight title, is not only a great fighter, but has saved considerable money from his experiences. The best Italian fighter of today, and there are many of them, is Benny Yanger, of Chicago. Benny has fought all the great featherweights, except Terry McGovern, and is a true hero among his fellow-countrymen.

Aurelio Herrera is a real Mexican fighter. He has won most of his fights on clean knockouts, and is about as popular with the American sporting element as if he were a bull fighter in his native land.

German boxers are now plentiful in this country, but none has made a greater success out of the business than Mike Schreck, of this city. Mike has been fighting since he was a kid, and does not in the least object to being called the "Fighting Dutchman."

The latest novelty in pugilism is a Chinese boxer. Cincinnati furnishes this end of the game in Ching Fong, the 105 pound wrapper of some note. Ching has not been at the game long, but he is quite clever, and is especially good at puching the bag.

Nearly all nations on the globe have at some time or other had a representative in the boxing profession. Frank Erne, the former lightweight champion, is a native of Switzerland. Tommy Feltz was born in Poland. Mike Ward is a Canadian. Sandy Ferguson is one of the many good boxers sent over from the shores of New Brunswick. Kid Goodman comes from far-off Russia, and it is a pity that we have no Jap fighters to pit against him. Kid Broad was born in Wales, so was Tommy West, but, nevertheless, they are all patriotic, and most of them good citizens in the "Land of the Free," which is the home of boxing.

frankly concede the superiority of Lou Dillon when she trots at Cleveland in better than 2:08¾ under the same conditions that governed the effort of Maud S., and if Mr. Billings prefers to have a sulky built to fit his mare there will be no objection, provided it is of the same pattern and weight as that with which Maud S. made the high wheel record July 30, 1885."

It will be gratifying to Mr. Billings to learn that the Bonner boys will permit him to have a sulky made for Lou Dillon; also that they will not wipe out the performance if his mare beats the record of Maud S. while drawing it. As Lou Dillon now has a high wheel performance of 2:05, duly recorded in the Year Book, while that of Maud S. is 2:08¾, it seems superfluous to discuss the matter.

The death of Director, 2:17, removes a trotter that was one of the turf heroes of the high wheel days, and that later in life proved of even greater value as a sire of speed and the founder of a notable branch of the Hambletonian family.

He was unquestionably the greatest member of the Dictator family, all things considered, although of course he did not compare, for pure speed, with Jay Eye See, the first trotter to reach 2.10. But he outclassed his other half-brother, Phallas, all three horses being at their best the same year, and, although Phallas took the stallion record for the day, 2:13¾, he could never beat Director a race, and compared with him in the stud makes a melancholy showing indeed.

A marble shaft will mark the resting place of Director on the farm near New Castle, Pa., where the stallion was last owned. He deserves it. He was a natural trotter, a well-bred one for his day; he was a successful colt trotter; he won many of the best races of his time when matched, he needed no rigging to show his best speed (John Goldsmith once told me he would match Director against any trotter in the world, both to go barefoot and without boots), and he founded a family whose descendants are the greatest race winners of the present day on the harness turf. Director was intelligent and lovable—rare traits in a horse—and he always tried to win.

THE FIRST GAME

Amateurs' League to Play Its First Scheduled Contest.

F. A. Patrick and Northern Pacific Teams to Meet.

The first regular scheduled game in the Commercial league will be played this afternoon between the F. A. Patrick and the Northern Pacific nines.

The league has secured the privileges of playing on the league grounds during the time they are not being used by the Duluth team, but the game this afternoon will have to be played at the driving park on account of the contest between Duluth and Hibbing, which will be played at the Northern league grounds.

The Commercial league opens the season with five strong teams, and the race for the pennant promises to be a close one. The five teams are as follows: F. A. Patrick & Co., Marshall-Wells, Northern Pacific, First National bank and Kelley-How-Thomson.

The schedule calls for thirty games to be played during the summer months. Two games a week will be played, on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons, and the final game is scheduled for Aug. 27.

The quality of ball which will be played in the league was shown by the hard game put up against the White Sox on Tuesday. All of the teams in the league were in the field last season, but they have been materially strengthened sinc that time and are playing much faster ball. Next Wednesday two of the other teams will be seen, when the two wholesale hardware houses will oppose each other on the league grounds.

The line-up for this afternoon is as follows:

F. A. Patrick.		Northern Pacific
Honnold..	....	..Catcher.. ....Wegman
Menelce..	....	..Pitcher.. ....Keough
McDougall	....	..First base.. ....Clayton

The game will be called at 3:30 p. m.

PECULIAR WAY

Adopted By Lynch In Managing a Club.

Cy Swain, once a pitcher for the Washington National league team, tells a good story in which George Tebeau and Mike Lynch figure.

"Personally, I have met some unique characters in baseball," says Swain, "but none more passing so than Mike Lynch, third baseman for the Fort Wayne team, on which I was also playing in the Interstate league before signing with Washington. Lynch was the life of the team and the delight of the whole circuit.

"George Tebeau, who was manager of the Fort Wayne team, received a message that his mother was ill at Cleveland, and hastily departed thence, leaving Lynch in charge.

"Our first game after Tebeau left was to be played with Dayton, then neck-and-neck with us in the race for the pennant. Before the game, Lynch held a club meeting. He had borrowed a ministerial frock coat and high silk hat, and wore a parliamentary gravity that was Gladstonin in its severity.

"'Boys,' he sonoronsly remarked, 'you have understood that it was $10 fine hitherto to take a glass of beer before a game. Now, I want it distintcly understood that any player on the team who is small enough not to take a glass of beer before a game and to treat me to a "high ball" will be fined $20.'

"Never was an orator more promptly or effectively cheered than was he.

"So it transpired that Mike drove fifteen of us into a corner saloon, and while each player drank the required one glass, Mike drank impartially with every member of the team, making fifteen drinks for the newly-installed celebrity.

"You couldn't have told him then he couldn't have managed six men better than the whole coterie of Brush, Tebeau, Freedman, Anson and Wagner, and that he was not the bright particular Jupiter in the galaxy of baseball magnates. When we arrived at the park and lined up for the critical contest with Dayton, Mike was about as well organized for guarding the third sack as was the Cristobol Colon for smashing the American fleet after she had opened her sea valves and beached her hulk.

"Some one suggested: 'Mike, of course, you won't try to play today?'

"'Won't try to play, eh? Won't I? Well, you have got your gall! When did you assume the management of the Fort Wayne bal team, Charlie?'

"That settled it, and Mike strode into the game like Bismarck before his cohorts, while the crowd cheered his wobbling form to the echo.

"To the surprise of everybody, and by some combination of miracles, Mike played the game until the seventh inning, when the score stood 3 to 3, with Dayton at the bat, two outs and base runners on second and third.

"It was my turn in the box. Dayton's catcher hit one of those dizzy, balloon-high flies, which soared upward to as great a height as ever I saw a ball ascend, and then began to descend toward third base. The shortstop wanted to take it; but our new manager yelled 'I've got it' in a tone discordantly attentive that it rose above the infernal roar of the grand stand and bleachers, for they caught on to the situation.

"A moment later the ball struck Mike's unprotected mug like a shooting star, scattering sea foam, sweat and gore over a square rod of the hard-fought field, while the two Daytonians chased to the plate and the game went glimmering.

"'Make it the limit for coming round, and it seemed that the steam whistles were going all over town for the next ten minutes. Upon George's return, you may imagine his indignation."

CRIPPLE CREEK DISTRICT.

Two New Cyanide Mills Have Been Completed.

Colorado Springs, Colo., May 14.—The new cyanide mill which is being built by the Gillett Cyanide company, located on Lincoln mountain, was completed this week, and within a very short time the machinery will be working an treating the low grade ores of that section. The mill is equipped with a 100-horse power electric motor and has a capacity of 100 tons of ore per day. The mill when completed, will be one of the best and fully equipped mills in the country. The ore to be treated at the new plant will come from Lincoln mountain, where preparations are being made o nseveral properties to bring down an enormous pile of rock.

The new cyanide mill of the United State sReduction & Refining company at Colorado City was also ready for operation this week. This plant was built for the purpose of treating the waste rocks from the reduction works, and from tests already made it is known that the company will realize handsomely from its investment in the mill.

The Findley mine is making a monthly output of about 1500 tons, the ore returning values of about $30 per ton, which means that this well known Bull hill property is now making a gross production of over $30,000 per month. This property is one of the best equipped in the district as a new plant of machinery, new washing machines, and new ore and shaft houses were recently placed on the premises.

The leasing company which is operating the Le Clair property in the town of Anaconda. The last shipment of ore made by this company returned values of about $95 per ton for five carloads. If these values are maintained the leasing company has a fortune in its grasp.

Pay ore has been opened up in another section of the Cripple Creek district which has heretofore been considered barren. The lessees on the Valley View claim of the Spar company on Gunot hill have broken into a body of commercial ore in a 150-foot tunnel, and the indications are that a permanent shipper will be developed.

The ElPaso company has just declared its regular monthly dividend of one cent per share, or $14,500, payable May 25th.

CHICAGO DERBY

At Least Fifteen Candidates To Go To the Post.

Bearcatcher and English Lad Likely To Be In Race.

Chicago, May 14.—It is probable there will be at least fifteen starters in the Chicago Derby, which is to be run on the opening day of the Hawthorne spring meeting, Saturday, May 21.

Secretary Harry Kuhl of the Chicago Jockey club has received a batch of replies from owners of Derby candidates to whom he wrote asking what were the chances of their starting in the Derby. He has heard directly or indirectly that twelve will go to the post at least.

At the present time the list of what appears to be reasonably certain starters includes: Either Bearcatcher or Military Man, belonging to T. G. Ferguson; Moharib, Rainland, Elwood, Prince Silverwings, English Lad, Marquis de Carabas, Merry Pioneer, Proceeds, Hazelwood, Bill Curtis and Japan.

Secretary Kuhl received word that Ferguson would surely have a starter, either Bearcatcher, the great 3-year-old miler in California last winter, or Military Man. Among other owners he heard from during the week were C. R. Ellison, Talbot Bros., E. S. Gardner, Mose Goldblatt, Bob Tucker, William Oliver, H. T. Griffin, Thomas C. McDowell and W. H. Bissett, who wrote for John A. Drake.

The last named said he did not know whether either of the Drake candidates for the Derby, Ort Wells or Jocund, would be sent on here for the race on May 21. The season has been backward in the East and the horses are not ready.

Thomas C. McDowell wrote that Japan was doing well, and that if the colt continued to go along nicely he would start in the Derby. William Oliver wired Secretary Kuhl early in the week that he expected to start Hazelwood and that McCue would have the mount.

Mose Goldblatt wired he would positively start his Cumberland Derby winner, Rainland. H. T. Griffin says he expects to start Bill Curtis. He does not think his other Derby candidate, Conkling, is good enough.

Bob Tucker, trainer for Capt. S. S. Brown, wrote that Proceeds would be a starter. E. S. Gardner is having Marquis de Carabas pointed for the Chicago Derby.

Talbot Bros. wrote that they hoped to have Prince Silverwings good enough for the Derby, but that the weather had been unfavorable for training at Louisville.

Charley Ellison wrote from Kansas City in regard to his two eligibles, Vestina Belle and Exclamation. He is not positive he will start either in the Derby here, but he is going to start Vestina Belle in the Kentucky Oaks to be run at Louisville May 18. If she does well he will start her in the Derby here.

Owing to the injury Peter Paul received in a workout last week, it now looks as if "Pa" Bradley would have no starter in the Chicago Derby.

"Boots" Durnell has announced that Elwood will be shipped to Latonia for the Derby there May 19. This is to be run only two days before the Derby at Hawthorne.

Over a week ago Secretary Kuhl heard from John W. Schorr in regard to Moharib. The latter won the Derby at Kansas City and is certain to start in the Chicago Derby unless he goes wrong.

Besides those named above, Edward Corrigan is sure to have at least one starter. He owns five 3-year-olds which are eligible. The one most likely to go is Gus Straus.

Tichenor & Co. are likely to be represented by either Flower King or Flo Bob, and Mike Daly may start Judge. Ed Tierney, which ran second to Elwood in the Kentucky Derby, is also likely to start, and "Red Woods' Jerry Lynch may go to the post.

Thus it is evident a field of at least fifteen seems likely to start. This means the race will be worth $15,380.

Trainer Phillip said it would depend on conditions whether he would start English Lad in the Chicago Derby. If the colt is fit he will send him to the post regardless of the penalty he might incur for the American Derby, as he believes in racing horses when they are fit. "English Lad," he said, "may be on edge for the Chicago Derby and may be completely off for the American Derby."

COULDN'T FOOL HIM.

An old fellow from one of Portland's most remote suburbs, while passing a certain hardware store in that city the other day, noticed a sign which read: "Cast Iron Sinks." The old fellow chuckled softly to himself, then, gradually, as the absurdity of it dawned upon him more forcibly, he broke into a loud guffaw, says the Lewiston Journal. A passerby, attracted by the apparently unseemly mirth of the old man made bold to ask what amused him so. "Why, gol durn it," he sputtered between spasms. "if some folks air not gettin' ter be reglar durn fules. The idee uv hangin' up er sign tellin' people that 'cast iron sinks'"

INSANE FREAKS.

Many Occupants of Asylums Endowed With Talents.

A very close student of insanity once said that it was a difficult matter to define the exact line of demarkation between genius and insanity, and to state with precision the exact point at which one condition ended and the other commenced, says the Newark News, of Newark, N. J. There have been many definitions of insanity—some too obtruse for the ordinary reader to understand. One writer defines it in simple words as "A change of person from his normal condition, in manner, thought, speech and habits."

Another authority on the subject (Mercier) gives us this definition: "A failure in the process of adapting the organism to its surroundings, or the person to his environment."

A well-known Newark alienist has said that we should judge of a person's mental state: "First, by his conversation; second, by his conduct, and third by the general alteration of his mental powers." It is, however, quite consistent for an individual to be possessed of a considerable amount of genius, and at the same time be a victim to insanity and a fit subject for an asylum.

During his experience as attendant on the insane, the writer has seen more than one patient, while suffering from a severe form of insanity, sit down to a piano and play difficult selections, after a few trials, from music sheets they had never seen before, the pieces having been published for the first time subsequent to their commitment, so that it was not possible they could have had any previous knowledge of them.

Some patients show great aptitude in geometrical and mathematical calculations. There was one in particular—a man about 60—who had been confined to the New York institution for over fifteen years, who was admitted to be a wonder in mathematics by all the doctors who had interviewed him. The most adstruse algebraic or arithmetical problems, which were puzzlers to the doctors, many of whom were good mathematicians, were to this patient as easy, comparatively, as a sum in addition would be to a high school graduate. During the many years he had been confined he had filled several large volumes with notes, rules and examples on these subjects, written in an extremely small, neat hand. These he guarded with a jealous care, never lending them to anybody, although always willing to show them to any person interested in such matters.

Another, formerly engaged in the practice of law, was an expert stenographer, and invented several abbreviations and word signs, which were acknowledged to be decided improvements on the Pitman and Graham systems then in general use. This man imagined he was connected with electric wires, which he asserted kept him filled with electricity all the time, causing him much annoyance and depriving him of the necessary amount of sleep. In fact, there is scarcely an art, science or trade that has not its representatives in any one of the large institutions for the insane, actors, doctors, clergymen, lawyers, artists and men of many other professions helping to swell the sum total of the unfortunates confined there.

In one institution there was a first-class carpenter—a patient who could draw all his own plans and execute them; he complained of flashes of flame emanating from his mouth continually, and said that the flames were so vivid at times that they affected his eyes, so that he could not see his work. This man was, so far as could be discerned, perfectly rational in every way, and did a good deal of carpenter work in and around the institution.

Aside from those familiar with the arts and trades, the writer has known many others engaged in the lowly walks of life who were possessed of peculiar delusions and idiosynerasies, yet clever to an extraordinary degree in many ways, some so peculiar as to create laughter, although one felt that the unfortunate patneit was more an object for commiseration.

One case, almost unique, was that of a patient on one of the islands on the East River, New York. He possessed the extraordinary ability of being able to "throw fits" at will. He could simulate every motion and symptom of a person in an epileptic convulsion, spasms, stertorious breathing, etc., and do so to such perfection that he deceived the whole staff of doctors, even those who were regarded as authorities on this peculiar disease. While in a confiding mood one day he told another patient that he was only faking. This was the cause of his undoing, for the story went from one to another until it reached the ears of one of the attendants, who promptly informed the physician in charge. When questioned on the subject, he admitted that he could "do the trick" any time he pleased, and to prove the truth of his statements he uttered a cry, went into a violent paroxysm, with the usual accompaniment of spasms, convulsions, etc., to the amazement of several physicians and attendance who were present, having been called to witness the performance.

After he had come out of the "fit," to prove it was not real, he related every word that had been spoken by the witnesses during the time he was supposed to be having the attack of epilepsy. It would have been impossible for him to do this had the attack been real, as consciousness is invariably lost.

He afterward gave a similar exhibition before the professors and students at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York city, who expressed their surprise at the wonderful imitative faculty possessed by the man. As he suffered from a harmless form of insanity, he was afterward sent to work in the bakery connected with the institution. While working there he almost succeeded in escaping.

During the spare moments, while he was not watched, he managed to build a boat out of barrel staves and pieces of wood used for kindling, extracting nails from old boxes and driftwood. He calked the boat with old rope, which he unravelled and saturated with tar obtained from the roof of a shed. This finished, all was ready for his departure, but unfortunately for the success of his scheme, he confided his project to another patient, and tried to induce him to make a burst for liberty with him. This the other agreed to do, but instead of keeping his word he divulged the whole plat to an attendant, who, in turn informed the authorities.

They instituted a search for the boat, which was found hidden in some bushes a short distance from the shore, and carefully covered with leaves and grass. The builder, ci-devant fit-thrower, and baker's assistant, was relegated to a ward, from whence his only view of the shining river and busy city beyond was obtained divulged the whole plot to an attendant, iron bars.

This futile attempt at escape recalls another which was successful, supposedly through the co-operation of a night watchman, who was dismissed "on suspicion." The patient got past four doors, one of which, his cell door, had no key-hole on the inside, where he was known to be an hour before the time his escape was discovered. He was an Englishman, and it was supposed some of his friends smuggled him some money with which to bribe the watchman. He sailed on the good ship Spanish Queen, landing in England, where he remained for two years. Fate, however, decreed that his liberty was to be only temporary. He became possessed of an overpowering desire to visit the land of his adoption, took sail from Liverpool, landing in New York, and had been there only a short time when he again showed evidence of mental aberration, was arrested, committed and returned to the same institution and same ward from whence he escaped two years before.

He told everything that happened to him, from the time he got outside the building in which he was confined, but always preserved a discreet silence when asked how he opened the four doors.

Another peculiar case was that of a poor fellow who had attained a modest competency through years of hard work, at first as a laborer, afterward as a subcontractor, and who became imbued with the delusion that all the food given to him was poisoned. His friends could do nothing with him, so they had him committed to an asylum. When he arrived there all efforts to induce him to partake of food were in vain. He complained incessantly of being hungry, and when food was brought to him he would cast an appealing glance at the attendant, shake his head and absolutely refuse to touch it. Very often the attendant, trying to convince him that the food was all right, would partake of a portion of it himself, but even this proof failed to shake him in his conviction.

The physicians seeing that something should be done, and that quickly, to save the man from starving to death, decided as a last resource to feed him artificially. This was accomplished by strapping him to an armed chair and administering about a pint of milk, eggs and brandy (commonly known as egg nog) three times a day through the nostrils by means of a rubber tube and funnell. In this way he was kept alive for several months, but gradually growing weaker, he finally collapsed and died, refusing up to the last to partake of a particle of food or medicine except what was administered forcibly in the manner described. Such cases as this are happily rare.

In conclusion, patients afflicted with destructive mania are about the hardest to manage. Such patients take a maniacal delight in injuring, defacing and breaking furniture, or anything they can lay hands on, and tearing up clothing and bedding.

In the New Jersey institutions, restraint is used in such cases, camisoles, straightickets or handmuffs being brought into requisition.

In many of the Empire state institutions restraint of any kind is not permitted, even when the patients become both destructive and violent. The physicians resort to large doses of opiates instead. The medicine used in several of the institutions is dark in color, hence the name "black bottle," applied to the bottle in which the medicine is kept. It is administered to induce sleep, leaving the patient in a dopey, drowsy condition for a long time after awaking. If he resume his tantrums more doses are poured into him until at last the dopey condition becomes permanent.

The "needle" is another effective weapon resorted to in the New York "retreats." This is the name by which the hypodermic syringe is known inside the precincts of the state institutions, and is a little instrument which, when fully charged with morphine, is even more effective than the "black bottle." The writer has known patients to remain in an unconscious condition for 16, 18 and even 20 hours after receiving a goodly injection of morph. sulp., otherwise known as morphine.

The ultimate result is necessarily disastrous to the patient, but what does that amount to when the managers of those institutions can go forth and proclaim to the public and to the world: "There is no physical restraint used in our establishments."

It is easy to see that the system adopted in New Jersey is infinitely superior to the other.

In this state morphine and opiates are undoubtedly used, but in extreme moderation.

FREE DENTISTRY.

Pupils to Be Taught How to Care For Teeth.

Dentistry in the public schools represents a stage of progress which America has not yet attained, though in the less progressive nations of the old world and in some of the less progressive nations of the new—down in South America, for instance—it is regarded as a matter of course. The most enlightened educators have been wrestling with the matter for lo! these many years, and they are gradually bringing conviction that this is not a mere educational fad, a new and brilliant device for spending money, but a matter that really vitally concerns the public health.

As matters stand now the United States is way behind most European countries in this particular, says the Brooklyn Eagle. Germany, Great Britain, Austria, France, Belgium, Sweden and even little old Japan have long seen the importance of the examination of school children's teeth by competent dentists. All of these countries consider the teeth of their boy and girl population as important as the eyes or the ears or the lungs. All of them maintain a more or less complete system of supervision of the molars and bicupids of the school going population. Most of them employ regular dental examiners, working side by side with their regular medical examinerers, who make periodical, usually semi-annual examinations of the pupils. Each boy or girl is then furnished with a dental chart setting forth the condition of the teeth, the work that should be done, and approximately the cost of doing it. The cost is always estimated on a very reasonable basis, and children whose parents are too poor to pay even the small sums estimated are sent to dental clinics where they can be taken caro of free. In most of the countries that have such inspection, it is obligatory that the work indicated be done. Otherwise the children are excluded from school as a menace to the public health, precisely as they would be if they had diphtheria or scarlet fever.

Lately—only last summer—the municipality of Strasburg has decided that the mere determining of what needed doing was not sufficient, that it must do the work itself, and has voted $50,000 for a dental hospital for its school children. It subjects every pupil to a dental examination on entering its schools, and twice a year, to the age of 13, having come to the conclusion that a large portion of the ills that young people suffer from come from bad teeth and lack of proper dental attendance.

In America it seems that St. Louis will probably be the first city to establish a system of dental inspection. St. Louis is notable among American cities for its progressive educational ideas, and has already planned to introduce dentistry in the public schools—both through competent dental inspection and through elementary instruction on the structure and care of the teeth. Superintendent Soldan is even now making arrangements for this innovation.

At the New York Board of Education it was said that some sort of dental supervision was undoubtedly coming. It was one of the things that the future was bound to bring forth—a natural sequel to medical inspection, which is already firmly established.

THE TAX ON DRINKS.

The United States received last year $131,000,000 of public revenue from the tax on spirits and $47,000,000 from the tax on beer, a total of $178,000,000 says the New York Sun.

The Russian Government estimates at $358,000,000 its revenue this year from the sale of liquor, which is a monopoly of the Imperial Government, except in Siberia, where on July 1, it become a monopoly too.

In Great Britain the revenue from excises, as the tax is called, averages $135,000,000 a year, not much less than the revenue of the United States Government from the same sources, and there is, besides, the customs revenue from rum, brandy and other intoxicants, amounting to $25,000,000.

The French Government derives in a year 300,000,000 francs from its tax on spirits, 25,000,000 from its tax on beer and 175,000,000 from the taxes on wine, cider being included. This is $100,000,000 a year from liquor payments, exclusive of the amounts collected as customs duties from wines entered into France for reshipment or for local consumption.

Italy raises about 100,000,000 lire a year from excise taxes, the equivalent of about $20,000,000.

Holland raises about 50,000,000 florins from this source, equivalent to $20,000,000.

The actual contribution of the liquor trade to the income of the state is even larger than these figures indicate, for there are local as well as national taxes. Thus, in New York the state revenue from liquor tax is distinct from the Federal Government collections, and in Germany the larger part of the tax is paid to local authorities.

WALKER

Walker, May 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charles Noe, son of Paul Noe, living at Lake May, about a mile and a half from Walker, was taken by Sheriff Hardy and Special Deputy William Dearing to the hospital for the insane at Fergus Falls Tuesday morning. He had not been entirely right in his head for some time past, and on Sunday night or early Monday morning he became violent in his room in Mr. Straight's house, where he was staying, and smashed everything in the room except the iron bed. An examination of his condition was made Tuesday morning by Drs. Wilcox and Rodwell, and Noe was committed to the asylum.

The announcement that the Brainerd lodge of Elks has again decided to hold its annual picnic in Walker was not unexpected, and a movement has already been started here to give the members of the order and those who come with them a hearty welcome.

Archdeacon Appleby, of Duluth, arrived in Walker Saturday evening, intending to go over to Onigum and hold services at the Indian agency. He had been advised that the lake would probably be open so that he could cross, but the strong north wind of Saturday blew the ice down this end of the lake and interposed an effectual barrier. The archdeacon spent Sunday and Monday in Walker, leaving Monday evening for Bemidji. He stated while here that he had been advised of the shipment by a congregation in the East of a box of clothing to be distributed among such of the Indians here as might be in need.

The season of navigation on Leech lake for 1904 opened Tuesday of this week with the arrival of Gus Kulander's gasoline launch from Onigum and the departure of the steamer Chief and barge with a driving crew and a full load of logs for Boy river. He had made no disposition of his estate, nor had he ever made any statement that would lead to the location of any relatives. Since his death a long and diligent search for heirs has been made, the German consul at St. Paul taking an active part in the case. The estate was entered by the probate court in Bemidji last January, and later some information was received from a friend of one dead man as to his birthplace in Germany. Acting upon this information, the inquiries were renewed and Ruting's mother has now been found in Mecklenburg. She is over 80 years old, and the $5000 from her son's estate will enable her to pass the few remaining years of her life in luxury.

A. W. Stowell, of Lake Alice, near this place, and Mrs. Terrell, of Postville, Iowa, were married here Wednesday morning. There is something of the romantic connected with the wedding. The bride was Mrs. M. A. Terrell, of Postville, Iowa. She is 44 years old and Mr. Stowell is 55. They were schoolmates together in Iowa and grew up together, but it is not on record that there was any lovers' quarrel and a parting. In course of time Mr. Stowell left Iowa and the young lady became Mrs. Terrell. She has now been a widow for some time, and carried in her arms as she landed from the train a child 2 or 3 years old. Seventy-one years passed between the day they last saw each other and their meeting in Walker on Wednesday. Some time ago a correspondence was opened up between them and the courtship was carried on through the medium of Uncle Sam's railway mail service. It ended with plans being made for the lady to come out here and become Mrs. Stowell.

Considerable interest has been aroused in the Indian mounds in the farms of I. J. Collins and F. Stillings, which are near town. The Indians farm, were recently plowed last fall and several remains of some prehistoric men were found. A further search revealed the fact that the mounds contained more of a graveyard. On examination they were decided to be those of Indians, while some thought they were of ancient origin. Old settlers say that the Indians lived near the mounds and that they held them sacred, and thus the remains are accepted as those of their forefathers. The mounds on the I. J. Collins farm are very large and must have been the regular burial place. One mound is at least thirty feet high.

The call to the business men of Calumet to attend a meeting at the town hall for the purpose of organizing a business men's association, met with a hearty response. The meeting was called to order by Mr. Ryan and W. H. Hoskings was elected chairman and J. D. Cudahy secretary. Speeches were made by Messrs. Ryan, Cudahy, Carlton and Hoskings favoring an organization for the business men of Calumet and Laurium, that their interests might become more co-related and that they might work to a better advantage for the good of the two towns. A committee on organization was appointed, consisting of F. S. Carlton, George Ruppe, Clyde S. Mackenzie, John R. Ryan, W. B. Anderson and W. H. Hoskings. After conferring with one another a short time this committee brought in a report favoring a business association and recommended appointing a soliciting committee, and that the organization meet again next Wednesday evening and hear the report of the soliciting committee. The soliciting committee was composed of F. S. Carlton, Clyde Mackenzie, J. D. Cudahy and Fred Guck. Thirty-four of the business men signed as members and it is felt that the number can be easily increased to 100.

The members of the Sacred Heart church are making extensive preparations for the fair which they will hold at the Light Guard Armory, May 23 to 28, inclusive.

When near the garbage ground the body of the man was found in the road, life was extinct and a few feet farther on the horses were quietly grazing. No one knows how the accident occurred but it is supposed that Kilpela while driving was standing on the load and being thrown forward was run over by the wagon, the wheels passing over his head and neck. Miss Sina Hagen occupying the front rooms upstairs and the family of John Werima occupied the rear downstairs. No one seems to know the origin of the fire and but for the high wind the building might have been saved. Owing to the efficient work of the fire department the fire did not spread to any of the adjoining buildings. Mr. Murphy suffers a heavy loss as there was no insurance on the building.

PROCTOR

Proctor, May 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—It is expected that the hauling of ore on the Missabe road will start up in full force about the 20th inst. If such is the case it will make many happy homes in Proctor, as this year's long season of inactivity is beginning to be felt by the home providers of our community. There has been practically no work since the first of November, 1903, on the Missabe road. Nearly all the single men went South and to various other points where they could obtain employment during the winter months, but these men have all returned nearly a month ago and since then have been waiting for the hauling of ore to begin. This season is over six weeks later than that of last year, when the first train of ore was hauled over the Missabe road on the 25th of March. Altogether the state of affairs makes business very dull in Proctor and the opening of the ore season will be welcomed by many glad hearts.

Dr. Clemens, presiding elder of the Duluth M. E. district, conducted the men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. last Sunday. He was accompanied by Rev. Clark, of Nayles. There will be a meeting at the Y. M. C. A. next Sunday conducted by A. R. Merritt, of West Duluth, who at one time was director of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railway.

A six-inch gush of oil was struck Monday morning about 4 o'clock, when Thomas Kiggins succumbed to influences of liquor, dying of delirium tremens.

Mr. Stanley resigned his position as stenographer for Mr. Kreitter, superintendent of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway company, and has returned to his home in Kansas. Miss Van Leuven, of Superior, has been employed to fill the vacancy made by Mr. Stanley.

Rev. A. B. Calder addressed the pupils of Irwin school, West Duluth, on Friday morning. No better choice of a speaker on the above subject could have been chosen than Rev. Calder, as he lived the earlier part of his life in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and spent a year and a half in the vicinity of Evangeline's birthplace and expulsion.

Dell Bauman, who has been living in Rochester, Minn., where he was employed as nurse during the winter in the State hospital, of which institution he is a graduate.

N. P. Setser, of Jamestown, N. D., is visiting with his brother John.

Mrs. William McMurtrie is very ill with an attack of bronchitis.

Bird Davis, whose foot was severely jammed last week by an accident in the machine shop, is getting along nicely.

Peter McGovern on Saturday night had a deep gash cut in his head by some unknown culprit. The crime was committed when Mr. McGovern was on his way home. The last he remembered is when he passed the coal docks till he was in the house at home about a half mile distant. How he got home is a mystery, but it is thought the guilty one after treacherously inflicting the wound with a piece of coal or other weapon, assisted him to his home and rang the bell at the door. The night was so dark that his relatives could not see who brought him, but they heard talking without before the door was opened and before their suspicion was raised.

VIRGINIA

Virginia, May 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Eli Reid, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Reid, died at the Kinehart hospital Sunday forenoon, and the body was shipped here Tuesday. Mr. Reid was injured in a football game in October, 1902, and had never rallied from the effects of the shock. The game in which he was hurt was one between Virginia and Eveleth, and was a hard-fought game. The injury formed an abscess at the base of the spinal column and several operations were necessary, the boy finally being taken to the Ashland hospital, where he lingered for many months and finally succumbed. Mr. Reid served as a soldier in the Spanish-American war and was sent to the Philippines with his regiment, serving in twenty-six engagements, receiving an honorable discharge, and with the other range boys returned home just two years ago. The funeral was held from the home to the Presbyterian church Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Todd officiating. The funeral was very largely attended, the firemen and some of the old soldiers attending, and the City band furnished music. Mr. Reid was a very popular young man on the range and his bereaved parents have the sympathy of the entire community.

Henry Hughes, of the Henry Hughes & Co. mercantile store, is here from Grand Rapids, and will hereafter take charge of the big store.

Mrs. Sam Stone was down from the Minnesota location yesterday.

Dr. and Mrs. Malmgren returned Thursday evening from their wedding tour to Minneapolis and Michigan points.

Frank Reid has purchased some property in the South Side addition to the city and has commenced the erection of a dwelling. He has resigned his position with the Republic Iron and Steel company at Buhl and has secured a good position here.

Andrew Grande has secured the contract to build a handsome residence for H. J. Nathanson on Maple street.

It is quite likely that the city council will take the saloon limit off the records and place a new one on. The past year there has been a limit at thirty-five, but this will be increased to forty.

Secretary D. O. Anderson of the Virginia Lumber company returned yesterday from a short trip to Duluth.

Our Young Folks Page

Tommy's Musical Morning.

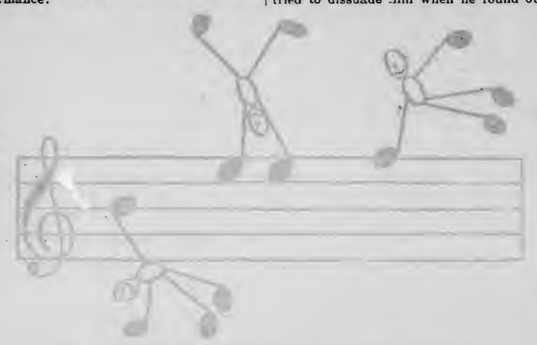
Tommy lay on the music-room floor kicking up his heels and gazing placidly at a sunbeam that came in at the window and fell directly across a page of his unpracticed music on the piano. He knew perfectly well that he ought to be sitting on the piano stool practicing diligently, but he greatly preferred his present occupation. Presently the sunbeam came down and mingled with Tommy's eyelashes in a most peculiar manner. He sat up suddenly. "Why," said he, rubbing his eyes, "I thought you were the music-master." This is what he saw:

("THIS IS THE FIGURE THAT TOMMY SAW.")

The figure's arms, legs and body and head all looked familiar by themselves, but taken altogether they made up one of the most remarkable ghosts that Tommy had ever seen. "What do you want?" Tommy demanded.

The strange apparition said not a word, but mounting a bar of music it began to go through a series of remarkable performances like an acrobat on a horizontal bar.

First he hung from the lowest space on the bar with one hand. Then he balanced on the highest space with both feet, then he stood on the line next to the top with one foot. Here is a picture of his performance:



("THE STRANGE GHOST'S FIRST PERFORMANCE.")

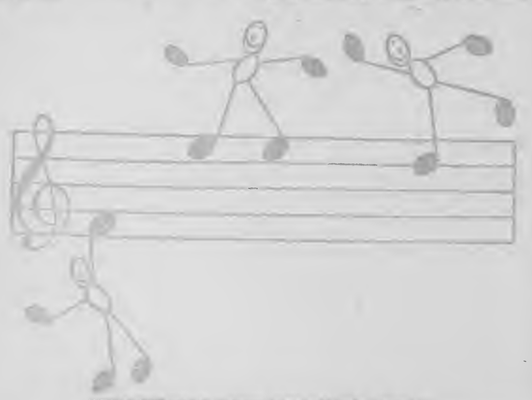
Tommy was surprised with his act. "Well," said he, pondering a moment, "we haven't much in the larder, but I'll see what I can do. How would you like some bread and milk?"

The ghost made no answer to this question, but it instantly did this:

"Right you are," said Tommy. "I hate it, but they make me eat it all the time. What would you like?"

The strange ghost paused a moment in deep thought. Tommy thought of all the delightful things in the larder. "If I were asked that," he murmured, with the friendly idea of helping the ghost out, "I would say ice-cream. I know they're going to have some for dinner." The ghost paid no attention to this remark. He cast his eyes about the room, as if to see if there were anything in the corners which might be devoured. Then he looked down at his slener limbs, suggestively.

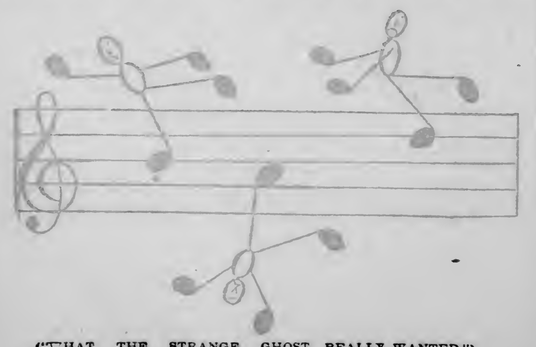
"Really," admitted Tommy, "perhaps you do need something more nourishing." The ghost brightened up wonderfully. A sudden thought seemed to occur to him. He skipped nimbly over the bar and Tommy's eyes followed him. This is what he did:



("THE STRANGE GHOST SPEAKS HIS MIND.")

"You're pretty bloody-minded for a ghost," said Tommy. "Still, I'll see if I can get it for you."

And he was just about to do so, when the door opened, the music-master came in and the ghost vanished. Can you tell what he had said to Tommy?



("WHAT THE STRANGE GHOST REALLY WANTED.")

Jason's Elevator Adventures.

BY OTHO VILLIAMSON.

Jason Tompkins thought that running an elevator was one of the easiest jobs that a boy could have. He did not know much about elevators or the houses in which they were used, for he had never seen any except when he went to visit his uncle in New York. His uncle lived at the top of an eight-story apartment house and Jason made as many excuses to ride up and down as he could invent. He talked with the elevator boys. The day boy read novels between trips and when no one of any importance was on he read them going up and down with the boos in one hand and the other hand on the lever and he was so expert that he could stop at the right floor without ever taking his eyes off the book. Jason could understand how he would become so absorbed in "Old Sleuth's Revenge; or the Weird Diamond Mystery," but he wondered that he should pore over such sickish stuff as "The Love That Would Not Die" and other sentimental romances.

The night boy was getting ready for college and studied his mathematics and Latin between trips. He would not let Jason run the elevator alone, alleging that he had a conscience and could not trust his job to a green boy, but the day boy gave Jason a lesson in the art of running an elevator and then let him profit by it.

Soon after Jason returned home he announced that he wanted to go to work. "All right," replied his father, "come down to the store and fall to."

"That's too hard," objected Jason. "I don't like that kind of work."

"What do you want to do?"

"Well, I want to go to the city."

"What can you do there?"

"I could run an elevator." His father whistled. "That is a fine job!" he exclaimed sarcastically.

"Well, you get paid for something that's just fun," persisted Jason.

"All right go ahead and try it," said Mr. Tompkins.

"Do you really mean it?"

"Certainly, but I want you to stick to it for at least three months."

"Oh, I'll do that, never fear. When can I go?"

"Tomorrow."

"Hurrah!"

"How are you going to get your job?"

"Oh, I know how to run an elevator and it won't be hard," replied Jason with easy confidence.

The next day he started for the city in a high state of excitement. His uncle tried to dissuade him when he found out what Jason intended to do, but without success.

"I'll only be with you a day or two," said Jason confidently. "I mean to find a place right off."

"Oh, do you? Well, I'll put you up for a week."

Jason's friend, the novel-reading day boy, had gone. "Fired," said the boy who had taken his place in reply to Jason's question about him.

"Do you know anyone who wants an elevator boy?" asked Jason.

"Nope—leastways not a green one."

"I know how. Let me show you," said Jason, eagerly.

"Nay you don't monkey with this while I'm on the job," replied the boy, shaking his head. "I ain't ready to get fired."

Jason was very indignant. When night came he asked the student about a job.

"They want a boy down at the High & Dry Building," he replied, "but that's hard work, and I don't think you would be equal to it."

"That's just like you city fellows. You don't think I can do anything."

Jason decided to get a place for himself. He did not think it would be hard, but he went to scores and was refused. Wherever he saw a building that looked as if it had an elevator he went in and asked if they did not need a boy. Sometimes he was asked what experience he had had. Again, he was asked to give references. Jason did not know anything about references, for in his town everyone knew everyone else, and just how bad or how good a boy was was common knowledge. After this question had been put to him several times he replied: "What do you want references for?"

"So we can know whether you are honest and whether you know how to run an elevator."

"Of course I'm honest," protested Jason, indignantly. No one had ever questioned that. "And you can ask Peter Long if I don't know how to run an elevator. He used to be the day boy in the Atalanta Apartment House, where my uncle lives, and he has let me run the elevator for him a lot of times. I can stop right on the level with the floor almost every time."

He was about to give up his quest in despair. "If I don't get something here I'll give up and go back home," he said to himself as he went into an apartment house not far from where his uncle lived. It was not a very nice house, and the janitor, who was running the elevator, looked cross.

"So, you want a job, do you?" he replied in answer to Jason's request. "Well, I'm sick of this one; so you can fall-to this minute; but mind you, if you don't keep straight, young fellow, you'll have me to reckon with, and I'll give you such a drubbing as you won't want again in a hurry. Look sharp now—there's a call from the fifth floor."

There was no lever with a smooth handle, that responded to the touch, as there was in the elevator Jason had tried before. In this one he had to take hold of the cable and give it a pull downward to start it, and then another pull upward to stop it.

It was a most unsympathetic cable, and Jason had a hard time getting it to stop at the right place. He made several false stops. "You are a very awkward boy," said the woman on the fifth floor who had summoned the elevator.

"I haven't quite got the hang of it," replied Jason. "It's different from the one I ran before."

"Well, we certainly take great risks when we trust our lives to such ignorant boys," she replied tartly as Jason blundered, trying to land her on the ground floor.

"My, but this cable hurts my hands," Jason said to the janitor a little later. "Well, why don't you wear gloves, stupid, and have something to take hold with?"

"Yes, I will," said Jason meekly.

"Boy, what makes this elevator shake so?" asked one of the passengers. "I believe it's because you don't know how to run it."

"Here, boy, I told you to let me out at the third floor and you've carried me past it. Now don't you give me any impertinence. I won't have it."

Jason heard many such remarks in the four days he was there. Complaints were made to the janitor, who heaped abuse upon him and threatened to discharge him. Remembering the difficulty he had had to get employment, however, he stuck grimly to his post. It was a busy one, and he worked harder than he ever had in his life. One evening Peter Long came around on his way home from his new place and said, "Hullo, Jason, d'you want a better job than the one you've got?"

"You bet," said Jason heartily.

"All right, they want a boy at the Rubens Studios, and you've had experience now. I guess you can get it."

Jason got the place, but he found new troubles.

"What do you mean by letting thieves and beggars into the building?" he was asked when he had innocently carried a decent-looking woman to the top floor. "That woman was a thief."

The elevator was a better one than the one he had previously had, but it was erratic. Once it stopped halfway between floors and nothing he could do had any effect upon it. An expert had to be sent for to come and release them.

A woman caught her lace frock in the gate and before Jason could stop the elevator the dress had been ruined. She insisted that he would have to pay for it, but he did not.

He was just beginning to think that he was finally getting control of the situation, when on one of his trips something slipped, and up and up scooted the elevator with Jason and a passenger in it. He was sure they were going out of the roof, but at the last minute something broke and something caught and there they were, safe enough, but so scared that Jason vowed then and there that if he came out alive he would leave elevators alone and go back to his father's store. And he did.

BEREAVED.

[By JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.]

Let me come in where you sit weeping—aye,
Let me, who have not any child to die,
Weep with you for the little one whose love
I have known nothing of.

The little arms that slowly, slowly loosed
Their pressure round your neck—the hands you used
To kiss—such arms—such hands I never knew.
May I not weep with you?

Fain would I be of service—say something
Between the tears that would be comforting,
But oh!—so sadder than yourself am I,
Who have no child to die!

The Strange Doll Bean-Vine.

BY ELEANOR McCARTHY.

Three little Leas were seen wending their way across the border in solemn file. Polly had on a long black skirt and a black lace scarf over her head. Betty wore a black silk scarf crossed on her breast and tied in the back. She also had on black gloves, so large that she had to keep pulling them on. A black hat, with a dangling veil and a black band around her sleeve, comported well with Rosemary's lugubrious expression.

The three little Leas were on their way to the funeral of Serafina Lea Sickersell, who was lying in state over the border. The entire clan of the Sickersells was expected to be present, and all the Lea dolls were there, for Serafina had been extremely popular in doll circles. Even the Bishop, her husband, from whom she had been divorced, was among the mourners.

"She looks lovely," said Betty as the three little Leas stood by the side of the box in which Serafina lay. The box was lined with a piece of green satin, which Mrs. Lea had discarded, and Serafina's fatal loss of sawdust was concealed by a handsome dress of red velvet, trimmed with black lace, which she had worn at social functions when in health.

All the dolls that rejoiced in the name of Lea—and there were 19 of them—sat supported in their grief by trees or bushes, and the Invisible Sickersells, from least to greatest, were among the mourners.

"It's time to sing now," announced Polly.

"What is we going to sing?" inquired Rosemary.

"'Onward, Christian soldiers, marching as to war,' only we must sing it as slow as anything, 'cause it's a funeral."

Thereupon the three little Leas drawled the familiar words until Rouser, the dog, began to howl dismally.

"Amen," said Betty, and the dirge came to an end.

"Now, let's dig the grave," said Polly, "and everyone can take turns."

She gave Rosemary permission to begin, but the ground was so hard on top that the little girl could not do much digging. Polly, therefore, took the little shovel and dug for a few minutes; then she handed it over to Betty, and when the soil began to be a little looser Rosemary tried again. It took a long time to dig a hole large enough for the box in which Serafina lay, and the three little Leas were almost tired enough to give up trying to dig a grave, and were talking of burning Serafina instead, when Rouser jumped in and went to work with his paws. He did more in two minutes than the little Leas could do in 20.

"That'll do now, Rouser," Polly said to him and made him stop digging. Then they put a lid on the box and put it in the ground, each one dropping in a flower and saying, "Good-by, Serafina."

Then they put back the earth and stuck a little flag on top.

"Mostly they just have a flag for soldiers, but we haven't any tombstone, and, besides, Serafina was brave enough to deserve a flag," Polly explained.

The next day the three little Leas went over the border and visited Serafina's grave. They talked of her beauty and amiability, and covered the grave with flowers.

Then it rained for several days, and they could not get out.

"Dear me, it must be awful wet over the border," sighed Betty.

"Poor Serafina'll get dreffful wet, won't she?" asked Rosemary.

"She's dead and won't feel it," said Polly.

"I know something," said Betty, suddenly.

"What?" asked both the others with animation, for it had been deadly dull.

"You know when you plant anything something grows up from it, like the beans we put in the ground and vines grew."

"They did—I saw 'em," agreed Rosemary, joyfully. "Will a new Serafina grow out of the grave?"

"Maybe," admitted Polly.

"Oh, I wish it would stop raining, so we could go and see," said Betty, impatiently.

"Mother, we don't mind the rain. Can't we go out?" they asked Mrs. Lea, but she shook her head and said, "Wait until tomorrow."

To the great joy of the three little Leas, the sun shone brightly the next day, and they went skipping over the border.

They stopped short when they came in sight of Serafina's grave; for there, standing erect, her back against the flagstick, was a gorgeously beautiful doll.

"It isn't Serafina come out of the ground," said Betty.

"No, no; it's a new one growed out of her," cried Rosemary, excitedly.

"She's kind of like Serafina," observed Polly.

"Yes, like she was when she was new," said Betty.

At first the three little Leas were timid about touching the wonderful doll, but she smiled at them so sweetly that Rosemary walked up to her and said: "I isn't 'fraid. I fink you's lovely, and I'm going to kiss you."

The kiss bridged all timidity, and the new doll at once became an accepted member of the Lea household.

"Is her name Serafina?" asked Rosemary.

Polly shook her head. "No—Serafina's dead," she replied.

"Let's call her Bean-Vine, 'cause she growed right up like the vine did from the beans," suggested Betty, and "Bean-Vine" was accepted as the name of the new doll.

"We must take her home and introduce her to the other dolls," said Polly.

"All right, and she can be queen, 'cause she's the most beautiful," Betty proposed.

Bean-Vine made a triumphal entry into the nursery, and all the other dolls had to bow low before her. Some of them did not like it much, and one of them fell over in a fit rather than acknowledge the supremacy of the newcomer. She was put to bed and kept there the rest of the day.

Bean-Vine had a curious effect upon her subjects. She seemed mild enough when the little Leas were around and ruled with great success; but as soon as their backs were turned there were revolutions and all sorts of trouble. The doll kingdom was in a sorry plight. Many of the dolls complained bitterly of the new queen.

"She's not like other dolls, you must remember," Polly reminded them.

"Well, she can't rule my navy," said the sailor.

"And my army won't fight for her," protested the general of the tin soldiers.

"Enough said," put in the Bishop. "What's a queen without an army and navy? You took Serafina away from me. Now, why don't you let me marry Bean-Vine, and then she will be one of us, and there will be no more trouble?"

The three little Leas gave their consent, and the Bishop and Bean-Vine were married.

Then it turned out that she was just like other dolls, after all, for when she began to put on airs and boast that she came up out of a grave the Bishop would just say: "Bean-Vine, my dear, please get me my slippers," and she obeyed just as the wife of any doll bishop would.
